A study of the state of Indiana, of the people who have made it their home, and of its share in American history. "This book is not history; it is journalism. It is one man's interpretation of Indiana—that is, the Hoosier character, the Hoosier thought, the Hoosier way of living. I have included only such ancient history as seemed interesting, fresh, and necessary to an understanding of Indiana today (only about one eighth of the book deals with events prior to the Civil War)." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Herb Graffis

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 15 '47 320w

Kirkus 15:591 O 15 '47 250w

"Among regional studies 'Indiana: An Interpretation' is another temporal document, though its charm cannot be denied. It is journalism, tragi-comic, glittering, various in presentation of characters highly individual or merely typical and of colorful scenes and episodes, both particular and symbolic—but it is still journalism, as the author frankly admits. . . Mr. Martin's book is none the less charming, as readable as if it were fiction, though not fiction integrating diverse cultural factors at a high level or bringing all riches under one dome." Marguerite Young

+ — Nation 166:79 Ja 17 '48 1650w

"No home-sweet-home, no nostalgic chant, no oh's and ah's over the unique wonders of a peculiar land, the book is amiably critical, interested but objective, warm with neighborly concern, sufficiently historical, pleasantly colorful—never gaudy—and without a single statistic to snag its biographic flow." E. B. Davis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 D 7 '47 850w

"As a piece of regional writing on the level of journalism, this book is a rare adventure into the field of self-criticism. I doubt that any native son setting out to report objectively on the home folks has come up with a more challenging indictment of what one might call 'grass-rootsism.' Martin's interpretation of Indiana is an interesting and well-written story not only of the homely, simple, pleasant, neighborly, salt-of-the-earth people rhapsodized by James Whitcomb Riley; it is also the story of grass-roots mediocrity, of intolerance, of political myopia, of crass materialism, of political corruption." Gilbert Bailey

+ N Y Times p30 D 7 '47 850w

"For the most part the survey is satisfactorily objective—only in the account of labor struggles does the author's bias appear (there is far too much, proportionately, about Debs). . . The portrait of the present governor, ambitious but undistinguished, is just slightly malicious, and is appropriate to the somewhat pessimistic end of the book. Using the gossipy, anecdotal style employed by Van Wyck Brooks, he gives added reality to his portraits. Of the many new things this reviewer learned about his native state from reading this delightful study he cannot resist mentioning two; that Hoosiers disliked being called 'hoosiers,' and that the gangster Dillinger was widely admired in Indiana." R. A. Cordell

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:9 Ja 10 '48 600w

MARTIN, JOHN JOSEPH. The dance; the story of the dance told in pictures and text. 160p $3.75 Tudor

793.3 Dancing Dancers 47-1356

"A photographic history, with a text by a veteran critic, that deals with practically every period and school of the dance—the primitive dance, the folk dance, ballroom dancing, and ballet—and their interpreters, among them Isadora Duncan, Pavlova, Nijinsky, and Martha Graham. The book, a handsome and competent job containing many fine pictures, is designed more for the interested spectator than for the earnest student." New Yorker

"It is obviously a book for beginners, designed to meet a popular need arising from the tremendously increased interest in dance during the past 10 years, and, as such, it is just the ticket. For more detailed and profound observations on the subject, we can look to Mr. Martin's regular Sunday column in the New York Times, and his three earlier books—'The Modern Dance,' 'America Dancing,' and 'Introduction to the Dance.'" Margaret Lloyd

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 31 '47 500w

Reviewed by George Freedley
Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 40w

"Recognizing that pictures often express the essence of dance better than words, Mr. Martin has wisely used an exciting collection of more than 260 action photographs and prints to illustrate his history. His brief text lucidly analyzes in simple, non-technical language the essential characteristics and relationships of all forms of dance. . . I believe this volume will do more to further interest and appreciation of dance in America than any similar book of recent memory." Arthur Todd

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 F 23 '47 430w

Reviewed by E. J. R. Isaacs
N Y Times p5 F 16 '47 800w
New Yorker 22:80 F 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Spencer Barefoot
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 450w

Springf'd Union p11 Jl 11 '47 190w

"Neophytes will find the book helpful and provocative, and experienced enthusiasts will enjoy the happy recollections both pictures and text arouse."

+ Theatre Arts 31:77 Ap '47 340w

MARTIN, PAUL SIDNEY, and others. Indians before Columbus; twenty thousand years of North American history revealed by archeology. 582p il $6 Univ. of Chicago press

970.1 Indians of North America. U.S.—Antiquities 47-1434

"Three members of the staff of the Chicago natural history museum have collaborated on this introductory book to North American archeology for laymen and beginning students.

The purposes and methods of archeological study and a general discussion of Indian arts and industries precede the studies of cultures section by section, covering most parts of North America. A factual, orderly, and simplified summary; no attempt at popularization." (Booklist) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

"Designed for the layman as well as for the beginning student in anthropology, this is a thoroughly useful book." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 9 '47 600w

"It was high time we had a book like this. It reduces to myths the theories that the American Indians were direct descendants of the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel or the Egyptians or the Welsh or the Irish or the Greeks or the Phoenicians. . . The appearance of this excellent guide gives us hope for a companion, historical study, which will do for the Indians since Columbus what this book does for the Indians before him." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 22 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:373 Ap '47 60w

"The three authors—curators in the Chicago Natural History Museum—have done a job that is both excellent and long needed. They have drawn together and organized in clear, systematic form the latest essential facts and theories on the Indians of the United States and Canada." Kenneth MacGowan

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31 My 11 '47 490w

Reviewed by Coleman Rosenberger
N Y Times p7 Jl 6 '47 850w

Reviewed by H. L. Shapiro
Sat R of Lit 30:45 Je 7 '47 550w

School & Society 65:253 Ap 5 '47 30w

"The general reader will welcome the bibliography leading to the tremendous and varied literature which the authors have summarized and digested, and which is inaccessible in most libraries."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:224 S '47 200w

MARTIN, WILLIAM IVAN. Presenting Chicken Chuck. [34p] il $1 Tell-well press, inc, 4 E. 9th st, Kansas City 6, Mo.

46-21744

Picture story book for ages four to six. Describes the effects of a vitamin on a smug young rooster, and how the other barnyard inhabitants found a way to imitate him.

"Story, after being tested on 2,000 children, still seems to be inconsequential. Handsomely reproduced modernistic pictures, gorgeously colored." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:325 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. A. Gordon
N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 90w

MARTIN, WILLIAM IVAN. Rosy Nose. [33p] il $1 Tell-well press

46-8671

Picture story book for ages four to eight. It tells the story of a lonely little polar bear and what he did at various seasons of the year. Authentic facts about Arctic life are included at the foot of each page of text.

"Here is something new in picture books. Rosy Nose is a little polar bear who breaks the boundaries of reality just often enough to make an interesting story for the four-to-eight-year-olds." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 72:325 F 15 '47 70w

"The story of how Rosy Nose learns that there is good in each season makes a charming book." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p30 Mr 9 '47 80w

MARTIN, WILLIAM IVAN. Smoky Poky [il. by Bernard Martin]. 40p $1 Tell-well press

47-6631

"A gay picture book in color about two rival steam engines who finally became friends when

MARTIN, WILLIAM IVAN—Continued
they combined to pull ninety-seven elephants up a steep mountain." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '47
180w

Kirkus 15:502 S 15 '47 85w

"More than 2,000 children tested and approved Smoky Poky in its prepublication form," and it seems, therefore, a little presumptuous for a librarian to criticize it in its published form. However, what might have been a rollicking tale of the rivalry between two little steam engines is spoiled for me by 97 horribly blue elephants and a very uneven text." Mary Strang

— Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 30w

MARTYNOV, IVAN I. Shostakovich, the man and his work; tr. from the Russian by T. Gural'sky. 197p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

780.92 Shostakovich, Dmitri Dmitrievich
47-31223

Study of the musical works of Shostakovich and an outline of his meaning for his countrymen. The book offers "politico-musical analyses of all the symphonies and the major chamber works, some fascinating details on the composer's operas, and a useful complete list of opus numbers. There is no bibliography or discography and (despite the high price) almost no illustrations, musical or otherwise." (San Francisco Chronicle)

"Evidently an 'official' record, since it applies the test of Soviet doctrine to the composer's work. The book, therefore, cannot be taken seriously as musical criticism."

— Christian Science Monitor p16 N 1 '47
30w

"A heartfelt tribute from one Russian to another... More musical examples would have helped to illuminate the text which undertakes a stylistic analysis, with emphasis on the 'mature' period—the Fifth Symphony and thereafter... Contains some genuinely enlightening material along with a generous interlarding of superlatives. The subject approved the manuscript, as well he might." C. K. Miller

+ — Library J 72:1111 Ag '47 100w

"There is no questioning the popularity or the importance of Shostakovich's music. But Mr. Martynov approaches his subject with a whole-hearted partisan enthusiasm which might seem extravagant in a critical study of Mozart... It's uncertain whether the author or the translator is responsible for the unfortunate dialectical jargon which makes the prose almost unreadable." A. P. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 26 '47
140w

Reviewed by Victor Prah

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47
300w

MARX, FRITZ MORSTEIN. See Morstein Marx, F.

MASEFIELD, JOHN. Thanks before going; notes on some of the original poems of Dante Gabriel Rossetti. 69p $3 Macmillan

821 Rossetti, Dante Gabriel 47-3399

Study of the influence and importance of the poetry of Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and an analysis of some of his poems, based on the 1890 and 1891 editions of his works. Contains two sonnets on Rossetti by the author.

"Mr. Masefield makes his points simply and with a clarity that would have pleased Rossetti. His book certainly belongs to that class of critique which illuminates rather than obscures its subject." P. J. H. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 3 '46
360w

"The book as a whole contributes a fresh interpretation to a literary figure and his works."

+ Kirkus 15:23 Ja 1 '47 90w

Manchester Guardian p3 O 31 '47 240w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 32:50 Jl 20
'46 750w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Je 22 '47 650w

Reviewed by Frances Winwar

N Y Times p26 S 14 '47 420w

New Yorker 23:118 My 17 '47 30w

"The book is in a familiar tradition, the elderly poet's dignified tribute to a poetic passion of his youth, and like all such books it is wickedly overpriced... formless, and rather a gentle series of paraphrases, gradings, and elegiac social asides than criticism. Masefield is able to do little we would want done with Rossetti's verse. He appeals for 'close reading,' but his readings, tearing through a dozen poems a page, for the most part do little more than note which lines are 'fine,' which are 'delightful,' which are 'wise,' which are 'jolly,' and which are 'exquisite.'" S. E. Hyman

— Poetry 70:333 S '47 600w

"There is little actual criticism; a few biographical, geographical or metrical notes appear among the explanations, paraphrases and appreciation. Such loving admiration of another poet's work is a disarming form of criticism, but there are points on which disagreement will arise, though there can be none with the statement 'By all instinct and nature, Rossetti answered in terms of art to every tradition, living or shadowy, which came to his notice.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p236 My 18
'46 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p662 D 20 '47
700w

MASEFIELD, LEWIS. Passion left behind; with a pref. by John Masefield. 224p $2.75 Macmillan

47-5910

"A story of the struggles of a young man of little education, firm egotism and hard character to make his way according to his not very rich personality among the pettifoggish hopes and meannesses, his own as well as those of others, in a dull publishing firm. The period is the 1930's." Spec

Reviewed by C. H. Bishop

Commonweal 47:101 N 7 '47 210w

Kirkus 15:376 Jl 15 '47 220w

"Author died in 1942, in his early thirties. Unfortunately, his novel seems rather pallid in comparison with the splendor of John Masefield's introduction, which is an exceptionally fine piece of elegiac prose. When the elder Masefield says that the younger 'was the most delightful, the wisest, and the best man whom I have known well,' one believes him. A Masefield item not to be missed." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 110w

"The handsome things that one hoped to be able to say of The Passion Left Behind cannot, unfortunately, be said." Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 3 '47 110w

Reviewed by Seymour Krim

N Y Times p28 O 12 '47 550w

"So nicely fitted together that you probably won't mind the lack of action."

+ — New Yorker 23:126 O 18 '47 130w

Reviewed by James Edin

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47
100w

"The dull round and the small dreams of ordinary life are, one feels, well apprehended by the author; but they are not well set down. The style is heavy, slow and repetitive; there is too much care for inessential detail, and nowhere is one allowed to feel inspiration taking charge of conscientiousness. Yet one is sometimes reminded of Gissing, and of the slow carefulness of Arnold Bennett, perhaps. But this is to overstate, on the evidence. Yet it is possible that a very honest, serious talent was emerging clumsily here." Kate O'Brien

+ — Spec 178:442 Ap 18 '47 190w

"Quiet and serious in tone, The Passion Left Behind leaves an impression of sincere but unresolved thought."

.Times [London] Lit Sup p125 Mr 22 '47 330w

MASON, BERNARD STERLING, and KOCK, FREDERIC H. Cabins, cottages, and summer homes. 168p il $2.75 Barnes, A.S.

728 Log cabins, Cottages 47-6360

Describes in detail the building of cabins, cottages and summer houses. Instructions include the building of fireplaces, outdoor grills, and cabin equipment. Includes plans. Index.

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

"The entire text is completely practical." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 21 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:149 N '47

MASON, DANIEL GREGORY. Quartets of Beethoven. 294p $4.75 Oxford

785.74 Beethoven, Ludwig van—Quartets 47-31177

Detailed analysis of the sixteen quartets of Beethoven and his Great Fugue. The book is designed for both the layman and the professional music lover, and contains suggestions for getting the greatest pleasure and understanding from the music. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Vincent Sheehan
Commonweal 47:72 O 31 '47 750w

"In the main written with the practicing student in mind, although Dr. Mason's fastidious handling of the English language and his enthusiasms and prejudices lend distinction and considerable color to the many extended passages that stand on their own as literature. Set down after decades of a composer's familiarity with the works of another. Will be called for by the student, the teacher and the serious amateur." C. K. Miller

+ Library J 72:1612 N 15 '47 100w

"The best feature of Dr. Mason's book is the balance it strikes between Beethoven as craftsman and Beethoven as man, intellect, and visionary, and in what it does to show that these Beethovens are inseparable, indivisible, organic in the music. Here the example of both Tovey and Sullivan has counted for much, and reveals Dr. Mason as an interpreter of human feeling and sensitive open-mindedness." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 165:562 N 22 '47 2000w

MASON, GEORGE FREDERICK. Animal homes [il. by the author]. 96p $2 Morrow

591.5 Animals, Habits and behavior of 47-30869

Brief descriptions with diagrams and line drawings show how some of the commoner animals build their nests. A few insects and fish are included. For grades four to six.

Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:506 S 15 '47 170w

"Scouts and naturalists will value this book." B. W. Bell

Library J 72:1382 O 1 '47 60w

"An excellent, authoritative account of the lairs and habits of animals." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:154 D 6 '47 60w

"An interesting and easily understood account of the native American animals and the homes that they make for themselves. An informing book with drawings of the animals and diagrams of their homes."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 40w

Springf'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:177 D '47

MASON, JAMES. Principles of chess in theory and practice; new ed. rev. by Fred Reinfeld. 366p il $3 McKay

794.1 Chess 47-30008

"A book that has been in use for many years revised, with the old illustrative games replaced by modern ones." Booklist

Booklist 43:189 F 15 '47

"Mason's volume is a great chess classic by a man who besides playing the game thought and wrote about it." Dana Brannan

+ N Y Times p33 Ja 26 '47 70w

MASON, JOHN BROWN. The Danzig dilemma; a study in peacemaking by compromise. 377p $4 Stanford univ. press

943.12 Danzig. European war, 1914-1918—Territorial questions. Germany—Foreign relations—Poland. Poland—Foreign relations—Germany A46-2759

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"The author does not conclude necessarily that the Free City of Danzig was a sorry experiment which should not be repeated. In fact, he feels that even for Danzig in 1919 the free city solution was 'better than either of the crude alternatives' which were considered. As for the future, he states only that the Danzig experience should be studied, pondered, and recalled if similar problems need to be effectively dealt with. In view of the fact that some prominent writers, notably Sumner Welles, feel that the experience of the past twenty-seven years has shown conclusively that such schemes for free areas do not make for peace, readers would find an additional interest in some over-all conclusion from one who has so thoroughly investigated the question and produced such a comprehensive and excellent study." C. S. Crary

+ Am Hist R 52:317 Ja '47 900w

"This is a comprehensive, well-documented, and objective study of the Danzig experiment and at the same time an interesting history of Danzig between 997 and 1939. . . . It is a virtue of this excellent book that it shied away from more general questions and concentrated on specific administrative and regional problems, but the wisdom of the Danzig solution can be judged only from the point of view of Europe as a whole. Was it entirely an accident that the Second World War began in Danzig? However that may be, it would be a pity if new ventures in international cities were started without the peacemakers' first taking counsel from Dr. Mason's instructive facts and conclusions." S. T. Possony

+ Ann Am Acad 249:192 Ja '47 700w

"The value of the author's contribution will rest, in all likelihood, upon the fact that the record of Danzig between the two World Wars, ably and clearly delineated in this book, has an historical validity and importance quite independent of the use to which it may be put by present-day peacemakers." J. H. Wuorinen

+ Pol Sci Q 62:145 Mr '47 1000w

.Times [London] Lit Sup p88 F 15 '47 800w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Hoppity; il. by Kurt Wiese. 76p $1.50 Macmillan

47-11164

Hoppity was a little gray goat who lived in a small country town. Hoppity was very curious about the taste of things—the taste of grass and warm milk and onion tops, the taste of young lettuce and banana, the taste of flour and sugar and bananas, the taste of crayons, ink and paste, the taste of library books and ladies' hats—and everywhere he went Hoppity wore out his welcome until one day he tasted the bee on the baby's nose—and after that he settled down to a conventional goat's diet.

MASON, MIRIAM E.—Continued

Booklist 44:117 N 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week O 25 '47 40w

"Like other goats his behavior is not always pleasing to older people but as he hops through these pages in Kurt Wiese's amusing drawings, he is sure of popularity." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:354 S '47 40w

Kirkus 15:427 Ag 15 '47 100w

"An amusing story of a goat. Large print and satisfying illustrations."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 10w

Springf'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. A lion for Patsy; pictures by Vera Neville. [32p] $1.50 McKay

47-5502

Story about a little city girl who wanted a lion for a pet, but animals were not allowed in her apartment house. On a visit to her grandmother's farm Patsy discovered a suitable substitute. For second graders and older.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:144 D '47 80w

Booklist 44:39 S 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 29 '47 90w

"Excellent."

+ Kirkus 15:393 Ag 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow

Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 30 '47 180w

MASON, MIRIAM EVANGELINE. Middle sister; il. by Grace Paull. 160p $1.75 Macmillan

47-30194

Story of pioneer days in Ohio and Minnesota for grades two to four. It is about a meek, shy little girl who really wanted to be brave, and of her bargain with her uncle which finally brought her success.

Booklist 43:243 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 100w

"Suited in subject and format for the reading of an eight or nine-year-old, this homely story . . . has a childlike and engaging quality. . . . Grace Paull's pictures are well fitted to bring out the humor of this tale of country doings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 22:467 N '46 120w

+ Kirkus 15:31 Ja 15 '47 100w

"A welcome addition to books in large print for 7-10-year-olds. . . . Good read-aloud book for younger children. Recommended." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 1 '47 360w

"Its style and format planned for the little girl who is beginning to read to herself, this story with its heartening lesson in courage has humor, character and something going on all the time." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p33 My 18 '47 180w

"An appealing story. Grace Paull's drawings are fresh and amusing."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:35 My 17 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:70 Ap '47

MASON, PHILIP (PHILIP WOODRUFF, pseud). Wild sweet witch. 234p $3 Harcourt 47-11009

"A novel, set in the foothills of the Himalayas and covering the period from 1875 to 1938, that deals with the deterioration of the relations, over a period of three generations, between an Indian family and a succession of British civil servants." New Yorker

Booklist 44:91 N 1 '47

"As fiction it is mediocre: the writing is undistinguished, the plot insubstantial, the characters shadowy. As politics it is trivial: the British officials are benevolent and suave, the Congress leaders inept and gauche, the people dirty and quaint." Carlyle King

— Canadian Forum 27:167 O '47 110w

Kirkus 15:557 O 1 '47 180w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 25 '47 300w

Reviewed by John Morris

New Statesman & Nation 33:358 My 17 '47 360w

"Favorable as it is, it is just possible that some readers will find a few characteristics of the administrators a little tiresome. But what every one will remember will be Jodh Singh's personal tragedy played out against a sensitively evoked atmosphere of mountain life in India, the ice-capped, snowy giants of Nanda Devi." J. J. Espey

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 N 2 '47 430w

"The British officials, who are uniformly genial and humane, are not particularly memorable, and you may not be greatly interested in descriptions of native dances and festivals, but the author's account of the pathetic entanglements that culminate in the undoing of the third-generation head of the Indian family is unusually exciting."

New Yorker 23:126 O 18 '47 120w

"In certain respects, the novel is unsatisfactory; too much of its hero's career is synopsized and the final catastrophe is disproportionate to the problem. But the sensitive style and the well-sketched minor characters make for excellent reading." A. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p27 N 23 '47 250w

"In the first part the brilliant scenery and the customs of a strange and simple people are extraordinarily well communicated. Neither the second nor the third part is quite up to the beginning, but readers will certainly enjoy this vivid, sad, amusing story." V. C. Clinton-Badeley

+ Spec 178:570 My 16 '47 130w

Time 50:110 N 24 '47 750w

"It is true that young Indians, affected by the turmoil of politics, have committed crime, often from obscure motives; but Mr. Woodruff should have explained Jodh Singh's sudden break with all that his college friends and education must have meant to him. Too much is taken for granted. It is, however, a good and often vivid tale of life in the Himalayas."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p221 My 10 '47 490w

Wis Lib Bul 43:176 D '47

MASON, RICHARD LAKIN. The wind cannot read. 282p $3 Putnam

47-3922

A love story in which the chief characters are a young British officer, and a Japanese girl who is employed to teach the Japanese language to the British soldiers between campaigns. The scene is Burma and India.

Booklist 43:359 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Jl 20 '47 320w

"A sure handling of the material used, a love story that will not cloy, this has sincere, appealing moments."

+ Kirkus 15:261 My 15 '47 160w

"A clean-limbed hero and a clean-limbed style." Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 31 '47 110w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Jl 27 '47 320w

"A care for craftsmanship, intelligence and emotional control distinguish this English writer's first novel. Mr. Mason has told this story of a Japanese girl and a British intelligence officer stationed in India during the war with a delicacy, a sureness of touch and a selectivity that demonstrate a serious concern for the novelist's craft." Barbara Herman

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 24 '47 230w

"Done with delicacy and considerable perception. . . Mr. Mason, it seems to me, sadly needed more editorial counsel than he got—or, at least, than he took. His treatment of the fated love affair has a fresh, unspoiled quality about it, to be sure. But without realizing it he often overdoes precisely this quality until—well, you feel almost sorry." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 4 '47 1000w

"All along in the reading of this there is the feeling that it resembles in pattern something read before. For essentially the pattern of this book is the pattern, rather trite by now of 'A Farewell to Arms.' . . Yet, for all this, there remains a likable quality to the novel. One is willing to forgive the author a great deal, if only for the warm and sympathetic qualities of his writing, the occasional flashes of perceptive characterization, and the evident sincerity which hangs over it all." Hollis Alpert

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ag 2 '47 550w

"Mr. Richard Mason's first novel makes easy reading of the kind that can be provided only by hard writing. Mr. Mason has done all the work, painfully perhaps, but out of sight. The reader has only to enjoy, and the reviewer to try to give the reasons for his pleasure. . . If he can maintain the quality of integrity to be found in his first book, he will be a writer to watch."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p89 F 15 '47 330w

MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY. Radar school. Principles of radar, by members of the staff; 2d ed [ed: J. Francis Reintjes, assistant ed: Godfrey T. Coate]. (Mass. inst. Tech. press publication) [890p] $5 McGraw

621.38 Radar 47-30099

"Second edition edited by J. F. Reinjes and G. T. Coate, and first complete textbook on radar. Originally prepared for the training of radar officers in the armed forces. Book is devoted to engineering principles of pulse circuits and high-frequency devices common to radar equipment. Begins with description of components and functions of radar systems and continues with detailed discussion of typical system components. Minimum dependence upon mathematics." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:258 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:129 S 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:66 O '46

"This textbook will doubtless constitute the source for future works on the subject. In its extensiveness lie both its merit and its fault; for the practicing engineer who needs to use microwave radar techniques, the book is an excellent reference work; for the student or technician, the volume of material is overwhelming."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:112 Mr '47 150w

MASUR, HAROLD Q. Bury me deep. 274p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

47-6334

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week O 24 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:410 Ag 1 '47 85w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32

O 26 '47 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 O 19 '47 190w

"This is a first novel by a lad who knows how to plot a puzzle, how to keep things moving at a streamlined clip—in other words, how to write a first-class thriller. 'Bury me Deep' is just that." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 26 '47 200w

"Good tough—un."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 40w

MATHEWS, ANDREW JACKSON. La Wallonie, 1886-1892; the symbolist movement in Belgium. 115p $2.25 King's crown press

840.5 La Wallonie (periodical). Symbolism in literature. French poetry 47-3313

A study of the Symbolist movement in Belgium, and the little review, La Wallonie, which published the works of a group of French and Belgian writers of merit. The book contains sidelights on such writers as Mallarmé, Maeterlinck, Gide, and Verhaeren. Bibliography. Index.

"In the book before us for consideration we have in a slender but important volume a study of the literary and cultural movements in Belgium." J. L. Jones

+ Crozer Q 24:375 O '47 400w

"Mr. Mathews' work, unfortunately, is rather fragmentary as a history of the symbolist movement. Excessive emphasis on names and dates results in undue dryness, and the spirit and ideas which provided the generative force of 'La Wallonie' are very nearly overlooked." A. F.

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 18 '47 190w

"Although it treats a very limited subject, La Wallonie is of historical value in the literature of Symbolism insofar as it goes beyond the limits of a 'movement' to show the intellectual currents which drew this group together."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:134 Je '47 120w

MATHIESON, ELIZABETH LAIRD. Complete book of knitting. 287p il $2.95 World pub.

646.26 Knitting 47-11691

A pattern book for knitted garments for children and adults. Includes spreads and table mats and other household items. Diagrams illustrate the different stitches. Photographs of finished articles. Index.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

Reviewed by R. S. Robbins

N Y Times p15 D 28 '47 150w

MATTAUCH, JOSEF. Nuclear physics tables; and, An introduction to nuclear physics, by S. Fluegge; tr. from the German by Eugene P. Gross and S. Bargmann [with the consent of the Alien property custodian]. 173p il $12 Interscience

539.1 Nuclear physics 47-1920

"This book is a translation of the authors' Kernphysikalische Tabellen, mit einer Einführung in die Kernphysik, published in Berlin in 1942. It is based on a reference file of data that had been assembled at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institut für Chemie, and represents a comprehensive summary of the published knowledge and literature of nuclear physics through about the middle of 1941. The data published in over 10,000 papers has been arranged in the 14 tables. . . The first part of the book, written by Fluegge, is a concise review of the experimental methods and concepts of nuclear physics. It treats such topics as mass spectrography, nuclear masses, nuclear spin, and various phenomena of nuclear reactions. The work is, of course, designed for graduate physicists or persons with equivalent training." N Y New Tech Bks

MATTAUCH, JOSEF—Continued

"The textbook on nuclear physics is an outstanding contribution to the modern technical literature. The approach is distinctive, and the point of view fresh and modern." C. D. Coryell

+ Am Chem Soc J 69:2569 O '47 750w

"Although this book is translated from the German edition of 1941, it is a very welcome addition to the present literature on the subject. The 'Introduction to Nuclear Physics' occupies the first 104 pages and will be specially useful to those who are looking for a brief presentation of the elements of experimental nuclear physics with a minimum of mathematical theory." A. J. Dempster

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1540 My 26 '47 250w

Reviewed by Walter DeCew

Chem Eng 54:278 Je '47 200w

Reviewed by S. C. Lind

J Phys Chem 51:1031 JI '47 60w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

MATTHEWS, ALLEN R. The assault. 216p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

940.542 Iwo Jima, Battle of, 1945. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 47-3568

The author's account of his actual fighting experiences, a period of twelve days on Iwo Jima, relating what he saw, felt and thought, as a marine racing across the sands from one foxhole to the next, hearing now that one, now another of his companions "had got it," joking or griping about conditions as they affected him.

Kirkus 15:252 My 1 '47 150w

"It is a good book, uncommonly good, and its material is twelve days' experience of Iwo Jima, surely the most terrible of the Pacific encounters." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 165:450 O 25 '47 800w

"I agree with Bill Mauldin, who wrote a foreword to 'The Assault,' that this kind of book, written from a view limited 'to spitting distance around his hole in the sand,' is fully as important as the books which undertake to prove things about war and explain cause and effect. I think there are times when Matthew's kind of book is more important. We are all still too glib about cause and effect, and too quick to forget, or ignore, the rotten smell of the thing, its power to corrupt as well as decimate the species. 'The Assault' is a story which can help us remember." John Lardner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 22 '47 800w

"The men Matthews writes about did a lot of things that couldn't be done. Some of them even survived. Matthews, a 32-year-old newspaperman who went ashore as a combat marine with the Fourth Marine Division, survived, and has written a good book about it." Warren Moscow

+ N Y Times p7 Je 29 '47 480w

"Matthews's story of those twelve days of fatigue and fear, of hunger and thirst, of wounds and death is an extraordinary description of human beings in combat. This is the war seen from the shelter of the foxhole or shell crater for only a few feet in all directions. This is the ordeal of battle endured by a small group of men, unaware of strategic purpose, whose duty it was to advance a few yards, take an objective and hold it. There is no glamor, no pretty heroics. The simple realism of an exceptionally sharp observer has recorded the team work of these few men whose struggles against the enemy and an equally cruel nature give an unforgettable report of how men fought World War II with rifle, machine gun, and hand grenade." Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:21 JI 5 '47 550w

Time 49:101 Je 30 '47 390w

MATTHEWS, JOSEPH MERRITT. Textile fibers; their physical, microscopical, and chemical properties; 5th ed, prepared by a staff of specialists under the editorship of Herbert R. Mauersberger. 1133p il $12.50 Wiley

677 Textile fibers

47-3375

"This new edition of a standard work on animal, vegetable and mineral fibers, has been thoroughly revised and rewritten by a board of forty-seven experts in the field of fiber technology. Because of its comprehensiveness the book constitutes a valuable guide and reference tool for data relating to the physical and chemical properties of fibers, their sources, uses, production, methods of processing, testing, and qualitative identification. The greatest amount of additional material consists of 175 pages dealing with rayon and other synthetic fibers. Other important changes include an expanded treatment of cellulose, physical and chemical properties of fibers as a whole, and identification methods. Bibliographies or lists of references are given at the ends of all chapters." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"As in the case of many writings, some of the chapters tend to emphasize the interests of the authors, but, nevertheless, the scope of the book is remarkably large and is such as to make it a most valuable and recommended reference book. In this connection, it has an excellent index." Milton Harris

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3600 D 1 '47 300w

Library J 71:1052 Ag '46 110w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:39 Ap '47

"In addition to presenting new materials developed by recent research, this fifth edition brings together in one reference volume much scattered material not easily accessible, for the use of those concerned with the production, processing, conversion, and sale of all fibers now used in the textile and other industries."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:319 S '47 170w

MATTHIESSEN, FRANCIS OTTO. Achievement of T. S. Eliot; an essay on the nature of poetry. 2d ed rev & enl 202p $4 Oxford 811 Eliot, Thomas Stearns 47-6386

A revised edition of a study which first appeared in 1935 (Book Review Digest 1935). Two chapters have been added, one on the Four Quartets and one on the plays.

Reviewed by Walter Elder

Atlantic 180:150 D '47 310w

"This is a welcome re-publication of a book which has done more than any other to assess Eliot's place in English poetry. . . . Mr. Matthiessen's book is not a detailed literary analysis. His emphasis is rather on the force of Eliot's language and ideas. As such it was of great importance in freeing the poetry from fashions and making it intelligible as experience. But I wonder, in rereading Mr. Matthiessen's book, whether he does not over-do his continual protests about the poet's dignity and humility, his awareness of tragedy and 'compelling faith.'" John Hay

+ Commonweal 47:122 N 14 '47 550w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 N 16 '47 130w

"Professor Matthiessen does not agree with Eliot in some important respects, but he covers every aspect of Eliot's work and thought, derivations and influence, with admirable thoroughness."

New Yorker 23:138 N 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '47 150w

"F. O. Matthiessen's study of T. S. Eliot is the most detailed so far undertaken. . . . Matthiessen analyzes with clarity and perception—and without carrying the analogy too far—the musical structure underlying the 'Four Quartets.' More might have been done with a comparison of this structure with that of the later quartets of Beethoven, apparently their immediate inspiration. And Eliot's choice of 'quartet' must mean that he had four instruments or 'voices' in mind. Matthiessen's handling of the recurrent themes, delicate to extricate from such closely interwoven poems, is deftly done." Lloyd Frankenburg

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:48 D 6 '47 450w

MATTHIESSEN, FRANCIS OTTO. The James family; including selections from the writings of Henry James, senior, William, Henry, and Alice James. 706p $6.75 Knopf

920 James family 47-11259

A group biography of the family of Henry James, senior, consisting of selections from his own writings, and from those of his sons William and Henry, and his daughter Alice, with various autobiographical writings, and additional editorial comment. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

"Professor Matthiessen has succeeded in presenting a distinguished biography of a distinguished family." John Pick

+ Cath World 166:376 Ja '48 600w

"In 'The James Family,' Professor Matthiessen has assembled and written a biography so novel in form, so comprehensive, so living, that one feels as if he were approaching the Jameses for the first time." T. M. Longstreth
Christian Science Monitor p14 N 11 '47 600w

"The author's comments, while penetrating and convincing, are subordinated to the documentary aspects of his work, material judiciously selected from sources not readily available."

+ Kirkus 15:491 S 1 '47 170w

"Valuable but not essential for small collections." K. T. Willis

Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47

Reviewed by F. W. Dupee
Nation 165:477 N 1 '47 1150w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 117:28 D 1 '47 600w

"It is a magnificent family portrait; vivid, extraordinarily rich in detail, and having as its luminous background the tides of thought and feeling that ran during a century of our national life." Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 N 23 '47 1450w

"For the purpose of understanding the Jameses, a better selection than that compiled by Mr. Matthiessen can scarcely be imagined. Drawing upon both their formal and informal writings, he has so arranged his materials as to give the maximum of insight." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p5 O 26 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 23:133 D 13 '47 1450w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 9 '47 500w

Time 50:102 O 27 '47 1050w

MAUERSBERGER, HERBERT RICHARD, ed.
See Matthews, J. M. Textile fibers

MAUGHAM, WILLIAM SOMERSET. Creatures of circumstance. 314p $2.75 Doubleday 47-5077

A collection of fifteen short stories written since 1934, all of them previously published in magazines. They have various settings—Borneo, Spain, France, England and America.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 J1 27 '47 470w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 6 '47 360w

Kirkus 15:260 My 15 '47 180w

"Lively and lucid stories in the De Maupassant tradition by an author who continues to find human nature odd and diverting." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:1034 J1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 7 '47 300w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 117:32 Ag 11 '47 320w

Reviewed by V. S. Pritchett
New Statesman & Nation 34:94 Ag 2 '47 1300w

"'Creatures of Circumstance' is a typically engaging and varied collection of Maugham short stories. Ranging the world for his plots and his people, he exploits them with all his familiar skill into his unfailingly interesting, almost always strongly ironic tales." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1 27 '47 500w

"Mr. Maugham not only has good stories to tell; he knows how to tell them well. His narrative technique has about it the grace of all finely executed art. He unreels his spell with the same well lubricated assurance as the most cunning angler does his line; and the quarry stays hooked." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p4 J1 27 '47 1100w

"There aren't many uncontrived situations in the collection, and there are even fewer unforeseeable developments, but Mr. Maugham has so deftly hand-polished his patent-leather entertainment that the age of the material hardly shows at all."

+ New Yorker 23:63 Ag 2 '47 90w

"The best of the 15 stories are probably 'The Colonel's Lady' . . . and 'The Unconquered' . . . Perhaps it is not wholly fair to condemn the author for failing to produce continually work of the caliber of 'Of Human Bondage' or even 'Cakes and Ale' or 'The Moon and Sixpence.' And in the two short stories mentioned above, it is possible to see how Mr. Maugham gained his well-deserved reputation. The rest of the volume, however, will be a disappointment to all but the least demanding." A. D. K. Doughty

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 10 '47 850w

Reviewed by Harrison Smith
Sat R of Lit 30:10 J1 26 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Olivia Manning
Spec 179:186 Ag 8 '47 180w

"I do not think Mr. Maugham intends these short stories to be more than entertaining, and anyone who does not find them that must be hard to entertain." Olivia Manning

+ Spec 179:188 Ag 8 '47 80w

"In this latest collection of magazine stories his yarns are as wellmade as ever, and as full of Maugham's slick brand of irony. Readers will find them useful on long train rides; it is possible to read them while thinking of something else and lose nothing of value in the process."

Time 50:87 J1 28 '47 440w

"Mr. Maugham, of course, can always tell a good after-dinner tale. He is a versatile gossip who conceives a great number of amusing and discreditable things about a variety of people. The trouble is that his flair for incident has led him to neglect not only character but also, what was once his chief preoccupation, style. There is hardly a story in the present volume which is not defaced by clichés. . . . In the present instance Mr. Maugham has thrown away many good ideas by treating them in a purely conventional way."

Times [London] Lit Sup p361 J1 19 '47 800w

"Several of these artificially contrived tales are excellent in their wit, cleverness and originality. Mr. Maugham writing about a lady poet and her Colonel Blimp husband or about a French love affair which is the ultimate quintessence of all 'French love affairs' is delicious. But several of his stories are superficial and depressing, mere variations on shop-worn themes." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 37:190 autumn '47 270w

MAULDIN, WILLIAM HENRY. Back home [drawings by the author]. 315p $3.50 Sloane 917.3 U.S.—Description and travel. Veterans 47-11625

An account of what Bill Mauldin, famous GI cartoonist and author of Up Front, has been doing since he left the army in 1945, and began his private war against the social and political ills on the American home front.

"Mauldin writes as he draws. He can be malicious, as in his drawings of Major Wilson, and frothing as in his diatribe against Pegler. But for the most part his exasperation and ridicule and his irony ring true. His irritations and his sympathies are those of an eager, inquiring veteran with an honest angry core." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 180:158 N '47 850w

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 2 '47 500w

Reviewed by Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 12 '47 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Reviewed by George Miles

Commonweal 47:307 Ja 2 '48 500w

"He says many things people won't want to read, and these unpalatable truths may curtail the sales of his book. But he says things that need to be said, with the same warmheartedness, humanity and wry humor, the same sense of color and drama, that characterized Up Front."

+ — Kirkus 15:561 O 1 '47 340w

"Mauldin often writes better than he draws! Interesting not only as keen commentary on our current problems, but also encouraging as the personal chronicle of one service man's readjustment to becoming a civilian again. Recommended twice." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47 100w

"His writing in 'Back Home' is as skillful as his drawing and both are frank, tough and realistic." D. R. Fitzpatrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 2 '47 1100w

Reviewed by John Lardner

N Y Times p5 N 2 '47 1050w

New Yorker 23:140 N 29 '47 80w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 2 '47 1650w

"'Back Home' contains several tens of thousands of words of Mauldin prose and the best of the cartoons drawn since he was discharged at Fort Dix; it says, honestly and courageously, what Mauldin has done and thought and said since then; it's entertaining and exciting; it's funny and thoughtful. Only fools and bigots and dolts will object to it; and probably even they will want to read it." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 N 1 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:172 D '47

MAUPASSANT, GUY DE. Portable Maupassant; ed. and with an introd. by Lewis Galantière. (Viking portable lib) 756p $2 Viking 47-30167

"Twenty short stories (including the inescapable 'The Necklace') and novelettes, the novel 'A Woman's Life,' an essay, and letters. . . This anthology is almost a psychological biography of the man, a study that is rounded off with some revealing correspondence and excerpts from Maupassant's diary indicating that he was a savagely self-tortured man. There is a capable introduction by the editor." New Yorker

Booklist 43:225 Mr 15 '47

Kirkus 14:572 N 1 '46 150w

N Y Times p12 My 18 '47 900w

"An unusually good collection."

+ New Yorker 22:80 F 1 '47 130w

"Lewis Galantière has put together 'The Portable Maupassant' with knowledge, intelligence, and discrimination. He has induced a few of the most familiar tales, for, as he says, it would have been sheer affectation to exclude them; but he has given his volume variety and novelty by also including a number of the less famous stories, a revealing travel diary, a batch of the author's letters, an essay on the novel (in the shape of the preface to 'Pierre et Jean'), and his own excellent introduction." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 15 '47 250w

MAURIAC, FRANCOIS. Thérèse; a portrait in four parts; tr. by Gerard Hopkins. 383p $3 Holt 47-31392

Portrait of a mentally confused woman, Thérèse Desqueyroux. Four aspects of her character are studied to form the whole picture. In the first she is Thérèse, the poisoner, the intelligent woman; in the second more of her experiences are related in Paris; in the third she is middle-aged; and in the final section is the story of Thérèse, and her daughter, and her daughter's fiancé.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

"Thérèse is a superb story of a twisted personality. . . Mauriac must have a dash of Russian in his blood; he enjoys being miserable. If you like morbid tragedy, you will like this story of a lost soul. But if you are looking for inspiration, fresh air and normal people—you won't like Thérèse." J. B. Sheerin

Cath World 166:187 N '47 450w

"Francois Mauriac has been haunted by Thérèse Desqueyroux and has gone on telling her life in a series of successive writings, the last of which dates back to 1935. So much of what belongs to the period between the two wars has become distant and stale, if not entirely outdated. But Mauriac's 'Thérèse' still pulsates with life. . . Years after its first publication, 'Thérèse Desqueyroux,' emerges as a masterful, beautifully written work, relating a hideous plot, yet never exaggerating its aspects; all that it does is to magnify like the lens of a microscope the germs and miasma of selfish, seculuded lives. The tale is so admirably wrought, so complete, so hard and clear, that it makes one think of a piece of amber formed from the resin of those very pines, and still retaining the intense pitiless glow of the South-Western sun." Helen Iswolsky

+ Commonweal 47:98 N 7 '47 900w

Kirkus 15:444 Ag 15 '47 160w

"The story is a frighteningly unpleasant piece of psychologizing around the extraordinary disorders of an abnormal woman's life. Mauriac has written it well, and with considerable subtlety has produced a highly moral effect. Gerard Hopkins' translation is splendid." Frederick Stewart

+ Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 130w

"Occasionally 'Thérèse' may seem too tortuous in its soul-searching for any one, except, perhaps another Thérèse, to follow with sympathy. But no one will deny that there is hardly a page here without its store of extraordinary insights into the type of the doomed-but-never-quite-defeated human heart. M. Mauriac convinces us that he has descended into the deepest and darkest levels of the psyche, and that he has the power to record brilliantly and powerfully what he has seen there." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 26 '47 800w

"Nothing could be more powerful or more moving than the manner in which Mauriac relates her story. Both his subject and his style frequently recall Racine and Baudelaire; and indeed we often feel that we are dealing here with a poem, so rich in the symbolism and so deft the arrangement of themes." Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p38 N 30 '47 750w

New Yorker 23:134 O 25 '47 60w

"Is it one of M. Mauriac's best? I do not think so. As to his position in contemporary French literature, I have little doubt: it is high, unique, and probably secure. But I am far from being as sure about Thérèse; that is to say, about her composite portrait. I find the woman of the first part interesting and affecting. Her story is absorbing, perfectly told, and, for artistic purposes, complete. And the woman of the last story is only slightly less satisfying. But these two short novels, and the two episodes, do not compose happily. The constructed whole lacks proportion, balance, and harmony." B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:14 N 15 '47 1050W
Time 50:111 N 3 '47 110W

MAURIAC, FRANCOIS. Viper's tangle; tr. by Warre B. Wells. 288p $3 Sheed

"The central character is a hateful old man who schemes to leave his money to an illegitimate son in return for the love denied him by his family. When the son conspires against him, the old man discovers that love cannot be bought, then gives the money to his greedy legitimate children as a sort of franc-for-franc payment of their grudging affection. In giving up his wealth he experiences an insight into godly love, but apparently too late for him to be saved on earth." Time

"Very probably Mauriac's best novel." J. B. Sheerin

+ Cath World 166:188 N '47 50W

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien
N Y Times p38 N 30 '47 270W

Time 50:110 N 3 '47 80W

MAUROIS, ANDRE. Washington: the life of a patriot; il. by Henry C. Pitz [tr. by Eileen Lane Kinney]. 71p $2 Didier pubs.

B or 92 Washington, George—Juvenile literature 47-745

Brief biography of Washington written for children of nine to twelve.

Booklist 43:229 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 F 23 '47 10W

"Recommended." C. W. Field

+ Library J 72:325 F 15 '47 70W

"To make a character like Washington's at once truthful and attractive to children is so difficult that it was long met chiefly by myths; we now know better than that. But among the lives that mean to show Washington as he really was, and to make children not only admire but love him as he was, this book ranks high."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 10 '46 470W

"This is a conventional treatment. It highlights Washington's frontier training, military service and life as the master of Mount Vernon. There is a brief, inadequate summary of his years in the Presidency. Historians will disagree with many of the interpretations, but the author merits praise for treating Washington as a fallible human being. The illustrations have unusual strength and appeal. They are the most satisfactory part of the book." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p31 F 2 '47 180W

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 90W

MAUS, CYNTHIA PEARL. World's great Madonnas. 789p il $4.95 Harper

232.931 Mary, Virgin—Art. Mary, Virgin, in literature 47-30725

"An anthology of pictures, poetry, music, and stories centering in the life of the Madonna and her Son." (Subtitle) Material is arranged geographically with the representation from every continent. One hundred and fourteen pictures reproduced, only two in color." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:28 S 15 '47

Reviewed by J. W. Lane

Cath World 166:375 Ja '48 400W

"The Christian art of Asia and Africa (more fully treated in three books by Daniel Johnson Fleming) furnishes some fresh and inspiring material." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1111 S 17 '47 180W

"One may wonder whether there can be much value in a work so lacking in definite religious ideas and which always exhibits the second-rate in preference to the first-rate and the third-rate in preference to the second. It is true that there is a bit from Dante, and the Adoremus Te of Palestrina, and a few reproductions of the Old Masters. . . The stories are equally commonplace and, without any sense of incongruity, pictures by Faldi and Bouguereau and Bosseron Chambers are included with those by Fra Angelico and Raphael and Titian. There are, however, some interesting pictures made by Indian and Chinese and African Christian artists, though these too are usually interesting rather than good, and may have been culled from missionary magazines. The geographical sections, on the other hand, are shamelessly padded with stories and poems that have nothing to do with them." Theodore Maynard

+ Commonweal 46:506 S 5 '47 420W

"In sheer bulk the compilation is enormous: well over a hundred reproductions of paintings and sculptures, each with a carefully wrought literary interpretation; nearly two hundred and fifty pieces of poetry; sixty examples of artistic prose; and a larger number of musical compositions—chiefly hymns, lullabies, and folk songs. The coordination of musical and literary masterpieces, along with the examples from the representational arts, makes the collection trebly interesting and valuable. . . Defects aside, this volume as it stands is well organized for use in worship services and school programs." H. R. Wiloughby

+ Crozer Q 25:92 Ja '48 400W

Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 70W

Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

MAUTNER, LEONARD. Mathematics for radio engineers. 327p $5 Pitman

510 Mathematics 47-30508

"Book on practical application of mathematics to radio, mathematics needed to solve everyday design problems in radio, electronics, radar, television and associated fields. Emphasis is on the solution of typical problems rather than on mathematical theorems and rigorous proofs. Engineers who experience difficulty in applying mathematics to their work will find material they need here. Applications include differentiation, integration and sawtooth generation circuits for television. Author is Research Engineer of the Allen B. Dumont Laboratories." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 70W

N Y New Tech Bks 32:53 Jl '47

MAVERICK, LEWIS ADAMS. China, a model for Europe. 2pts in 1 368p $4.50 Paul Anderson co, 125 Broadway, San Antonio 5, Tex.

951.03 China—Relations (general) with Europe. China—Politics and government 46-6265

"Part I of this timely and scholarly monograph is a study of Chinese influence upon European literature and thought, especially in government and economics, in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, with appendices containing copious extracts from the writings of the Chinese social philosopher Mencius and the agriculturist Hsu Kuang-ch'i. Part II is an English translation, with historical introduction, of Le Despotisme de la Chine by François Quesnay (Paris, 1767)." Christian Century

Reviewed by G. N. Steiger

Am Hist R 52:383 Ja '47

MAVERICK, LEWIS A.—Continued

"The translated study is worth-while because of the effort to show the inter-relationships of culture and societies. Maverick's own portion of the work suffers from the wordiness that is always present when too many quotations from translations of Chinese works are included. There is a good bibliography." A. E. Nuquist
+ — Am Pol Sci R 40:1217 D '46 320w

Christian Century 63:753 Je 12 '46 370w

MAW, MRS MARGARET (PETERSON). Nikoline's choice; il. by Mabel Woodbury. 239p $2.50 Oxford

47-3370

The heroine of this true story was the daughter of Danish immigrants, living on the frontier in Utah in the 1880s. Though fictional in form the tale is autobiographical in substance.

Booklist 43:313 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:264 Jl '47 80w

Kirkus 15:239 My 1 '47 120w

"It is not only another pioneer story of merit, but a picture of family life at its best, an appreciation of the freedom America offers and the privilege of citizenship. Well written and interesting. For the 10-13 age." E. E. Frank

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 My 11 '47 600w

Reviewed by N. B. Baker

N Y Times p17 Jl 6 '47 150w

"More a chronicle of a courageous immigrant family than a story, its weakness is balanced by its warmth, sincerity, and evident realism."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:101 Je '47

MAXWELL, JAMES ACKLEY. Fiscal impact of federalism in the United States. 427p $5 Harvard univ. press

336.73 Finance—U.S. Federal government A46-25

"This book is devoted to the study of public finance as an aspect of United States federalism. It undertakes to examine all federal relations in which the national and state governments have mutual fiscal interests. Using the historical method, the author brings together in succinct and comprehensive chapters the story of financial relations in defense, public assistance, education, public works, public health, law enforcement, employment compensation, and employment offices. He likewise analyzes federal relationships in the fields of taxation, and the management of the public domain." Ann Am Acad

"At the end, in a preface, or somewhere else, one could have wished that the author had let himself go just a little to speculate on the broader implications of his work. Instead, he closes as he began, with conclusions that are almost entirely fiscal. From a scholarly and scientific viewpoint, this is as it should be, and even the pedestrian character of his suggestions for the piecemeal improvement of national-state fiscal relations can be forgiven because they are so thoroughly supported by his data and his argument. Let us hope that in some other place the author will set forth to the public the broader views on federalism that he must have developed while producing this excellent study." William Anderson

+ — Am Pol Sci R 40:1186 D '46 600w

Reviewed by H. W. Stoke

Ann Am Acad 249:182 Ja '47 480w

"Particularly in its account of the expenditure aspects of fiscal relations, and in its thorough analysis of the aids-problem, the book supplements effectively existing literature in the field. It should interest not only students of public finance and political science, but federal and state administrators and political leaders."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:302 D '46 200w

MAY, EARL CHAPIN. Century of silver, 1847-1947; Connecticut Yankees and a noble metal. 388p il $3.50 McBride

739.23 International silver company, Meriden, Connecticut. Silversmithing 47-3495

"Using the history of silver manufacture from 1847 to 1947 as a core, Mr. May has built up a picture that typifies the growth of all American industry during this time. From itinerant tradesmen to captains of industry the silversmiths progressed. The Connecticut silver towns, the large mass production factories and the modern methods of widespread distribution which evolved are all treated in detail here. Especially noted is the rise of the International Silver Co. and the relationship between modern production and human relations within it." (Chem Eng) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:147 D 15 '47

Chem Eng 54:272 O '47 100w

"A delightful narrative." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 90w

MAYLING SOONG FOUNDATION, WELLESLEY COLLEGE. QUADRENNIAL INSTITUTE. America's future in the Pacific; lectures delivered at the 2d quadrennial inst, Mayling Soong foundation, Wellesley college [by] John Carter Vincent and others. 247p $3 Rutgers univ. press

327.73 U.S.—Foreign policy. Eastern question (Far East) 47-31486

"Twelve authorities present individual studies of Pacific countries' history, social structure, religion, government, international relations, and prospects of constitutional democracy. They conclude that intelligent people, who fear the loss of American prestige among the millions of Asia, are disturbed when they see the United States with thinly disguised military force participating in the internal affairs of other countries, and that British use of Japanese troops in Java, plus Dutch, French and British use of American lend-lease military equipment to force the old imperialism on natives, tend to undermine Asiatic confidence in our talk of democracy." (Library J) Bibliography. No index.

"The symposium is a well-conceived and challenging work. It will probably leave the thoughtful American wondering how democratic ideals, emanating from an age when America was a revolutionary aspirant for liberation, can be furthered by the nation, now that it has become the most powerful of all nations with a major responsibility for world order." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 N 4 '47 750w

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 50w

"Clear, frank, authoritative picture of what is going on in the Pacific today. Highly recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1264 S 15 '47 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 19 '47 310w

MAYNARD, THEODORE. Collected poems; introd. by Alfred Noyes. 222p $3.50 Macmillan 811 47-674

Collection of the poems of this Catholic author, who was born in India of English parents, and has lived in the United States since 1920.

"If proof were needed of Theodore Maynard's place among the most significant poets of our time it is amply provided by Collected Poems. He stands revealed as an integrated personality who has escaped neither the bludgeoning of Fate nor the tears of life but who has never lost his power to think straight, to feel intensely, to submit to discipline unembittered, to laugh, to weep, to sing, to compassionate his fellow humans." J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 164:567 Mr '47 800w

"Through Mr. Maynard's poems glow the warm truths, are heard the angel voices, with which, and with whom, he is obviously familiar." Anne Fremantle + Commonweal 45:451 F 14 '47 400w

"Verses of technical skill, emotional sincerity, of nostalgia, sadness and dignity. Never audacious or brilliant, never caustic or satirical, this volume should have a fairly general appeal, expressing as it does many common poetical emotions with a broad-based, almost solid skill."
+ Kirkus 14:311 Ag 1 '46 150w

"A quiet, thoughtful poet, writing with deep conviction and courage." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 72:322 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Sister M. Marguerite
Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 450w

MAYO, EDWARD L. The diver. 66p $1.75
Univ. of Minn.

811 47-11502

A first book of poems by an American writer. Most of the separate poems have been published in magazines over a period of ten years. "Some of the poems are occasional pieces (On the Student Peace Strikers Who Went to War). Others are light verse and still others examine the arts of poetry, painting, the dance and a variety of traditional themes. The disjunction of the contents may be regarded either as a pleasing diversity or as a frank rejection of any obvious principle of unity." (N Y Times)

"Many of these pieces have spoken forth impressively in separate publications. Gathered together they acquire the new dimension of the author's personality. It is a genuinely attractive personality: pessimistically sane, warm, sensitive, intellectual, and honest... Taken as a whole, The Diver presents a poet who should be read." John Ciardi
+ Atlantic 180:164 D '47 300w

"What unites these poems is an admirable clarity and lucidity of expression and a determination to shun the clichés which make much modern poetry seem a kaleidoscope in which the same unevocative images and abstractions are constantly reshuffled into new patterns. Mr. Mayo is at times, over explicit... Mr. Mayo's first book shows him a skillful and sensitive craftsman. One looks forward expectantly to his second." Milton Crane
+ N Y Times p14 N 16 '47 450w

Reviewed by David Daiches
Sat R of Lit 31:17 Ja 10 '48 190w

MAYOR, DOROTHY. It's an ill will. 248p $2.50 Mill

47-20645

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:112 F 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
My 25 '47 50w

"Exciting—if implausible."
Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 50w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER), ed. Best one-act plays, 1946-1947. 275p $3
Dodd

812.08 Dramas—Collections (38-8006)

Ten plays, several previously unpublished, which include two for radio, six for stage, one ballad play, and one television script. Contents: How they knocked the devil out of Uncle Ezra, by Morton Wishengrad; Freight, by Kenneth White; Making the bear, by Theodore Epstein; Transition in India, by Arnold Marquis; Skeletons, by Nicholas Bela; Bride-ship, by Jack Jacobs; The Lord and Hawksaw Sadie (a play with music), by Elizabeth Wilson; Open secret, by Robert Adler and others; The soldier who became a great Dane, by Joseph Shore and Richard Lincoln; The eagle (a television script), by Ted Beebe. Bibliographies: Selected plays of the year available for production in America and New collections of one-act plays available for production in America.

Booklist 43:356 J1 15 '47

"One of the best of Mrs. Mayorga's annual anthologies." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:1272 S 15 '47 60w

MAYORGA, MRS MARGARET (GARDNER) ed. Twenty short plays on a royalty holiday (1947 to 1950) (V3) 373p $3.50 French

812.08 Dramas—Collections

"Good one-act plays most of which require from four to six actors. One play is set in ancient Athens, one in seventeenth-century Spain; the others have contemporary American backgrounds. Copyright dates range from 1942-1947 but only three are earlier than 1946. One copy of the play, in separate form at 40c, must be purchased for each member of the cast. 'These plays are offered royalty-free to amateurs until July 1st, 1955.'—Note on title page." Booklist

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

"Highly recommended."
+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 50w

MAZZA, MRS IRMA (GOODRICH). Herbs for the kitchen, rev ed 359p $2.50 Little

641.657 Herbs. Cookery 47-24840

"This 1947 revision, the first after 9 re-printings, follows the original text closely except for the enlarged chapter on 'Herbs in Your Garden,' which now gives hints on landscaping, propagating methods and drying, and instructions for growing each of the 'perfumed handmaidens,' which the author promises 'will bring you culinary fame' although 'just six herbs will make you a good cook.' An added chapter titled 'The Lovable, Errant Lily' is devoted to the use and management of garlic." (J Home Econ) Includes recipes, Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1939.

"Breezy, witty, and extremely informative volume on seasoning with herbs in the Italian manner... Mrs. Mazza's book is such fun it's worth the money even if one never wet a spoon by its directions." Miriam Birdseye
+ J Home Econ 39:523 O '47 250w

"A revised edition of an excellent culinary guide."
+ New Yorker 23:116 Mr 22 '47 40w

MEAD, MRS LEONE (DANIELS). See Daniels, L. L.

MEADER, STEPHEN WARREN. Behind the ranges; il. by Edward Shenton. 222p $2.50
Harcourt

47-11000

A modern adventure story for boys in the ten to fourteen age group. Dick Randolph and his botanist father are situated in a lonely valley high in the Olympic mountains of Washington. Dick's share of the expedition is to obtain specimens of the rare silver marmot, but his work is severely hindered by an unknown enemy. The solving of this mystery almost costs Dick his life.

"Definitely melodramatic, but the unfamiliar and thrilling wilderness setting, 'a young man's country,' makes the book worth consideration."
Booklist 44:94 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Russell McCracken
Chicago Sun Book Week p6a N 19 '47

150w
Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 30w

"Mr. Meader here gives us another gripping story of today, set in a romantic region." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 24:41 Ja '48 140w
Kirkus 15:581 O 15 '47 85w

MEADER, STEPHEN W.—Continued

"Recommended for cautious purchase for children's collections." M. D. Read

Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 90w

"The author, who always gathers his material at first hand, is ably assisted by Edward Shenton's illustrations in portraying the wild loveliness of this wilderness valley. This is one of Stephen Meader's best books." Howard Pease

+ N Y Times p44 N 16 '47 160w

"The story is so exciting that one cannot put it down until the last word is read... Excellent background and a well-plotted story. Effective full-page drawings."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:52 N 15 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:158 N '47

MEADOWCROFT, MRS ENID (LA MONTE).

On Indian trails with Daniel Boone; il. by Lloyd Coe. 136p $2 Crowell

Boone, Daniel—Juvenile literature 47-3536

A story for young readers which tells why and how Daniel Boone led his family and his friends over the Wilderness Road to Kentucky. Daniel Boone's children are the central figures in the story.

Booklist 43:349 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 28 '47 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:263 J1 '47 60w

Kirkus 15:1 Ja 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by E. W. Turpin

Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 My 11 '47 270w

"As in her previous historical stories Miss Meadowcroft vitalizes facts by weaving them into a simple and exciting story. Older children will especially enjoy the lively conversations of the very human young Boones and the dramatic sketches with which the book is illustrated." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p20 J1 27 '47 180w

MEALAND, RICHARD LEWIS. Let me do the talking. 275p $2.75 Doubleday

47-30482

This novel is based on the inside story of the literary agent, his friends, parties, and business. Charles Gabriel, the hero, moves and has his being in the aura of big business among the publishers. It is his affair to goad authors into writing books, and publishers into putting these efforts into print. In his pursuit of literature he loses out when it comes to love and marriage.

Reviewed by James Hilton

Atlantic 180:177 N '47 480w

"Mealand's book seems as slick, pat, pert and shallow as the people about whom the author, an ex-motion picture studio story editor, writes with a blend of authority and affection. This, it should be immediately added, is not to imply that the novel is not interesting and entertaining reading." J. O. Supple

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 10 '47 320w

"The seamy side of the business of making books is exposed for all to see. However, the manner of so doing palls a bit after a while and I found it repetitive and dullish (and to people not in the business I think it would stale even faster). It is bright—but self-consciously so... But there's a fad for books of its type at the moment—so it might catch on."

+ Kirkus 15:317 Je 15 '47 170w

"Gabriel's story, like Gabriel himself, is light, entertaining and amusing." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 10 '47 700w

"A brash, light-hearted, extremely readable novel." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '47 800w

"An entertaining novel, which, for all its noisy brashness, comes near to being a good one."

+ New Yorker 23:120 S 13 '47 130w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 6 '47 750w

"'Let Me Do the Talking' will serve to entertain any reader who wishes to look into a satirical study of merchants of flesh and literature; it will be a whole banquet for those who buy or sell, or who merely turn out the manuscripts that produce this phantasmagoria."

Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 23 '47 1200w

MEANS, MRS FLORENCE (CRANNELL). Assorted sisters; il. by Helen Blair. 250p $2.50 Houghton

When the Locke family moved from an Arizona Indian reservation to take over a crowded settlement house in Denver, Mary Locke worried most about her new school. But the friendly Lockes made a success of their work, and Mary and her assorted sisters—one Chinese, one a Spanish-American, and the third a Negro—played an important part in the building of a bigger and better home. For older girls.

"Top honors as far as we are concerned. Mrs. Means has an exceptional gift for finding the least common denominator in girls." Jane Cobb

+ Atlantic 180:144 D '47 110w

Booklist 44:115 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Charlemagne Rollins

Chicago Sun Book Week p7A N 19 '47 220w

"Mrs. Means' warm sympathy and solicitude for girls shows itself in the wise, frank handling of modern manners and customs as they affect the Assorted Sisters. Much more than racial relations enters into the excellent story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:41 Ja '48 120w

"A persistent, if not always convincing bid for integration of national groups and the part high school crowds can play gives this book special value. Well-meaning—not inspired."

+ Kirkus 15:468 S 1 '47 130w

"Not as outstanding or clear-cut as author's recent books but still worth having." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 73:49 Ja 1 '48 70w

"Girls from 11 to 15 will enjoy the friendship among the sisters and their school and date problems; they will like the slight mysteries about Mei-Lee and Marita. The happy ending is too pat and the Lockes a bit too cheery but the lesson of tolerance is laudable." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p47 N 30 '47 180w

"In this story Mrs. Means accomplishes something that has seldom been done before. She pictures with complete realism and lack of sentimentality the life of a missionary family."

R. H. Viguers

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 D 13 '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:179 D '47

MEEK, CHARLES KINGSLEY. Land law and custom in the colonies; with an introd. by Lord Hailey. 337p $6 Oxford

333.32 Land tenure—Great Britain [47-1004]

"The author of this fundamental treatise was formerly in the Administrative Service of Nigeria and is now a Fellow of Brasenose College at Oxford. His summary covers all the important colonies and concludes with several comprehensive chapters on legal institutions in the Empire as a whole." Foreign Affairs

"A valuable supplement to Dr. Meek's work would be one utilizing his well-documented material on tenure and similar material relating to other territories, and analyzing its urgent political significance for the modern world. To systematize and accelerate the process of adaptation in land tenure might go far toward creating the conditions of peaceful change." Eric Beecroft

+ Ann Am Acad 252:119 J1 '47 200w

Foreign Affairs 25:705 J1 '47 50w

"Dr. Meek undertook the ambitious task of analysing the whole question of land tenure in a representative selection of colonies in the East and West Indies, Africa and Ceylon, and he has performed it admirably in this illuminating volume."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p219 My 10 '47 800w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. Pat: the story of a Seeing eye dog. 190p $2.50 Knopf

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-1965

This novel for young readers tells the story of a young veteran, injured in the Pacific fighting, who returns to civilian life totally blind. In the course of readjustment he is persuaded to go to Morristown to learn to "see again" thru the eyes of a trained dog, Pat.

Booklist 43:275 My 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:269 J1 '47 50w

"Interesting details of the life and training in Morristown, as well as sympathetic insight into the problems of the disabled veteran. In spite of the jumpy writing, the honest material makes this a moving book."

+ — Kirkus 15:167 Mr 15 '47 170w

"Recommended for readers of junior high age and above." S. J. Johnson

+ Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 50w

Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 80w

MEEK, STERNER ST PAUL. So you're going to get a puppy. 149p $2 Knopf

636.7 Dogs Agr47-26

"Colonel Meek, whose dog stories have been approved by young and old, tells exactly what to do in order to have a happy, well-behaved dog. He covers all emergencies." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

Commonweal 47:158 N 21 '47 60w

Kirkus 15:510 S 15 '47 170w

"Sympathetically written by a dog fancier and author of dog stories, this book will be very useful to dog owners, especially younger ones. Recommended." M. F. Cox

Library J 72:1382 O 1 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:55 N 15 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:136 O '47

MEEKER, ODEN, and MEEKER, OLIVIA. And points south; il. by Barney Tobey. 336p $3 Random house

918 Latin America—Description and travel 47-31266

An account of a ten-months trip thru Latin America, in which the authors visited every country except Chile and San Salvador. Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 15:420 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Buzzing from place to place, brimming over with adjectives, the authors serve up a concoction of delightful tid-bits on 'living' and tedious rehearsals of well-known facts. . . Withal, a typical, superficial travel work with some interesting sideviews." Joseph Borome

+ — Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 100w

"The whole adds up to a series of sketches such as make up the main fare of the modern travel magazine but seem a little thin when they are more solemnly put within the covers of a book." B. D. Wolfe

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p40 D 7 '47 270w

"In this impressionistic book so full of gentle caricatures you may find here and there a strong commentary. The authors give a truthful account of some peculiarities and eccentricities of the Latin-American people, but the account is in no way offensive. I might add, however, that with more time and patience far more valuable material could have been collected." Cassiano Nufes

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:42 N 22 '47 410w

Wis Lib Bul 43:172 D '47

MEEKS, MRS ESTHER K. One is the engine; a train counting book; il. by Ernie King. [24p] $1 Wilcox & Follett

47-31446

A little boy and his father stand at a railroad crossing watching a freight train pass. As each car passes the father explains its type and describes what it carries. For ages four to seven.

"Beautifully precise drawings by Ernie King, brilliant in color, show not only special cars but the countryside and correlated industries. This is a high-repeat value book for the 4 to 7-year-olds." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 1 '47 90w

Kirkus 15:579 O 15 '47 50w

"Useful information presented in a vivid, colorful picture book that is sure to be popular with the four- to eight-year-olds." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 80w

MEERSCH, MAXENCE VAN DER. Fishers of men; tr. from the French; with an intro. by John Fitzsimons. 272p $3 Sheed

47-11745

"The story of the Young Christian Workers, a French Catholic youth organization, dedicated to renewing the faith of the Catholic working people. Set in one of the French manufacturing towns that has its drab counterpart in every country, it tells the story of one of the workers and his conversion to the cause." N Y Times

"Van der Meersch has stripped the usual novel accoutrements to a minimum. No philosophizing, only the barest but most effective suggestion of the looks of persons and places and a remarkable economy of phrase throughout. His stirring story bare of embellishments is one more evidence of his stature as a literary artist. He could hardly have hit it off better." E. S. Skillin

+ Commonweal 47:122 N 14 '47 900w

"Told in the first person, it emerges as a fictionalized tract, honestly set forth but clumsily contrived. Whether or not any of the amateurishly labored style is due to the translation, one cannot tell. The author has apparently a close knowledge of the workers' lives, their surroundings and problems, but the novel is so obviously a preachment that the effect for the general reader is weakened." Andrea Parke

+ — N Y Times p20 D 7 '47 180w

MEES, CHARLES EDWARD KENNETH, and BAKER, JOHN RANDALL. Path of science. 250p $3 Wiley

509 Science—History 47-398

Lectures first delivered at the University of California, expanded for publication. "The subject of the lectures was the development of science and its relation to the history of society. These lectures have been expanded with the purpose of presenting the development of modern science against the background of history." (Pref)

Reviewed by M. C. Leikind

Am Hist R 52:766 J1 '47 320w

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

"A stimulating and meaty volume." D. O. Myatt

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1392 My 12 '47 500w

Current Hist 12:241 Mr '47 50w

"In spite of some obvious faults and limitations, this is an interesting book. . . While its major thesis—that mankind has made progress through recorded history and that the pattern of historical alterations may be depicted as that of a helix—is not presented convincingly, the book is full of shrewd and often wise observations on the conditions making for scientific advance, and contains much firsthand information on the organization of academic and industrial research." E. N.

MEES, C. E. K.—Continued

+ — J Philos 44:527 S 11 '47 750w

"Interesting reading by the author of The Fundamentals of Photography and The Organization of Industrial Scientific Research." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 71:1333 O 1 '46 80w

"The chapters devoted to the historical development of the sciences are excellent. Like all good citizens who happen to be scientists, Dr. Mees would like to use his scientific knowledge for the betterment of the world. He is in good company: so far he is one of many first-class scientists who have not succeeded." Benjamin Harrow

+ — Nation 164:162 F 8 '47 650w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:207 Je '47 170w

MEGARGEE, EDWIN. Poo and the baby bunny rabbit [pictures by the author]. [42p] $1.50 Messner

47-31205

A little boy sees a small rabbit while he is eating breakfast. Later in the day he sets out to visit his rabbit friend, asking the way of the animals as he goes. Story told in text and pictures for five and six year olds.

"This rates about zero with me—I didn't like anything about it."

— Kirkus 15:335 Jl 1 '47 60w

"Pleasant to read aloud, has humor. Recommended for the library with a large budget." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 72:1543 N 1 '47 40w

"If you are telling animal stories to very little children, be sure you yourself see the animals just as children see them. Mr. Megargee does. . . Lifelike animal drawings—without dress accessories—can perfectly well accompany a story in which animals speak, and after the story has been read the pictures can be brooded over if one loves animals." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 16 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

MEIER, FRANK. Hurricane warning; notable storms involving sailing ships on our sea coasts and Great Lakes. 254p il $3.50 Dutton

910.4 Shipwrecks. Storms 47-4926

True stories of some of the major storms which occurred over the United States seacoast and the Great Lakes in the eighties, nineties, and early years of this century. Illustrated with photographs.

Booklist 44:13 S 1 '47

"If you read 'Hurricane Warning' from start to finish, the stories all blend into one weird phantasmagoria of pounding surf, driving sleet and sand, and the Lyle gun firing its life-saving line through the gloom at some dim hulk far offshore. Taken one at a time, however, the tales are clear and concise. For those who live near the scene of some of these famous wrecks, this book will be a jackpot of local lore." C. T.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 17 '47 180w

Library J 72:1035 Jl '47 30w

"There is, after all, a certain elemental sameness to scenes of sailing vessels piling up on wintry beaches in a smother of storm, at least when viewed in distant retrospect. Yet so immediate is Mr. Meier's feeling for his subject, and so genuinely does he know every shade of what it is like to battle harsh weather, that he succeeds in making each one of his wrecks an exciting novelty. . . From the Coast Guard, the Weather Bureau and some other sources Mr. Meier has secured a series of illustrations that greatly augments the value of his book." E. B. G.

+ N Y Times p12 S 7 '47 450w

"Mr. Meier has dug into the archives of the Coast Guard for his material and is a stickler for exactitude—weather conditions, names, dates, and so forth—but there is no drama in his writing. The stories are factually interesting, however, and the book can be recommended as a first-rate reference work."

+ — New Yorker 23:71 Jl 19 '47 100w

MEIGS, ELIZABETH BLEECKER. Scarlet Hill; il. by Sally Tate. 175p $2 Bobbs

47-31188

"The story of a summer on a farm in the Mohawk Valley near Albany, of three sisters and their father and mother and of the blind Arabian horse that they 'gentled.'" Sat R of Lit

"Recommended for the 10-12-year-olds." Anne Izard

+ Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 70w

"There is just enough sorrow in the story to point up the general happiness. Mrs. Meigs must have experienced these satisfactions herself to write so understandingly about them." Winifred Snedden

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 130w

"A happy, unpretentious story that would be especially good to read aloud."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 50w

MELAND, BERNARD EUGENE. Seeds of redemption. 162p $2.50 Macmillan

261 Sociology, Christian. Civilization, Christian 47-2806

"A profound analysis of the crisis confronted by civilization in this atomic age. Professor Meland delineates the nature of our crisis with stark realism. He believes it possible that we face 'the utter end of this human venture as history has known it,' and he mimes no words in depicting the desperate plight in which we find ourselves wherein it is altogether conceivable that human civilization may be utterly destroyed by the forces of atomic energy which its scientists have produced. Such a desperate situation calls for desperate counter-measures. No mere 'turning to the church' or 're-emphasizing spiritual values' will suffice. There may be a complete reversal of values in which science and industry as well as education and religion must be participants. The alliance of science and industry in the search for power has now over-reached itself and achieved a power which the human spirit cannot control. The whole standard of living with its emphasis upon things must be replaced with another standard of life which places first things first, and the first things are qualities of the mind, the heart, and the spirit." Kirkus

"In an otherwise careful and excellent volume I find the author's treatment of man's ability to achieve the readiness for God's creative activity inadequate. The query of the conservative as to such ability is not really met. I wish too that he could, as a Christian theologian, give more metaphysical significance to Jesus, and that more account were taken of the great theological development between the 'poetry' of the Bible and the metaphysics of Whitehead. It is a fine book, though, and it gives one furiously to think." E. E. Aubrey

+ — Christian Century 64:1046 S 3 '47 900w

"This is a beautifully written, sensitive, and realistic view of the present situation. . . If you want to feel deeply and think clearly, this book is for you." R. C. Miller

+ Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 90w

"Philosophers and theologians and clergymen will find this book especially valuable, but it is the laymen who must implement its findings and one is fearful that not too many of them will see the book or read it through, which is another commentary upon the bankruptcy of our cultural life."

+ Kirkus 15:62 F 1 '47 230w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 17 '47
50w

MELLEN, KATHLEEN DICKENSON. In a Hawaiian valley; il. by Madge Tennent. 126p $3.50 Hastings house

47-11606

Sketches originally written for publication in the Honolulu Advertiser. They present the good life of Hawaii as seen in the lives of Old Mahoe, and others of his kind, who have kept to the ways of their ancestors.

Kirkus 15:621 N 1 '47 90w

"It is not of Honolulu and Waikiki Beach but of the real Hawaii of which Mrs. Mellen writes in her charming little book of fictional essays, the Hawaii the tourist seldom sees but which could be much more rewarding than anything else he is likely to do in the islands. Reading 'In a Hawaiian Valley' would be a good start." Foster Hailey

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 11 '48 450w

"Hastings House has done such a spectacular job on the binding and printing of this book; the illustrations by Madge Tennent are so beautifully set forth in sepia ink, that it seems downright ungrateful to even suggest that 'In a Hawaiian Valley' is not a delight and a joy forever. It isn't, though. It is even a wee bit dull. . . Mrs. Mellen should find her audience, however, among those 'haoles' who have been to the islands and wish to renew their acquaintance with Hawaiian words." W. R. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p26 N 30 '47
200w

MELVILLE, HERMAN. Collected poems; ed. by Howard P. Vincent. 503p $4 Packard & co. 811 [47-4470]

"This volume aims primarily at presenting an accurate text of all the poems which Herman Melville left to posterity, Clarel, for obvious reasons, excepted. The text of the first 256 pages faithfully follows that of the three volumes of poetry published during Melville's lifetime and under his scrupulous supervision; the text for the rest of the poetry is taken from manuscripts, of which all but three are in the Houghton Library, Harvard College." (Pref) Index of titles and first lines.

"In the circumstances, fifty-six years is too soon to attempt a precise evaluation of Melville's poetry. A jacket blurb placing him with Hardy goes on to say, rather ambiguously, 'Among American poets of the nineteenth century he must be accorded a place second only to Emily Dickinson and Walt Whitman.' He comes nowhere near either of these; nor can he compare with Poe. What he has, inside quite commonplace metrics, might be described as flashes of eccentric insight." Lloyd Frankenberg

N Y Times p4 Jl 20 '47 900w

"If we consider the poet that Melville is in 'Moby Dick,' albeit his greatest work is rated as prose, there may be some ground for the coupling of his name with Whitman's. Emily Dickinson, being in so entirely different a category of poetry, hardly enters into the discussion. But upon the evidence of the present volume, to be unsparingly frank, Melville appears, except in unusual instances—and there he flashes with brilliance—as a second-rate and often tedious rhymester. . . One closes the volume with continued admiration for a great poet-in-prose, and affection even for his glaring faults in verse." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ag 2 '47 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p562 N 1 '47
2250w

MENCKEN, HENRY LOUIS. Days of H. L. Mencken. 3v in 1 $4.50 Knopf

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11231

Omnibus volume containing Happy Days; Newspaper Days; and Heathen Days (Book Review Digest 1940; 1941; and 1943).

Booklist 44:113 N 15 '47

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
O 19 '47 800w

"In this plump book, and in an easy, slippered prose, one may read enjoyably of the making and development of a stout-ribbed conservative, who has always believed that the best defense is a vigorous offensive."

B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 29 '47 140w

MENDELSSOHN, PETER. Design for aggression; the inside story of Hitler's war plans [Eng title: Nuremberg documents]. 270p $3.50 Harper

940.5343 World war, 1939-1945—Germany. Germany—Foreign relations. World war, 1939-1945—Documents, etc., sources 47-1258

The author is a German-born English journalist, a contributor to the New Statesman and Nation, the London Observer, and the New York Nation. The purpose of this volume is "to inquire into Hitler's technique of starting the war, to follow as far as possible the various phases and stages of his political and military planning as it led up to and into the war, and to form an idea of the over-all conception which dominated this planning." (p. 2) The work is based on secret German documents captured after the invasion of Germany.

Reviewed by G. S. Pettie

Am Pol Sci R 41:1247 D '47 450w

Reviewed by David Karno

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 23 '47
430w

"The work contains little that is essentially new to a careful newspaper reader, and almost nothing not known to persons who patiently followed the Nuremberg trials. However, it makes a contribution by highlighting a number of vital documents. . . Part Five, which deals with Hitler and Russia, is far from complete and based on documents screened for the purpose of preventing an adequate picture. And even the unbalance of the documents is accentuated by the author's comments." R. H. M.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 8 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:370 Ap '47 100w

Foreign Affairs 25:702 Jl '47 40w

Kirkus 14:632 D 15 '46 160w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:316 F 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton

Nation 165:187 Ag 23 '47 700w

"Mendelssohn does not want to prove that the Germans deliberately started the war or that they were liars. That has been proved over and over again. Rather, he wants to show how each phase of the over-all plan develops from the preceding phase and leads to the next stage. He has made excellent use of the documents that were available to him, including military directives, Hitler's briefings, diaries, secret reports and transcripts of telephone conversations. The book is chiefly a logical presentation of selections from these documents, connected by the author's lucid comments." Heinz Eulau

+ New Repub 116:36 F 24 '47 1300w

"Only the documents used by the prosecution were available to Mr. de Mendelssohn and very often the prosecution did not put in the complete document. The consequence is that we are often left with only half the story. Occasionally, one has a feeling that perhaps the other half of the story has been deliberately omitted. At any rate, it is desirable, if only in the interests of 'history,' that the documents which were available to the prosecution at Nuremberg should be published in full by the Governments." Leonard Woolf

MENDELSSOHN, PETER—Continued

New Statesman & Nation 32:425 D 7
'46 700w

"To get the full force of the evidence, the book must be read entire. And it should be, for this is the story of the greatest conspiracy in history, a record of cynicism, ruthlessness, cunning and daring unparalleled in human annals." W. L. Langer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
F 23 '47 1200w

Reviewed by E. W. Fox

N Y Times p4 Mr 9 '47 950w

New Yorker 23:97 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Design for Aggression' is full of important information. Unfortunately, the enormous significance of the subject is not matched by its treatment, the book is regrettably two-dimensional, devoid of analysis, lacking grace of narrative. It is hardly more than a list of documents strung together with introductory remarks. The general reader will find it hard going, but to the specialist and the historian it should prove to be a veritable mine, and they ought to be grateful to Mr. de Mendelssohn for the service he has performed." S. K. Padover

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:34 My 10 '47 800w

Reviewed by F. E. Jones

Spec 177:490 N 8 '46 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p247 My 24
'47 1050w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann

Yale R n s 36:750 Summer '47 700w

MENDERSHAUSEN, HORST. Changes in income distribution during the great depression. (Conference on research in income and wealth. Studies in income and wealth) 173p $2.50 Nat. bur. of economic research

339.373 Income 46-5992

"Family incomes in the very low and the very high income groups tend to suffer more than the income of those in the intermediate brackets during major depressions, according to this excellent study by a member of the faculty of Bennington College on the basis of data collected by the Financial Survey of Urban Housing by the Department of Commerce in 1934 as a Civil Works Administration project. Data as to family income in 1929 and in 1933 were collected from over 300,000 families in 33 medium and large-size cities, and for both 1929 and 1933 on more than 200,000 identical families." Am Soc R

Am Soc R 12:131 F '47 130w

Reviewed by H. H. Villard

Ann Am Acad 249:199 Ja '47 550w

"This book has considerable interest as an exploration into a complex field; but, as is perhaps inevitable with materials of this sort, it falls short of being a fully satisfactory treatment of the data used." William Vickrey

+ J Pol Econ 55:490 O '47 1000w

Reviewed by E. E. Agger

Pol Sci Q 62:156 Mr '47 320w

"The book is intended primarily for professional economists and statisticians and is therefore highly technical in some respects. The general conclusions, however, will be of interest to nonprofessional readers as well as to economists."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 2:302 D '46 390w

MENKE, FRANK GRANT. New encyclopedia of sports. 1007p $5 Barnes, A.S.

790.3 Sports 47-12099

New edition of a reference work first entered in Book Review Digest 1944. "The author—well known as a sports writer—in his time has 'ghosted' for Babe Ruth, Gene Tunney and many another celebrity. His new edition, expanded to almost twice its former size, contains histories, records, and lists of champions in more than 100 games and sports." (Cath World)

Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

Cath World 166:381 Ja '48 120w

"It is a magnificent piece of work—comprehensive, well compiled, and easy to consult in spite of its wealth of content... There are, of course, a few minor errors, especially in the early histories of ball games, but these are negligible in view of the huge amount of information. Indispensable to any library interested in sports and sporting records." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1690 D 1 '47 210w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47 180w

"This is a revision and enlargement of the Encyclopedia of Sports published in 1939. The material was originally gathered as a part of the author's duties in writing articles about sports for newspaper release. In the 1944 edition it has been extensively revised, rewritten and brought up to date whenever possible... The articles are not exhaustive, but the outstanding historical highlights are generally outlined... The book is well printed and the paper and binding are satisfactory. The only illustrations used to help explain the text are the diagrams in the article on baseball. The other illustrations are mostly of a humorous nature. Although the findings of the author will not agree with some writers on the subject, the book will be found to be usually accurate. Followers of sports and all libraries will find it useful. It is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:15 Ap '46 550w
(Review of 1944 edition with title: Encyclopedia of sports)

MERCER, CECIL WILLIAM (DORNFORD YATES, pseud). Were death denied [Eng title: Red in the morning]. 246p $2.50 Putnam

46-8406

Adventure story the scene of which is France between the two wars. In it "Jonah" Mansel and his friend Richard Chandos dash about the French countryside, rescuing a lady in distress and exterminating some particularly obnoxious crooks.

"If the reader of Were Death Denied will accept his tacit proviso that the ruffian-gentlemen who win the struggle are heroes and that the genteel-ruffians who lose it are villains, he may have a cheerful amoral run for his reading. Otherwise this set of murderous boyish pranks in the Pyrenees may seem fairly irresponsible." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ja 5 '47 90w

"'Were Death Denied' criss-crosses the French countryside in accelerating rhythms of sudden death, and although the victims are good riddance of vicious rubbish, you are reluctant to part with them. They are such perfect scoundrels or such polished knaves that they appeal to the reader's atavistic nature. Mr. Yates plans it that way. This yarn would be complete if the end papers offered a road map of France." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p22 F 2 '47 230w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 19 '47 60w

"Nostalgic thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ja 4 '47 50w

MEREDITH, ANNE, pseud. See Malleson, L. B.

MEREDITH, LEWIS DOUGLAS. How to buy a house. 176p $2.50 Harper 333.33 Real estate business. Dwellings
47-3817

Practical book for the prospective home owner, giving advice on all sides of the question, from the kind of house wanted, to location, cost, interest payments, and insurance. The author is vice president of the National Life Insurance company. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

MEREDITH, ROY. The face of Robert E. Lee in life and in legend. 143p il $5 Scribner
B or 92 Lee, Robert Edward—Portraits
47-11540

Reproductions of the known likenesses of Robert E. Lee, with dates when known, and the circumstances of their making. It includes photographs, engravings, paintings, and sculpture.

Booklist 44:133 D 1 '47

Reviewed by F. L. Bullard

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 24 '47 420w

"His admirers will be drawn even more closely to him by studying this book, in which the text admirably supplements the photographs." P. K.

+ Commonweal 47:310 Ja 2 '48 130w

Kirkus 15:423 Ag 1 '47 110w

"The book is more than a souvenir. It is a document that throws light upon one of the most fascinating chapters of American history." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 D 14 '47 600w

"An absorbingly interesting book, no less distinguished in its way than the author's valuable biography of Mathew Brady, 'Mr. Lincoln's Camera Man,' though the focus is necessarily narrowed." A. C. Gordon
+ N Y Times p3 N 2 '47 800w

MERRIAM, ROBERT EDWARD. Dark December; the full account of the Battle of the Bulge. 234p maps $3 Ziff-Davis

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. Ardennes, Battle of the, 1944-1945 47-4797

A reconstruction of the Battle of the Bulge, in December, 1944, and early January, 1945. The author during that time served partly with the Ninth Army and at times with the Seventh armored division. Later he became chief of the Ardennes section of the War department's historical division. His book is based on records and on personal interviews with nearly all the German and American commanders in the battle. No index.

Booklist 44:12 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger, jr.

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 27 '47 650w

"Merriam is at his best analyzing the actual confusion that was rampant from the very beginning of the German drive on December 16th. I know his handling is expert here, for I was in the midst of the chaos, and can vividly recall, for example, the blank stares I met at various headquarters when I would ask what road net was clear, and to what point. . . Merriam writes a very factual narrative, complete, heavily detailed, and amply validated. . . 'Dark December' is excellent reading for military men, or for those who are ex-military, and compelling reading for those of the European fraternity, who were fighting and milling around in the Bulge during all these events.

It will prove absorbing, at least in sections, to the general reading public." T. E. Cassidy
+ Commonweal 46:435 Ag 15 '47 1150w

"Good reading."

+ Kirkus 15:362 Jl 1 '47 150w

"'Dark December' occupies a distinguished place among war books. Every paragraph is based upon evidence, not flimsy wartime rumors. Technical enough for the professional, accurate enough for the historian (in fact, it is history of the best), it is lucid and understandable for the general reader who is willing to go through the volume thoughtfully. And, above all, it delineates clearly a complex, almost hopelessly confused month when ability in command and courageous endurance in the ranks snatched victory from what might well have been disaster." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Jl 27 '47 1700w

Discussion by R. E. Merriam

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 S 7 '47 950w

"If the other veterans of the Army's historical division can maintain Mr. Merriam's high standard of stimulating, critical and painstaking work, we will be fortunate. 'Dark December' can be heartily recommended to anyone faintly interested in the past war and especially to the men who took part in the Ardennes campaign and still want to find out why." Theodore Draper

+ N Y Times p3 Jl 6 '47 1000w

New Yorker 23:68 Jl 5 '47 220w

Reviewed by Jack Foisie

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 10 '47 500w

Reviewed by Perry Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ag 2 '47 900w

Springf'd Union p4 S 26 '47 120w

MERRICK, ELLIOTT. Passing by. 234p $3 Macmillan 47-30886

Novel about the U.S. marines during World war II. It is the story of Duncan: his experiences on two ships and on shore between trips. The second ship is torpedoed and Duncan is one of the few survivors who are delivered to Trinidad by a British ship.

"There's philosophy and beauty here—though on the plane of story, there's a sense of slow motion. I liked it."
+ Kirkus 15:292 Je 1 '47 210w

"For private rather than public purchase." H. A. Wooster

Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 12 '47 140w

"The two most important persons are unlikelike, and they indulge in strangely unreal conversations, whether they are being profound or gay. What they do is sound and normal enough; how they do it and what they say are not of a part of any character Mr. Merrick has let us glimpse." C. B. Palmer
N Y Times p26 N 9 '47 400w

"All this is told with a verisimilitude that makes it much more than just 'a story about the war.' . . The portraits are all true, the sea lawyers, mates, skippers, and pilots; and so are the people on the docks, the girls of the ports. . . These things are told with the casualness in which they were always done. And perhaps that is the key to the story's merit, for it is all put down in the manner of that war on the water, a thing sprawling yet integral." J. R. H. Couse
+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 S 20 '47 500w

MERRICK, GORDON. Strumpet wind. 248p $2.50 Morrow
47-30084

A tale of counter-espionage in southern France during the final months of the war. The hero is a young American officer who is given the task of supervising an ex-collaborationist in hoodwinking the Germans for the Allies. Because Chandler becomes friendly with the family of his tool, the business ends in personal tragedy.

MERRICK, GORDON—Continued

Booklist 43:185 F 15 '47

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 16 '47
420w

Kirkus 14:581 N 15 '46 190w

"Mr. Merrick draws his taut, complex design neatly. The dramatic situation is credible, increasingly tense and disagreeable. . . . Because Chandler had been unable to believe in the existence of (and therefore unable to hate) an evil ideology as represented by such companionable enemies, his torment of mind is vividly made real. More than that, it is all too clearly represented as one which any of us might be compelled to share, and not necessarily during a war nor within a war area. It is the impact with which this nightmare conclusion is thrown at the reader that makes a simple story so potent and so alarming." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
F 9 '47 750w

"Mr. Merrick, who obviously knows and loves Provence from the inside, has brought some pleasant word-painting to his pages. . . . His picture of Mercanton's innocent family, suffering mutely as they wait for the invisible axe to fall, is as honest as it is moving. Unfortunately, the rest of the novel simply falls to pieces, as this young author strives to take in too much ground." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 2 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 30
'47 800w

"The Strumpet Wind" is the voice of the war in retrospect, stripped of its urgency and danger, reduced merely to an interesting experience, an influencing factor in modern life." A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ap 5 '47 500w

MERRICK, REBECCA (HEIDLEBAUGH).
Rain Harbor. 275p $2.75 Bobbs

47-3351

A settlement on the rainy coast of the state of Washington is the scene of this story of the dreamer, Ed Nicollet. Ed had hoped to make a great city on Rain Harbor, but after years of struggle, the army closed the beach because of fear of invasion. The next day Ed was drowned, but he left a son and daughter to follow out his dream.

"Rain Harbor" is a novel of atmosphere and perception, although the perception is sometimes as misted as the landscape. . . . Hardly any of the characters, in fact, talk or behave in quite normal ways. Rebecca Merrick deals with bizarre, troubled souls. You may not be able to decide just what her novel means, but it has an eerie fascination." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 J1
20 '47 270w

"A well-written story of the Pacific coast, so filled with strange characters and cockeyed incidents that it is no wonder that one of the characters says he feels as if he had been 'eating poppy seeds.'" M. M. D.

+ Springfd Republican p10B S 28 '47
120w

MERRILL, ANTHONY FRENCH. The rammed-earth house; with an introd. by Clinton P. Anderson. 230p il $2.50 Harper

693 Pisé. Architecture, Domestic 47-565

"Methods of making rammed-earth and building with this low cost material from empty lot to finished structure. Includes discussion of soil-cement, its fabrication and uses in building. Good illustrations and bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 My '47

"So much has been written in a rambling sort of way about dirt houses that Mr. Merrill's work is a welcome treatise on a generally misunderstood subject. . . . While the author admits the rammed-earth house will never replace those made of standard American building materials, he does insist that it promises to fill a void in the nation's housing opportunities. In the same way, Mr. Merrill's book fills a void in the libraries of housing experts who are searching for low-cost techniques for meeting the acute housing shortage." W. C. Harvey

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 15
'47 600w

"Mr. Merrill is very enthusiastic, but while he has undoubtedly read and synthesized all the literature, I suspect he never rammed a wall. . . . [However] Mr. Merrill fires the imagination and makes it clear that one can have a home of his own if he's willing to dig for it. Even if his readers end up by building of monolithic concrete or cinder block, his book will have served its purpose. Anyone who isn't intrigued with the idea of a rammed-earth house deserves to continue to live in his match-box apartment." Emerson Hynes

Commonweal 46:19 Ap 18 '47 390w

"An introduction by the Secretary of Agriculture adds validity to the arguments advanced, and the book gives constructive advice to anyone interested in exploring the possibilities of earth housing."

+ Kirkus 14:568 N 1 '46 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

MERTINS, MARSHALL LOUIS, and MERTINS, ESTHER (PEDERSEN). The intervals of Robert Frost; a critical bibliography. 91p $2.75 Univ. of Calif.

012 Frost, Robert—Bibliography 47-30726

Study and bibliography of the works of Robert Frost written by two of the poet's personal friends. The first part divides Frost's work into seven periods of influence and tells why certain poems fall into these periods. The second part is an annotated bibliography of the items in the Mertins' collection, which last will eventually go to the University of California. Index.

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '47
150w

"Any information about the intimate intellectual life of a great poet is automatically interesting. This little book gives us something of the man behind the poems and something of the life and country out of which individual poems came, and will therefore have a permanent value for the study of one of our few permanent poets." Wallace Stegner

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 O 4 '47 270w

MERTON, ROBERT KING, and others. Mass persuasion; the social psychology of a war bond drive 210p $2.50 Harper

301.1523 Radio in propaganda 46-8301

"The purpose of this book is to uncover 'the structure and dynamics of mass persuasion in our society.' The case study for analysis was the Third War Loan appeal made by Kate Smith, which resulted in 39 million dollars of bond pledges after an 18-hour network marathon on which Miss Smith appeared 65 times for a minute or two. Data were obtained from a content analysis of the broadcasts, from intensive interviews with 100 people who heard the broadcasts . . . and from short interviews of approximately 1,000 people representing a cross section of greater New York and designed to check interpretations from the more 'focused' interviews." (Ann Am Acad) Index.

Reviewed by R. H. Turner
Am J Soc 52:541 My '47 480w

Reviewed by W. B. Bodenhafer
Am Soc R 12:234 Ap '47 450w

Reviewed by Hadley Cantril
Ann Am Acad 250:133 Mr '47 400w
Ethics 57:231 Ap '47 110w
Kirkus 14:374 Ag 1 '46 100w

"Studies like this have a certain value—the value which results from any honest and detailed analysis of a particular aspect of reality. They may be a long way off from discovering or uncovering the processes or mechanisms of mass persuasion. But they may succeed one day in giving us what we badly need—a science of propaganda and propaganda analysis." Leo Shapiro

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p38
N 17 '46 900w

MESERVE, NATHANIEL. King of this hill.
250p $2.75 Doubleday

47-31148

Story of a "pineapple soldier" who served his army time on Oahu, and had a pretty good time while he was about it. Then came August 6, 1945, and a return to the States, where LeRoy and two buddies attempt to refit themselves for civilian life.

"A madly muddled San Franciscan tri-partite war ending. A non-est for libraries, this does not miss a spark of masculine understanding, human values."

— Kirkus 15:374 Jl 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
O 26 '47 500w

"Here we have the makings of a joyous GI version of Thomas Heggen's little Navy classic, 'Mister Roberts.' About one-fourth of the way through Nathaniel Meserve's chronicle . . . shapes up as the Army's worthy opposite number of Heggen's woman-hungry, war-bored and magnificently ribald non-combat sailors. LeRoy Bolster's story looks good and shows every prospect of becoming better—until Aug. 6, 1945. That day the atomic bomb wrecked Hiroshima, and it pretty well wrecks Nathaniel Meserve's novel, too." Richard Match

+ — N Y Times p22 S 21 '47 650w

"This story might have come to a more satisfying end if the author had not been so determined to work in a rough draft of his opinions on most of the major problems of this century."

New Yorker 23:100 S 20 '47 140w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '47
400w

METCALF, DORRY. Bringing up children; drawings by Janetta Sinclair-Loutit. 120p $2 Pilot

649.1 Children—Management 47-19379

Manual on child training, written from the English viewpoint. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. Index.

School & Society 65:237 Mr 29 '47 20w

"This small book of just over a hundred pages, written by a parent for parents, is conversational in style, vividly practical, presenting no ponderous principles of philosophy. However, sound principles of child development and mental hygiene are evident on every page. The emphasis is on the child's emotional needs and his development as a happy, normal individual, rather than on his physical care." Winifred Allen

+ Survey 83:261 S '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:112 Jl '47

METZ, HAROLD WILLIAM, and JACOB-STEIN, MEYER. National labor policy. 164p pa $2.25 Brookings

331 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. Industrial relations 47-1737

"Appraises existing labor policies and makes concrete suggestions for modifications. The authors propose that the NLRB be scrapped in favor of a judicial agency and that industry-wide collective bargaining be prohibited. They criticize government intervention in labor disputes, and reject compulsory arbitration on the ground that ultimately it would lead to government control of all industry." Management R

Reviewed by E. E. Witte

Am Pol Sci R 41:1009 O '47 490w

"The data which this book presents are not new, nor is the analysis strikingly original. Many of the criticisms of the National Mediation Board, the National Labor Relations Board, and the President of the United States are common currency. Many labor economists will disagree with such proposals as the abolition of industry-wide bargaining. Nevertheless, the study is thoughtfully and carefully done, and is characterized by refreshing frankness." G. S. Watkins

Ann Am Acad 252:153 Jl '47 400w

"The book should be a required textbook for members of Congress framing labor legislation."

+ Christian Century 64:560 Ap 30 '47
130w

Management R 36:235 Ap '47 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:176 Je '47 200w

MEYER, CORD. Peace or anarchy. 233p $2.50 Little 341 United nations (organization). Peace. International relations 47-6459

"Mr. Meyer believes that the United Nations is headed for destruction, and that the only way to prevent the struggle for power between the United States and the Soviet Union from producing a third world war is to remodel the United Nations and make it a true world government." N Y Times

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Courtenay Barber

Chicago Sun Book Week O 30 '47 600w

"Cord Meyer's book will undoubtedly rank as one of the constructive contributions of this era to an understanding of what is required to avert wars." DeWitt John

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 N 29 '47
800w

"This book should prove a powerful brake against our landslide toward annihilation. . . The great value of Mr. Meyer's brilliant book lies in the objectivity with which he views Russia's intransigence—and equally that of the United States—and in the passionate urgency with which he presses for a modus vivendi against war." T. D. Mygatt

+ Churchman 162:17 Ja 1 '48 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Reviewed M. C. Scoggin

Horn Bk 24:67 Ja '48 80w

"An intelligent commentary and criticism, bearing witness that our youth today can match wits with our statesmen and diplomats. Their voice must be heard. The popularity of the material which has appeared in the Atlantic will give impetus to the book. Watch it."

+ Kirkus 15:523 S 15 '47 250w

"Urgent, compelling book. Should be widely read and discussed." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47 100w

"You may not share Mr. Meyer's strong faith, but read what he has to say and, for your own sake and that of your children, think about it—and do something." P. C. Smith

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
N 30 '47 550w

MEYER, CORD—Continued

"A valuable and disturbing book. . . The practical difficulties in the way of carrying out Mr. Meyer's proposal are only too obvious. . . For better or worse, we will have to work with the United Nations under the present Charter. But Mr. Meyer's appraisal of United States-Soviet disputes should be studied by every thinking American." T. J. Hamilton
+ N Y Times p4 N 2 '47 950w

"The book is part analysis, part prophecy, part diagram. The analysis is penetrating and is, it seems to me, the most valuable of the three elements." E. B. White
+ — New Yorker 23:124 N 8 '47 2100w

"This is an intelligent, honest, admirably lucid, logical and noble book that Mr. Meyer has written. With Raymond Swing, I would like to urge that 'twenty million Americans may somehow be brought to read it. It could save civilization.'" J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 10 '47 900w

"Towards the last third of the book, Mr. Meyer leaves the field of negative, destructive criticism and offers his own plan for survival. Here, unfortunately, he falters. His emotional and moral revulsion against war gives him the courage to advocate what his detractors might brand as pacifism and which he could defend as cold, honest realism. Close observation of the workings of the UN have forced him to discard self-deluding optimism. Hence the clear vision. But when he comes to his own prescription for dealing with the present international mess he abandons reality and flies off into the realm of fantasy on the wings of high hope." Louis Fischer
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:12 N 1 '47 2300w

Spring'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:170 D '47

MEYER, JEROME SYDNEY. Picture book of molecules and atoms; il. by Richard Floethe. 47p $2 Lothrop

541.2 Atoms—Juvenile literature. Molecules —Juvenile literature 47-11582

Brief text and explanatory drawings on the elements of physics for boys and girls of nine to twelve. Some of the subjects covered are: molecules; what makes a solid different from a liquid?; what is a gas?; how solid molecules behave; the wonderful atom; what good are neutrons?; what is energy?; the atom bomb.

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

"The subject matter isn't quite as concrete as in the astronomy book, but it is quite a book nevertheless, made even more attractive by Richard Floethe's handsome and forthright illustrations in three colors. . . Though the book is made comprehensible for the mature ten and eleven year old, it reaches up into the lower teens as well."

+ Kirkus 15:601 N 1 '47 100w

"Highly recommended for any age interested in the subject of atomic energy." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ja 25 '48 170w

New Yorker 23:139 D 6 '47 60w

"If you have a scientifically minded child whose questions are sometimes beyond your ability to answer, this is the book for you. And you will find yourself reading it for your own information and enlightenment." Leone Garvey

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 30 '47 110w

MEYERS, LESTER. High-speed mathematics. 554p $5.95 Van Nostrand

511.8 Ready reckoners

47-11042

"Rapid methods for computation with whole numbers, mixed numbers, fractions and decimals. Speedy processes for multiplying by two, three, and four figure numbers, for adding two columns at once for simplifying complex calculations and other special methods. Good training in mental arithmetic in techniques of using countless short-cuts in numerical computation. Covers such topics as percentages and discounts, preparing and checking bills, interest, averaging prices and costs on unpaid balances, insurance, annuities, stocks and bonds and other subjects for those in business and industry. Glossary." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1378 O 1 '47 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:53 Ji '47

MICHAL, ARISTOTLE D. Matrix and tensor calculus; with applications to mechanics, elasticity, and aeronautics. 132p $3 Wiley

517.2 Calculus of tensors. Matrices 47-1090

"The purpose of this volume is to provide the research engineer with a working knowledge of the matrix and tensor calculus, mathematical operations which are valuable aids in the solution of problems relating to mechanical systems, the mechanics of fluids, and elastic and plastic materials. The author, Professor of Mathematics at the California Institute of Technology, has stressed the practical aspects of the subject as utilized in the fields of physics, meteorology, electrical engineering, mechanical engineering and aeronautical engineering. The book is based on lectures originally given under the Engineering, Science and Management War Training Program." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:12 Ja '47

MICHEL, MILTON SCOTT. Black key. 271p $2 Curl

47-17948

Mystery story.

"Cornell may be a good psychiatrist, but he is not a good detective. He is too prone to accuse people on insufficient evidence." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p33 Ja 19 '47 140w

"Alexander Cornell's investigation of wanton wastrels and medical murders has a few new twists. The best of Mr. Michel's persistent attempts to combine psychiatry and detection." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 3 '46 60w

MICHENER, JAMES ALBERT. Tales of the south Pacific. 326p $3 Macmillan

47-30127

"Memorable account of island-hopping warfare in the South Pacific, from the Battle of the Coral Sea to the landing on Kuralei. Tony Fry, airman extraordinary of the USN, figures in most of these eighteen sketches depicting nurses, Seabees and Marines in action." Library J

Booklist 43:205 Mr 1 '47

"War books right now are selling about as well as income-tax guides in April, and the book publishers know it. To get into print at all, a war story has to be something pretty special, but Macmillan is making no mistake in bringing out James Michener's bellringer, 'Tales of the South Pacific.'.. Better than anyone before him, Michener holds up the mirror to this kind of war." Clinton Textor

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 2 '47 450w

Kirkus 14:605 D 1 '46 210w

"Superbly-written book that small public libraries will welcome." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 80w

"Romantic, nostalgic, tragic—call it what you will—this book seems to me the finest piece of fiction to come out of the South Pacific war." F. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 2 '47 600w

"Truly one of the most remarkable books to come out of the war in a long time. . . Mr. Michener is a born story teller but, paradoxically, this ability results in the book's only real weakness—the interminable length of some of the tales. Mr. Michener saw so much, and his material is so rich, that he simply could not leave anything out." David Dempsey

+ N Y Times p5 F 2 '47 1000w

"Although this group of stories, modestly titled, makes little show of subtlety or depth of insight, the stories, as stories, do 'come off.' . . All the stock characters are here. . . Two of the stories are notable; Mutiny, and The Cave. . . These stories attain an intensity of feeling often absent from the rest of the volume."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:138 Je '47 200w

"These Tales of the South Pacific are magnificently entertaining. But they are more than that. Mr. Michener is an acute observer of human character, an adroit literary artist, a man with a philosophy of life which makes him tolerant of many human weaknesses but not of all. He is certainly one of the ablest and one of the most original writers to appear on the American literary scene in a long time." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R n s 36:576 spring '47 320w

MIDDLETON, GEORGE. These things are mine; the autobiography of a journeyman playwright. 448p il $5 Macmillan

B or 92 Dramatists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30341

Reminiscences of a dramatist's forty-five years in the theater. He also describes his boyhood, his student life at Columbia, his activities in the political life of Washington as son-in-law of Robert M. La Follette, and his founding of the Dramatists Guild in order to improve working conditions for playwrights.

Booklist 43:346 Jl 1 '47

"Middleton's habit of making notes on dramatic things he saw in and out of the theater provides him now with rare material for his reminiscences, giving his book a sharpness and authenticity that are usually missing from theatrical memoirs." Lloyd Lewis

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Je 8 '47 1100w

"A spirited autobiography of a well-known man of the theatre, a book of interest to all lovers of the drama, to drama courses, drama clubs, and those who enjoy personal memoirs of stage personalities and well-told anecdotes of great figures of the stage and dramatists past and present."

+ Kirkus 15:231 Ap 15 '47 170w

"This [book] is delightfully and informatively written by a man who has a strong sense of 'record' which is dear to the hearts of librarians. Illustrated. Recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:323 F 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 15 '47 1950w

"It is a crowded panorama, and sometimes a bewildering one; to Mr. Middleton, as to Laurence Sterne, digressions are the sunshine of a book. A name, an incident, reminds him of something else, and he goes chasing it across the years, occasionally taking his time about coming back. It is like good talk at The Players. . . His approach and style [are of the theatre], frequently extravagant and exclamatory, in the manner of a performer addressing an audience. Which, as a matter of fact, is exactly what Mr. Middleton is doing, with warmth and skill and as much candor as one has a right reasonably to expect." J. K. Hutchens

+ N Y Times p4 Je 8 '47 1000w

School & Society 67:15 Ja 3 '48 10w

Theatre Arts 31:68 S '47 220w

"The changing scene is ever interesting, crowded as it is with unusual and important people. Through it all the author moves with obvious zest at being a part of the exciting world of make-believe."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:261 S '47 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 Jl '47

MILBURN, GEORGE. Flannigan's folly. (Whit-lessey house publication) 240p $2.50 McGraw 47-2786

Half farcical picture of life in a small western community. The tale revolves around Felix Flannigan's ambitions to exchange his bachelor freedom and his unproductive acreage for the joys of marriage and the rich lands of one or the other of his feminine neighbors.

Booklist 43:330 Je 15 '47

"It's a homely tale, slightly embroidered with folklore, both Irish and Southwestern; a novel of small town and farm life, uncomplicated by any of the grave social and subliminal problems that face farmers and everybody else these days." Marion Neville

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 18 '47 320w

Kirkus 15:11 Ja 1 '47 100w

"There is an almost physical pleasure to be had from reading George Milburn's prose. It pours like warm sand running through the fingers; it spells out simple, smelly things; it makes an ear for the sound of people talking over back fences, calling across fields and arguing in barber shops. It should be a happiness, therefore, to welcome Mr. Milburn back to the field of the novel after an absence of ten years. Unfortunately, 'Flannigan's Folly' is nothing to be happy about. It is a well-written, inconsequential story, (without point or mood or theme or even humor). It contains the plot of a routine, slick short story, nothing more. The author of 'Catalogue' and 'No More Trumpets' can surely do better than that." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Ap 27 '47 470w

"Clear, whittled-down elements of farce, more theatrical than literary, limit and type the plot. The individual tableaux, conventional but nicely trimmed and skillfully arranged, move the characters through their reflexes so there is little waste. The countryside and the countryman are real enough to suggest all the labor and sweat of farm life without dispelling the glamorous nostalgia that city readers expect of the rural. And even the nostalgic corn is constantly relieved with full tablespoons of old-fashioned humor." B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p14 My 4 '47 550w

"There is not much to hold your attention in this bland trifle; in fact, it may make you wonder what became of the originality and the sharp bite that distinguished Mr. Milburn's early prose."

New Yorker 23:117 My 3 '47 100w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 25 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:98 Je '47

MILLAR, GEORGE REID. My past was an evil river. 306p $2.50 Doubleday 47-755

The scene is an Austrian valley not far from Salzburg: the time, May 13 to 21, of 1945. The narrator is a Frenchman who has escaped from Dachau to the peace of the valley. An ex-henchman of Hitler's, fleeing with his wife and daughters, seeks refuge in the house where Gustave, the narrator is staying. Gustave and the Nazi are friends of former days, and so the stage is set for plot and counter-plot, culminating in violent activity which brings the Americans into the valley.

MILLAR, G. R.—Continued

Booklist 43:242 Ap 1 '47
Christian Science Monitor p17 My 24 '47 160w
Kirkus 14:604 D 1 '46 160w

"It has a brutal, nightmarish strength; it lacks something of the quality of excitement which should belong to a novel of this order."
Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 N 15 '46 130w

"The action makes a fast and engaging story, but compared with Children of Vienna, this book is an idyll. Whether Wiedemeyer gets Kurt or Kurt gets Wiedemeyer is as remote as the imaginary valley where they destroy each other." John Farrelly

New Repub 116:34 Ap 28 '47 270w

"My Past Was an Evil River" is the first novel of an English writer who has already published two personal accounts of the war... But by any one it is a novel which is often brilliant and always honest. Whether or not the U. S. public is ready to accept unpleasant truths about the war and its immediate aftermath remains to be seen." Robert MacGregor
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 19 '47 850w

"In the context of Mr. Millar's personal adventures, life in the underground was both exciting and believable. But translated to fiction it is merely melodramatic. When he is not leading an American task force against the SS, he is busy playing gruesome, practical jokes on drunken American sergeants or revealing, through the Nazi, Hitler's private life. If he is not hiding the family jewels, he is tapping for buried treasure in old castles, or engaging in a backgammon match with a gypsy crystal gazer. The result is a farrago of unrelated incidents... If there is any serious purpose to this tale, Mr. Millar has let his characters run away with it. The dynamics of liberty, which served the author so well during the war, is missing in peace." David Dempsey

N Y Times p16 Ja 19 '47 470w

"Those who admired Mr. Millar's 'Waiting in the Night' and 'Horned Pigeon' are bound to be disappointed."

New Yorker 22:78 F 1 '47 70w

"Sharply, often cruelly handled, Mr. Millar is a good technician and a shrewd observer, and he has manifestly a low opinion of some people and does not hesitate to make this plain. But there is another side to this novel, and it is here that the sensitive reader will see why Millar wrote his book. For like many another man who has seen war close up... the author has learned that to the plain ordinary man nothing is so important as peace... And Millar gets this into his novel with a sharpness and poignancy that will strike home to many a reader." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 17 '47 950w

"Readers who are sensitive will think Mr. Millar's satire on GI's is often overdone. Others may welcome the opportunity to see the defeated and the conquerors through the eyes of a simple Frenchman who does not hide his true feelings but is not quite sure how he will feel the next morning, like so many Europeans during these turbulent days. The book, in any case, should be read by all who like an original, full-packed, and unusual story of our times. This will not remain George Millar's only novel." H. B. Kranz

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 F 15 '47 650w

"Not particularly profound, it is swift and very readable. As a novel it has a fault typical of most such efforts to recreate recent history: the writer has tried to include characters symbolic of everything, from France to the U.S. officer corps."

Time 49:106 Ja 20 '47 550w

"Mr. Millar, who has already written two excellent books of personal adventure, now turns to fiction and makes an equally good job of it. He has a fine sense of narrative writing and powers of portraiture which are not revealed in his chief characters only. Moreover, he revels in incident which keeps his book moving swiftly and he is equally at home in his descriptive passages... If the book has a weakness, it lies in the episodic nature of the plot."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p575 N 23 '46 360w

MILLAR, KENNETH. Blue city. 276p $2.50
Knopf

47-4527

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47 100w

Kirkus 15:319 Je 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 24 '47 140w

"Very, very tough, and a little silly, too."
New Yorker 23:80 Ag 23 '47 100w

"Routine enough in concept and in much of its plot, but Mr. Millar is to be congratulated on his sharp prose, his absorbing tempo, and above all on his ability to create a hard-boiled hero who is not a storm trooper."
Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47 80w

"Just about as tough as they are likely to come."

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 40w

MILLAR, MARGARET (MRS KENNETH MILLAR). Experiment in springtime. 279p $2.50 Random house

47-1632

Novel about a young wife, and her neurotically ill older husband. Martha loves the power which her husband's money gives her, but is not too sympathetic with his illness. When the man whom she had once loved returned from the war, Martha realizes her true potentialities.

"The only mystery is that of the mind. Because it is unsolved the book will appeal very much to scientists and to the discriminating few who can take their horror straight."
Marion Stobrel

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Jl 13 '47 290w

"A curious, clever play on emotional distortion."

Kirkus 15:41 Ja 15 '47 110w

"The concoction leaves a very flat taste. Recommended only for Millar fans with an interest in suspense." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:463 Mr 15 '47 70w

"With the knowledge of the value of mood and suspense, [Mrs Millar] injects color and pace into the story she tells, but she errs in overemphasizing the bizarre and overplaying her situations." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 20 '47 550w

"Most of the book is so full of creeping suspense that the let-down at the end seems doubly irritating. Perhaps, in psychological fiction, as in candid photography, it is difficult to see the woods for the trees." Nancy Ladd

N Y Times p12 Mr 16 '47 360w

"A well-told and readable story... There is nothing to tax the brain in all this, but Mrs. Millar has intelligence and a cheerful humor and she uses them to the best advantage."

+ New Yorker 23:114 Mr 22 '47 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 27 '47 460w

"Those who have enjoyed Mrs. Millar's detective stories will find here her usual facility and competence, but they may feel that she has chosen to dissect persons more appropriate to the cold air of the mystery tale than to the warmer climate of the psychological novel."
Grace Frank

Sat R of Lit 30:29 Ap 26 '47 410w

MILLER, ALEXANDER. Christian faith and my job. (Haddam house bk) 60p $1 Assn. press

248 Christian life 47-1317

"The purpose of this book is to 'relate the Christian understanding of life in the world to the problem of personal conduct in an industrialized, highly competitive, and often immoral society.'" Churchman

"Youth libraries, attention." J. D.

+ Canadian Forum 27:22 Ap '47 70w

Christian Century 64:240 F 19 '47 30w

"The author gets down to earth as few preachers seem able to do, and outlines concretely, what 'everybody does' in his job—the slow-down, agreed dishonesty, union 'rigging,' and so on. . . The chapters on The Calling of Every Man and Christians Remaking Jobs are as comprehensive and convincing an account of the function of the Christian and of the church in the realm of industry as has ever been written." W. L. Caswell

+ Churchman 161:18 Ja 1 '47 240w

"The volume will serve as a good basis for a discussion group led by one who will take the ideas and present them in a style interesting to American young people." C. E. Batten

+ Crozer Q 24:376 O '47 300w

Reviewed by Victor Obenhaus

J Religion 27:224 Jl '47 310w

"Ministers, directors of religious education, conference leaders should find it stimulating and helpful."

+ Kirkus 14:494 O 1 '46 90w

MILLER, ALEXANDER. Christian significance of Karl Marx. 117p $1.75 Macmillan

335.4 Communism and religion. Marx, Karl 47-2781

A discussion of Communism by a Presbyterian clergyman. "The first three chapters of the book give Christians a straight exposition of Marxist doctrine. The fourth chapter outlines the modifications in this doctrine brought about by historical change and later criticism. Then follows a chapter on the Christian criticism of Marxism, and the book reaches its climax with the question: What is the Christian to do?" (Publisher's note) Annotated book list. Index.

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Am Pol Sci R 41:1029 O '47 230w

"'Stimulating and disturbing' summarizes the description on the book's inside cover. It is certainly stimulating; helpful is an understatement, and it is disturbing in that it exposes much of the failure of Christians to apply the fundamental teaching of their religion. It will prove most useful to socialists, and would be enlightening to any communist who might admit possible inadequacies in the Marxist doctrine of history. It is packed with carefully selected quotations and has an annotated book list." John Frank

+ Canadian Forum 26:69 Je '46 650w

"This is a valuable book, for it gives a concise and objective exposition of the fundamental tenets of communism, and then outlines the bearing that the teaching of Marx and his followers has upon Christianity. . . His book will be regarded as unsatisfactory by Roman Catholics at one end and by left-wing religious liberals at the other. But such is the importance of the subject that the book should have many readers."

+ Kirkus 15:63 F 1 '47 170w

"It is refreshing to find amid a flood of polemical books and articles about communism, pro and contra, this objective and dispassionate little volume." B. I. Bell

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 10 '47 1000w

"A discussion . . . that, for its temperateness and forbearance, is a model of Christian charity."

+ New Yorker 23:80 Je 28 '47 140w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '47 150w

"Mr. Miller provides one of the clearest and most concise statements of Marxist doctrine at present available, and for this reason, if for no other, his book merits serious attention. It is all the more regrettable that in dealing with his main theme—namely, the Christian attitude towards Communism—he fails either to carry conviction or to say anything particularly new."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p166 Ap 6 '46 480w

MILLER, ARTHUR. All my sons; a play in three acts. 83p $2 Reynal

812 47-30156

Serious play based upon the aftermath of a wartime crime. Joe Keller allows defective airplane parts to be sent from his factory and twenty-one flyers are killed. Joe's innocent foreman goes to prison, and shortly afterwards Joe's oldest son is reported missing. Three years later Joe's second son is about to marry his brother's sweetheart when the whole story comes out in the open, at last.

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Highly recommended." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 20w

"The play seems to start in one direction, then goes in another and never, even at the end, achieves that clarity and unity of effect a fine play ought to have, and which would make this one a very fine play indeed." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 Mr 9 '47 380w

"Its author's passion for scenery-chewing will repel more than one reader. However, it is pleasant to report that Mr. Miller, despite that tendency to speak in short pants, has a great deal more than youth on his side. . . It is too soon to say that this young dramatist has arrived; but he is definitely a man to watch." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p12 Ap 6 '47 230w

"This is a bitter, brooding play; an incisive study of what war can do to the moral fiber of men who grow fat on its waste and extravagance." P. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 18 '47 220w

MILLER, CARL WALLACE. Scientist's approach to religion. 127p $2 Macmillan

230 Religion and science. Christianity—Philosophy 47-1691

"This book is an effort to restate the essentials of Christian thinking for the benefit of those who feel the need to appraise the extent of the conflict between tradition and modern knowledge. The early chapters deal with the concept of God and the essential dignity of the human personality. Other chapters approach some of the traditional affirmations of the Christian faith from the standpoint of their abiding spiritual content. . . The concluding chapters relate to the tasks which face the Church as it seeks to minister to the needs of the modern world." (Pref) The author is professor of physics at Brown University.

"Mature insights into the nature of man and the universe, especially notable for their guidance in the use of scientific method even (and especially) in thinking about religion, and for their modesty in recognizing the limits of science in an 'open' universe about which science does not have all the answers."

+ Christian Century 64:495 Ap 16 '47 60w

Reviewed by C. L. Willard

Churchman 161:19 Jl '47 120w

"American scientists have been unusually vocal of late in their insistence that the decisions faced by the citizens of a world that has entered the Age of Atomic Energy are in the area of morals and ethics rather than of physics and chemistry. Never before have the foundations been so securely established as they are today for thoroughgoing and constructive collaboration between science and religion in the crucial task of saving mankind from self-destruction. Dr. Miller's timely analysis deserves a host of readers; it will help mightily to make that collaboration a reality." K. F. Mather

MILLER, C. W.—Continued
+ Crozer Q 24:354 O '47 420w

"Dr. Miller is professor of physics at Brown University and writes on religion (he means Christianity) with unusual discrimination and maturity. No theologian could have done better. It is the kind of book that intellectuals might profitably read, those who have lost their way in their religious tradition. His analogies are drawn from the field of his specialty, and they are pointed and illuminating." Vergilius Fern

+ Ethics 57:308 JI '47 280w

"This will be a valuable book for those who are troubled by their belief that science has crowded God off the stage. Ministers and teachers who have to deal with modern skeptics will find here suggestions as to how such doubts may be resolved."

+ Kirkus 15:63 F 1 '47 110w

"Restatement of Christian essentials by a scientist, a welcome antidote to overemphasis on material things. . . Recommended for all readers." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:74 Ja 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Paul Ramsey

N Y Times p43 Ap 13 '47 450w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 30w

Reviewed by J. P. Jones

Survey G 36:306 My '47 380w

MILLER, FRANCIS TREVELYAN. History of World war II. 966p il maps $5 Winston 940.53 World war, 1939-1945 45-8888
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"There are eight sections of pictures inserted into the text which are excellent for clarity of reproduction and for historical record but their value is nullified since there is no list of illustrations or index. . . The paper, type and binding are satisfactory. The author has produced a readable history of World War II, but it is not one which can be considered as a reference tool. Considerable authentic and valuable historical data is to be found but the organization of material does not lend itself to effective use. There is no indexing of any kind and the text is not always chronologically arranged. Because of this fact, the History of World War II is not recommended for purchase for reference use."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:34 JI '46 430w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Candle in the morning. 212p $2.75 Appleton-Century 47-2534

Wythe Sanford, a former lieutenant in the WAC found a houseful of trouble when she reached her grandfather's palatial Florida home. Besides her domineering grandfather, there was her neurotic aunt, and the mystery girl also named Wythe Sanford. The sudden death of her grandfather finally solved the difficulties.

Booklist 43:348 JI 1 '47

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Ap 27 '47 80w

MILLER, MRS HELEN (TOPPING). Sound of charlots; a novel of John Sevier and the State of Franklin. 288p $2.75 Bobbs

Sevier, John—Fiction 47-30850

When the British withdrew their troops from Georgia in the fall of 1780, the Loyalists were forced to flee from Augusta before the threatened invasion of American guerrilla troops. This novel follows the fortunes of Lisle Marot who with her father and mother crossed the mountains into the territory destined to become first the State of Franklin, later Tennessee.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Clinton Textor
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 14 '47
100w

"Recommended as an entertaining tale, which, in addition to providing 'escape' also portrays well the everyday life of the frontier in 1780." J. L. Ross

+ Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

MILLER, HENRY. Remember to remember. 427p $3.75 New directions

917.3 U.S.—Civilization

"A sequel to Mr. Miller's 'The Air-Conditioned Nightmare.' . . This book is an unorganized harangue on the state of civilization in America, which the author finds deplorable, observing that 'the whole culture of America springs from two lunatics: the Marquis de Sade and Sacher Masoch.'" New Yorker

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle

Commonweal 47:229 D 12 '47 750w

"Miller's recent works, which make steady and annual appearances, have been largely journalistic and autobiographical miscellanies, and progressively more windy and tedious. 'Remember to Remember' continues this trend." Weldon Kees

+ N Y Times p5 N 30 '47 900w

"There are appreciative essays on the one or two American artists Mr. Miller likes, along with meandering discussions of obscenity, bread, the purity and gallantry of the French prostitute in contrast to the 'overassertive bad manners' of American women, and so on, and so on."

+ New Yorker 23:134 N 8 '47 140w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 4 '47
450w

MILLER, JANE. Linda just right [pictures by Givens-Duzak]. [30p] $1 Vanguard

46-8246

Photographs and simple text tell about Linda who was "just right" herself, and had toys which were "just right", too. For preschool children.

"Recommended." K. H. McAlarney

Library J 72:166 Ja 15 '47 70w

"Linda's story is told simply in words that young listeners can easily understand and beginning readers can recognize quickly. Both groups will study the photographs of Linda doing just the things they would like to do." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 5 '47 160w

MILLER, MRS JEAN (DUPONT). Miss Navy junior. 211p $2 Dodd

46-11864

A novel for older girls about life in a navy family. The heroine is Vicky, whose fifteenth year is an exciting one, with near tragedy, and changes in the family.

Booklist 43:191 F 15 '47

Reviewed by E. E. Frank

Library J 72:326 F 15 '47 70w

"A comfortable, continuously entertaining family narrative of people one would like to meet in person and whom one seems actually to meet through unforced, lively, up-to-date dialogue." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ja 26 '47 290w

"The maturing of a fifteen-year-old girl, her growing up in understanding, sympathy, and common sense, her growing power to follow through her generous but often impulsive gestures make a warm-hearted and appealing story. The characterizations are good, there are plenty of absorbing incidents and the background of Navy life with its sacrifice and trials as well as its fun and drama is very well drawn." R. A. H.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ja 18 '47 200w

MILLER, JOHN ANDERSON. Men and volts at war; the story of General electric in World war II. (Whittlesey house publication) 272p il $3.75 McGraw

621.3065 General electric company 47-3493

"Story of General Electric's complex war equipment and the production of turbines, shock-proof shipboard tanks, turbosuperchargers, rockets, electric blankets, Diesel electric propulsion equipment, demagnetizing equipment, optical rifle-sighting gauges, searchlights, wire recorders, X-ray radio, radar, silicone rubber, drifilm, electric testing equipment. Story of GE's contribution to the atomic bomb with the largest steam plant ever constructed at Oak Ridge, and many other items. Appendix lists all GE companies and products." (Library J) Index.

Chem & Eng N 25:3030 O 13 '47 70w

Reviewed by S. D. Kirkpatrick

Chem Eng 54:268 O '47 320w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1039 JI '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:31 Ap '47

MILLER, JOSEPH HILLIS, and ALLEN, JOHN STUART. Veterans challenge the colleges; the New York program. 150p $2.25 King's crown press

378.747 Veterans—Education. Colleges and universities—New York (state) 47-3704

A study of the ways in which New York state has met the problem of returning war veterans who wish to enter college under the GI bill of rights. The authors are associate commissioner and director of higher education in the New York state education department. No index.

Booklist 43:341 JI 1 '47

Bookmark 8:4 My '47

Reviewed by J. M. Fogg

Crozer Q 25:90 Ja '48 350w

School & Society 65:351 My 10 '47 30w

"One can only hope that this war-born co-operation will be of long duration. The authors of this volume are to be congratulated in bringing the facts and implications of this 'emergency' before the profession so promptly and so lucidly." R. R. Wohl

+ School & Society 66:110 Ag 9 '47 1000w

MILLER, MRS MADELINE (SWEENEY), and MILLER, JOHN LANE. Encyclopedia of Bible life. 493p il maps $4.95 Harper

220.3 Bible. Whole—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 44-51116

For descriptive note see Annual 1945.

"The many excellent illustrations, most of them reproduced from photographs taken by the authors depicting rural scenes in the Holy Land, are a feature of the encyclopedia. . . While the book contains numerous minor inaccuracies, errors brought to light in earlier printings have been corrected in the third edition. Although its emphasis upon 'popular curiosities' limits its scope in comparison to other Bible encyclopedias, the Encyclopedia of Bible Life will be useful for the abundance of information it presents in informal style and for its well-chosen illustrations. Recommended."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 17:14 Ap '46 360w

MILLER, NOLAN. Merry innocents. 239p $2.50 Harper

47-31237

A college professor in a midwestern town, his family, and the Negro maid, are the chief actors in this story of family life. The action all takes place during the Christmas season.

Kirkus 15:404 Ag 1 '47 90w

"From the Lowrys and their doings Nolan Miller draws a tale that is amusing and more than amusing in its affirmation, without cant or sloppiness, of the satisfactions and fun of life in a lively family. The Lowrys are people you'd like to know." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 30 '47 550w

"If 'The Merry Innocents' were taken for what it is—a daydream about family life—you might be able to get a legitimate kick out of it. But, like most of its kind, it isn't pure fantasy. It uses the real objects of everyday life to tease you into its own kind of unreality. . . It would seem that if this world is frightening, we had better face up to it or it will get even more frightening, Lowrys or no Lowrys." Seymour Krim

N Y Times p17 D 28 '47 550w

"There are no profound and gloomy conversations, nothing nasty happens, and the story has all the wonderful unreality of a colored advertisement in a magazine."

New Yorker 23:106 O 4 '47 80w

MILLER, MRS OLIVE KENNON (BEAUPRE), ed. See My book house

MILLER, RANDOLPH CRUMP, ed. Church and organized movements. (Interseminary ser) 255p $1.50 Harper

261 Association and associations 47-1263

"Appraises the allied and opposed organized movements in the United States today as they offer resistance to or provide resources for the achievement of Christian goals. It evaluates the groups that serve definite classes or interests in contemporary society: secular radicalism, native fascism, welfare work, service clubs and lodges, education, cults—in terms of their standards of behaviour, of loyalty within the society, and of commitment to the will of God." Publisher's note

Booklist 43:216 Mr 15 '47

"If the other books of the series are as good as this one, the series will make a substantial contribution to Christian thought in our day. It is scholarly without being pedantic, tolerant without making compromises, and fairly exhaustive without becoming superficial or tedious." T. C. Johnson

+ Christian Century 64:176 F 5 '47 490w

"An able study of strategy and tactics which must be considered by the church today if it is to achieve the Christian hope for man." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 360w

Reviewed by Wilhelm Pauck

Crozer Q 24:257 JI '47 700w

"On the whole, the book contains a judicious selection of the organized movements in our society. The inclusion of welfare work, fraternalism, and the cults is very commendable. The section of the book we found disappointing was the one that dealt with the labor movement, socialism, communism, etc. . . This book contains a great deal of useful information on the organized movements in America. No one can read it without learning a great deal from it. But its total effect on the mind is both confusing and misleading." Joseph Haroutunian

+ J Religion 27:299 O '47 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:249 S '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:64 Ap '47

MILLER, RICHARD DE WITT. Forgotten mysteries. 202p $2.50 Cloud, inc, 605 N. Michigan av, Chicago 11

133 Curiosities 47-19382

"[The author] has spent 20 years in the study of the mysterious and presents only cases where verifiable circumstantial evidence of the happening can be found. He neither makes assertions nor claims proof but lets the incidents speak for themselves—as some of them do in a hair-raising fashion. Several of the happenings recorded here have already been published in Coronet magazine, though they have been given expanded treatment and much new material has been added." Chicago Sun Book Week

MILLER, R. D.—Continued

"The collection is well-organized and explanatory background material precedes each chapter. As every tale is treated as a separate unit, the book is ideal for 'spot reading' in spare moments. If you think the mind of man has encompassed all things, this collection of the mysterious will at least make you think again." E. D.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 6 '47
210w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 4 '47
80w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 40w

MILLER, WADE, pseud. of BOB WADE and BILL MILLER. Guilty bystander. 205p $2.50
Farrar, Straus

47-2409

Detective story.

"In manner it is comfortably above the pulper routine and the stuff of it, while familiar, is capably managed. Most of its course is simple gang warfare but the authors tease out their finale with a revelation that looks a little like Edgar Wallace." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 23 '47
100w

Kirkus 15:141 Mr 1 '47 70w

"The synthetic savagery may revolt some readers, but really hard fans will want to know more about Rocco and Leo Spagnoletti, a lost lady stooging for criminals, Stitch Olivera, San Francisco fingerman, and other unsavory critters. . . For those who wish to wander for a time in the specialized world of Dashiell Hammett and Raymond Chandler." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Mr 23 '47 180w

"If this book does not assuage your thirst for gore you might try a visit to the Chicago stockyards." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 Mr 23 '47 90w

"Less startling than Miller's first, but a sound, meaty hardboiled novel."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 6 '47
80w

MILLER, WADE, pseud. of BOB WADE and BILL MILLER. Pop goes the Queen. 232p
$2.50 Farrar, Straus

47-30944

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 17 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:379 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
S 28 '47 120w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 28 '47 180w

"Some fine ironical touches point up the story."

+ New Yorker 23:112 O 4 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 28 '47
120w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 50w

MILLIKAN, ROBERT ANDREWS. Electrons (+ and -), protons, photons, neutrons, mesotrons, and cosmic rays. rev ed 642p il
$6 Univ. of Chicago press

539.7 Electrons. Atoms. Cosmic rays

47-1983

A new edition of a work first published in 1935 (Book Review Digest 1935). In the preface the author says: "Believing profoundly in the historical approach both in science and in its teaching, I have made no changes in the first 400 pages save those necessitated by new knowledge, mostly in the values of units, but have replaced the last 50 pages by 200 pages of entirely new material under the five new chapter headings (xvi-xx): 'The Release and Utilization of Nuclear Energy,' 'Geomagnetic Studies on Cosmic Rays at Low Altitudes,' 'The Discovery and the Significance of the Mesotron,' 'The Nature and Number of the Incoming Primary Rays,' and 'The Atom-Annihilation Hypothesis as to the Origin of Cosmic Rays.'" Index.

Booklist 43:293 My 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Any library that purports to be reasonably complete in the field of physics will have to include a copy of this new edition." James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
My 18 '47 290w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:55 J1 '47

School & Society 65:184 Mr 8 '47 30w

"One of the clearest and most adequate presentations of modern physics."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:210 Je '47 180w

MILLIS, WALTER. This is Pearl! the United States and Japan, 1941. 384p $4 Morrow

327.73 U.S.—Foreign relations—Japan.
Japan—Foreign relations—U.S. 47-11133

In his Foreword, the author says: "From its inception this book has had but one aim—to tell the story of the Pearl Harbor attack and of the events, the policies and the popular attitudes of the year which led up to it in a single organized narrative. . . This book maintains no thesis; it is motivated by no impulse either to attack or to defend any of the many characters involved."

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

Cath World 166:379 Ja '48 270w

Reviewed by W. H. Pierce

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 O 19 '47
330w

Kirkus 15:562 O 1 '47 210w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton

Nation 165:624 D 6 '47 1050w

"Mr. Millis is telling a double story. In the story of the negotiations between America and Japan to avoid war America has the upper hand. . . In the intertwined story of Japan's plan to strike at Pearl Harbor if the negotiations fail Japan has the upper hand. . . This double story provides Mr. Millis with a theme of the most intense tragic irony, and though we have all lived through the story, he retells it so vividly that, chapter by chapter, the suspense mounts, the tragedy deepens and the irony grows more poignant." Owen Lattimore

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
O 12 '47 1650w

"'This is Pearl!' is so admirably organized and written that it has the interest and suspense of a novel. Even knowing what is to come, the reader finds difficulty in laying the book down until the story is unfolded." Foster Hailey

N Y Times p4 N 2 '47 800w

"An admirably straightforward and concise review of Japanese-American relations during 1941, with a minimum of editorializing. The forty-volume report of the joint committee of Congress that investigated the Pearl Harbor attack is the author's chief source, supplemented by related documents and interviews with Japanese prisoners."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 18 '47 120w

"If you want to know what happened to bring about the tragedy of Pearl Harbor, here is by far the best popular book to date on the subject. It can't help but interest you. For if you look closely, you'll be able to detect yourself as a bit player in the background." Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p3 N 30 '47
800w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

Sat R of Lit 30:33 O 11 '47 1000w

MILLS, FREDERICK CECIL. Price-quantity interactions in business cycles. 140p $1.50
Nat. bur. of economic research

338.54 Prices. Business cycles 47-860

"One of the monographs in the National Bureau series dealing with the impact of business cycles on various aspects of the economic system, this study is also a continuation of Professor Mills' extensive research in the behavior of prices. Avoiding theoretical interpretations, it is an exclusively statistical study of the cyclical movements of total money payments for output, of prices, and of physical output. As a basis for his measurements, Professor Mills uses the 'reference cycles' developed by Arthur F. Burns and Wesley C. Mitchell in their Measuring Business Cycles, 1946. The study covers about sixty-four important commodities, which are dealt with individually, by classes, and as aggregates." U S Quarterly Bkl

"This is an interesting, and highly characteristic product of the business cycles research program of the National Bureau of Economic Research... The method employed is the standard method of the National Bureau, and is excellently applied... One wishes that more of the raw data were published... There is a certain arbitrariness also in the selection of the nine reference points, and one wonders whether, for instance, a certain oddness in the behavior of many series between the eighth and ninth reference points is not as much a product of the method as of the facts. Nevertheless the results obtained are interesting: a statistician could hardly hope for more." K. E. Boulding

+ — Ann Am Acad 252:141 J1 '47 440w

Reviewed by M. Bronfenbrenner
J Pol Econ 55:486 O '47 1250w

"Monetary and business cycle theorists have long insisted that the money value of output, prices, and physical output vary greatly during the cycle, and that different commodities behave quite differently in all these respects. In most cases, however, they have lacked the statistics with which to test their arguments. Professor Mills' statistical study will go far toward satisfying this need."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:159 Je '47 320w

MILLS, FREYA. Susan's surprise; pictures by Marion Sheldon. [31p] $1.50 Oxford

46-8245

Picture story book about Susan and her friendship with the little old lady who kept the newspaper stand.

"Lots of details that seem unnecessary, but children seem to like this sort of repeat pattern. But in the main, it seems much ado about nothing."

Kirkus 14:522 O 15 '46 90w

"Attractive modern pictures in color by Mary Sheldon on each page. Not important but could be useful in kindergarten or nursery school." M. F. Cox

Library J 71:1718 D 1 '46 70w

"It is the sort of very simple story very little girls like because it has their own experience in color." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 3 '46 140w

MILNE, LORUS JOHNSON, and MILNE, MARGERY JOAN (GREENE). Multitude of living things. 278p il $4 Dodd

591.5 Zoology. Animals, Habits and behavior of 47-31332

The authors are biological naturalists. They write about the wonders of the countryside, about what one can discover by the simple act of turning over a stone, or observing the life in one small bush. Illustrated with photographs. Altho intended for adults, could be used with older children also. Index.

"A Multitude of Living Things is good observation, good writing, and good reading for either the amateur or professional naturalist." L. Q. Mann

+ Atlantic 181:124 Ja '48 330w

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

"The Drs. Milne have brought to the preparation of this book three admirable gifts. They write with easy informality, translating their immense technical information about twenty chapterfuls of various kinds of living creature into comfortably conversational prose. They know the charm and value of concentrating intensively on the life of one small area... Though written for adults, it should also have appeal and usefulness for biology-minded young people. There is a stimulating appendix of bibliographical references, and an efficient index." Alan Devoe

+ Commonweal 47:53 O 24 '47 240w

"The Milnes have done a good job of making scientific fact and technical knowledge understandable to the general reader. They are also photographers and twenty-odd of their photographs are scattered through the book. On the whole these pictures add little to the text, not more than half a dozen of them standing out from the general run of insect pictures." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 11 '48 360w

MIMS, SAM. Bayou adventure. 215p $2.50
Bruce pub.

47-3948

Adventure-mystery story for sixth grade boys. The locale is the bayou country of southern Louisiana, and the hero is Napoleon Lafitte Dauville, who at fifteen is pirogue paddler, trapper, swimmer and guide.

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 22 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:285 Je 1 '47 120w

"The prowess of the fifteen-year-old hero, Nap Dauville, native of the swamps, seems a bit incredible... Not a necessary title." Margaret Miller

Library J 72:1041 J1 '47 70w

MINER, PAUL SEVIER. Eyes of faith; a study in the biblical point of view. 307p $3 Presbyterian bd.

220.6 Bible. Whole

46-6031

"The 'otherness' of the Bible is the provocation of this book. Dr. Minear, Norris professor of New Testament interpretation at Andover Newton Theological School, in an autobiographical paragraph in the introduction asserts that the convictions which he records about the Bible were forced on him against strong preconceptions. When in times past he has been most certain that he understood Isaiah or Jesus because some phase of their teaching seemed to agree with his beliefs, he has in reality been farthest from understanding them. The truth of the Bible can be comprehended, insists Dr. Minear, only if the reader's resistance to its otherness is broken down and if he stands where the prophets and the apostles stood." Christian Century

Reviewed by Hampton Adams

Christian Century 63:1343 N 6 '46 550w

"This book is an interpretation of the religion of the Bible from a particular theological point of view. Those who share this theology will hail the book as a major contribution. Those who have difficulty with the particular point of view will, of course, be discouraged, aroused, or perhaps baffled by the terms used and the convictions presented, often in terms of absolutes." C. M. Bond

Crozer Q 24:82 Ja '47 500w

"The difficulty with [Minear's] presentation is simply that he uses dialectical methods to run down dialectic. Because he is unable to connect reason with revelation, he believes that there is a great gulf fixed between them. The Christian church has traditionally rejected such schisms." R. M. Grant

— J Religion 27:213 J1 '47 600w

MINIO-PALUELLO, LORENZO. Education in fascist Italy; with a foreword by Sir W. D. Ross; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 236p $5.50 Oxford 370.945 Education—Italy. Fascism—Italy.

Gentile, Giovanni 47-3584

A history of education in Italy from the mid-nineteenth century, which stresses the main steps in fascism's attempted reform of Italian education.

Foreign Affairs 25:702 JI '47 90w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
School & Society 66:515 D 27 '47 270w

"Although Mr. Minio-Paluello is here and there hampered by bi-lingual disadvantages, it will be well worth while, to those of his readers who have the fortitude to do so, to share his perseverance. He writes with fair-mindedness and balance, and his knowledge of his subject is encyclopaedic. Perhaps, however, he might have facilitated his task and that of his readers by omitting references to temporary changes which left no mark upon the development of Italy." Elizabeth Wiske-mann

+ — Spec 177:710 D 27 '46 650w

MITCHELL, DOROTHY. Along the Maine coast; pictured by W. N. Wilson. (Whittlesey house publication) 97p $3.50 McGraw

917.41 Maine—Description and travel 47-4106

Describes an imaginary walking trip along the three hundred miles of Maine coast from Kittery to Eastport. Illustrated with reproductions of paintings, some of them in full color.

San Francisco Chronicle p14 JI 27 '47 130w

"Three hundred miles of artistic observation and historical narrative, presented in an incredible ninety-seven pages; and though the understandable brevity with which it introduces each village and cove and harbor from Kittery to Eastport might be challenged by devotees who want a full chapter for their own small paradises, it is amazingly full and fair and so unlike the guidebooks." Hodding Carter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 S 6 '47 210w

"The text is an amiable and admiring description... with nothing much to distinguish it from dozens of other descriptions. Mr. Wilson's illustrations, including six full-color paintings and 27 black and white reproductions, are something else again. This is the first time Mr. Wilson's Maine paintings have been presented in book form and they deserve the distinction." R. F. H.

Springf'd Union p5 JI 21 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:116 JI '47

MITCHELL, EDWIN VALENTINE. It's an old Pennsylvania custom. 262p $3 Vanguard 917.43 Pennsylvania—Social life and customs 47-7058

A companion volume to the author's It's an old New England Custom (Book Review Digest 1946). Partial contents: To dwell in caves; To found Utopias; To build Conestoga wagons; To build magnificent barns; To be fond of music; To enjoy shoo-fly pie; To believe in witchcraft; To observe strange customs of courtship and marriage; To wear beards and dress plainly.

Kirkus 15:566 O 1 '47 160w

"Light weight reading for the popular library and a satisfactory addition to young people's collections." G. D. McDonald
+ Library J 72:1538 N 1 '47 100w

"To his assembly job Mr. Mitchell has added his own superior brand of writing polish. He has drawn his material from numerous authorities, old and new, and, occasionally, has recorded his own findings on Keystone State mores, as in the case of the 'Philadelphia accent' and its erratically infected country cousin." William Weber

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
N 30 '47 330w

MITCHELL, JOHN KNOX HEWITT. Court of the Connétable. 166p $3 Yale univ. press 349.440799 Courts—France. Justice, Administration of—France A47-3214

"A study of a French administrative tribunal during the reign of Henry IV." (Subtitle) Bibliographical note. Index.

Reviewed by M. P. Gilmore

Am Hist R 53:160 O '47 370w

"A good, solid monograph." Gaines Post
+ Am Pol Sci R 41:814 Ag '47 320w

"The study is based chiefly on the researches of Guichard and D'Orgeval; Dr. Mitchell's contribution consists in modifying, supplementing, and enriching the conclusions reached by these scholars. The method of this study differs, also, from that of Guichard and D'Orgeval. Here the investigations are grounded directly and solely on court-registers."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:280 S '47 280w

MITCHELL, RONALD ELWY. Design for November. 282p $2.75 Harper 47-3619

A story of life among the college faculty in a small middle-western town. When Sam Forster learns that the position he covets may go to another aspirant, his wife attempts to solve the difficulty by drastic measures and thereby brings about her own downfall.

Kirkus 15:224 Ap 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 25 '47 360w

"A naturalistic novel can be pedestrian without being dull. 'Design for November,' unfortunately, is both pedestrian and dull. In an attempt to portray sordidness and absence of hope, it neglects to develop interest in the major characters." B. V. W.

— N Y Times p26 Je 1 '47 360w

Wis Lib Bul 43:99 Je '47

MITCHELL, SYDNEY BANCROFT. Your California garden and mine. 261p il $3 Barrows 635.9 Gardening Agr47-234

The author's purpose in this book is "to pass on something of what [he has] learned in nearly forty years of varied California gardening, and to interpret [his] experience in such a way that it may be of value to gardeners anywhere in the state." As a background for his Californian experience, the author had also worked in gardens in Montreal and Boston.

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

"Your California Garden and Mine' has charm, breadth and a steady flow of succinct, practical information and suggestions that cover outdoor ornamental plants and plantings from A to Z. One might, perhaps, wish for more of the excellent full-page photographs that form a special small section in the book, but that is a minor matter easily dismissed." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
S 21 '47 170w

Reviewed by O. S. Stull

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47 110w

MITCHELL, WILLIAM ORMOND. Who has seen the wind. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 300p $2.50 Little 47-30157

A small town on the Saskatchewan prairie is the background of this first novel. The story is of the boy Brian O'Connell, from his fourth year to his twelfth, and of his search for information on many things from the prairie wind to God and the Absolute.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Samuel Roddan

Canadian Forum 27:22 Ap '47 280w

"Beautifully written, with unusual insight and sensitivity, this is a first novel of high merit." Dorothy Sparks

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 17 '47 320w

"There's an offstage motif of the wind, a factor for good and ill on the prairie. And there's a sensitive awareness of the tenuous and fleeting impressions of the boy growing up that has something of the appeal of The Yearling. I liked it."

+ Kirkus 15:73 F 1 '47 280w

"Ardent but unsure first novel. . . It seems as if the author had not quite decided whether to write a book about a boy's search for significance, or a prairie Winesburg. Half of it echoes 'Winesburg,' without the brooding concern of Anderson and his patient probing; the other half is more successful. There we feel a boy's reaching out toward the encircling space of the prairie, with the wind always blowing." Walter Havighurst

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 2 '47 800w

"Here is a first novel which measures up fully to its author's own specifications; it turns out to be exactly what Mr. Mitchell declares in advance it is to be. Furthermore, it is a piece of brilliantly sustained prose, a very beautiful, keen, perceptive rendering of human beings engaged in the ordinary yet profoundly—almost mysteriously—meaningful drama of every day." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p5 F 23 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 13 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:55 Mr '47

MOEHLMAN, CONRAD HENRY. Church as educator, 184p $2 Hinds

377.8 Church and education 47-3789

"This study is designed to put the religious phase of the breakdown of the medieval religious synthesis and the birth of the modern religious synthesis in proper perspective. It examines in broad outline that breakdown, paying special attention to four major trends: racialism, the evangelization of the world in this generation, the failure of two attempts to compromise, namely, the American social gospel and religious education. . . The third section of the analysis is concerned with various suggestions looking toward a formulation of the new synthesis in practical terms. It gives particular emphasis to four necessary understandings of the new tasks facing the churches." (Pref) No index.

"The theme of this book is this: If the church is to be an effective educator, it must break with the traditional dogmas of the past and create a new religious synthesis which will include the best in public education, modern science, the democratic spirit and the other religions of the world. It is regrettable that the author does not say this less bluntly. Many readers will find their spiritual blood pressure going up, their pencils making big question marks on the margins of many paragraphs and their minds preparing for a mental, pugilistic battle. If Professor Moehlman's purpose was to stimulate thinking among the leaders of religious education and the church, he has certainly succeeded." A. M. Motter

Christian Century 64:527 Ap 23 '47 900w

"Those whom recent legal decisions and certain uncomfortable trends in the general world of education have alarmed, will do well to read these latest explorations and interpretations of Dr. Moehlman carefully and sympathetically." K. M. Chworowsky

Churchman 161:17 Mr 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by M. S. Enslin

Crozer Q 24:266 J1 '47 700w

School & Society 65:152 F 22 '47 20w

MOFFETT, LANGSTON. Devil by the tail; a novel. (Story press bk) 431p $3 Lippincott

47-175

Portrait of Gordon Sullivan, Gargantuan in size but childlike in reality, who tries to reconcile his inferiority complex and his large size by indulging in a prolonged series of drinking bouts at home and abroad.

Kirkus 14:604 D 1 '46 260w

"Possesses to the full the horrid fascination of a well-written True Confession and might as well be added to that hectic shelf which already holds The Glass Crutch and September Remember." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 70w

"This is an extraordinary and detailed novel of alcoholism, remarkable as representation but also superior as to story-telling. Once he starts it, no reader is likely to leave it unfinished, even though he might wish to, nor is he likely soon to forget it. It belongs on the same shelf with 'The Lost Week End' as to quality; but it is a different kind of novel."

F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 26 '47 1250w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p14 Ja 26 '47 450w

MOHR, ROBERT LANDIS. Thomas Henry Burrowes, 1805-1871. 271p il $4 Univ. of Pa. press

B or 92 Burrowes, Thomas Henry. Education—U.S.

A biography of a nineteenth century pioneer in public education, whose work in behalf of education in Pennsylvania was influential in the spread of public schools thruout the whole of the country. Bibliography. Index.

"This biography rescues Burrowes from oblivion but, in the reviewer's opinion, it fails to raise him to national eminence. . . Dr. Mohr's dissertation is an interesting study of an interesting man in an interesting period of American history. His problem is well analyzed and well presented. If it promotes controversy, it certainly does not fall flat." S. G. Noble

Am Hist R 52:572 Ap '47 450w

"Dr. Mohr's study is extremely well documented, and is a contribution to historical literature, throwing much light on foundation stones upon which our present educational system rests. He obtained his data mainly from primary sources usually inaccessible to the scholar. Painstaking work of this kind is making possible a complete and accurate general history of education in our country. Teachers and students in this area of study will find a wealth of data dealing with the development of education in Pennsylvania, which in many respects is typical of the development of education in our entire country." Zora Klain

+ Ann Am Acad 250:167 Mr '47 480w

Reviewed by C. D. Champlin

El School J 48:53 S '47 800w

School & Society 64:351 N 16 '46 30w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:42 Mr '47 240w

MOLENDYK, CLARA ADRIENE, and EDWARDS, BENJAMIN C., eds. Price of liberty. 432p $1.80 Harper

323.44 Peace. International cooperation

47-2526

"Anthology of stories, poems and articles designed to be used in high schools in instilling

MOLENDYK, C. A.—Continued
ideals of world peace and international cooperation." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 44:52 O 1 '47
School & Society 65:269 Ap 12 '47 40w
Wis Lib Bul 43:120 J1 '47

MOLLOY, MRS ANNE STEARNS (BAKER).
Pigeoneers; il. by Elizabeth Converse. 180p
$2.50 Houghton

Pigeons—Legends and stories 47-30395

A group of boys in the Riverside orthopedic hospital in New York city become interested in the carrier pigeons on the roof of the building opposite. The owner is only too glad to be of help to the little shut-ins, and a club is formed for them. The book contains some historical tales about pigeons.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 180:148 D '47 60w
Booklist 44:38 S 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Book Week p31 D 20 '47
70w

"The author knows boys and she brings into the story more action and excitement than would be expected where the scene is a hospital ward. Children of the middle-age group will enjoy the book." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 23:362 S '47 90w

Kirkus 15:340 J1 1 '47 120w

"This fairly interesting tale fills the need for a simple story about pigeons. The few others like Gay-Neck are more mature in content. Several of the world famous legends about pigeons are woven into the plot which is slight but plausible. Characterization of the boy Nat is good." J. M. Smith
+ Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 70w

"Even if, like this reader, you weren't particularly enthusiastic about pigeons to begin with, you will be before you have gone very far in this story. . . Miss Molloy writes knowingly of both pigeons and boys. The hospital background is well drawn, without pathos. Shut-ins of 8 to 12 will find a special kinship with the boys and there is plenty to interest their active contemporaries." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '47 180w
Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 120w
Springfd Republican p10B N 16 '47
70w
Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

MOLLOY, ROBERT. Charleston, a gracious heritage; il. by E. H. Suydam. 311p $6 Appleton-Century
975.7911 Charleston, South Carolina
47-11944

An account of the city of Charleston emphasizing its individuality and charm. There are chapters on Charleston's history; its famous persons, past and present; its buildings; etc. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:149 D 15 '47
Chicago Sun Book Week p19A D 3 '47
140w

"The book all potential visitors to Charleston should read if they want to inform themselves fully on one of our most picturesque of American cities."

+ Kirkus 15:525 S 15 '47 170w

"It follows, of course, that it is a charming book; and it may be that Mr. Molloy's great merit is that his text doesn't dissipate the magic that the pictures weave." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
N 30 '47 550w

"Charleston, which has somewhat lagged behind other historic, picturesque American cities of late in receiving literary attention, is put back in the running and receives an affectionate, understanding, overall presentation in this newest volume of the Century City Series. . . Mr. Molloy has managed to get in an unusual amount of solid history (which he mostly slips in painlessly) together with a great deal of amusing lore and legend (which he often manages to invest with a certain significance). In fact, so much material is presented and in such informal sequence that the effect may at times be bewildering. Nevertheless, the reader who takes a leisurely, careful journey through these pages will emerge knowing a great deal more about Charleston than most Americans know about their own city." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p5 D 28 '47 600w

"Mr. Molloy writes his book in the form of a gossip, very pleasing hodge-podge, and to my way of thinking, the book is the better for this treatment. A book about a city has as its chief goal the interpretation of that city's flavor. The informal manner Mr. Molloy has chosen to use accomplishes his end perfectly." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 8 '48
650w

MOLNAR, MARIA. Katika. 242p $2.75 Harper
47-30229

Katika was eighteen when she married Peter, a member of a Hungarian string quartet. To her surprise the rest of the quartet accompanied them on their honeymoon, and practically always thereafter. The novel describes their adventures in Europe and then in the United States.

Booklist 43:255 Ap 15 '47

"This novel, whose surface is so light and frothy, has a surprisingly wide scope. Some of the experiences of the quartet, singly or in unison, are hilariously funny, and Katika tells them well. She can also record personal tragedy without becoming maudlin, and political tragedy without becoming oracular. . . Indeed, the excellence of this book is paradoxical. The writing is ingenuous—amateurish, almost—and yet it buoys the story and propels it briskly and deftly." Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 27 '47
390w

Kirkus 15:109 F 15 '47 110w

"Mrs. Molnar writes with a Continental zest that is direct and refreshing. It is when she attempts to weave the tragic and the dramatic into her narrative that the book becomes stilted and unreal. In spite of its fictional weakness, 'Katika' has a certain charm, both because of the author's engaging personality and her description of the highly colorful existence of the quartet her heroine espoused." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
Ap 20 '47 550w

"This pleasant tale of turbulent years in Europe and the sometimes frighteningly new America is always amusing and often as good as a course in human relations. The story is often as mad as the family of Katika thought musicians were; indeed I know of nothing with which to compare it but perhaps 'You Can't Take It With You' or maybe 'The Constant Nymph.' Thousands of readers, especially those whose interests are musical, are going to have a wonderful time following the adventures of Katika and her four-artist family." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 11 '47
700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

MONAGHAN, JAMES. Overland trail. (American trails ser) 431p il maps $3.75 Bobbs 978 West—History. Overland journeys to the Pacific 47-11789

"'Overland trail' as employed here is the north-central route of migration often known as the Oregon trail. This second volume in the American Trails series begins with the old seaway voyage and discovery of the Columbia River, goes on to continental explorers, fur traders, Lewis and Clark, Wyeth, DeSmet, Frémont, the Donner party, Parkman, Mormons, 49'ers, and ends with the famous meeting of the Central and Union Pacific railroads." (Library J) Bibliographical note. Index.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p12A D 3 '47 360w

"Recommended for both special and general readers. Valuable bibliography." E. L. Lewis
+ Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Monaghan is a professional historian who has gone systematically through the scholarship devoted to the trail but he has written this book for the general reader in a simple narrative style. . . A book of this sort, which is not intended to add to existing knowledge of the subject but to interpret what is already known, has an interest like that of a musician's reading of a familiar score." H. N. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 30 '47 1150w

"It is comprehensive, a product of prodigious research; and within his definition of intent, it is accurate. Unfortunately this title and general scheme of the work may only add to existing confusion over the nomenclature and course of the historic trails." J. K. Howard
+ — N Y Times p7 D 14 '47 850w

"Let us shed our tears right here, over the grave of a book that was destined not to be. Alas, an idea that promised so much, thus to be done to its death. . . Mr. Monaghan has contented himself with a factory-made production, and thereby all of us are the losers. . . All this is pretty rough on Mr. Monaghan. So let us also say that he has lived in the West and writes about it with a graphic remembrance of wind, sun, cold, sand, and rock. His interpolations of his own experience into the history he writes about are always interesting. Perhaps no one since Frederick Dellenbaugh has written Western history with so authentic an adaptation of personal experience to the interpretation of that history." D. L. Morgan

— + Sat R of Lit 31:10 Ja 10 '48 800w

MONCRIEFF, R. W. Chemical senses. 424p $4.50 Wiley

612.86 Senses and sensation [45-10600]

"Presentation of the chemistry of taste, smell, and sensation. Structure of the physiological structure of the chemical sense organs and their connections with a discussion of characteristics of sensation, olfaction, and gustation. Topics include chemical sensibility of lower animals and various theories of odor, perfumes and essences, flavor and food. Glossary. Bibliography." Library J

"The publication of an American reprint of Moncrieff's 'The Chemical Senses,' first published in Great Britain in 1944, is good news to those who, in typical wartime fashion, have had to stand in line for the editions from England to become available. The book represents one of those rare treatments of a subject made up of thousands of researches in great need of classification, organization, and interpretative analysis." W. F. Dove

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1540 My 26 '47 700w

"The book constitutes an important asset to a chemical library, particularly where there is specialization in odorous materials, flavors, cosmetics, and food technology. . . However, the very scope of Moncrieff's work was such that weaknesses were inevitable, and we found quite unsatisfactory the chapter on perfumes and essences." Edward Sagarin

+ — Chem Eng 54:274 Ag '47 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1628 N 15 '46 60w

MONDRAGON AGUIRRE, MAGDALENA. Someday the dream; tr. from the French by Samuel Putnam. 240p $3 Dial press

47-2366

Novel by a young Mexican author, describing the lives of the bitterly poor who hover around the garbage dumps of Mexico City, living in patched shacks, and earning an existence from what they find in the refuse.

"The translation, like all of Samuel Putnam translations, is of absolute fidelity. And the magots are there in the first line, while vultures perch on roses on the jacket. The reader will make a mistake if he lets these things repel him, for 'the dream' that is in the translated title is in the book, too; even as, in the very bitterness of its indictment, one can sense the author's love for her land and people." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 16 '47 900w

"This novel is earnest and the author has done her best to make fiction echo fact by listing every detail that may engage the sense of sight, sound and smell. The net effect is akin to riding across the Jersey meadows in an open car on a damp day." Mildred Adams

N Y Times p18 Mr 23 '47 200w

MONSELL, HELEN ALBEE. Henry Clay, mill boy of the slashes; il. by Charles V. John. 183p $1.75 Bobbs

B or 92 Clay, Henry—Juvenile literature 47-2849

This true story, based on fact but in semi-fictional form, relates the story of Henry Clay's boyhood and youth, ending with his departure for Kentucky after he had received his license to practice law in Virginia in 1797. Told for young readers.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 22 '47 20w

Kirkus 15:128 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Another in the successful series of biographies for young readers. This is one of the better ones." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 72:737 My 1 '47 40w

"It is a vivid story, because a country and a period churning with new ideas and experiment appears as seen and shared by a boy very much alive. Called 'a historical story,' it makes a reliable introduction to biography." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 13 '47 150w

MONTGOMERY, MRS ELIZABETH RIDER. Story behind great books; il. by Friedebald Dzubas. 220p $2 McBride

809.3 Children's literature—History and criticism. Fiction—History and criticism 47-443

Collection of short stories presenting the background for some of the world's great books. Each sketch tells a little about the author and how the particular book in question came to be written. For teen-aged readers. Bibliography.

"Interesting information which will add to book reviews in the upper grades." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 72:163 Ja 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 My 18 '47 200w

MONTGOMERY, ROBERT BRUCE (EDMUND CRISPIN, pseud). Dead and dumb. 218p $2.50 Lippincott

47-4897

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47
280w

"Don't-miss item." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 17 '47 150w

"When the suspected murderer is himself murdered the case seems to be at an impasse, but it is very satisfactorily solved. Fen's ingenuity is coupled with the authentic atmosphere of the opera house to provide an interesting story."

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 3 '47 150w

"This is obviously a case for Gervase Fen, the don who likes out-of-the-ordinary detection, and he comes up with a solution that is logical enough but is based on one of those overelaborate devices that violently irritate some mystery fans. A nice job though."

+ New Yorker 23:11 Ag 16 '47 90w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47
80w

"B-plus British."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 40w

MOODEY, MARION MCCOOK. Here comes the peddler! il. by Kyra Markham. [32p] $1.50 Holiday

47-31149

Pioneer story, the setting for which is a California gold-mining camp in the Sixties. It sketches one day in the life of a twelve-year-old girl, when the peddler came and brought goods for dresses, and that wonderful thing—a sewing machine. For ages nine to ten.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:442 N '47 220w
Kirkus 15:464 S 1 '47 90w

"After a few pages the reader becomes accustomed to the italicized print in this book and is absorbed by this perfect picture of one of our country's yesterdays. . . Recommended for large libraries." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 70w

"Contrasting their lives with Mary Ellen's, modern girls of 7 to 10 years will gain a deeper perspective on values in living." H. K. Lippmann

N Y Times p37 N 2 '47 180w

"The expressions on the faces of Kyra Markham's characters make them very warm and alive. Miss Moodey and Miss Markham have combined to make a very touching and lovely story for girls about 10 to 12 years old." Alice Taylor

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 16 '47
250w

MOON, BUCKLIN. High cost of prejudice. 168p $2.50 Messner
325.26 Negroes. U.S.—Race question

47-3082

A study of the costs—in dollars and cents and cultural values,—of America's intolerance of Negroes—in the field of labor, in politics, in social life.

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

"The High Cost of Prejudice" is an able, temperate and constructive examination, from a fresh angle of approach, of the supreme domestic problem of the United States today. . . Much as I like the spirit and tone of this book as a whole, agree with its assumptions and approve its purpose, I believe it would be bettered by a slight change in emphasis. In large part it is devoted to indictment of the South and of Southern leaders along familiar lines. I wonder if Northern publicists like Moon might not serve their cause more effectively if—departing from the example of the Abolitionists—they concentrated their attack on the glaringly apparent faults and needs of their own region." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47
700w

"A realistic, down-to-earth analysis of the Negro problem . . . in succinct, challenging terms."

Kirkus 15:123 F 15 '47 160w

"Essential in all collections." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 72:731 My 1 '47 100w

"The publication of this volume is further proof of how an understanding of the factors involved in what we used to call 'the race problem' has increased since 1940. Merely to compare Mr. Moon's clear, calm-mannered, realistic analysis with some of the frightened, myth-ridden analyses that appeared in the twenties gives proof of the progress that has been made." Carey McWilliams

+ Nation 165:234 S 6 '47 1000w

"This is a book that should be read in order to feel the full force of the argument." E. M. Herrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Je 15 '47 850w

Reviewed by Louis Wirth
N Y Times p20 Je 1 '47 650w

Reviewed by M. R. Konvitz
Sat R of Lit 30:14 Je 14 '47 800w

MOORAD, GEORGE. Behind the iron curtain; with an introd. by W. L. White. 309p $3 Fireside press, inc. 604 S. Washington sq. Philadelphia 6

947.084 Russia—Politics and government.
Russia—Foreign relations 46-6680

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:252 Ap 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

Foreign Affairs 25:527 Ap '47 20w

"Lovers of the Soviets and admirers of Wallace in his present mood will not like what Moorad has to tell them, and there is probably nothing this reviewer can say that will change their minds. For the record, however, I can assure them that what he writes is the undocored truth, presented with admirable self-restraint in a journalistic style that is remarkable for its lack of padding." Leigh White

+ Nation 164:255 Mr 1 '47 550w

"As political reporting, the most interesting sections of the book are those which describe Finland under the armistice, Rumania under Soviet occupation, and Manchuria under Soviet control. In each case, avoiding sweeping generalizations, the author has gathered facts as widely as possible, and has let them speak for themselves. Until full and definitive information can be presented on these areas of international tension, the book should continue to be a valuable eye-witness account."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:17 Mr '47 200w

MOORE, BERNICE STARR. Art in our community. 186p il $3.50 Caxton printers

709.797 Art—Seattle, Washington 47-2653

"Devised largely for classroom usage, this describes Seattle and the various types of art it offers, with suggestions for study programs. The Bogue plan for Seattle's beautification in 1911 and why it fell through; what should be done for city improvement; industrial design, and what is being contributed by designers in many fields; Indian arts, and folk arts (whether weaving, toys, sculpture); the Seattle art museum with photographic reproductions and prose descriptions of what is to be seen; famous collections on exhibit—largely orientalia; native architecture. For schools, colleges and libraries within the area. For reference shelves on city planning." (Kirkus) No index.

"The volume is a worthy and stimulating exposition of the growth and expression of the spirit of art in an American city which has experienced a great and rapid material development. Business and beauty can go hand in hand."

+ Christian Century 64:1022 Ag 27 '47
270w

Kirkus 15:52 Ja 15 '47 120w

"Not exciting but sound."

+ Library J 72:529 Ap 1 '47 70w

MOORE, DAVID WILLIAM. End of Long John Silver; il. by Henry C. Pitz. 214p $2 Crowell 46-7686

"More about Long John Silver, 'as dastardly a villain as ever set foot on a shipdeck,' Jim Hawkins, and other characters from Treasure Island. A story of adventure on land and sea with pirates, bloody fighting, mutiny and hurricanes, against a background of the American Revolution." Library J

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '47
180w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 23:37 Ja '47 120w

"An action-packed story for boys. . . Excellent, vivid pictures by Henry Pitz are an integral part of this rousing story."

+ Kirkus 14:594 D 1 '46 90w

"Long John's reform and bravery end the book in a surprising but satisfactory manner. Well-written story for boys in the 6-7-8th grades. Sketches by Henry C. Pitz add to the story." J. E. Lynch

+ Library J 71:1809 D 15 '46 80w

"An exciting yarn, written in a style admirable in keeping with Stevenson's own, and boys and girls of 9 to 12 will like it." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p46 N 10 '46 140w

MOORE, IDA CECIL. Lucky orphan; pictures by Primrose. 122p $2 Scribner 47-2535

Story of a little lamb which, because it was one of two, was rejected by its mother. The little lamb is given into friendly hands and becomes the special charge of the faithful old sheep dog, Captain. After a year had passed old Captain died but by then Cynthia, the orphan, had a companion of her own kind.

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 My 25 '47
40w

"It is a gentle-spirited story, inspired by a love of animals, of country scenes and activities, of responsive and warm-natured children. It will be enjoyed by readers of the middle-age group and younger." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:217 My '47 70w

Kirkus 15:189 Ap 1 '47 90w

"Told in an easy, delightful style, this unusual story will appeal to the nine- to eleven-year-olds. Book is attractive in appearance, with appealing black-and-white pictures." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:737 My 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
My 11 '47 290w

"Though interesting in subject-matter and attractive in appearance, the book lacks plot and the human characters never quite materialize. The children, especially, wander through the story like shadows and speak in stilted little sentences obviously intended to inform rather than to entertain. Excellent black-and-white illustrations do much to clarify the vagueness apparent in some parts of the text." E. H.

N Y Times p41 My 4 '47 140w

MOORE, ROBERT E. Man alive in the greatest profession in the world. 216p $3 Harper 658.8 Salesmanship 47-31278

"Enthusiastic book on selling as a profession and its importance in American business.

Practical selling suggestions based upon service and showmanship, includes the experiences of many leading executives among whom are C. E. Wilson, O. C. Adams, David Sarnoff and T. J. Watson." (Library J) Index.

+ Booklist 44:163 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:383 J1 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1616 N 15 '47 40w

MOORE, THOMAS HENDRICK. Darkness is passed. 176p $2 McMullen

232.9 Jesus Christ. Roman Catholic church
—Devotions 46-8543

Twenty-seven meditations on the life of Christ. The author is a Jesuit priest who "selects a score of incidents in our Lord's public ministry to teach us the need of prayer and of penance, of the virtues of detachment, humility and meekness, of the love of God and the brethren, of the sacraments." (Cath World)

"This is no dry-as-dust meditation book, but a book eloquent of the author's own spiritual life."

+ Cath World 164:477 F '47 150w

"To the great over-all question: will people like this book; will they find it instructive, or helpful, or entertaining; this question the reviewer approaches in fear and trembling as he turns his eyes inward and essays the rôle of Everyman. For this reason I should like to mention that 'The Darkness is Passed,' a volume of 26 informal meditations on the Christian Life, has been made a selection of the Spiritual Book Associates. That means that competent critics have judged it profitable reading. Since they have liked it undoubtedly others will. But to me it seems that the many excellent thoughts in Father Moore's book are too disjointedly expressed, moving almost with a jerkiness that keeps the mind from fastening fruitfully on any one idea—which is the aim of meditation. The themes are too diffusive to leave the reader with any practical conclusions." L. J. Trese

Commonweal 45:101 N 8 '46 260w

MOORE, WARD. Greener than you think. 358p $3.50 Sloane 47-31071

Satirical novel about a super-fertilizer, the woman scientist who invented it, and the pushing little salesman who put it on the market and, disobeying his instructions, let loose a catastrophe on the earth.

Reviewed by R. M. Weaver

Commonweal 47:179 N 28 '47 750w

Kirkus 15:516 S 15 '47 160w

"Plot is wildly, entertainingly improbable, the characters interesting, the story well told but as difficult to describe or categorize as a Marx brothers comedy. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1470 O 15 '47 80w

"Mr. Moore tried too hard. . . The book, in fact, is very much like the grass it describes; it has vitality, movement, strength, and pace, but it never quite breaks over the barrier of automatism. There is hardly a comic device which has not been brought to its aid, but all the artifices of humor, however sewed together and stuffed, are not a clown—they are only his image." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
N 2 '47 550w

"Mr. Moore tries to accomplish far too much by encompassing the entire world. . . But even with such very grave faults and irritating pyrotechnics, the rampant grass is engrossing enough to make 'Greener Than You Think' a must for fantasy fans. It is a shame that the author's literary exhibitionism prevents his book from being a topnotcher in its highly specialized field." Theodore Pratt

MOORE, WARD—Continued

+ — N Y Times p14 D 7 '47 600w

Reviewed by James Edin

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47 70w

MOORE, WINTHROP P. Motorboats; their care and handling; il. from photographs and plans with sketches by the author. 390p $3.75 Dodd

797.125 Motor boats 47-446

"General study of motor boats and motor boating, what kind of boat to buy, how to handle and keep in repair and cost of maintenance. Chiefly concerned with motor cruisers but includes runabouts, launches and other types of boats. Chapters on motor boat engines." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 My '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:28 Ap '47

"Written with the beginner in mind, Mr. Moore's book should reach that large post-war group of Americans who seem bent on buying boats in the next few years. For them it will be an excellent reference book concerning costs, care, operation and the essentials of piloting, together with advice on how and what to buy and some assorted tips on yachting in general. It is also a good text-book for the experienced small-boat owner." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 19 '47 290w

MOOREHEAD, ALAN. Montgomery; a biography. 255p il $4 Coward-McCann

B or 92 Montgomery of Alamein, Bernard Law Montgomery, 1st viscount 47-30342

A biography of Field-Marshal, Viscount Montgomery, which is "the first attempt to tell the full story" of his life. The author "presents to his readers a life of Montgomery which he does not intend to be historically complete, but which ought to be historically accurate, if only because Montgomery is one of the very great men of this century. The story is set to the theme that the characteristics of the boy and the young man, Bernard Law Montgomery, led naturally and logically to the Field-Marshal, Viscount Montgomery." (Spec) Index.

Booklist 43:346 J1 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 8 '47 470w

Reviewed by DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 24 '47 650w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 46:411 Ag 8 '47 1050w

Foreign Affairs 26:230 O '47 30w

"A sympathetic and convincing picture of the evolution of a great soldier and a strange man. . . His disagreements, particularly with Eisenhower, over the conduct of the invasion of France and Germany are set out frankly by Mr. Moorehead, who gives no verdict, though it is fairly obvious where his sympathies lie. Perhaps he is a little too kind to Montgomery's administration of his zone of Germany after the armistice. But taken in the round this is a skilful and impartial picture of a fascinating career." E. A. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 29 '46 300w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 165:49 J1 12 '47 270w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 32:466 D 21 '46 950w

"In this book, as no doubt in fact, it is the desert campaign which is the great period of Montgomery's career. . . Mr. Moorehead gives more care to this period than any other and here draws his most illuminating picture of the Montgomery generalship in action. . . Afterward, the author is less detailed, or possibly more discreet; the controversial issues of Normandy and western Europe are not so well clarified." Walter Millis

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Je 1 '47 1100w

"This excellent biographical portrait by Alan Moorehead is the first full story of Montgomery's life to be published. This is not a final and definitive biography; it could scarcely be during the lifetime of its subject. But it is a thorough and clearly an authentic book, written with the fine feeling for style which characterizes Mr. Moorehead's work and with a sense of perspective and psychological interpretation. . . Mr. Moorehead's biography is a notable contribution to the character analysis of one of the complex and curious men of our time. It 'debunks' many of the Monty legends, but it presents a picture of a human being more interesting than the legends created around him." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p7 Je 1 '47 1600w

New Yorker 23:98 Je 14 '47 110w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 22 '47 450w

"The book suffers from disadvantages common to many initial full length biographies. The author has not been permitted access to all the pertinent documents, and he was obviously required to use with circumspection much material which he possessed. In his desire to avoid repetition of operational detail contained in his earlier volumes on the war, Mr. Moorehead omitted considerable information essential to the complete understanding of his subject. . . The most valuable and enduring parts of the book are to be found in the personal interpretations of the Field Marshal and his activities by an able newsmen who knew intimately General Montgomery and his staff." F. C. Fogue

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:11 Je 14 '47 1350w

Reviewed by A. R. W. Low

Spec 177:582 N 29 '46 750w

Time 49:96 Je 23 '47 800w

"Mr. Moorehead is the ideal popular biographer of this most interesting figure. First of all he had exceptional opportunities for observing his hero in action and for observing the reactions of other men to his doings and his ideas. Secondly, Mr. Moorehead is a vivid and occasionally a brilliant writer. And, thirdly, he has a mind like one of those small and enormously expensive cameras which we covet and cannot buy."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p599 D 7 '46 1050w

MORAN, MABEL (O'CONNELL). Underseas log. See Bushnell, E.

MORE, SIR THOMAS, SAINT. Correspondence; ed. by Elizabeth Frances Rogers. 584p il $7.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 47-4336

"The extant letters, most in the original Latin, a few in French or English, in chronological order, together with prefaces and pamphlets of literary or theological discussion, carefully annotated. Miss [Rogers] is head of the History Department, Wilson College." Current Hist

"This is a golden book and an honor to American scholarship." J. J. Reilly
+ Cath World 166:86 O '47 600w

"Miss Rogers has made a real contribution to the understanding of More by gathering his letters into a single volume where they may be read in sequence. Her annotation is thorough and competent, and the Princeton University Press has distinguished itself in the quality and style of the typography." W. S. Hudson

+ Christian Century 64:710 Je 4 '47 650w

"This book is a model of imaginative, inspired scholarship." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 46:435 Ag 15 '47 290w

Current Hist 12:583 Je '47 70w

"It is a beautiful book, illustrated by three full-page Holbein portraits and a drawing of the More Family, also by Holbein. While the book is an impressive tribute to scholarship, it is also an incentive to it, and can be recommended to the general reader who has any interest at all in Renaissance thought, the sixteenth-century humanists, the English Reformation or the political and social history of the time of Henry VIII. Finally, in these letters to his family, his friends, contemporary scholars and statesmen, we have the most complete personal record of the man whom many have considered the highest flower of the English Renaissance." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 117:30 Ag 18 '47 270w

"Dr. Elizabeth Rogers shows at his best in this volume, one of the richest, rarest, and best-rounded personalities of all time, who lived and loved and died 'the King's good servant but God's first.'" Anne Fremantle

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 10 '47 950w

Reviewed by Lynn Thorndike

Pol Sci Q 62:623 D '47 800w

"Historically there is little new, but it is a convenience to have the documents arranged chronologically without shuffling through the 'Calendar of State Papers.' And also, although the correspondence relating to More's trial and imprisonment are easily accessible, these letters deserve careful re-reading, especially in connection with Harpsfield's 'Life.' . . . After 400 years the ashes of these old controversies are now cold, but with only a little imagination the coals glow red. And for the opportunity to use that imagination we are surely indebted to Dr. Rogers." J. M. Berdan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 9 '47 950w

MOREAU DE SAINT MERY, MERDIC LOUIS ELIE, American Journey [1793-1798] tr. and ed. by Kenneth Roberts, Anna M. Roberts; pref. by Kenneth Roberts; introd. by Stewart L. Mims; front. painting by James Bingham. 394p $5 Doubleday

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 47-3941

The author of this journal was one of the French statesman and scholars who fled to America as refugees from the Revolution. This book covers the trans-Atlantic voyage, visits to various American cities, and an extensive account of the author's sojourn in Philadelphia.

Booklist 43:345 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 8 '47 400w

Reviewed by R. A. Brown

Christian Science Monitor p20 Je 14 '47 900w

"A work never before available in English, this should provide scholars and students of early America with source material of inestimable value."

+ Kirkus 15:184 Mr 15 '47 170w

"Able translated by Kenneth Roberts and his wife, this important work contains the usual diary fault of too much minutiae for sustained pleasurable reading, but is absolutely essential for every American history collection." H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 My 25 '47 1900w

"A man whose tastes were at once catholic and highly civilized, Moreau enjoyed—and was at times bewildered by—the sprawling pageant of American life, so unlike that of his beloved France. Moreau possessed a keen mind, sharp eyes and a facile pen. The sights and smells of American cities; the habits and customs of her citizens; her rich and varied countryside; her commercial, religious and social patterns; her crudity, bigotry and potential greatness; all this he saw and recorded. . . . Here is a cross-section of a nation in the process, to use Moreau's apt phrase, of being born." William Peden

+ N Y Times p5 My 25 '47 850w

"From Moreau's book you may get a remarkably precise picture of daily life in the U.S. of the 1790s, and not merely a precise picture but an extremely lively and entertaining one. From it also you will absorb an intelligent man's analysis of certain phases of the American character which are still present in the United States, in some ways even more firmly established than when Moreau analyzed them. For both reasons, this 'American Journey' of an observant Frenchman is well worth your while." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 6 '47 650w

Reviewed by Harry Hatcher

Sat R of Lit 30:21 Jl 12 '47 1200w

Time 49:105 Je 9 '47 800w

MORGAN, MRS BARBARA (SPOFFORD). Skeptic's search for God. 248p $3 Harper

201 Religion—Philosophy 47-4009

"Unlike most expositions of Christian theology, which generally start with Christian faith in God as a 'given,' this road-map for the skeptic begins at the other end, cautiously, critically, yet wistfully, like some mountain climber in the valley looking toward and heading for the summit. One chapter is devoted to 'The Barrier of Words,' but the most formidable barriers are not misunderstood words but misleading ideas. The three trails from which the author removes the barriers are the intellectual, the mystical and the moral. Admitting that the intellectual approach is 'most difficult and unrewarding,' she builds the road over the morass of materialism and the problem of evil, in which so many have been bogged down." (Christian Century) Index.

Booklist 44:28 S 15 '47

"When you pass through the jungle, be careful to break a twig so that the next man can find his way." This proverb from the heart of Africa expresses the spirit of this interesting and illuminating book for moderns. Although it will strengthen faith, it was not written for the timid soul nor for the saint confirmed in Christian convictions, but rather for the adventurous one, thinking and feeling and living his way through the known to the Divine Unknowable." C. D. Brodhead

+ Christian Century 64:1081 S 10 '47 700w

"Mrs. Morgan has a fine ability to put ideas into quotable sentences. I have read and re-read this book, underlining passages to quote in this review. There is not room enough to quote them here. But, after all, such quotations might spoil the rich experience of other readers who will gather from these pages the same kind of enjoyment and stimulation which has come to this reviewer." C. M. Bond

+ Crozer Q 25:78 Ja '48 1000w

"Mrs. Morgan is a distinguished scholar in her own right, as well as the wife of a prominent New York banker. She earned a PH.D. in Germany in the field of philosophy, and has won a reputation in this country as an expert in diagnosing and training backward children. In this book she proves herself to be a writer with an unusually facile pen, and a woman of keen spiritual insight. Her opening and introductory chapter on 'The Barrier of Words' is alone worth the price of the book. . . . This is a book to be highly recommended to the discerning reader."

+ Kirkus 15:306 Je 15 '47 160w

MORGAN, B. S.—Continued

"This record of thoughtful progress from scientific naturalism toward God, is worth reading. Mrs. Morgan is a person of keen intelligence who, desirous of tasting life to the full, has come to know that 'delight is keener, suffering is richer, thought is more exciting, love and friendship are deeper, steadier in the long perspective of God.' Her integrity is such, however, that she has not been able to accept religion merely because it gives a richer tang to life. . . . This is a book worth one's reading, for in it one sees how necessity drives the thinking and humble person from skeptical naturalism to something more profound." B. I. Bell

+ N Y Times p27 J1 27 '47 550w

MORGAN, CHARLES. The judge's story. 184p $3 Macmillan

47-5859

A philosophical novel in which the struggle between good and evil is recounted against a background of England in the 1930's. A retired judge, in order to save his ward's husband from prison, sells a much loved book to a wealthy, acquisitive fellow club member. When the book fails to arrive, the judge begs himself to meet the debt, but finds true happiness in his humble lodgings. When the acquisitive collector, symbolizing the power of evil, attempts to secure the judge's ward, it is the judge who wins once more.

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

"All in all, this is a rare contemporary novel maintaining standards in a field notorious for their absence."

+ Cath World 166:380 Ja '48 220w

Reviewed by Eric Forbes-Boyd

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 8 '47 500w

"A rather modest, certainly minor novel by an author of former major stature, this is for conservative, contemplative tastes."

Kirkus 15:407 Ag 1 '47 120w

"This book will test the number of readers of the contemplative novel in any community. It is, however, a good story and recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 30 '47 330w

"Mr. Morgan's persuasiveness, discrimination and serenity and the charm of his writing make 'The Judge's Story' a civilized and enjoyable book on its intrinsic merits as a novel. . . . Whether or not the reader agrees with the judge's answers to Vivien's concluding questions, he is likely to find 'The Judge's Story' distinctive and provocative."

Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 O 5 '47 800w

"Charles Morgan, author of 'The Fountain' and 'Sparkenbroke,' has written another remarkable novel. It combines a theme of absolute importance with a craftsmanship, and accomplished skill in story-telling, which is likely to make for considerable popular appeal. It is a book which not only deserves but—because of its quiet, intense drama—practically compels attention. Its special achievement is that it makes a very meaningful matter widely and absorbingly interesting."

Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p5 O 5 '47 700w

New Yorker 23:125 O 18 '47 120w

"Charles Morgan has written a wise and profoundly moving book. The judge's story is not his alone, but in essence all men's, being the story of spiritual values and of the dignity and integrity of the individual. And in this day of so much 'hard-boiled,' hasty, careless writing, it is good to come upon a polished and beautiful style, ordered without being mannered, with precision and grace and true distinction." S. H. Hay

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 O 18 '47 650w

"The Judge's Story is written with an admirable clarity, economy and restraint, a skilled performance from which the reader gets the same sort of mild pleasure as from being borne rapidly and smoothly along in a well-appointed and perfectly controlled limousine. What is it, then, about Mr. Morgan's writing which reminds one irresistibly and persistently of an Academy painting? . . . The characters, drawn with strokes too vague and general in outline, lack definition (except in the case of the judge), appearing not so much individuals as representatives of their class and kind. The general impression left upon me by The Judge's Story is one of a certain remoteness from living actuality." D. S. Savage

+ Spec 179:282 Ag 29 '47 450w

"In The Judge's Story, Morgan shunts his characters around to illustrate a problem which is too big for them, and too big for his novel: ' . . . The problem . . . of how, in the modern world, to remain civilized and free.'"

Time 50:116 O 6 '47 280w

"For Mr. Morgan the characters themselves are probably unimportant. He has been concerned primarily to declare his position in the old argument between the philosophical idealists and the utilitarians; to remind those who labour for the greatest good of the greatest number of 'Physician, heal thyself.' As a result he has written not so much a novel as a somewhat over-simplified manual of spiritual behaviour."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p437 Ag 30 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

MORGAN, CHARLES. Reflections in a mirror: second series. 224p $2.50 Macmillan 824 Literature—History and criticism

47-30158

A second collection of essays, chosen from the author's column in the London Times Literary Supplement, Menander's Mirror. For first collection see Book Review Digest 1945.

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Katherine Brégy

Cath World 165:88 Ap '47 350w

Reviewed by A. J. Green

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 16 '47 360w

"To this reviewer's mind, Charles Morgan is even greater an essayist than as novelist. He has a reflective quality (perhaps not implied in the title), a capacity for profound thought without boring solemnity, an ample scholarship without pedantry, and a command of style that lends charm to every paragraph."

+ Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 90w

Manchester Guardian p3 My 3 '46 240w

Reviewed by James Hilton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 16 '47 850w

"This book is the product of a cultivated mind. It concerns itself, sometimes in the perilous trust that sweetness will prevail, with the constant things. It is written with dignity and grace. Believing that style creates form and pressure, Mr. Morgan acts out his own mastery, not only in the turn of each sentence, the flow of such meditation, but also in the structure of the collection itself." D. A. Stauffer

+ N Y Times p4 F 16 '47 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 20 '47 170w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ap 19 '47 600w

MORGAN, CHARLES THOMAS. Fruit of this tree; with an introd. by Bruce Barton. 269p $2.50 Berea college, Berea, Ky.

378 Berea college

46-8498

"Charles Morgan is a Georgian who was graduated from Berea, served it as alumni secretary and later as director of admissions and has now presented it with his book, whose subtitle reads: "The Story of a Great American College and Its Contribution to the Education of a Changing World." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"In the closing chapters the author attempts the delicate task of interpreting what all this has meant through a series of brief case histories. By and large, he lets each story tell itself. The hardened reader may glance through these sketches unmoved, but if he does so he will never understand why teachers teach nor will places like Berea make much sense to him." W. G. Avirett

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 13 '46 360w

School & Society 65:269 Ap 12 '47 30w

MORGAN, DALE LOWELL. Great Salt lake. (American lakes ser) 432p il $3.75 Bobbs 979.2 Great Salt lake 47-2728

"Mr. Morgan relates the story of Great Salt Lake and its tributary area from the earliest geologic period to the present time. Necessarily, in doing so, he has supplied a summary narrative of the many exploring and trading expeditions, Spanish, British, and American, through whose combined activities the Great Basin was made known to the civilized world." (Editorial introd) Bibliographic note. Index.

"Dale L. Morgan knows the people of the Great Basin area. To those who love the Great Basin desert he has given a book packed with history, romance, geology, social conflict, religion, and speculation." El. D. Thomas

+ Am Hist R 53:127 O '47 700w

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

"Mr. Morgan writes with authority and controlled enthusiasm. In his long and meaty book, there is no page dull with the undigested and unassimilated fact. In this moody and mysterious lake, long withdrawn in mythic haze, Mr. Morgan has an engrossing subject. He does it fine justice. His is the most interesting volume of the American Lake Series which this reviewer has read." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 My 5 '47 600w

Kirkus 15:92 F 1 '47 110w

"Mr. Morgan's is the first book about Great Salt Lake in many years and, apart from a few limited monographs, the only authoritative one ever published. The requirements set by the series it belongs to handicap him somewhat, but he has succeeded in transcending most of the limitations thus imposed. Because he has transcended them and because Great Salt Lake is small and its human associations mostly of one piece, his book has a unity that makes it the best one in the American Lakes Series so far." Bernard De Voto

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 20 '47 1350w

"This fact-packed volume should be unusually interesting in Utah's centennial year. 'The Great Salt Lake' will assist the average reader, scholar and serious tourist to a well-integrated knowledge of the entire intermountain region's strange past, prosperous present and uncertain future. . . Unfortunately, the volume's map-makers fail to provide a map showing present-day highways by route number. Such a map, over-printed with a chart of pioneer trails so fully discussed, would prove a real asset." J. J. Goodman

+ N Y Times p26 Ap 27 '47 700w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p24 Je 8 '47 200w

+ Spring'd Union p5 Jl 21 '47 120w

"The treatment of Mormon history is admirably fair, and provides a substantial introduction to Utah history. For the scholar who wishes to use the volume as an aid to further study, the absence of references to quoted sources will prove annoying. The lack of such scholarly apparatus is, however, offset somewhat by the inclusion of a bibliographic note of eleven pages."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:281 S '47 250w

Wis Lib Bul 43:80 My '47

MORGAN, GEORGE CAMPBELL. Music of life. 57p $1 Revell

248 Christian life

47-16517

"This is a lecture by the popular [English] evangelist, first delivered in 1890, and seventy-two times since, but only recently published. It uses an original method of presenting a series of truths, making each the movement of a symphony, since he believes that man is God's greatest instrument for expressing the underlying music of the universe." Churchman

Christian Century 64:306 Mr 5 '47 30w

"It is all rather simple and obvious, which may account for its popularity." W. L. Caswell

Churchman 161:19 My 1 '47 160w

MORGAN, MICHAEL, pseud. of C. E. CARLE and DEAN M. DORN. Nine more lives. 217p $2.50 Random house

47-3525

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:178 Mr 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 8 '47 160w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 25 '47 150w

"Fairly obvious plot, more than offset by pace and unusual background. For once, the hero's marvelous escapes are credible, and no less marvelous for that." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 25 '47 80w

Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 31 '47 50w

MORGAN, MURRAY C. (CROMWELL MURRAY, pseud). Bridge to Russia; those amazing Aleutians. 222p $3 Dutton

917.98 Aleutian islands

47-4570

A popular history of the Aleutian Islands written by a former GI newsman. It covers the time from the period when the Aleutians first became important for their fur-production, down to the present day, and shows both American and Russian influence. Maps on end papers. Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 44:31 S 15 '47

"In the bleak, fog-bound Aleutian island chain, Mr. Murray Morgan has an admirable subject for his recent book. . . Unfortunately, he does his best to destroy the value of the work by the manner of its presentation. A strong, simple style would have conveyed effectively the past events in this desolate, storm-swept, no-man's land. . . Instead, the author adopts the medium of the clever, superficial brilliance, all too monotonously familiar in popular magazine literature—a style more fitted for Atlantic City than for Kodiak and Unalaska." Henry Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 9 '47 700w

"An all-inclusive, factual picture of a little known American outpost. A book for reference, chiefly."

+ Kirkus 15:253 My 1 '47 160w

"Recommended." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:1031 Jl '47 90w

"Over all, the book is skillfully designed to hold interest. It is a book about strange peoples and lands about which we thought we knew something but do not, and it is hard to lay down. The section on the Russian occupation is perhaps the most valuable. . . The book has flaws. As a writer, Mr. Morgan has yet to learn that Clichés are not necessarily substitutes for racy prose, and that puns, particularly weak ones, are inexcusable. As a historian, he has yet to learn that carelessness in details detracts from an otherwise accurate main picture. He kids history, as if distrusting the public's ability to take it without a beer chaser. He is at his best in the book's final section, about the war." Hector Chevigny

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Jl 27 '47 800w

MORGAN, M. C.—Continued

"The whole book is a fine piece of work from the standpoint of writing and for the information it gives."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 S 21 '47
100w

MORGAN, THOMAS BRYNMOR. Speaking of cardinals. 264p $3 Putnam

262.13 Cardinals 47-1261

"The author has become widely known as a foreign correspondent who has covered the Vatican twenty-seven years for The Associated Press, the United Press and the International News Service. During this time his acquaintance with dignitaries of the church has accumulated for him more material than newspapers would desire, or have the space to print. The overflow, mostly anecdotal, makes up this collection of chit-chat." (N Y Times) Index.

"During a period of unprecedented political and ecclesiastical developments this keen-eyed, open-minded and tactful journalist enjoyed a degree of intimacy with Church leaders rarely attained by an American newspaperman. Little wonder that he has been able to write four readable volumes . . . and that the new book, by means of personal anecdotes and small talk, throws light—helpful if indirect—upon more than one towering figure and upon several momentous questions."

+ Cath World 164:478 F '47 250w

"'Speaking of Cardinals,' which will be of interest to Catholics and non-Catholics, is written in true reporter style, but one can truthfully say when he has finished reading, 'I saw the Cardinals in their watermarked silk and ermine' and nothing more. It is a collection of sugar-coated nothings, patched together with invisible humor. The men, the noble hearts that beat beneath the silk and ermine, remain hidden from the eyes of even those who pay them the most homage." Emmett Regan

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 23 '47
400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Foreign Affairs 25:703 J1 '47 20w

"These personality sketches make pleasant reading. It is unfortunate, however, that certain inaccuracies, particularly in dates given, detract from the value of the book. . . Perhaps Mr. Morgan relied more on his memory than on an authoritative source of correct dates." R. J. Neufeld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
F 2 '47 750w

"A pleasant presentation of intelligent gossip about some of the great and near-great in Roman Catholic circles." Margaret Ford

+ N Y Times p14 Ja 12 '47 360w

MORGENSTERN, GEORGE EDWARD. Pearl harbor; the story of the secret war. 425p maps $3 Devin-Adair

940.542 Pearl harbor, Battle of, 1941. World war, 1939-1945—Causes 47-1121

"Mr. Morgenstern has been on the 'Chicago Tribune' staff since 1939 and an editorial writer and member of its editorial board since 1941. He has here thoroughly mined the immense record of the Pearl Harbor investigation to draw from it as black an indictment of the Roosevelt administration as the evidence can be made to support." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by C. V. Woodward

Am Hist R 53:188 O '47 400w

Reviewed by R. C. Snyder

Am Pol Sci R 41:1023 O '47 700w

Reviewed by O. J. Hale

Ann Am Acad 252:130 J1 '47 600w

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

"Mr. Morgenstern's book gives an orderly and carefully documented record of the events. It leaves no manner of doubt but that the administration was preparing for war when the public thought it was preparing for peace. The book will not put an end to the controversy, but it can be taken as a base line from which controversy may proceed intelligently if it must proceed."

+ Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47
210w

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 26 '47
550w

Current Hist 12:370 Ap '47 120w

Foreign Affairs 25:699 J1 '47 40w

"The book is, in sum, a massively documented lawyer's brief for a highly biased view of Pearl Harbor and the antecedent policy. As such it may have its place, but how Charles A. Beard could lend his greatly honored name to its endorsement as history is very difficult to understand. It is being advertised among former service men as telling them 'why you wound up in a jungle or found yourself unexpectedly on an atoll.' It would have been more frank to tell them that it is 'The Chicago Tribune's' idea of why they were asked to make those sacrifices; that it reveals few 'secrets' that have not already been extensively reported and debated in the press, and that there is nothing in all its documentation which compels them to take at face value its load of cynicism and bitterness." Walter Mills

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 9
'47 1650w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig

— N Y Times p6 F 9 '47 1350w

"The book is stern and righteous in tone, but the author's emotionally charged phrases—'secret diplomacy,' 'military intrigue,' 'personal ambition,' 'obscure motives'—aside from providing a pretty lesson in applied semantics, end up by giving an effect of frivolousness."

New Yorker 22:79 F 1 '47 160w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ap 20 '47
100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:80 My '47

MORGENTHAU, HANS JOACHIM. Scientific man vs. power politics. 244p $3 Univ. of Chicago press

320.1 Political science. Science. International relations A46-23

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"This book is difficult to understand and, once understood, more difficult to approve. This is a pity; for the little volume appears to be the product of deep sincerity, and the central thesis is in its simplest form probably acceptable to most, if not all, intelligent people. It is the way in which the thesis is developed that causes the trouble; and this by no means involves merely questions of form." R. K. Gooch

— + Am Pol Sci R 41:335 Ap '47 600w

"For all his contradictions and dubious doctrines the author appears to be groping for a more comprehensive conception of man and his social world than any now in vogue. But beyond noting the great variety of factors and the complexities that must figure in such a conception his contribution must be counted a meager one." Seba Eldridge

— + Am Soc R 12:236 Ap '47 600w

"Let there be no doubt about it, Dr. Morgenthau is widely read and full of learning. He argues certain points very well and he presents many apt quotations. . . It is unfortunate, however, that Dr. Morgenthau has not used his materials with more judgment and moderation. If he had proceeded calmly, objectively, and (dare we suggest?) scientifically, checking his assertions against his evidence, he would have presented a more effective argument." William Anderson

— + Ann Am Acad 250:135 Mr '47 850w

Reviewed by Hugo Sonnenschein

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 9 '47
250w

"Here is a brilliant, penetrating study of the critical inability of modern man to cope with political problems. The author, associate professor of political science at the University of Chicago, is gifted with genuine insight into the political thinking of the West and writes from long experience in Europe. . . The storm of protest this book will arouse will prove its incisiveness; the disappointment we find in its lack of constructive remedy will, at least, bring us to realize the nature of our tragedy." C. L. Willard

+ — Churchman 161:17 Mr 15 '47 310w
Columbia Law R 47:525 Ap '47 110w
Reviewed by Lyman Bryson
Ethics 57:215 Ap '47 1050w
Foreign Affairs 25:696 Jl '47 30w

Reviewed by F. L. Schuman
J Pol Econ 55:470 O '47 1250w

"In spite of the understandable overstatements, Professor Morgenthau's book with its highly readable eloquence remains a study to recommend for the much needed clarification of fundamental political thought." Hans Kohn
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
F 23 '47 1000w

"One of the most important works published in recent years, Morgenthau's brilliant and sparkling analysis of the relationship of contemporary fairy tales and myths to the field of social action will be also much resented and criticized. . . In the opinion of the reviewer, the book should be a required reading for all educators and also for all the good reformers who are determined that this world will 'never again' get involved in another world war." J. S. Roucek

+ School & Society 65:285 Ap 19 '47 550w

"Many inconsistencies, contradictions, partial truths, elaborations of the obvious, unfamiliarity with modern American sociology, social psychology, and even political science could be shown. Lack of space makes this impossible. All this brief notice can do is express the reviewer's opinion that the entire thesis is unproved and unprovable and the book is a verbalistic tour de force of pseudo-erudition." Read Bain

— Social Forces 25:473 My '47 850w

Reviewed by E. C. Lindeman
Survey G 36:702 D '47 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Je 21 '47 1950w

U S Quarterly BkI 3:72 Mr '47 320w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v. 1. The battle of the Atlantic, September 1939-May 1943; with an introd. on the United States navy between world wars, by Dudley Wright Knox. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 432p il maps $6 Little

940.545973 U.S.Navy. World war, 1939-1945
—Naval operations (47-1571)

This first volume, chronologically, of Captain Morison's history is the second in order of publication. It deals with defense of our own shores and ships from 1939-1943. Index.

Booklist 44:132 D 1 '47

"This report . . . should be read by all who are now interested in being students of the war which they won, and by all who would enjoy a brilliant, detailed, factual and sometimes picturesque story of the great war at sea. Ordinarily, an operations report is at best tiresome reading save for the specially interested. This book reads well." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 47:329 Ja 9 '48 700w
Current Hist 14:38 Ja '48 40w
Kirkus 15:528 S 15 '47 210w

"Morison's history is our best account of anti-submarine warfare waged for the protection of shipping, supply and troop transport. It is fortunate that a historian so faithful to his preparation of indexes, maps, charts and illustrations has undertaken this important work." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1609 N 15 '47 100w

"The narrative is often confused by the inevitable and unmanageable detail, but here it all is: the story of a largely unknown war that was absolutely vital to the waging of the better publicized wars which were fought beyond the seas which these men and these little ships kept open." Walter Millis

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 23 '47 1400w

Reviewed by H. W. Baldwin
N Y Times p7 D 7 '47 1350w

"Very well written and fully illustrated with maps and photographs."

New Yorker 23:142 D 13 '47 110w

Reviewed by H. C. Butcher
Sat R of Lit 31:13 Ja 3 '48 1400w
Time 50:114 D 1 '47 500w

MORISON, SAMUEL ELIOT. History of United States naval operations in World war II; v. 2. Operations in North African waters, October 1942-June 1943. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 297p il maps $5 Little

940.545973 U.S. Navy. World war, 1939-1945
—Naval operations (47-1571)

The first to be published, this is volume two of a projected 14-volume history of the United States navy in World war II. It covers the expeditions against French Morocco of November-December 1942, and the expeditions against Algeria and Tunisia in the winter and spring of 1942-1943.

"The purpose of the work was not to uncover and examine such broad questions. It was to tell a complex and technical story to a large audience, keeping in due relation the big far-ranging factors and the efforts of thousands of individuals. This balance has been so well kept that the sweep of great forces and the humanity of single acts of heroism and devotion do not obscure each other's value and meaning." William Reitzel

+ Am Hist R 53:81 O '47 750w

Booklist 43:252 Ap 15 '47

Bookmark 8:10 My '47

Commonweal 46:69 My 2 '47 30w

Current Hist 12:371 Ap '47 100w

Kirkus 15:22 Ja 1 '47 170w

"An important work of permanent value to libraries." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:317 F 15 '47 110w

"[A] shrewd and salty narrative." W. H. Hale

+ New Repub 116:35 Ap 7 '47 850w

Reviewed by Walter Millis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
F 23 '47 1150w

"This project and the companion project of the War Department are probably the most ambitious government-sponsored historical studies ever undertaken and are of a piece with the immensity of the war they are attempting to record. . . To describe this work as 'in no sense an official history,' as Mr. Forrestal does in his introduction, scarcely fits the picture—although the cautious disclaimer . . . is understandable. . . The arrangement permits a more flexible and readable style—and also a greater scope for interpretation, analysis and critique than does the Army method—and Morison's fourteen-volume project . . . becomes, as this first published volume clearly shows, an individualized project, bearing on many pages the subjective stamp of Morison, but on all of them the careful scholarship of the student." H. W. Baldwin

+ N Y Times p1 F 23 '47 1600w

"The author brushes aside any criticism of the political mechanics of our deal with the Vichy French in North Africa (he claims that Pétain secretly approved of Darian's collaboration with us) and, in short, sounds exactly the way the boys in Washington used to sound. The battle descriptions and the numerous photographs, however, are very good."

MORISON, S. E.—Continued

+ — New Yorker 23:99 Mr 1 '47 170w

"Professor Morison was an admirable choice to prepare such a history. An outstanding historian, he has been a sailor all of his life. . . In the preparation of this history he had the assistance of several trained historians and the cooperation of Naval personnel. Not content with reading reports and studying battle charts, Captain Morison participated in many of the more important actions. 'Either he or one of three officers on his staff,' according to his publishers, 'covered personally every major operation after 1942.'" R. A. Brown

+ Pol Sci Q 62:453 S '47 900w

"If this first instalment sets the pace for the entire series (which by all odds it should), then Dr. Morison is producing a remarkable contribution to American history and letters. Written with the calloused fingers of a sailor-man, it is an obviously honest account, and yet it is at times poetic as only a story of the sea can be." Scott Newhall

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 9 '47 1200w

"Overall the book is an excellent account of affairs in North Africa in the critical days when the Allies successfully shifted from defensive to offensive, and the complete series should justify the desire of the late President Roosevelt for a full and early account of the Navy's failures and successes." H. C. Butcher

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 Mr 29 '47 1100w

Time 49:113 F 24 '47 1300w

"Except for a few purple passages, which seem out of place in historical writing of this character, the story is told simply and well. The book is as interesting as it is instructive and will appeal to the average reader as much as it will to the historian. The fact that the reader may not always agree with the author's conclusions is no bar to thorough enjoyment of his work."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:167 Je '47 240w

"The book is satisfying both to the historian and to the general reader. It is carefully but unobtrusively documented and makes intelligent use of written and oral testimony as well as the author's own observation." T. C. Mendenhall

+ Yale R n s 37:156 autumn '47 900w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Old mandarin; tr. from the Chinese; with il. by Carl Rose. 120p il $2.50 Harcourt

811 47-30343

Light in tone, sometimes deeply pregnant of thought, this is a collection of short poems in a variety of meters and forms, dealing with personal and universal problems (but not exclusively Chinese).

"The Old Mandarin runs strictly true to form, which is to say that it is delightful in a light, frothy way; that its comments on the contemporary theme range from zippers to the atomic bomb. . . The wit is kindly, gentle, exasperated and pessimistic." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:121 Ag '47 180w

Booklist 43:314 Jl 1 '47

Christian Century 64:926 Jl 30 '47 150w

"Suitable for reading in a silly mood. Sometimes adroit, sometimes heavy going. Anyway, C. M. was having fun."

Christian Science Monitor p11 Jl 5 '47 60w

"Amazing—how quotable, how apt, Christopher Morley continues to be, in successive collections of his light verse."

+ Kirkus 15:303 Je 1 '47 90w

"As a mandarin he makes up poems; as Mr. Morley he translates them, adding a sly, bright touch, like the under side of a bird. Thus the mandarin is kept placid in the subconscious (he could make a lot of trouble if left untended) and Mr. Morley, expressed, is amiable and disinclined to muttering, melancholia, and other sports of the unfulfilled. As an end product the public enjoys the poems, which have the kind of wit, tolerance, objectivity, and sharp observation which mark a civilized, wise, and talented man." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 My 25 '47 750w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 11 '47 400w

Reviewed by David McCord

Sat R of Lit 30:36 N 1 '47 260w

MORLEY, CHRISTOPHER DARLINGTON. Spirit level, and other poems. 52p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

811

A47-1065

"Mr. Morley's little volume contains fifty-two small pages of verse, mostly of a scholarly facetious type, though there are one or two poems—like 'The Last Word,' which is about the atom bomb—in a more serious, though still in a consciously minor, vein." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p11 Ja 4 '47 420w

"Mr. Morley reverses the custom of the strawberry vendor: he puts his choicest products underneath. With the exception of the first poem, one of the best, 'Spirit Level' gets much better as it goes along, and could one make a selection from the later pieces, there would be, within the limits of the intention, little to express but praise. In the first part, however, the reader too often finds himself hating the sin though loving the sinner; in other words, being embarrassed that so pleasant a writer should at times seem almost to demand censure." Robert Hillyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 29:23 D 28 '46 800w

"When he seeks to be serious the adroitness which is so manifest in his lighter poems seems suddenly to desert him."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p143 Mr 29 '47 380w

MORLEY, SYLVANUS GRISWOLD. The ancient Maya. 520p il maps $10 Stanford univ. press

972.015 Mayas. Central America—Antiquities A46-6094

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"This is a fascinating as well as impressive book. That its deliberate ethnocentricity may, for the nonce, turn away some serious erstwhile admirers of the Maya is unfortunate, but they will return. This was a very unique civilization and its present exponent, though perhaps he 'doth protest too much,' is well qualified to tell its rich and complex story. For some four decades Morley has ridden the jungle trails, taken the miseries and beauties the bush can give, and steadily recorded the long story of an amazing people for both scientific and reading public. The present book with its lucid text, abundant maps, diagrams, tables, and inclusive, as well as striking, illustrations offers much more information to both." W. D. Strong

+ — Am Anthropol 49:640 O '47 3250w

Reviewed by H. J. Spinden

Am Hist R 53:92 O '47 950w

"The Ancient Maya will be widely read and accepted as a source of information by students in all fields of human history and culture. Viewed in this light, I regret that the existence of many controversial issues concerning the reconstruction of Maya history has been largely ignored in this book. . . Nevertheless, it is our good fortune that Dr. Morley, who is the greatest champion the Maya have ever had, has seen fit to summarize so well and so beautifully the results of his many years of patient research." G. F. Ekholm

+ — Atlantic 179:140 Mr '47 550w

Current Hist 12:152 F '47 100w

"This volume has been put together with imagination, without skimping, and at a very high level of scholarship. It is not so heavy or so long as it looks, for the type is large and the illustrations frequent. The writing is clear and simple. Every tool for understanding the material has been included. . . It is true that the illustrations hardly convey the high level of quality of the material, but their number and selection are excellent. This is, indeed, the very model of a popular book on a scholarly subject, written by an acknowledged expert, without compromise and without condensation." Elizabeth Wilder

+ Nation 164:663 My 31 '47 800w

Reviewed by W. S. Lynch

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Je 7 '47 800w

School & Society 65:447 Je 14 '47 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p541 O 25 '47 3800w

"This is the author's first attempt at a popular book, and he seems not entirely at home in this field of writing. The presentation is repetitious, and over-detailed in recital of unessential facts—which are often covered also by graphic tables; some explanations are so full as to be confusing. The layman must make a real effort in order to inform himself through this book; the scientist will find the lack of annotation unsatisfactory, and will wish for evidence to support numerous assertions. Within the limits imposed by its form and subject matter the book is, however, an excellent survey of the present state of knowledge of the Maya."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:125 Je '47 290w

"Morley's work may rightly be compared to Breasted's History of Egypt; all men wishing to know of ancient civilizations, must come to these books, whose usefulness is bound to endure for a full generation or more. It is perhaps not more than once in a century that one man can explore, codify, and write so fully the history of another, remote way of life." George Kubler

+ Yale R n s 36:560 spring '47 700w

MORRIS, DUDLEY HENRY. Peter and Patrick. [29p] il $1.50 Putnam

47-4721

"Young Peter, whiling away an afternoon, muses on all the fascinating careers open to him, embellishing them with a fine, free imagination. Whether he is thinking of being an aviator, a lion-tamer, big league baseball player or a G-man, the roles are all becoming to him, according to the spirited pictures, but in the end he defers his choice, preferring to stay 'just plain me.'" NY Times

Kirkus 15:463 S 1 '47 80w

"Recommended for large picture book collections that need variety." E. F. Clift
+ Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 70w

"Told in rollicking verse, his visions provide an amusing interlude for 5 to 7 year olds, who will enjoy superimposing their own images on the pictures of Peter's very active dream-life." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p20 Ag 17 '47 120w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:144 D 6 '47 90w

MORRIS, LLOYD R. Postscript to yesterday, America: the last fifty years. 475p $5 Random house

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century. U.S.—Civilization 47-11260

Historical study of the cultural and social aspects of life in the United States over a period of fifty years: 1896 to 1946. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Ben Kartman

Chicago Sun Book Week O 29 '47 550w

"The author's attempt to explain how the American optimism of a half century ago turned to pessimism is presented in a facile, ironical, superior fashion. Seldom has a critic enjoyed with greater relish the sport he makes of prominent figures. . . And so on through his colorful list of prominent Americans, Mr. Morris's sense of continuous amusement flags chiefly when he has to deal with the writers of the period; his perceptive literary comments are occasionally tinged with real touches of respect. Without a special sense of humor or interest in the period most readers will have difficulty persevering from start to finish without turning to other volumes for a respite, but in occasional, topical doses 'Postscript to Yesterday' is bright and entertaining indeed."

+ — Commonweal 47:102 N 7 '47 150w

Kirkus 15:498 S 1 '47 170w

"This is a fascinating book, urbane yet thoughtful and indicative of a critical spirit. Highly recommended." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 70w

"A shining book on a melancholy subject. . . This is patently a doleful subject, but a less doleful book on American history has never been written. Mr. Morris achieves the rather unusual effect of intermingling humor with genuine irony. The ironist always has wit, but not necessarily humor, and the average American humorist hasn't the foggiest notion of what irony is. To find them both in the same writer astonishes as well as cheers the reader. Also it arouses the suspicion that here is something beyond mere gaiety; possibly there is wisdom below this shimmering surface." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 O 26 '47 1800w

"Mr. Morris with great charm and often with real humor has displayed this growth of disenchantment along with resurgent faith on the American scene of the last fifty years. His book is itself a kind of enchantment. There is no other single volume that brings together quite as much of the vivid materials of art and life and thought of the last half century in America as Mr. Morris has here so winningly assembled, nor is there any other that makes our human dilemmas clearer. His style, incidentally, is at once warm and polished." Irwin Edman

+ N Y Times p1 O 26 '47 1850w

New Yorker 23:133 N 8 '47 140w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 30 '47 700w

"His writing keeps to such a high standard for ease and clarity that an old pedant may be allowed to notice one blemish repeated page after page, namely the excessive use of 'there was'. . . This mannerism, very common today, saps the vitality of verbs." Dixon Weeter

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:10 O 18 '47 1700w

School & Society 67:48 Ja 11 '48 20w

MORRIS, PERCY A. Field guide to the shells of our Atlantic coast. 190p il $3.50 Houghton

594 Shells

47-31408

Guide to the more common species of marine shells found on the North American east coast from Labrador to Texas. Tells how to empty and clean the shells, how to record finds, and gives a basic system of classification and identification by association. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 44:85 N 1 '47

"Mr. Morris's is a book to delight both the gatherer of sea shells and the conchologist. The illustrations, most of them in color, are outstandingly good and the descriptions of the shells are complete and lucid. For the amateur who knows a few shells by their common beach names, it would be helpful if, in this book, as in most others, the common name as well as the Latin one were used."

MORRIS, P. A.—Continued

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 29 '47 150w

Kirkus 15:382 J1 15 '47 120w

"Profusely illustrated with concise information, this book is a must. Format, being pocket size, is a further recommendation." J. F. Kennedy

+ Library J 72:1696 D 1 '47 50w

MORRIS, THOMAS NORMAN. Principles of fruit preservation; jam making, canning and drying. 2d ed 1938 il $3.75 Van Nostrand

664.8 Canning and preserving. Jam, Food, Dried [47-393]

"British book which discusses canning, drying and bottling of fruit, manufacture of jams and jellies, spoilage prevention and chemical treatment. Processes for vitamin preservation and storage of dried fruits are also included. Bibliography." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1934.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1039 J1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:31 Ap '47

MORSE, FREDERICK TRACY. Elements of applied energy. 44p il $5.50 Van Nostrand

621.4 Heat engines. Force and energy 47-3473

"College text, a basic concise course in energy including a general survey of thermodynamics and heat power. Includes rockets as heat engines, and a discussion of jet propulsion. Much use of cut-away type of illustrations." (Library J) Problems. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:39 Ap '47

MORSTEIN MARX, FRITZ, ed. Elements of public administration [contributors] James W. Fesler [and others]. 637p $6.65; to schools $5 Prentice-Hall

350 Public administration 46-8665

"This document contains four parts, each divided into from four to ten chapters, with three to six sections in each. The major topics, arranged in logical approach to the problems in public administration, are: The Role of Public Administration, Organization and Management, Working Methods, and Responsibility and Accountability. One basic theme runs through the entire volume, that of the importance of democratic governance for public management in all its ramifications." U S Quarterly Bkl

"It is as a text-book, rather than as a contribution to thinking about public administration, that the book must be finally tested; for the writers dedicate the treatise 'to our students, perpetual prompters of thought.' In spite of a certain abstruseness and repetitiousness, some evidence that the 'team' pulls in opposite directions at times, and an occasional indulgence in verbal pyrotechnics as each writer pursues some facet of management particularly attractive to him, the persistent student will leave the discourse with a clearer insight into a society run by public administrators." G. W. Rutherford

+ — Am Pol Sci R 41:351 Ap '47 800w

"This is a fresh and stimulating book, put together in a fresh way, written by fourteen fresh-minded men. . . This volume deserves a wider audience than the classroom. It should be helpful, interesting, and stimulating to the businessman (even if he was a frustrated bureaucrat during the war) trying to understand public administration in its broader context." C. S. Ascher

+ Ann Am Acad 250:139 Mr '47 440w

"The comprehensive melding of divergent views resulting from the age and experience of the contributors has been a real achievement; the usual contradictory or irreconcilable opinions appearing in a symposium of this sort are lacking. The arrangement is logical, the treatment of the various subjects meticulous, and the synthesis practical and thought-provoking."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:73 Mr '47 240w

MORT, PAUL R., and VINCENT, WILLIAM SHAFER. Look at our schools; a book for the thinking citizen. 115p $2 Ronald

370.973 Education—U.S. Education—Aims and objectives 46-7928

"Written for thinking citizens who are interested in learning what modern public-school education is endeavoring to accomplish." School & Society

"The average citizen looks at the American school of today with alarm in view of the many conflicting opinions expressed on the subject in the newspapers, periodicals and books. . . 'A Look at Our Schools' is an excellent book for him to read. It will clarify the changes and the transition of the schools of 1900 to the present educational program which seeks to adapt itself to the needs of this day and age. It deserves a wide audience including the parent, the taxpayer, members of the school board, and all employees of schools." D. W. MacDean

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47 330w

"A clear, vivid presentation. . . This volume should be of interest to all parents, school board members, citizens generally, and contains much of interest to professional educators. It is a small volume of a little over a hundred pages, very readable, and a timely contribution to the literature of the public school field." F. R. Morey

+ Crozer Q 24:276 J1 '47 500w

Reviewed by M. E. Mather

J Home Econ 39:658 D '47 100w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 20w

Reviewed by L. D. Crow

Survey G 36:642 N '47 60w

MORTON, CHARLES W. Dahl's brave new world. See Dahl, F. W.

MORTON, ELEANOR, pseud. See Stern, E. G. L.

MORTON, FREDERIC. The Hound. 257p $2.75 Dodd

47-11493

A young Viennese aristocrat, arrested by the Nazis and herded with others into a death train, relives the events of his life—childhood, adolescence, young manhood, his education, to the death of his mother and father. As he becomes aware of his own impending doom he arrives, too, at the goal of his philosophical gropings. The author is himself a political refugee from Vienna, now living in the United States.

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

Chicago Sun Book Week p11a D 3 '47 320w

Reviewed by M. L. Barrett

Library J 72:1470 O 15 '47 130w

"Mr. Morton's theme—the autonomous individual spirit, restricted by, and finally released from a rigid authoritarian structure—is one of significance and is maturely conceived, though its execution is occasionally marred by the author's virtuosity with adjective and adverb. A less ornate presentation would have been preferable, but despite that, the book is impressive, not only in itself but also for its promise of work to come from an author of twenty-two or three, writing in a language not originally his own." Richard Spinney

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 N 9 '47 320w

"The book has the stature and excellence plus the promise of still better work to come that all prize novels should (and so seldom do) have. Secondly, it is a stunning job to come from a youth of 22. There is a polish, a style, a feeling and respect for words unusual in a young writer." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p33 N 23 '47 500w

"Here is an interesting book. And what's more, here is an interesting young novelist. He will shed his mannerisms, discipline his talent, and learn that disorder must not necessarily be presented through disorder, nor complexity through over-eloquent abundance." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 D 20 '47 600w

MORTON, MRS KATHERINE G., and MORTON, E. E. Boys' guide to fishing. 96p $2 Greenberg

799.1 Fishing—Juvenile literature Agr47-6

Simple, direct instructions on how and where to fish, what tackle to buy, what bait to use, how to clean and cook the fish. Illustrated with many drawings in black and white and color. The publishers hint that tho the book is addressed to boys other members of the family should find it helpful and revealing. Index.

Booklist 43:276 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 8 '47 220w

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 8 '47 230w

"Mr. and Mrs. Morton have written a guide to fishing that is so practical and so filled with enthusiasm that it will make a fisherman out of almost anyone—young or old."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 Ap 19 '47 70w

MORTON, STANLEY, pseud of STANLEY and MORTON FREEDGOOD. Yankee trader. 343p $2.75 Sheridan

47-6234

Historical novel of pre-Revolutionary days in Connecticut. The hero is Nathan Turner, a sea captain whose dream is for wealth and power and who does not stop at trading in slaves. His rival is Francis Cowper, a fascinating man, but a scoundrel. The red-haired Lucia plays an important part in the lives of both men.

"This story has been written before, under various names, by such superior craftsmen as Kenneth Roberts and Van Wyck Mason. 'Yankee Trader' is different in one way, however: its hero never suffers any real reverse in fortune. . . Nathan Turner is not a very sympathetic hero, and when nothing worse than smallpox ever happens to him you find yourself not only surprised but disappointed." Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47 230w

"Historical fiction that scores the selfish rather than the patriotic interests in fomenting the Revolution, that competes with injections of sex, that manages a total of a rather solid story on a framework of facts. More perhaps of masculine rather than feminine interest."

Kirkus 15:293 Je 1 '47 160w

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w

MOSIER, RICHARD DAVID. Making the American mind; social and moral ideas in the McGuffey readers. 207p $3 King's crown press

372.4 McGuffey, William Holmes. U.S.—Civilization 47-5812

"A study of the basic pattern of ideas in the McGuffey readers as it reflects the role education has played in the development of American civilization. Indexed." (School & Society) Bibliography.

"Despite his somewhat forced attempt to interpret the moral and social statements of McGuffey's readers as illustrations of economic determinism, Dr. Mosier has produced a carefully documented, interesting book which contributes to an understanding of our culture, and from which educators, historians, political scientists, and sociologists will gain additional insight into the background of the culture of the United States." A. H. Hobbs

+ Ann Am Acad 253:245 S '47 470w

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

"I feel that the value of Mosier's work is somewhat lessened by the rather deadly learned seriousness of most of his writing, and by his evident lack of sympathy for much of his subject matter. But the method he has devised is truly valuable, and he has applied it with scientific thoroughness." J. T. Frederick

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 24 '47 500w

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 70w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman

Nation 165:706 D 27 '47 500w

New Repub 117:30 S 8 '47 270w

"Mr. Mosier says that during the composition of his book, in an effort to eliminate 'selective bias,' two persons worked independently, employing his array of definitions, and out of nine editions of the first reader they arrived at 'a correlation of eighty-seven' in statements relating to social conduct. . . There is certainly rich material in the readers, and significances classified in just such chapter headings as Mr. Mosier uses would be worth having. The book he has written gives us at least a digest, and one can get out of it the doctrine of McGuffey. Perhaps had one person worked independently of the stereotyped definitions, he might, in statements relating to the historical American mind, have just possibly achieved a correlation of a hundred." Perry Miller

N Y Times p4 Ag 3 '47 750w

"An interesting piece of work. From it you can learn a lot of things perhaps you'd never suspected about why you think as you do. . . Students, of course, will be the book's chief audience. But I shouldn't be surprised if enough general readers, who don't mind tackling a solid bit of work now and then, will find here a fascinating picture of how American ideas and American thinking got to be what they are." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 14 '47 750w

School & Society 66:176 Ag 30 '47 30w

"Making the American Mind is well written, and its physical makeup is a credit to the King's Crown Press. It will be of interest primarily to students of the development of our educational system and to other persons who are interested in our cultural history. Though not of immediate 'practical' usefulness to teachers and administrators, it should clarify their conceptions of the relations of the aims and materials of the schools to the larger educational process of inculcating in the young the values of a particular culture." R. E. Keohane

+ School R 55:621 D '47 1500w

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 180w

Reviewed by Alden Stevens

Survey G 37:34 Ja '48 550w

MOSS, HOWARD. The wound and the weather. 54p $2 Reynal

811

46-8684

A first volume of poems by a young American writer, whose poems have appeared in such magazines as Chimera, Accent, The Kenyon Review, The New Republic, and Fore-ground during the last six years.

Kirkus 14:589 N 15 '46 90w

Reviewed by Parker Tyler

Nation 165:79 J1 19 '47 500w

"Mr. Moss works well within a small area of strata and sub-strata; but his poems are apt to be passive, the imagery static rather than expanded with progressive dramatic intensity. He is often at his best when his themes draw, on occasion, from a specific scene." Ruth Lechlitner

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27
Ap 20 '47 600w

"At his best, Mr. Moss can preserve the memory and the implications of a moment in a striking and apposite image. At his worst, he seems to choose the first word or phrase that comes to his mind—too often one of the fashionable, half-intelligible clichés that pepper wide areas of contemporary poetry. He is often content to clothe his amorphous conceptions in what Mark Twain brilliantly called 'the right word's second cousin.' To term the resulting vagueness 'surrealist' (I quote from the dust-jacket) is to be merely disingenuous." Milton Crane

— N Y Times p33 Mr 16 '47 180w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47
20w

"The wound is real if, by chance, the reader, like the reviewer, regards language as a trust rather than a toy. It is both possible and permissible to describe the irrational in rational terms, but to make language the mirror of the irrational is to betray man's divine reason on which, despite his historical lapses from rational action, he must and can build, even without theological assumptions." J. S. Untermyer

Sat R of Lit 30:35 Ap 26 '47 320w

MOTLEY, WILLARD. Knock on any door. 504p $3 Appleton-Century

47-3104

Realistic story of a Chicago boy whose early tendencies towards decency were slowly beaten down by his contacts with life along Chicago's streets—among the poolrooms and honky-tonks. Nick Romano had good friends who tried to help him, but fate and sometimes the law were against him. He turned killer and died in the electric chair.

"The opening section is slow, a methodical case history of juvenile mischief leading inevitably to the reform school, which corrupts instead of reforming; and because this subject has been covered time and again in the past dozen years, these chapters have an effect of repetitiousness. . . The women characters are all stereotypes. The author occasionally wobbles into sentimentality. What remains, when these matters have been dutifully pointed out, is a truly remarkable first novel." P. L. Adams

+ — Atlantic 180:126 J1 '47 600w

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

Cath World 166:286 D '47 60w

"Here is a book to jolt and shock you, to impress you with its mightiness and power, a book that will reach out for your heart and your mind and your emotions and grip them tightly until you have read every last one of its 240,000 smashing words." Herman Kogan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 11 '47
650w

"Mr. Motley's documentation is impressive. His descriptions of the wretched neighborhoods of Chicago are as fine as anything on the subject. Anything so voluminous makes peculiar demands on sostenuto in the writing and in the feeling: for the most part, Motley is up to his job. I suggest only that he has a tendency occasionally to overwrite and to use a lot of fireworks borrowed from other writers; the more regrettably, because he doesn't need to demonstrate his mastery of the recognized tricks, he can get along without them." Henry Rago

Commonweal 46:359 Je 25 '47 420w

"Its an absorbingly interesting book; its vulgarities, while they shock, are integral to the scene. The period—more or less contemporary—leaves us no 'out' that conditions are better. One character after another rings true, none are drawn in sharply black and white terms. And—in final analysis—the law, from top to bottom, seems a travesty of what 'justice' it seeks to interpret. A book sure to cause controversy wherever it is read; let's hope that very controversy will make people read it."

+ Kirkus 15:79 F 1 '47 230w

"The compulsion to crime, not always quite clear, is cumulative and, in general, convincing. Dramatic and well-sustained. The trial scene is excellent. Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:734 My 1 '47 100w

"Motley in creating this monumental work, employs a technique not unlike that of Theodore Dreiser. Immediately one compares it with An American Tragedy. But there is a greater artistry here, more sensitivity to the trials of the human personality and more richness of detail and description. A super-craftsman, Motley has for years engaged in detailed research and the observation of the life around him. The wealth of material and the writer's great compassion for the human spirit are unequalled in anything that has been produced on the Chicago scene. The book will be disturbing to most readers. Some may be repelled by the sordid lives it portrays, but none can come away from it without a feeling of sympathy for the Italian youth turned gangster." H. R. Cayton

+ New Repub 116:30 My 12 '47 1150w

"The novel is a substantial achievement by a new writer whose work is sure to be noticed and carefully evaluated. It is equally certain of becoming the subject of angry disputes, harsh denunciations, choruses of praise, and some other diversities of opinion. The book deals with graphic material, some of it strong enough to curl your hair. While Mr. Motley handles it all with considerable restraint, he offers no comfort whatever to the complaisant reader. There is a relentlessness and insistence here that can't possibly be brushed aside." Ann Bontemps

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 My
18 '47 1000w

"Let it be stated at once: an extraordinary and powerful new naturalistic talent herewith makes its debut in American letters. But let it be added immediately: Chicago's Mr. Motley has a deal of graduate work to do in literature's school of realism before attaining all the honors of his craft. His resemblance to Farrell, and especially to Dreiser, is striking. . . 'Knock on Any Door' achieves a powerful, although rude, vitality. It will absorb the individual reader as it will challenge society to mend its body and soul. Motley is one of the finds of the year." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p3 My 4 '47 800w

"There can be no doubt about Mr. Motley's four-square honesty or the social importance of his bitter, violent novel. He is, however, neither a subtle nor an imaginative writer, and in making his case against society he has given us a grim sociological history without sufficiently illuminating the complex nature of his pitiful hero."

+ New Yorker 23:101 My 24 '47 180w

"'Knock At Any Door' is no flash in the pan. It is a serious, mature piece of work. . . It is a first novel in which both the author and his publishers may take pride." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 10 '47
950w

"'Knock on Any Door' naturally invites comparison with 'Native Son.' For this reader, at any rate, the comparison is all in favor of the newer work. Not only is Nick Romano a far more complex and more winning protagonist than Bigger Thomas, but the minor characters (although in Mr. Motley's book, too, they serve as little more than foils to the central figure) have a credibility lacking to many of Mr. Wright's. Mr. Motley is perhaps even more successful than Mr. Wright in persuading the reader that the criminal was the victim of society before becoming its foe, because he is so much less savage in his indictment." M. B. Hexter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 My 24 '47 750w

"Mr. Motley devotes a large part of his story to an impressionistic account of Romano's trial, in which the whole proceeding is treated satirically. While this is well done, the hero is practically lost amid the antics of the attorneys." Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 170w

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 Jl '47

"A powerful and terrible novel. . . But writers like Mr. Motley emphasize the weak who succumb to [handicaps], rather than the decent and strong who do not become criminals. And they forget that no man ever becomes a murderer through no fault of his own. Nevertheless, Mr. Motley is a good sociological reporter and a good storyteller. His novel is vile and violent, but it moves fast. And it is obviously fiercely honest." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 36:765 summer '47 900w

MOTT, FRANK LUTHER. Golden multitudes, the story of best sellers in the United States. 357p $5 Macmillan

016 Bibliography—Best books. American literature—History and criticism. English literature—History and criticism 47-11742

History of American best sellers from The Bay Psalm Book thru The Egg and I. In forty-five essays the author considers this study against the chronological background of book distribution from Colonial days until the present. Lists the best sellers. Index.

Booklist 44:128 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Emmett Dedmon

Chicago Sun Book Week Ja 1 '48 450w

"Because of its subject matter, Dr. Mott's book on best sellers is likely to become by far the most popular publication in his series. . . The book lover will enjoy meeting many old friends here, however strange the company they may be keeping." W. F. Swindler

+ Christian Century 65:18 Ja 7 '48 550w

"There's provocative information in these pages, little anecdote, biographical material, critical appraisal. The overall serves as a springboard for understanding 200 years of American publishing. Useful for reference, with appendices."

+ Kirkus 15:387 Jl 15 '47 120w

"Treatment is scholarly, but popularly written, witty, urbane, thought-provoking, and not dogmatic. Its broad appeal will attract specialists and scholars, the general reader and student, and, by all means, members of the book trade and librarians." F. W. Stewart

+ Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 100w

Reviewed by Malcolm Cowley

New Repub 117:25 D 22 '47 2800w

"Frank Luther Mott has brought to his study a sense of humor and a graceful, easy writing style that makes pleasant and interesting reading of what might have become dusty detail. Perhaps that's why his previous work, a history of American magazines, was awarded a Pulitzer Prize." Aaron Sussman

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 N 30 '47 100w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 30 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. L. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 30:31 N 29 '47 1600w

School & Society 66:367 N 3 '47 20w

Reviewed by Charles Honce

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 800w

"It is doubtful if there has ever been assembled anywhere such a comprehensive list of such complete irrationality, so many ridiculous scenes and characters, so much solemn nonsense and so much moralizing, posturing and ham acting as in Frank Luther Mott's account of the books which the U.S. public has purchased by the millions."

— Time 50:110 N 17 '47 950w

Wis Lib Bul 43:171 D '47

MUCHNIC, HELEN. Introduction to Russian literature. 272p $3 Doubleday

891.709 Russian literature—History and criticism 47-4415

The author, a Russian-born scholar, is professor of Russian literature at Smith college. The first section of the book is a study of Russian folklore. Then follow studies of the following Russian writers: Pushkin, Gogol, Turgenev, Dostoevsky, Tolstoy, Chekhov. The book stops with the turn of the century. No index.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 1 '47 650w

"Intelligent interpretation, rather than subtle critique, this is a balanced objective introduction to this field of letters particularly suited for study and reference."

+ Kirkus 15:184 Mr 15 '47 140w

"Useful and attractive volume [for] the small shelf of good books on Russian literary history. . . Book is full of fine observations; characteristic quotations from masterpieces help to illustrate author's statements. Strongly recommended for public and college libraries of any size." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 130w

"Professor Helen Muchnic, of Smith College, has chosen six writers as the framework for an exciting study of the relations between literature and national character. Her book is an 'introduction' only to those who have already read the novels, plays, poems and short stories written in this great creative outburst. And for them it is also an extremely suggestive and enriching study, full of clues to an understanding of what kind of people Russians are." Joseph Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 22 '47 800w

"Dr. Muchnic of Smith College has made a contribution that would be more valuable if it showed a more disciplined awareness of the function it is intended to serve. . . Its point of view might be described as conventionally romantic and capriciously feminine. . . Her book is best when it synthesizes the lives and work of her six lonely alps. There she renders a service to students beginning their acquaintance with this extraordinary literature which, since it is easily among the world's best, must be assimilated by all would-be world-citizens." Gerald Sykes

+ — N Y Times p4 Je 29 '47 650w

"A first-rate work of literary criticism." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 23:72 Je 21 '47 2000w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 24 '47 120w

"The author's whole critical pattern of thought is obscured by overwriting, but if one takes the chapters separately, each, with the exception of the one on Turgenev, is a self-contained unit of literary interpretation that informs and illuminates the subject treated. Professor Muchnic's approach is fresh and original. She has done her own thinking on these masterpieces of Russian literature, and her wide-ranging knowledge of French, English, and American literature has enabled her, through pointed contrasts and comparisons, to make these Russian writers and their works more understandable and meaningful to American readers." E. J. Simmons

MUCHNIC, HELEN—Continued

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:29 Je 21 '47 950w

MUENCH, JOYCE ROCKWOOD, ed. West Coast portrait. 168p $5 Hastings house 917.9 Pacific coast—Views 47-650

In some 250 pictures: etchings, wood engravings, lithographs and photographs, done by fifty artists, the western coast of North America is followed from California to Alaska. The introduction gives a brief historical outline of the region.

"The best work with regional flavor, done by the artists of the Pacific Coast. A stunning book, and beautifully made."
+ Kirkus 15:96 F 1 '47 90w

"Some of the pictures are in four colors; all have been reproduced with gratifying clearness and depth; the result is an experience in itself. Here are mountains and deserts, architecture of old time and of a vigorous present, harbors, cliffs and cascades, totem poles, great cities and oases studded with palms."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 F 23 '47 250w

"No one could put together a book of this kind without omissions, and there are some here. Omissions in the picture section I shall not mention; no reader can possibly be entirely happy with any book that doesn't show his own favorite scene, and of course no picture book can possibly do that. . . It's a handsome piece of work which fulfills its purpose excellently, and it doesn't take much imagination to see thousands of copies moving eastward with returning visitors who want to take home with them some tangible record of the beauties they have seen in the West." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 9 '47 850w

MUENCH, JOYCE ROCKWOOD, and MUENCH, JOSEF. Along Sierra trails. 101p il $2.50 Hastings house

917.948 Kings Canyon national park, California 47-4569

Over 140 photographs, accompanied by brief descriptive text, depicting scenes on the highways thru the canyon of the South Fork of Kings River in California.

"Fortunately, there are more pictures than text; unfortunately, many of the photographs, beautifully reproduced in gravure, lose much in reduction to fit the format." P. J. C. Friedlander

+ — N Y Times p19 Jl 20 '47 90w

"Magnificent little book." D. L. Morgan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 S 20 '47 70w

MUIR, PERCIVAL HORACE. Book-collecting as a hobby; in a series of letters to everyman. 181p il $3 Knopf

010 Book collecting 47-31447

Advice for those who want to collect books, but do not know where and how to begin. The advice is given in the form of letters. Contents: How to begin; What shall I collect; How to tell a first edition; How to tell if a book is perfect; How to judge values; How to transform mountains into mole-hills; How to read a bookseller's catalogue; A short history of book production. Recommended books. Index.

"It is a joy to see an addition to the small number of really worth-while books on a subject that has, unfortunately, inspired an incredible quantity of mediocre ones." G. T. Goodspeed

+ Atlantic 181:128 Ja '48 330w

Booklist 44:99 N 15 '47

"P. H. Muir, a well-known antiquarian bookseller in England, and a respected name among bibliophiles both here and abroad, has written a valuable primer for would-be collectors." Bruce Colen

+ N Y Times p34 D 7 '47 220w

"It would be hard to find a book of corresponding size that gives more or better information, but the studied charm of the letters might make you wonder if the volume is worth musing through." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '47 90w

School & Society 66:384 N 15 '47 10w

MUKERJEE, RADHAKAMAL (RADHAKAMALA MUKHOPADHYAYA). Races, lands and food; a program for world subsistence; introd. by Harold L. Ickes. 107p $2.25 Dryden

338.1 Food supply. Emigration and immigration. Regional planning 47-2175

"Mr. Mukerjee explores the difficulties confronting any attempt to bring prosperity and a higher standard of living to the peoples of Asia, whose present condition constitutes a standing threat to world peace." (Foreign Affairs) His suggestion is that there are huge unpopulated areas in tropical and subtropical lands. Hindus and Chinese are suited for settlement in these lands, and should be allowed to settle there, and increase the world's food supplies. The author is a professor at Lucknow university.

Reviewed by B. W. Aginsky

Am Anthropol 49:483 Jl '47 1100w

"It contains a large quantity of factual and statistical data. It arouses one's sympathy for the underfed millions of Asia. Nevertheless, it is a futile performance. It is essentially a plea for free migration of India's surplus to the thinly populated areas of the globe under the guise of a 'program for world subsistence.'" F. H. Hankins

+ Ann Am Acad 251:204 My '47 480w

"His analysis is scientific and his case, for suggested reforms in policy is persuasive."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:696 Jl '47 40w

Reviewed by E. S. Craighill Handy

Social Forces 26:226 D '47 800w

MULDER, ARNOLD. Americans from Holland. (Peoples of America ser) 320p il $5 Lippincott
325.2492 Dutch in the U.S. 47-11821

History of settlers from Holland who have come to this country from colonial times to the present. Considers their background, problems of the Dutch temperament, and their contributions to American culture. There is a brief Dutch who's who; a bibliography; and an index.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

"A good, documented picture . . . but [the author] is also filled with a 'mystique' of racial cultures, blood strains, instincts and unconscious impulses to which he ascribes such diverse elements as literary genius and geographic exploration. To add to the occasional confusion, he constantly uses the word 'race' in a way approved by Webster but certainly frowned upon by modern anthropology. . . The best and by all odds the most thoughtful section of the book is that dealing with the stream of mass migration occurring during the middle of the last century." Dola de Jong

+ — N Y Times p27 Ja 11 '48 650w

School & Society 67:48 Ja 17 '48 10w

MULHERN, JAMES. History of education. 647p $4.50 Ronald

370.9 Education—History 46-2996

"In [this work] by James Mulhern, associate professor of education at the University of Pennsylvania, 'the emphasis is placed on social thought, social institutions and their evolution as conditioning educational thought, educational practice, and educational change.' Written for undergraduates, it contains detailed information, especially on primitive and Oriental education, not usually found in other textbooks." School & Society

"Probably the main reason for the ambiguous impression one receives from Mr. Mulhern's book lies in the fact that he has not found the right middle way between the desire for clarity on the one hand, and the desire for completeness on the other. The desire for clarity causes him to write the whole work in sentences of such syntactical simplicity and shortness that the style loses all individuality and rhythm. . . The desire for completeness drives him to overcrowd the book with terms and names which either should be explained more fully or not mentioned at all. This defect is all the more deplorable as the author, in his inviting introductory chapter, 'The Point of View,' expounds theories about the history of education, which, if they had been practiced effectively, would have provided the basis for an excellent book." Robert Ulrich

Am Hist R 52:708 J1 '47 550w

"The material on society and education under dictatorship is far superior to the rest of the volume, which suffers from confusing organization, profusion of dates, and nonidentification of individuals mentioned for the first time. There are some minor faults, such as mistranslations and questionable selections of sources. The questions for discussion, the bibliographies, and the index compensate somewhat, however." W. W. Brickman

+ — School & Society 65:311 Ap 26 '47 270w
Social Studies 37:335 N '46

MULLER, MRS CHARLOTTE FELDMAN. Light metals monopoly. 279p $3 Columbia univ. press

338.82 Aluminum, Magnesium, Trusts, Industrial A46-6177

"Following an introductory analysis of the market for light metals, the production and control of aluminum from raw materials to fabrication are analyzed in detail; much important descriptive and technical data is presented. Emphasis is placed upon the growth of monopoly and of monopoly power in the aluminum industry through a combination of semi-fortuitous circumstances, patent rights, inherent factors, and overt acts in restraint of trade or in suppression of competition. . . The significant wartime developments in the two industries are presented in an illuminating chapter entitled, Command Performance: Light Metals in the War. The volume ends with a lengthy and useful discussion of the government's share, and of public policy in the past, in relation to possible lines of regulation in the future." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index

"This is a valuable case study of monopoly and cartel practices. The book is indifferently organized and, partly for this reason, unduly repetitive. But the assembly of pertinent facts is comprehensive and meticulous." K. E. Knorr

+ — Ann Am Acad 251:192 My '47 410w

Reviewed by D. H. Wallace

J Pol Econ 55:582 D '47 750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:50 Mr '47 320w

MULLER, HERBERT JOSEPH. Thomas Wolfe. (Maker of modern literature) 196p $2 New directions

B or 92 Wolfe, Thomas 47-11790

"Critical study in the Makers of Modern Literature series. Author teaches English at Purdue. His essay includes an analysis of the novels, sufficient information about Wolfe's life (from personal acquaintance, in part) to identify autobiographical references, and a judgment as to Wolfe's place in American life and letters. He concludes that Wolfe, despite obvious faults as a writer, was one of the great American mythmakers, 'our closest approach to a Homer.'" (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"In this book Herbert Muller states the case for Thomas Wolfe; and he states it well. . . Fully conscious of serious deficiencies in Wolfe, Muller will not accept the stand of critics who say that the writer's editor was his finest artistic tool, and he points out many examples to show that Wolfe was the important person in the making of the finished works which bore his name. And he insists that these books represent some of the most important contributions to our literature." George Miles

+ Commonweal 47:231 D 12 '47 1150w

Kirkus 15:645 N 15 '47 160w

"An important addition to a useful series." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:1538 N 1 '47 100w

"Is Wolfe really the blundering, brilliant mountaineer hopelessly confused by the world of fashion? In so many ways he seems to have been just the arty young man he despised, and perhaps there is more Greenwich Village in him and less North Carolina than he realized. . . The best parts of Muller's book are those that show simply and without apology his enjoyment of Wolfe's art." Elizabeth Hardwick

Nation 165:652 D 13 '47 1100w

Time 51:78 Ja 5 '48 800w

MULLIN, WILLIAM F. You can draw anything! 125p spir pa $1.25 Winston.

741.07 Drawing—Instruction 47-5950

Step by step instructions, with line illustrations, show how to draw birds, animals, buildings, fruit, flowers, and figures.

"Really touches the imagination and stimulates new desires to make pictures." M. B. King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week D 27 '47 30w

Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 30w

MUMFORD, LEWIS. Green memories; the story of Geddes Mumford. 342p il $3.50 Harcourt

B or 92 Mumford, Geddes 47-31499

A memoir of the author's son, who was killed during the Italian campaign when he was only nineteen. It is a straightforward story written with no attempt to glamorize or sentimentalize.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

Reviewed by C. W. Roberts

Chicago Sun Book Week p15A D 3 '47 100w

"From the spirit and mind of a father writing of his dead son comes a biography which will move the hearts and minds of parents everywhere. The parents of the dead, especially when death came in the flowering of youth, will have 'green memories' revived, gain faith that it was worth it, share consolations in mutual grief. The parents of the living will find love for their children quickened, concern deepened, resolution strengthened." Emerson Hynes

+ Commonweal 47:235 D 12 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:563 O 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 7 '47 700w

"The tone of 'Green Memories' is affectionate and restrained. It is a sunlit book; indeed, if there is any truth in the Greek saying that those whom the gods love die young, one might say it is a happy book. It should be of consolation to others who have lost their sons." Robert Hilleyer

+ N Y Times p7 N 9 '47 500w

MUMFORD, LEWIS—Continued

"There is a dignified grief beneath Mr. Mumford's calm and deliberate sentences, a grief the reader cannot help sharing over the loss of a young man of Geddes Mumford's quality and promise. A remarkably fine biography."
+ New Yorker 23:136 N 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Mumford has written no sentimental idyl of a brief flowering. He has made live a personality with all of its contrasting moods."
Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 11 '48 420w

"A warm, intimate, moving picture of a human being emerges from the pages of 'Green Memories,' Lewis Mumford's biography of his son. It is a completely different book from Mr. Mumford's scholarly, carefully researched studies of society. . . . Yet Mr. Mumford has avoided all the dangers which might have marred a father's biography of his only son; the book is never sentimental, never embarrassing, never overdrawn." Merle Miller
+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 D 13 '47 650w

MUNDEL, MARVIN EVERETT. Systematic motion and time study. 232p il $4; to schools $3 Prentice-Hall

658.542 Motion study. Time study 47-1112

"Textbook on principles of work analysis, the human factor and time study technique, conclusions reached from research at the University of Iowa, personal experience and applications of motion and time study to naval operations. Includes stop watch study and synthetic times—standard time values based on stop watch studies of jobs, micromotion study and operation charts. Visual aids, charts and problems. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:285 My 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 70w

MUNRO, WILLIAM BENNETT. Government of the United States; national, state, and local; 5th ed, with the collaboration of Arnold J. Zurcher and Edward M. Sait. 887p $4.50 Macmillan

342.733 U.S.—Politics and government 46-20708

"The purpose of this book is to provide a general survey of the principles and practice of American government. . . . For this fifth edition the text has been almost entirely re-written. Some new chapters have been added; a considerable amount of fresh material has been incorporated, while the emphasis has been shifted in keeping with the new political and economic orientation of recent years. The lists of bibliographical references at the close of each chapter have been rearranged and extended." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 43:189 F 15 '47

"This textbook in earlier editions has received wide popularity in college teaching; the present edition should enhance its past record of service in classroom instruction for training social studies teachers as well as in the general education of all teachers." P. R. Grim

+ Social Educ 11:186 Ap '47 220w

MUNSTERBERG, MRS MARJORIE (BOWEN). The last leaf, by Peggy Munsterberg. 253p $2.75 Dial press

47-18970

Character study of a New England spinster, the last member of a fine old family. Martha Peele was past forty when her mother died and she was free of domination for the first time in her life. During the first year or so she made some attempts to change her ways of living but in the end, defeated, she returned to her former ways, placing herself under the supervision of an old servant, who seemed the re-incarnation of her mother.

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 23 '47 190w

"'The Last Leaf' is wise and objective and fair to both sides in a clash all the more effective because it is not strident. It introduces an author of definite gifts." George Conrad

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 30 '47 290w

"This is a first novel of no small merit and distinction, an absorbing, sensitive dissection of a middle-aged woman's attempt to free herself from the past and live creatively in the present. In broader strokes it is the timeless problem of the overdominated, frustrated and genteel spirit unable to cope with the realities of the world." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p16 Mr 16 '47 330w

"The author knows well the bleakness of the life and persons she chronicles and the changing moods of the lovely Rhode Island landscape that surrounds them. She writes well, and many a perceptive observation enriches her story. That the story itself is one of frustration, disturbingly unpleasant at times, does not obviate the fact that it is ably presented." Grace Frank

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 My 3 '47 320w

MURCHIE, GUY. Saint Croix, the sentinel river. 281p il maps $3.50 Duell

974.14 Saint Croix river 47-11847

The Saint Croix river flows into the Bay of Passamaquoddy, thru the Passamaquoddy Islands, into the Bay of Fundy and the Atlantic ocean, and its channel is the eastern boundary of the United States. This book is composed of "historical sketches of its discovery, early conflicts and final occupation by English and American settlers, with some comments on Indian life." (Subtitle) Index.

Booklist 44:170 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:331 Je 15 '47 140w

"Not up to the Rivers of America series." E. L. Lewis

Library J 72:1031 Jl '47 100w

"Mr. Murchie's study is virtually a textbook. Thoroughly documented, and with opposing authorities often cited, he relates the river's history in a sober, matter-of-fact manner. I was a little surprised to find no mention of the ghastly Miramichi Fire, which, though its center was well north of the St. Croix, is nearer than the scenes of other events which are mentioned." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 30 '47 650w

MURDOCH, ROYAL. Gargantua's mouth. 108p $3 Fine editions

811 47-1575

"[This collection of poems contains] a poem on our latest craze existentialism, a surrealist sequence, a war group, lyrics and sonnets, ballads and translations, and a vein of hearty satire." Sat R of Lit

"Poems dealing with a broad, resounding theme inevitably end in a commonplace comment. Serious ideas turn his poems into fustian although that may please some because it sounds vaguely important. He is over-generous with trite epithets. . . . Mr. Murdoch is apparently concerned with making his poems 'beautiful.' Consequently, since he somehow escapes this tendency fairly well in light verse, and thereby projects his most successful poems, it seems evident that his talent lies in such light verse. It expresses clearly, neatly and pleasingly the slight emotions behind it and has an easy flowing quality somewhat between newspaper verse and New Yorker verse." Hubert Creekmore

+ N Y Times p33 Mr 16 '47 320w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47
30w

"The poet makes his public bow with disarming exuberance. His virtues are pagan rather than Christian and reveal an absolute fondness for nudity, physical or mental."

Alfred Kreymborg

Sat R of Lit 30:26 My 24 '47 320w

MURPHY, CHARLES THEOPHILUS, and others, eds. Greek and Roman classics in translation. 1052p maps $6 Longmans

880.8 Greek literature—Translations into English. Latin literature—Translations into English 47-2074

"The present anthology is adapted from the editors' larger volumes, Greek Literature in Translation and Latin Literature in Translation, but sufficient changes have been made in the contents to produce virtually a new book, not a mere condensation of the two previous volumes. This book is offered in the hope of filling the needs of colleges which can afford to devote only one semester to a combination of Greek and Roman literature in translation." Pref

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
My 25 '47 90w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 27 '47
120w

School & Society 66:16 J1 5 '47 20w

MURPHY, EDWARD FRANCIS. Père Antoine.
304p $2.50 Doubleday

47-1997

Historical novel, based on the life of a Spanish priest who tried to transplant the Inquisition into late eighteenth century New Orleans. At first he was cordially hated, but after a trip back to Spain a noticeable softening took place, and Père Antoine died in 1829, beloved by all.

Booklist 43:290 My 15 '47

"We fear that this book will not make a non-Catholic reader love the Church; it will annoy the Catholic reader with its over-insistence on the priest's sentimental dreaming of a long lost love."

— Cath World 165:286 Je '47 200w

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 9 '47
550w

Kirkus 15:12 Ja 1 '47 160w

"An unhackneyed, lusty, refreshing story in which most of the characters, somewhat surprisingly, talk in modern colloquial American."

E. F. Walbridge

+ — Library J 72:388 Mr 1 '47 80w

"The author has attempted few profundities; always he reduces his emotions to a simple level. He hasn't tried to write a long book, or stretched or padded his material. The result is an earnest and often moving portrait of a puzzled man. Particularly good are the debates, in which Father Murphy pits his priest against a series of oppositionists, differing over everything from sin to higher doctrine." H. T. Kane

+ N. Y. Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Mr 16 '47 550w

"The growth of Père Antoine in mind and spirit is plausible enough, but the presentation of it is not too successful. Antoine appears wooden, the unfolding of his character progresses somewhat perkily. Yet his boyhood romance is presented with warmth and sentiment, as are some of the later episodes. A literary, artificial style which marks the opening chapters is less noticeable as the story progresses." N. K. Burger

+ — N. Y. Times p16 Mr 9 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 J1 '47

MURPHY, GARDNER. Personality; a biosocial approach to origins and structure. 999p $7.50 Harper

137 Personality

47-31218

"To write about personality in such a way as to help in clarifying the little that we know and to show its possible relations to the vast and confused domain that we do not yet understand—this is my aim." (Foreword) Bibliography; name index; and combined glossary and subject index.

"To trace all the influences that shape the modern human personality would seem to be a task beyond the reach of one book, or even a library. That, in a mere 999 pages, Professor Murphy has made a sound, substantial approach to the job is a tribute to his wide knowledge, his acquaintance with the literature in the field and his ability to organize a tremendous mass of thought in clear, textbook English." M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '47
170w

School & Society 66:367 N 8 '47 10w

MURPHY, GLENN. Advanced mechanics of materials. 307p il $4 McGraw

620.1 Strength of materials. Strains and stresses 46-8338

"Book is designed for an advanced undergraduate or graduate course in strength of materials. Material is organized around fundamental concepts and properties of materials. Topics include the relationships between stresses and strains at a point; theories of failure; axial loading; stress concentrations; thick-walled cylinders; torsion of non-circular members; unsymmetrical bending; curved beams; shear center; stresses near concentrated loads; and buckling of panels, sheets and thin-walled members." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:981 J1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

MURPHY, GLENN. Properties of engineering materials. 2d ed 459p il $4.50 Int. textbook

620.1 Building materials. Strength of materials. Civil engineering 47-30733

New edition of a textbook first published in 1939. "Data on properties of metals, plastics, and other materials have been brought up to date; new problems have been added. Material on metallurgy and ferrous material has been revised and many new developments are brought into the text." (Booklist) References for further study at end of each chapter. Indexes.

Booklist 44:36 S 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1113 Ag '47 20w

"The second edition is better in many ways than the first. The book has not been completely rewritten, but there is evidence throughout of conscientious revision."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:38 Ap '47

MURPHY, ROBERT CUSHMAN. Logbook for Grace; whaling brig Daisy, 1912-1913. 290p $4 Macmillan

910.4 Antarctic regions. Voyages and travels. Daisy (whaling brig) 47-18472

In July 1912 the author, a marine zoologist, sailed from the West Indies for South Georgia and returned ten months later with quantities of specimens and data on whales, penguins, sea-elephants, etc., destined for the American Museum of Natural History. This is his logbook, written for his young wife, which has never been published before.

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

MURPHY, R. C.—Continued

"Filled with odd quirks, little touches, this chronicles a year's absence in personal manner, joins scientific information with human response to the daily events, the close companions. For this special market, there is not a little magic in the record, an intimate quality of things shared. Very nice indeed."

+ Kirkus 15:53 Ja 15 '47 180w

"Tremendously valuable purchase for small libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 72:460 Mr 15 '47 110w

"'Logbook for Grace' is a unique work in every possible way. It is old-fashioned yet new-fashioned; it was written long ago, almost in youth, yet it belongs to any time or all time; on its scientific side it tells of remarkable achievements and gives a valuable cross-section of a scene that can never again be reproduced, while on its human side it is rich in seafaring lore, in comments on character, and in the revelation of a love and devotion too high and rare to be commonly spoken of." Lincoln Colcord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 6 '47 1350w

"'Logbook for Grace' is a stirring sea story if you wish. Or a rousing tale of adventure. Or a true account of the profits and perils of whaling. It is even a love story in a gentle way... Perhaps, on the whole, 'Logbook for Grace' should be classified as a story of adventure, but there is much natural history in its pages, and Dr. Murphy has the happy faculty of seasoning his science with a dash of philosophy and a sprinkling of humor." John Kieran

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 6 '47 500w

Reviewed by Leonard Bacon

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ag 2 '47 600w

Time 49:105 Je 9 '47 550w

MURRAY, FLORENCE, ed. See Negro handbook

MURRAY, FRANCIS JOSEPH. Theory of mathematical machines. 116p $3 King's crown press

510.78 Calculating machines 47-3194

"Discusses basic principles of digital calculation for scientific purposes. Considers fundamental requirements of digital and continuous mechanisms and the mechanical and electronic methods for meeting them. Part of book concerns mathematical instruments as the planimeter and the integrator." (Library J) Bibliography.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 40w

"The book will be of value both to the student of mathematics and to the engineer." James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 My 18 '47 120w

MURRAY, GILBERT. Greek studies. 231p $5 Oxford

938 Greek literature—History and criticism. Civilization, Greek [A47-3377]

Collection of eleven studies on the general subject of Greek literature. "The book as a whole consists of papers and lectures, ranging in date from 1913 to 1941, on Greek Literature, History and Philosophy; the transmission of Greek texts; the beginnings of grammar; certain Greek tragedies (the Trachiniae of Sophocles, the Alexandros, Palamedes, and Troades of Euripides); Theopompus as historian; and Tellenism, especially in relation to England." (Times [London] Lit Sup) No index.

Reviewed by T. S. Brown

Am Hist R 53:145 O '47 100w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 29 '47 80w

"To call this book 'a source of noble living' would perhaps be 'hybris'; but it certainly is a source of refreshment and encouragement to all who love Greek and who believe in the essential freedoms of Western Europe. It is also a pleasure to read and has all the author's magic of style and wit." T. B. L. Webster

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 20 '46 420w

"This is not everybody's book. Still, the Greek quotations are usually translated, and the theme is so coherently developed that the serious reader can learn a good deal about Hellenic culture and also gain historical perspective on the events and ideas of his own day." Frederika Beatty

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 S 28 '47 700w

"They are Murray at his best, which means a delightful blend of wide knowledge, deep sensibility and good style... Much of what Murray says in 'Greek Studies' has been said before, but it has not been said so clearly, so urbanely, and so gracefully." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.

+ N Y Times p10 My 18 '47 1050w

"Although the 11 studies which make up this book are often quite different in subject matter and approach they all have a number of things in common for the reader. They all exhibit, for example, a passionate devotion to the best tradition of scholarship, and, what is more important, the devotion to truth which is a part of this tradition." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 25 '47 160w

"The liveliness of Greek studies, and of Dr. Murray's Greek Studies, lies in their subjectivity, their close connection with contemporary life. The scholar must, on the one hand, be able to re-live the life of ancient Greece and, on the other, be sensitively aware of the interests of the present. Past and present interact fruitfully through him. The ancient civilizations are, being past, in a sense unchanging, but the changing interests of the present, mediated by the scholar, bring different aspects constantly into view, readjust the emphasis and draw neglected fields into prominence. The significance of Dr. Murray's book lies in the picture it presents of this activity of classical scholarship." J. S. Morrison

+ Spec 178:20 Ja 3 '47 750w

Theatre Arts 31:74 Ag '47 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p50 Ja 25 '47 3300w

MURRAY, JOAN. Poems; ed. by Grant Code; with a foreword by W. H. Auden. (Yale series of younger poets) 145p $2.50 Yale univ. press

811

Collection of verse edited from the manuscripts left by a poet who died at the age of twenty-five. Loneliness is the feeling expressed in many of the poems.

"Serious verse built of unhackneyed phrases."

Christian Century 64:656 My 21 '47 70w

"The volume will command a small but interested attention."

+ Kirkus 15:124 F 15 '47 220w

Reviewed by Gerald Sykes

N Y Times p16 Jl 13 '47 600w

"A posthumous volume arranged from the manuscripts of a young poet whose technical equipment and imaginative powers were still in process of development when she died. Her point of view and accent are, however, unmistakably poetic and original."

+ New Yorker 23:72 Jl 19 '47 80w

"W. H. Auden is the new editor of The Yale Series of Younger Poets. His first selection, the poems of Joan Murray, who died at twenty-five in 1942, introduces a powerful and distinctive voice. The distinction is not achieved without sacrifices, often of clarity, sometimes of music, but all the cost is justified by the fresh excellence of the best of Joan Murray's poems. These make strong reading. They have as much of passion in them (some will say more) as a short lyric can contain." William Meredith

+ Poetry 70:335 S '47 700w

"There are many mature poems here. Themes that have seemed vague, undeveloped or practised on suddenly emerge beautifully crystallized." Lloyd Frankenberg

+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 Je 7 '47 400w

MURRAY, MAX, Voice of the corpse. 218p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

47-11002

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p43 O 10 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:409 Ag 1 '47 100w

"A newcomer to mystery, the author of this one appears to think that the tricks of the whodunit grab-bag are not to be taken too seriously. He doesn't exactly kid his standard material, but he gives it the light treatment, then adds some fireworks that you can take any way you like. Result is pleasant reading, a recommended item." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 19 '47 180w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p42 O 26 '47 180w

"An easy, expert treatment of the kind of material that never seems to pall on mystery fans."

New Yorker 23:128 O 18 '47 100w

"Well above average."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 18 '47 50w

MURRAY, STUART, Fun at sea; with cruise cues and the ABC's of ocean travel; il. by John Barron. 212p $2.50 Sheridan

910.4 Ocean travel 47-4591

"Mr. Murray's book, as the title indicates, reflects a holiday mood and even his practical advice is couched in bon voyage prose. He defines such nautical terms as scupper, skipper and scuttle-butt, and includes some Emily Post pointers on shipboard etiquette. The second half of the book describes the character types you meet on a cruise." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Where information is presented it is done in such sweeping generalities that the inexperienced traveler would still wonder what it's all about. And most of it seemed to me forced humor, would-be funny man stuff, and cheap in style. The ten types of escapists one meets in traveling at sea are amusing enough—but that's about all."

— + Kirkus 14:444 S 1 '46 110w

Reviewed by F. A. Boyle

Library J 71:1328 O 1 '46 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p47 N 24 '46 140w

MUSSEY, JUNE BARROWS, Vermont heritage. 64p il $2.50 Wyn

974.3 Vermont—History. Vermont—Social life and customs 47-5979

Reproductions of over 170 old engravings from The Museum Society of Brattleboro, Vermont, form the backbone of this study of the history and social life and customs of the state of Vermont.

Booklist 44:132 D 1 '47

"His affectionate text gives a vivid picture of the scenery, politics and customs which will delight native Vermonters and 'outlanders' as well."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 21 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:413 Ag 1 '47 70w

"The author's running text is simple, with no little humor. The result is a handsome little book that is just right for any Vermonter, native or adopted." S. H. Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 16 '47 250w

"Vermont has not yet quite equaled the State of Maine in exploiting its picturesque past... It is doing very well, in its quiet Republican way, with battered ox yokes and warped sugar buckets... The pictures are oddly charming... Determined seekers after charm should find this little volume a happy souvenir to take back to the city with them. Its authenticity is much more to be relied upon than that of the ox yokes and sap buckets." Edward Schriffigesser

+ N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '47 360w

"Mr. Mussey's text has a naive, primer-like quality, varied by quirks of humor. You learn much about Vermont in these 64 pages... Vermont's charm, says Mr. Mussey, is something beside clapboards and grass roots. It lies in the old life still lived there in spite of the present gadget age." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 S 21 '47 120w

MUSSEY, JUNE BARROWS, ed. Yankee life by those who lived it. 543p il $6 Knopf

917.4 New England—Social life and customs 47-11791

"An extended and enriched version of the editor's earlier We Were New England. Articulate New Englanders tell in their own words what the conditions of daily life were like in the 17th, 18th and first half of the 19th centuries. Material is skillfully selected to illustrate such subjects as childhood, school and college, commerce and manufacturing, logging, printing, art, crime, politics, religion, wars and Indians, medicine and travel. Illustrated by reproductions of woodcuts of the early 19th century." (Library J) Index.

Kirkus 15:592 O 15 '47 170w

"The fascinating text [is] so arranged that it may serve as a useful sourcebook. The price reflects the general rise, but this is a big book and worthy of recommendation." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1538 N 1 '47 100w

"Each one of these subjects is worthy of further research and elaboration into a book of its own, but there is a limit to what you can do in 543 pages, and Mr. Mussey has done his selecting admirably and added a bibliography and biography of each of those who lived that Yankee life through the second quarter of the last century." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 N 23 '47 700w

"The rediscovery of New England, particularly by New Englanders, is one of the more agreeable phenomena of these generally disagreeable times. Mr. Mussey's contribution to this booming renaissance is worthy and competent and makes good reading." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 31:9 Ja 10 '48 450w

MY book house; ed. by Olive Beaupré Miller 12v il $61.05 including In Your Hands and supplementary services; $69.20 with My Travelship; discounts to libraries Book house for children

808.8

"Numerous inquiries received in recent months have prompted the Committee to re-examine My Book House, last reviewed in Subscription Books Bulletin in July 1939 [Book Review Digest, 1939]. The current printing still bears a 1937 copyright date and, except for an added volume and a different binding, the set is substantially the same as the one previously reviewed. The supplementary volume, In Your Hands, was copyrighted in 1943. Until that time it was issued with the set as a small booklet. In 1943 it was expanded in content and made to conform in size and format to the rest of the set. It is intended as a parents' guide book for the five-part My Book House plan. . . The set as a whole consists of stories, poems, songs and selections from children's literature arranged according to age levels. The first volumes of nursery rhymes and fairy tales for the young child will be heavily used where individual books are not easily available. The volumes planned for older children contain excerpts from the folklore, legends, history, bibliography of many lands and adaptations of literary classics." Subscription Bks Bul

MY book house—Continued

"The greatest value of [the] volume [In Your Hands], as of the whole set, is in the material about and for young children, although the publisher states it covers every phase in the child's development from infancy to adolescence. . . The chief weakness of the set lies in the fact that this varied material for older children has been abridged and adapted in a fairly uniform style which has a limited appeal. Most of the selections are available in their entirety in libraries and will be of greater interest to children when not condensed. The Committee's 1939 evaluation still applies to the present printing. My Book House is recommended for home use, where access to libraries is difficult."

— + Subscription Bks Bul 18:20 Ap '47 480w

MYERS, JOHN MYERS. Wild Yazoo. 378p $3 Dutton

47-30136

Historical novel of the boisterous, early nineteenth century pioneer life along the Yazoo river in what is now the state of Mississippi. The hero is a young Virginian, who had killed a man and had to leave his native state in a hurry.

Booklist 43:206 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 2 '47 320w

"Good entertainment though one has a feeling of having read such stories before. . . There's plenty of action, full measure of romance, reasonably good characterization. . . There's good factual data on a little known phase of the opening up of a territory that later supplied bloody adventure."

+ — Kirkus 14:608 D 1 '46 170w

"Intimate interpretation of wild, frontier life. Men will enjoy it." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Myers writes as if he had a good time at it. He has a wit, a wry, tough humor, and a way with a turbulent yarn. This book is zestful and very much alive. There seems to be a bit too much of almost everything in 'Wild Yazoo.' Yet a historical novel with humor and sparkle is rare enough to justify a hearty welcome." H. T. Kane

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 2 '47 550w

"As a parody the book has some claim to success, but by and large parody does not seem to be the aim. . . The ingredients—colorful, certainly, and still of prime entertainment value under proper auspices—are, in the present case, clumsily jumbled, badly seasoned and alternately scorched and underdone. The writing is tedious. The humor, of which there is a great deal, is musty, forced and painful—when it is not downright embarrassing. The characterization is grotesque, the incidents Groucho Marxian." N. K. Burger

— + N Y Times p20 Mr 2 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:82 My '47

MYERS, WILLIAM STARR, ed. Woodrow Wilson; some Princeton memories. 91p $1.50 Princeton univ. press

B or 92 Wilson, Woodrow. Princeton university A47-266

"A symposium of reminiscences of President Wilson, by seven professors who served under him at Princeton University. Most of them were called to Princeton by Wilson." New Yorker

Reviewed by H. R. Spencer

Am Hist R 53:182 O '47 350w

Booklist 43:222 Mr 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 N 24 '46 80w

Foreign Affairs 25:699 JI '47 20w

"They agree that he could be charming, and that he was strong-willed and difficult at times (there is a nice feeling for understatement in the professors' writing now and then), and they pretty much agree that he was a great man."

New Yorker 22:126 N 2 '46 110w

School & Society 64:279 O 19 '46 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p194 Ap 26 '47 390w

MYSTERY WRITERS OF AMERICA, INCORPORATED. Murder by experts; ed. by Ellery Queen. 387p $3.50 Ziff-Davis

47-4135

Twenty short stories by expert writers of detective and mystery stories; each with a preface by the writer who selected the story. Partial contents: The locked room, by J. D. Carr; The blast of the book, by G. K. Chesterton; The age of miracles, by M. D. Post; The witness for the prosecution, by Agatha Christie; The dancing detective, by Cornell Woolrich; The little dry sticks, by Cora Jarrett; The last exploit of Harry the actor, by Ernest Bramah; Persons or things unknown, by Carter Dickson; Mr. Ponting's alibi, by R. A. Freeman; Story of the young man with the cream tarts, by R. L. Stevenson; The adventure of the president's half disme, by Ellery Queen.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 JI 6 '47 160w

"A shining example of what a mystery anthology should be." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Je 29 '47 170w

"Nothing very startling has resulted from the venture, but the volume does contain several of the less familiar short stories of such writers as G. K. Chesterton, William Faulkner, R. Austin Freeman, Carter Dickson, and Cora Jarrett."

New Yorker 23:80 Je 21 '47 90w

"The best thing about the book, to my mind, is the number of good stories which are not strictly in the detective pattern. Anthony Boucher chose such a story, Thomas Burke's 'The Hands of Mr. Ottermole.' There is a Faulkner tale, too, 'The Hound,' which is out of the common groove, though none the worse for that. And even Cora Jarrett's 'The Little Dry Sticks'—which I'd rate top selection out of the 20—is enough off the beaten track so that it isn't in the standard pattern. These things, though, are so much matters of taste that perhaps you'd better make up your own mind." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Je 12 '47 470w

"Whether you want a group of 20 detective stories, all guaranteed outstanding, or whether you want a revealing insight into the menial workings of your favorite detective story writers, 'Murder by Experts' is a volume you cannot possibly afford to miss." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Je 29 '47
400w

"Nary a maverick and only one museum-piece in thoroughly enjoyable collection. Stories are unhackneyed and selectors' prefatory remarks admirable."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 J1 5 '47 50w

MYTINGER, CARLOINE. New Guinea head-hunt. 441p $4 Macmillan

919.5 New Guinea—Description and travel
47-226

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by Wendell Johnson
Chicago Sun Book Week p11 F 23 '47
200w

"New Guinea Headhunt offers more than the reader has any right to expect. It is double value. To much interesting anthropological information about a vanishing race is added wit, humor, and good observation." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 28 '47 650w

"There is not a dull page in the book, while some descriptions will certainly be included in a tropical anthology, whenever one is compiled. There are, by the way, some pages which will explain a few mysteries of the last war. What is said of mission work is better than what certain missionary magazines offer, and more convincing. No doubt, one of the best books of the year." J. A. Maynard

+ Churchman 161:19 Je 15 '47 130w
Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 46:42 Ap 25 '47 800w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 24 '47 180w

"'New Guinea Headhunt' is no stuffy discourse on anthropology, however valuable it may prove to scholars. It is rather a living, breathing story told in sparkling prose by a knowledgeable and warmly human person." James Lyons

+ N Y Times p33 Mr 9 '47 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p400 Ag 9 '47
550w

N

NABOKOV, VLADIMIR VLADIMIROVICH.
Bend sinister. 242p $2.75 Holt

47-3534

The author, a Russian emigre, now living in America and writing in English, has as the hero of this novel a middle-aged university professor, Adam King, living in an unnamed modern tyrannical state, has an international reputation, but is indifferent to politics. The story follows the course of his attempts to maintain his personal integrity in a totalitarian country, and his final defeat, madness, and death.

Canadian Forum 27:143 S '47 160w

"The happenings, fantastic as they are, may seem uncomfortably remindful of actual politics in countries not too far away. The distortions, gruesome, bizarre and meaningful, point up the nonsense of all totalitarian regimes which like to pose as new philosophies. A powerful and disturbing fantasmagoria. Bend Sinister will rouse violently opposed emotions, but certainly not go unnoticed." Emily Schossberger

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 22 '47
360w

"One of the most intriguing novels we've seen for some time, unfortunately hampered by a slow, rather bewildering start. Here is superb satire, biting, never blatant, in parts poetic—the whole more effective than any bombast and bitterness could arouse."

+ — Kirkus 15:227 Ap 15 '47 170w

"Type of book that might have ephemeral success and then be quickly forgotten—quite rightly. So why not forget it now? Not recommended." H. H. A. Bernt

— Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 80w

"I suppose it is Mr. Nabokov's elaborate prose method that persuades his publishers that 'Bend Sinister' is so distinguished a work of fiction; and I daresay there will be a considerable public to agree with them. This will be the public that has become so tired of the arid prose and method of contemporary naturalism that it welcomes any change as a change for the better. But in point of fact, what looks like a highly charged sensibility in Mr. Nabokov's style is really only fanciness, forced imagery, and deafness to the music of the English language, just as what looks like an innovation in method is already its own kind of sterile convention." Diana Trilling

Nation 164:722 Je 14 '47 1050w

"Nabokov is at his best in his bitterly humorous thrusts at the narrowness and stupidity of totalitarian thought and action and in his flights of satirical scorn. His scenes of horror, with their eerily distorted lights and shadows, can also be powerful, and his account of the slow, inexorable pressure exerted on Krug captures the terror of the police state in a manner not easy to forget. . . It is because Nabokov can achieve some of the ominous and comic effects he manages in Bend Sinister that his puckish weakness for affectation seems so outrageous." Richard Watts

+ — New Repub 117:26 J1 7 '47 1650w

"A moving and powerful novel about the plight of a civilized man caught in a tyrant state. There is a terrible inevitability about its movement and a warm humanity about its main character which are not often found in what is essentially a thesis novel. The thesis, of course, is that the individual cannot continue to live under totalitarian domination; and no one can deny the truth of that thesis who has observed even from a distance what happens when the tyrant takes over. . . Nabokov writes with urbanity, with humor and with high drama. Yet there are no melodramatics." Hal Borland

+ N Y Times p10 Je 15 '47 450w

"Vladimir Nabokov, in his new novel, seems to have started out to give Kafka a run for his money. So far, the cash is still safe in Kafka's pocket, but Mr. Nabokov's book, about a civilized man caught up in the barbarism of a modern totalitarian state, is almost as terrifying, in its way, as any of Kafka's disturbing fables. . . Mr. Nabokov, in recounting this nightmare, uses a method that reminds me not only of Kafka but of some of the more flamboyant compositions that appeared in transition back in the good old days of automatic writing, personalized punctuation, and to-hell-with-grammar. He writes, however, with vigor and conviction, and it will be interesting to see what he does next." Hamilton Basso

— + New Yorker 23:93 Je 14 '47 260w

"There is a good story here if you can find it. Mr. Nabokov, a Russian, wrote this one in English, some of it so beautifully that it should make writers born to the language blush. But occasionally he throws grammar and punctuation out the window and we get something that reads like a ninth-grader's first attempt at stream-of-conscious writing." Edith James

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 29 '47
150w

Reviewed by N. L. Rothman
Sat R of Lit 30:33 Ag 2 '47 550w

"The secret of Bend Sinister's effect is that it places side by side, heightened by the selectivity of an adept and angry writer, the most moronic abominations of totalitarianism and the finest lights of the secular European mind. The hoaxed and flattered humanity of the mass man is contrasted with the honest and deeply suffering humanity of the individual; but all this is done so lightly that it seems a mocking and superior amusement."

+ Time 49:104 Je 16 '47 650w

NAMIER, LEWIS BERNSTEIN. 1848: the revolution of the intellectuals. 124p $2.50 Oxford 940.28 Europe—History—1848-1849 [46-8503]

"This is part of the Raleigh Lecture to the British Academy in 1944 more developed and very thoroughly documented. The first quarter of the book expounds the theme indicated in the title. Although other groups were involved, and in some cases caused the initial explosion, 1848 was primarily a movement of the middle-class intellectuals. . . The last three-quarters of the book follow some early manifestations of German 'Liberal' nationalism more closely in relation to the Poles and Czechs, and demonstrate the identity of Eastern European problems then and ninety years later." Spec

"The person who is not well acquainted with the historical backgrounds of 1848 will find this book difficult reading. Aside from appealing primarily to the historian, the essay is scholarly also in the peculiar but frequently met-with sense of developing problems without making explicit the arrangement of their treatment, and of carefully documenting quotations and other statements without disclosing the principle of their selection." K. H. Wolff
Ann Am Acad 250:136 Mr '47 650w

"This is a contribution to nineteenth-century European history of the first importance; and it leaves us asking anxiously for more." A. J. P. T.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 5 '46 240w

"Although one can do nothing but admire Professor Namier's lavish documentation, it is necessary to point out that in spite of its comprehensive title, this essay does not pretend to be an examination of the origins and general course of the 1848 revolution. It does not, in fact, convince one that it was a 'revolution of intellectuals.' But it is a useful addition to the literature on 1848 in English, of which we still have far too little." Norman Mackenzie

+ New Statesman & Nation 31:322 My 4 '46 240w

"This is scholarly historian's history, and few but specialists will appreciate the methods and minutiae; but the interpretations and explanations will interest anyone concerned to understand the background of contemporary European affairs."

+ Spec 176:594 Je 7 '46 270w

"Originally delivered as a lecture to the British Academy, the present volume has already expanded four-fold, and there is reason to believe that a much larger and still more authoritative work is likely to follow. If there is a certain lack of coherence in the book, that is not the author's fault, but is due to the impossibility of holding together so many disconnected threads."

Times [London] Lit Sup p339 Jl 20 '46 1850w

NASH, ELEANOR ARNETT. It was Mary. 273p $2.75 Appleton-Century

47-31372

In the prologue to this novel, Miss Fanny Glidden, watching her niece by marriage, decides that, of all the Glidden wives, Mrs Henry Glidden is most worthy of the title. The rest of the tale relates the story of how Mary Hamilton, daughter of so-called "Shanty Irish" became one of New York Society's most famous leaders, Mrs Henry Glidden.

Cath World 166:380 Ja '48 150w

"Because 'It Was Mary' involves many deft virtues and yet remains a light novel, it is instructive to ask why. Light fiction at its best is capable of real perceptiveness and the nuances, but its frame remains artificial and trivial. Mrs. Nash does not at all remove the larger problems of her story from the easy carpentry of the slick magazines. . . The author's best effects come from her omniscient view and delicate delineation of her characters' misreadings of one another and the consequent false conclusions and reactions in which they indulge themselves. But the structure of life is not in it, and the ponderous syllogism remains gigantically unmoving." Riley Hughes

+ Commonweal 47:52 O 24 '47 290w

Kirkus 15:439 Ag 15 '47 80w

"First part of the book devoted to Mary's childhood is refreshing in its gay treatment of her drab life. Characters are well drawn. This novel will be welcomed gladly by librarians looking for a good clean story above the average in style." H. R. Forbes

+ Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 70w

"The author of 'It Was Mary' is a Fifth Avenue fashion consultant. Her novel is of rich fabric and smart design, but it has little human warmth." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 N 9 '47 170w

NASH, OGDEN. Musical zoo; tunes by Vernon Duke; with il. by Frank Owen. 47p $2.50 Little

784 Songs 48-437

A collection of some of Ogden Nash's verses about animals, birds and insects set to music by Vernon Duke.

"Mr. Nash's book reads wackily, plays bitterly, sings surprisingly and looks comical." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 21 '47 290w

"The 'Musical Zoo' is not an inspired production. True, the settings as a whole have competence and charm, and occasionally, as in the case of 'The Pigeon' and 'The Mouse,' true felicity and insight. . . But it is sad indeed to this reviewer that an Ogden Nash book, whose praises might be shouted from the rooftops, can only evoke a whispered and uncertain cheer." Mimi Wallner

N Y Times p12 Ja 11 '48 250w

NAST, ELSA RUTH, pseud. See Werner, J., comp.

NATHAN, GEORGE JEAN. Theatre book of the year, 1946-1947; a record and an interpretation. 380p $4 Knopf

792 Theater—U.S. Drama—History and criticism (43-51298)

"Mr. Nathan's perennial, giving a play-by-play account this time of the Broadway season of 1946-1947." New Yorker

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

"Occasionally witty and amusing. Recommended for theatre collections only." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 50w

"George Jean Nathan has been a drama critic not for four years, but for forty, yet he gives no indication of exhaustion, physical or mental. . . The present volume is the fifth in the series and has the same permanent value as the previous volumes, giving us not only the sparks from an alert and witty mind even when the brittle flint would seem incapable of producing any results at all, but giving us a record for the future of an entire season, leaving little doubt of what was good and what was bad." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O 26 '47 950w

"No dramatic critic since the retirement of Max Beerbohm has written more delightfully of plays and players or with more wit and imagination than George Jean Nathan, and his critical pronouncements are sound. As a stylist he must be one of the best practicing in America today. In his new theatre book you will find him at the top of his unique form." T. Q. Curtiss

+ N Y Times p20 O 26 '47 700w

"A valuable reference work and also good reading; Mr. Nathan is one of the very few critics whose reviews can be enjoyed long after the event."

+ New Yorker 23:134 N 8 '47 50w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols
Sat R of Lit 30:27 N 22 '47 800w

NATHAN, ROBERT. Mr Whittle and the morning star. 175p $2 Knopf

47-775

Mr Whittle was an unassuming little man, a professor in a small college. He had a pretty wife and an adolescent daughter, and he began on them with his idea that the world was coming to an end. From his family he branched out to his classes and the lecture platform and finally he even had an argument with a Higher Power. It took a bout with pneumonia to bring Mr Whittle down to earth.

"The relations of Penelope and Mr. Whittle in the classroom are delightfully natural, and in his appearance before the Auxiliary, Mr. Whittle certainly delivers what is one of the most remarkable lectures ever heard. So far so good. But what follows seems to be more theatrical and less entertaining than act one. The staging is too apparent, the cues too pat, the discovery of the lovers too well timed, and God's voice too much like that of Gabriel Heatter's for my acceptance. Mr. Whittle's warning, which ought to be taken seriously, evaporates on that spring night. I am sorry." Edward Weeks

— + Atlantic 179:144 Ap '47 550w
Booklist 43:206 Mr 1 '47
Bookmark 8:16 My '47

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 23 '47
410w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Not Nathan at his best."

Kirkus 15:106 F 15 '47 90w

"A genuine Robert Nathan with all his sympathetic understanding of character, his quiet humor and unsuspected satire. A strong 'yes' for this book." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Whittle and the Morning Star' is only a slight case of Mr. Nathan. As fantasy it is off the target; as story it lacks resolution. Only the prose has the true Nathan touch, the smoothness and adaptability of running water." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 23 '47 650w

Reviewed by Isabelle Mallet
N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '47 700w

"This time, Mr. Nathan has less to say than usual, and he says it with all his by now familiar charm."

New Yorker 23:109 Mr 29 '47 50w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ap 3 '47 700w

"Whether or not Mr. Nathan's case is conclusive matters little. What does matter is the poetry of his prose, the delectable merger of the mystic with the mundane, the interjection of astringent humor, and the over-all jubilation in the union of God and man." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Mr 22 '47 550w
Times [London] Lit Sup p321 Je 28 '47 300w

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA. Economic principles commission. American individual enterprise system; its nature, evolution, and future. 2v $10 McGraw 330.15 Economics. Capitalism. U.S.—Economic conditions 47-1950

"Represents a six-year study, a consensus among a group of business and academic executives. Factual presentation of America's economic system, how it functions and what principles and practices will promote the achievement of the goal, the maximum good for the American people. Two chapters 'Profit and Loss in the Enterprise Systems' and 'The Role of Prices and Price Determination' were issued as brochures from N.A.M." (Library J) Indexes.

"A vast collection of well organized material concerning the economic history of the United States... Those who do not like the conclusion will still have to take account of the data and will be profited by a consideration of the facts and figures, many of which are vividly exhibited in graphs and diagrams. The reader is assured that the economists who did the work were given complete liberty, and that their conclusions do not necessarily represent the views of the N.A.M. The sponsors will, however, have little reason to disagree with the general trend of the argument." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:997 Ag 20 '47 240w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:227 F 1 '47 70w

"This book is on the whole disappointing. Though it contains much information, it cannot be counted upon to enlarge the reader's wisdom or his insight into the basic nature of the American economy or its problems. It is heavily loaded with 'conclusions,' the reasons for which are inadequately stated." S. H. Slichter — + Management R 36:445 Ag '47 750w

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF MUNICIPAL LAW OFFICERS. Labor unions and municipal employe law. See Rhyne, C. S.

NATIONAL RESEARCH BUREAU, INCORPORATED. Encyclopedia of business information sources. 2v $60 The bureau, 415 N. Dearborn st, Chicago 10

650.3 Business—Dictionaries and encyclopedias 46-6077

"According to the directions for its use, 'The primary purpose of the Encyclopedia is to give the business executive basic source information—it tells where to go to secure information promptly on the many problems that confront the executive daily.'... The work is divided into two volumes. Volume 1 contains sources of information on the following general business classifications: Finance, Labor, Marketing, Public Utilities, Transportation, Management, Foreign Trade, Agriculture in its Relation to Business. Also included in volume 1 is a Government Contact List which is divided into two parts. Part one has two sections, one listing government agencies by subject, the other describing their activities. Part two indicates the methods by which information on general business problems may be secured from the consulting service of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Volume 2 of the Encyclopedia is a directory of sources of information on specific types of business and industry classified by broad subjects, e.g., Automotive, Construction, Machinery, Office Equipment, Chemicals, and Drugs." Subscription Bks Bul

"The subject headings are not always easily distinguished from the entries which follow as there is no extra spacing between and the same size type is used throughout. When the material on a specific subject is continued on the next page, the second page omits the subject heading. The material under the various headings is not always alphabetically arranged and the same information occasionally appears twice under the same heading. There is an extensive index by small topics with see and see also references in the first section of volume 1. Inconsistencies appear both in the use of cross references and in the subject headings of the index. . . The bibliographic information shows the need of more careful editing. . . References included are not always the most recent and a few periodicals which have suspended publication are listed with no indication that they are no longer current. . . The Encyclopedia, properly edited and compiled, would prove useful to large public and business libraries as a handbook and a guide to certain types of business literature and as a directory to trade associations, although the information it contains is almost all available in other publications. . . In view of its price and because of its inconsistencies, lack of uniformity, and poor bibliographic details the Encyclopedia of Business Information Sources is not recommended."

NATIONAL RESEARCH BUREAU—Continued

— Subscription Bks Bul 17:28 Jl '46 850W

NATIONAL SKI ASSOCIATION OF AMERICA. Manual of ski mountaineering; ed. by David R. Brower; editorial committee, Lewis F. Clark [and others]. 2d ed 200p il $2 Univ. of Calif.

796.93 Skis and ski running A46-12

"First published in 1942 and used as an aid in mountain troop training. Three new chapters on mountaineering routes, rock climbing, and ice climbing are added. Illustrated with drawings." (Booklist) Bibliography. No index.

Booklist 42:368 Jl 15 '46

Reviewed by Digory Venn
 N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
 F 23 '47 140W

Reviewed by Frank Elkins
 N Y Times p20 Ja 5 '47 90W

NAUMBURG, MARGARET. Studies of the free art expression of behavior problem children and adolescents as a means of diagnosis and therapy; foreword by Nolan D. C. Lewis. 225p il $5.50 Nervous & mental disease monographs, 70 Pine st, N.Y. 5

618.92 Child study. Psychoanalysis
 Med47-2309

"Detailed analyses and interpretations of the drawings of six children of school age are made by Margaret Naumburg, founder and former director of the Walden School and currently a member of the department of clinical psychiatry of the New York State Psychiatric Institute and Hospital." School & Society

"The value of the book for the layman lies partly in the clarity, simplicity, and power of the style. But the reproductions of the patients' art work—crayon drawings, paintings, and modeling—give it an added and unique value. . . Parents, teachers, indeed all who deal with children, will find the book a great aid." A. E. Benedict

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 N 8 '47 230W

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman
 School & Society 66:331 O 25 '47 180W

NAUTH, RAYMOND. Chemistry and technology of plastics. 522p il $9.50 Reinhold

668.4 Plastic materials 47-3603

"Technical manual on thermosetting and thermoplastic resins, cellulose plastics and synthetic rubber, natural resins and plywood, mold design and equipment. Includes data hitherto restricted both in the aeronautical and automotive industries and information on casting-resins and resins for electroplating shields. Plywood glossary, tables, illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 50W
 N Y New Tech Bks 32:35 Ap '47

NAVES, Y. R., and MAZUYER, GABRIEL. Natural perfume materials; a study of concretes, resinoids, floral oils and pomades; with a pref. by H. Gault. 338p il $6.75 Reinhold

668.5 Perfumery. Essences and essential oils 47-4086

"Translated from the original French by Edward Sagarin. Documented history of the methods of extracting perfumes and agents employed followed by modern processes of manufacture. A technical description of raw materials and fundamental knowledge concerning extraction by digestion enfleurage and volatile solvents and manufacture of pomades and perfume oils. Many references in the text. Illustrated. Index of Latin botanical names." Library J

"The book is well designed and easy on the eyes—no small thing in its favor! It should be of great help to American and English perfumers, who will find it a most valuable guide through the intricacies of a highly specialized industry." Ernest Guenther + Chem Eng 54:273 S '47 420W
 Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
 Library J 72:1039 Jl '47 70W

"This translation of the authors' Les Parfums Naturels (Paris, 1939) is an important addition to the literature of perfumery. . . Excellent lists of references are furnished throughout the text."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:34 Ap '47

NEAL, JULIA. By their fruits; the story of Shakerism in South Union, Kentucky. 279p il $3.50 Univ. of N.C. press

289.8 Shakers 47-31003

History of a colony of Shakers (Union Believers) in Logan County, Kentucky, from the time of its founding in 1807 until its dissolution in 1922. Bibliography. Index.

"Miss Neal has seemingly missed [the] social significance of the rise of the Shakers. . . It is these social origins one finds lacking in By Their Fruits—a valuable record of facts nonetheless." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Ann Am Acad 253:249 S '47 550W

Christian Century 64:742 Je 11 '47 110W

"Important as a picture of one of the more successful Utopian experiments of the 19th century, it is a fitting companion piece to Florence Melcher's The Shaker Adventure. It should be added to the collections of college, university and large public libraries." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 130W

"Their record is always useful and sometimes entertaining." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
 O 26 '47 700W

"The principal value of the study is that of a case history based upon some firsthand observation and upon careful research into primary source materials. There is little analysis of Shakerism as a religious cult, nor critical appraisal of the communal organization in South Union by comparison with similar experiments. The study will be most useful to readers who have some knowledge of American religious cults and utopian communities."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:253 S '47 280W

NEARING, ELIZABETH (CUSTER). The Lancasters. 316p $3 Coward-McCann

47-5149

A picture of Philadelphia in the early twentieth century; a group portrait of the Lancaster family, noisy, talented, vital; and a character study of Nora Lancaster, wife and mother. Nora, her husband and her children, are presented thru the eyes of two men who secretly loved and openly served Nora during thirty years, the doctor, Francis Baring and the Presbyterian minister, Douglas Lowry.

"A rather agonized affair—this—which is only for women, but not widely."

Kirkus 15:172 Mr 15 '47 120W

"As a story 'The Lancasters' rings true and is emotionally durable." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
 Je 8 '47 550W

Reviewed by Andrea Parke
 N Y Times p14 Je 8 '47 290W

NEBLETTE, CARROLL BERNARD. Careers in photography. 182p il $2.50 Ziff-Davis

770.69 Photography as a profession 46-7400

Vocational book for older boys and girls interested in photography as a career. The book gives specific aids, including suggestions for getting started and an outline of the training needed. Bibliography. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

N Y New Tech Bks 32:13 Ja '47

San Francisco Chronicle p10 D 1 '46 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

NEEDHAM, JOSEPH. History is on our side; a contribution to political religion and scientific faith. 226p $2.75 Macmillan

574.04 Christianity and politics 47-2072

"Dr. Needham, professor of biochemistry at Cambridge University, is no narrow scientist. He studies Chinese, Polish and Aztec philosophy for relaxation, and writes books like this as his fulfillment of a social and religious duty. The book is a collection of occasional essays and addresses. The title is taken from an 'address to the clergy,' in which he shows that fascism is a complete reaction from all that is socially desirable from a Christian point of view, while communism really has something that must be taken into account." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by C. H. Moehلمان

Ann Am Acad 253:213 S '47 650w

"The book is as vivacious and readable as it is thought-provoking."

+ Christian Century 64:626 My 14 '47 140w

Reviewed by C. S. Detweiler

Churchman 161:16 Ag '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"The essays are written, peculiarly enough, in a leisurely, Victorian style, distinguished by its modesty and warmth. There is not a scrap of invective in the book. Indeed, there is very little irony, except when Mr. Needham quotes someone else to enliven the text." E. B. Gar-side

N Y Times p28 My 4 '47 1050w

School & Society 66:16 Jl 5 '47 10w

Social Studies 38:240 My '47 20w

NEFF, EMERY EDWARD. Poetry of history; the contribution of literature and literary scholarship to the writing of history since Voltaire. 258p $3.50 Columbia univ. press

907 Literature and history. History—Historiography 47-30933

"Considers historians of the last two centuries, beginning with Herder, and ending with Toynbee, and presents kaleidoscopic aspects of the great world periods which these savants studied and re-created, feeling, with Voltaire, that the highest step in human culture was to comprehend humanity." (Christian Science Monitor) Selected references. Index.

"Brilliant book." E. W. Bates

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 D 6 '47 950w

School & Society 66:334 O 25 '47 20w

NEGRO handbook, 1946-47; ed. by Florence Murray; pub. biennially. (V3) 392p $5 Current bks.

325.26 Negroes (42-22818)

"The aim of this work as stated in the foreword is 'to present current, factual information in a concise and handy medium and . . . give a picture of the status of the Negro in America.' In presenting the information 'no effort [has been made] to evaluate it or to analyze it in terms of sociological or economic significance.' Florence Murray is rewrite editor and feature writer for the New York paper People's Voice, and was given a Rosenwald Foundation fellowship for the preparation of the second edition of the Handbook, published in 1944. The first edition appeared in 1942. The book is comprehensive in scope, touching upon practically all phases of economic and social life in the United States as related to the Negro." Subscription Bks Bul

Booklist 43:199 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:3 My '47

Reviewed by S. I. Hayakawa

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 F 16 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:56 Ja 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. D. Reddick

Library J 72:159 Ja 15 '47 80w

"America's largest minority group is represented with dignity and as near completeness as possible for any book, in this third edition of a handbook indispensable to any one interested in Negro affairs, and invaluable to such dispensers of general information as the public libraries."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 4 '47 200w

Reviewed by George Streator

N Y Times p43 Mr 30 '47 290w

"Since the arrangement is topical rather than alphabetical and apparently no particular sequence is followed in its organization, it is necessary to consult the index to locate desired information. Although fairly inclusive, the index is not as complete as one might wish. . . The editor's purpose seems well carried out and facts appear to be accurate and objectively presented. All three editions of the Handbook cover approximately the same topics, but in accordance with the aim of making it a manual of current facts, the 1946 edition has been extensively revised to include new material and up-to-date textual and statistical information. Except that it is limited to the Negro in the United States, it is comparable in organization and subject matter to the Negro Yearbook of which 1937-38 was the last edition. The Negro Handbook, 1946-47 is recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:21 Ap '47 500w

Reviewed by B. W. Burhoe

Survey 83:216 Jl '47 90w

NEILSON, FRANCIS. Roots of our learning. 297p $3 Schalkenbach

824

47-1217

"Eleven essays on the achievements of the past in philosophy, science and art, covering the cultural development of man over the centuries. Each essay has a complete bibliography and supporting footnotes." (Current Hist) "The author, British-born Francis Neilson, is now an octogenarian and can look back upon a diversified career as playwright, novelist, actor, opera impresario, stage director, historian, and Member of Parliament." (School & Society)

Reviewed by E. W. Knight

Ann Am Acad 254:223 N '47 500w

"A highly inspiring book." Cuthbert Wright

+ Commonweal 45:380 Ja 24 '47 600w

Current Hist 12:151 F '47 30w

"His style is frequently rambling, but readable and not without charm. Chapter VII, 'The Roots of the Tree of Learning,' which treats the origin and development of the medieval university, holds some interest for the student, but it is based on secondary sources and adds nothing to existing knowledge." W. W. Erickman

+ School & Society 65:313 Ap 26 '47 190w

NEIMAN, GILBERT. There is a tyrant in every country. 346p $3 Harcourt

47-4506

The "I" of the novel is Freddy Conner, who starts out in Chicago, hating all Mexicans. He is engaged to drive a mysterious Mr Unman to Mexico, and later serves as his secretary. Once in Mexico he begins to have a liking for the downtrodden natives, but his attempts to help them end in disaster and his own exile to the back country. Later he returns to defy Unman, who has proved to be a representative of the monied classes.

NEIMAN, GILBERT—Continued

"To those who cannot follow Neiman, he will seem bizarre, melodramatic, sexridden—a frustrating confusion. To those for whom his words make music, his pages will unfold a compelling, somewhat enchanting, deeply moving panorama of Mexico such as has rarely if ever been painted before." J. W. Rogers

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Je 15 '47
450w

"There's lack here of sound story value—no particular lack of restraint—and the whole generates small sympathy in the reader."

— Kirkus 15:288 Je 1 '47 160w

"Despite sympathetic treatment of Mexico's great problem, poverty, and character sketches that occasionally ring true in this first novel, Neiman's plot remains thin and unconvincing." Joseph Borome

— + Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 80w

"Neiman's list of his jobs seems almost a parody of the career of a two-fisted author. To express a lack of understanding of the country of one's birth may be just decent frankness; he makes it appear pretentious. To confess deep devotion for a primitive land can be moving; he transforms the confession into a monstrosity of affectation. . . . Despite all that, I insist that There Is a Tyrant in Every Country is an interesting book. Essentially it is a novel about Gilbert Neiman's romance, not with himself, as you might suspect from the autobiographical note, but with Mexico. Roughly and a little unfairly, it could be described as James M. Cain crossed with social significance and with a bit of Hemingway added." Richard Watts

— + New Repub 116:26 Je 16 '47 1350w

"The plot is melodramatic as Mexico is melodramatic, plausible, since such conspiracies do take place in this land and since Freddie Conner is dragged into it as an uncomprehending foreigner might conceivably be dragged into such an international conspiracy. But, more important than the plot, overshadowing Freddie's fate and the fate of the people he gets entangled with, looms Mexico itself. The real protagonist is not Freddie but Mexico, the real adventure, the novelist's—and the reader's—is an adventure with Mexico." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je 15 '47 700w

"As is the way of first novels, Mr. Neiman's is heavily laden with 'I,' both literally (it is told in the first person) and figuratively. Here is truly one world, the world of Freddy Conner; and, while we learn a great deal about Freddy (chiefly what he thinks about Mexico and the people he meets), that's about as far as it goes. . . . His appreciation of Mexico does him credit, and there are some notable passages describing Mexicans and Mexican life of town and country. One detects, however, a romantic primitivism in Freddy. He feels that the farther down one penetrates into the Mexican economic and social strata, the nobler, the more honest the people there. All will applaud his discovery that Mexicans are really people, but some may wonder if Freddy's people are really Mexicans—or if he has created them in his own image." N. K. Burger

— + N Y Times p5 Je 15 '47 500w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 13 '47
550w

"Neiman tells his tale straightforwardly as 'I.' This 'I' is such a colossal egotist that one is tempted to paraphrase the title to, 'There Is a Tyrant in Every Author.' . . . The first of the three levels of the book and its brashness reminds one of Oscar Wilde's remark that George Moore's 'Confessions' were those of a 'very Young Man.' It is perhaps this callous immaturity that makes the work so irritating. The second level of the tale is ominous, evil, and excellent, for it tells of the effort of 'I' to uncover a shadowy web of international fascism operating below the border. . . . The best part of the book is the appreciation of the Mexicans and their land with which the author weaves together the two uneven first levels." Betty Kirk

— + Sat R of Lit 30:17 Je 14 '47 650w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Copper lady.
213p $2 Rinehart

47-24310

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:295 Je 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 24 '47 80w

"Expertly plotted, Mr. Nelson's story disproves the theory that an author's second effort is often less good than his first."

+ N Y Times p15 Ag 3 '47 200w

"Sprightly civilized writing, plus a knowledge of copper as detailed as the background of the book business which Mr. Nelson offered in 'The Title Is Murder'—and somewhat unconvincing solution and motivation." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47
100w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 40w

NELSON, HUGH LAWRENCE. Title is murder. 189p $2 Rinehart

47-1196

Detective story.

Booklist 43:273 My 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47
70w

Kirkus 14:628 D 15 '46 50w

"Mr. Nelson decorates a pleasing puzzle with much business color, basing his work on the good old maxim: You don't have to be crazy to work in books, but it helps. You can read about Nan's troubles without tears, even when she is in her lonely cell, so happily is the story geared to any mood you may be in at the moment, including the carefree." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Mr 16 '47 270w

"Well worth your attention." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p38 Mr 2 '47 140w

"A bit short on detection; but very long on human warmth, good writing, and admirably observed shop background." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 2 '47
90w

"Good gory fun!"

Sat R of Lit 30:30 F 22 '47 50w

NEMEROV, HOWARD. The image and the law. 69p $2 Holt

811

47-24386

"Mr. Nemerov tells us that he dichotomizes the 'poetry of the eye' and the 'poetry of the mind,' and that he attempts to exhibit in his verse the 'ever-present dispute between two ways of looking at the world.'" Poetry

Kirkus 15:235 Ap 15 '47 85w

"Howard Nemerov has attempted to read unity into his first book of poems by giving it the title 'The Image and the Law,' which, he says, 'exposes the conflict and theme of the poems; the ever-present dispute between two ways of looking at the world, the way of the eye and that of the mind.' The portentousness of this statement is reflected in the poems themselves, which unfortunately show no unity of conception such as their author attributes to them. The first of the book's three divisions does in fact bear out Mr. Nemerov's manifesto; but the second and third are a motley collection of exercises on a wide variety of themes." Milton Crane

— + N Y Times p10 Ag 10 '47 550w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 23:133 N 15 '47 120w

"Not a few of the 'images'—that is, the strictly descriptive or anecdotal pieces—are quite good in their whimsical way; though rarely witty they have to their credit a certain mordancy, acumen, and lightness of touch. Stylistically they hover between Stevens and K. Rexroth, with occasional sallies—no spoils resulting—into Empson's domain. When Mr.

Nemerov deals with ideas he is as a rule less satisfactory; partly through simple lack of style . . . partly through conceptual confusion. . . Yet, oddly enough, it is in this category that we must look for Nemerov's best poems: Warning: Children at Play, An Old Photograph and, particularly, Lot's Wife—poems which suggest that ideation may after all be this poet's forte." F. C. Golfing
+ — Poetry 71:94 N '47 900w

"I think certain of the poems in the book might have been omitted entirely, since they say very little and say it in a singularly unexciting way, and that others would be improved by judicious cutting. . . If these are some of the faults, there are corresponding virtues. Poems like 'The Triumph of Education' and 'A Chromium Plated Hat' have a pertinent wit, and there are many highly pleasant surprises. . . Further, throughout the book the incidence of lines which contain genuine excitement shows that they are not merely accidental or haphazard." Fleming MacLiesh
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 1 '47 600w

NERBER, JOHN. The spectre image. 56p $2
Simon & Schuster
811 46-5610

"The poetry of John Nerber belongs to the post-experimental stage of modern verse. Without inheriting any of the technical and intellectual strictures of the nineteen-twenties and thirties, it profits by the lessons of two decades to produce the kind of verse formalism that is becoming the poetic characteristic of the forties. Such forms already belong to the public domain, but in Nerber's case they are personalized by a greater lyricism than is commonly found in thinking poets of our time." U S Quarterly Bkl

"With his noticeable technical gift, and his experience of the war, which might have made him one of the more interesting post-war poets, the slim little volume turns out to be a disappointment, after all. It should not—and will not—attract much notice."

— + Kirkus 14:237 My 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Arthur Mizener
Nation 163:302 S 14 '46 200w

Reviewed by M. L. Rosenthal
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 My 18 '47 200w

Reviewed by A. J. M. Smith
Poetry 70:155 Je '47 1250w

"His verse is more rugged and less witty than Miss Bishop's; but the point of view is similar; and both poets take advantage of the techniques developed by Pound and Eliot." George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 12 '47 100w

"The lack of a central motif in his volume, or an efficient cause, so to speak, is a serious weakness, but for many poets this is the central weakness of the age itself. Nerber writes as easily of the rural scene as of New York, and deals with persons he knows or persons in the abstract with a kind of cold pleasure. This participation at a distance is probably not intentional but lends an air of fine deliberation to his work."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:22 Mr '47 130w

NERMAN, EINAR. Fairy tales from the North; il. by the author. 128p $3 Knopf
Fairy tales 46-7904

"Here is a collection, arranged in three compartments, of tales from Sweden, from Norway and from Denmark. . . We have in this collection thirteen little masterpieces, some of them already retold by famous authors, and now brought in some cases to a younger vocabulary. Most of them are familiar, some delightful for showing how bits of one fairy tale can get into another. . . We have 'Little Lisa' said to be appearing for the first time in America, and an enchanting little story, 'The Princess on the Glass Hill' based on the tale by Selma Lagerlöf." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by K. H. McAlarney
Library J 71:1809 D 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 N 24 '46 360w

NERUDA, PABLO. Residence on earth, and other poems [tr. by Angel Flores]. 205p $3.50
New directions
861 47-1704

Contains Spanish texts and English translations of poems by a contemporary Chilean poet. "Neruda, who is now in his forties, has had a significant career in the Chilean diplomatic service, which has carried him to many parts of the world. . . In technique he has assimilated and blended the best elements from such diverse schools as French Surrealism, symbolism as we know it in Eliot, and realism that has affinities with the style of Kafka. Neruda was in Madrid during the Civil War. The experience profoundly affected him, and much of his finest work is an expression of the people's hatred for fascism." (Publisher's note)

"Chronologically arranged, the poems reveal an increasingly solitary spirit. The earlier work shimmers with imaginative excitement. But as his conviction intensifies, Neruda's style grows more and more austere." Margaret Avison

Canadian Forum 27:21 Ap '47 650w

Reviewed by Kenneth Rockwell
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 20 '47 270w

"Except for some slips, no doubt the result of occupational fatigue, the translations by Angel Flores of these pieces are exactly as good as the original Spanish. . . To the American reader, because these poems are only now available in translation, they have a historical rather than an intrinsic interest. In tone and spirit, they belong to the Parisian 1920's; yet though they seem to strive after it, they lack the factitious paranoid fury of the early Aragon and the absolute, quiet, anagogic certainty of Eluard." René Blanc-Roos
+ Nation 164:160 F 8 '47 1150w

"This is the first large-scale introduction to the American public of a truly important contemporary poet. The general excellence of the poems selected is high; the range, if not fully representative, is wide." B. D. Wolfe
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 N 23 '47 600w

"The flavor of Neruda is clearly political in the noblest sense. He is primarily a poet who combines words with a stinging originality. Unlike many writers of free verse, he usually remembers that it must be verse as well as free. Angel Flores' translation is excellent." Milton Bracker

+ N Y Times p10 Ja 26 '47 320w

"Neruda combines a Surrealist technique of more than usual splendor with a remarkable emotional drive that definitely distinguishes him from Surrealism's more artificial practitioners. He takes things to heart, has a range of moods, and wrings a bitter sonority out of traditional Spanish rhetoric. The translations, which face the originals, are painstaking, if rather literal and stiff."

+ — New Yorker 22:99 D 21 '46 100w

"To begin, perversely, with the defects of the book. They are not many, and the only one worth discussing at length is its insufficiency of range. This is an ungrateful complaint to make at a time of soaring production costs: one should be thankful for what one gets, especially when the offering is as rich as it is here. . . Even the punctuation in Neruda says the same thing. There is no system (or, if there is, I have never discovered it) governing this reckless hurling about of commas which disrupts sense, throwing phrases back upon each other in impossible combinations. Rather it is the contempt of a system, expressed by a man who is, at least in these Residencia poems, beyond order. It is utterly unlike Eliot. . . The confusion of imagery and the distortion of syntax pose problems for the translator which do not appear at first sight. The unflinching tact with which Flores has handled these problems is what makes Residencia on Earth worthy of comparison with its original. It is one of the fine translations of our time." Dudley Fitts

NERUDA, PABLO—Continued

Poetry 70:150 Je '47 1450w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 16 '47
50w

"The fifty-four poems of Neruda's 'Residencia on Earth,' with Spanish texts facing Angel Flores's admirable translations, are chosen with balance and discernment from seven volumes (one 'in progress') published from 1925 to 1945. They demonstrate the transition of the man and the poet from uninterpretable voices to simple words; from the will to die to the refusal to be extinguished; from poetry of the iridescence and corruption on the surface of life to poetry of the spark and ember inmost in death." Muna Lee

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Ap 26 '47 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p550 O 25 '47
750w

NETTL, PAUL. Story of dance music. 370p
$4.75 Philosophical lib.

781.5 Dance music 47-31361

The author, formerly of Prague and Vienna, is now at the University of Indiana. He follows his subject from animal forms of music and dancing to the modern ballet theater. "Dr. Nettl has also put into it many lively scraps of antiquarian information and has quoted as illustrations many snatches of dance tunes—obscure ones of the fourteenth to eighteenth centuries. These brief illustrations, like a sheaf of musical snapshots, form the book's most vivid feature. Among Dr. Nettl's specialties are the dance music of Gluck, Mozart, and Beethoven, dance tunes by forgotten Austrian and Czech musicians of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, Viennese court festivities, Renaissance dance manuals, the origins of the waltz, Czech 'nationalist' composers." (Nation) Indexes. Bibliography.

"Dr. Nettl's previous studies in this subject qualify him as an expert; this should have been a valuable book. Actually, though based on sound principles of history and psychology, and full of information it varies widely in completeness, logical organization and scholarly treatment. Martha Graham receives the dedication and had written the preface, but neither she nor Louis Horst is mentioned within; little is said of modern dance or jazz. Lack of even the rudiments of editorial style adds to the difficulty of reading Dr. Nettl's uncertain English." George Hanson

+ — Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 100w

"The book does not tell this 'story' in a readable way—it is far too respectable as musicology for that. . . For the general reader it is fun to hear that Mozart danced Harlequin in a half-hour pantomime he arranged for a party at his house, and that Beethoven liked very much to dance though he never quite learned to keep time. But as a history of its subject the book is poorly proportioned, its chronological sequences are blurred, and the text is afflicted with generalizations." Edwin Denby

+ — Nation 165:566 N 22 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. P. Cahn

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 30 '47
450w

NEUBURG, EVELYN. California lure; the Golden state in pictures; prologue and epilogue by Oscar Lewis. 31p $5 Calif. lure pubs, box 128, station C, Pasadena 6

917.94 California—Description and travel
47-307

Collection of photographs (with brief paragraphs as captions) showing every aspect of the California scene—mountains and seashore, rose-covered cottages and Spanish missions, parks and playgrounds, forests and deserts.

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '47

NEUMANN, ROBERT. Children of Vienna. 223p $2.75 Dutton

47-30128

Pitiful and tragic story of six orphaned children living huddled together in the basement of a shattered house in Vienna. A Negro chaplain in the American army of occupation attempts to save them, and for a time things look brighter. And then everything goes wrong, and defeat and despair and death are their lot.

Booklist 43:206 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by E. D. Branch

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 23 '47
450w

"A book that seems somehow set in a vacuum—as hopeless in its outlook as the situation with which it deals. A disturbing, though sometimes difficult and confusing book."

Kirkus 15:6 Ja 1 '47 220w

"Realistic, vivid, sordid, yet somehow a call to a new evangel." J. E. Cross

Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 O 18 '46 260w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:34 Ap 28 '47 300w

"I wish many people would read 'The Children of Vienna' if only because of the talk among these benighted children, their eagerness, wickedness and innocence. I suppose what all of us most need in this disorganized world is a sense sometimes called 'understanding.' In giving us something of that sense about a little group of waifs and strays, 'Children of Vienna' is on the side of the angels. Nor should the portentous figure of the Reverend Smith be overlooked." F. T. Marsh

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
F 2 '47 550w

"Here are the elements of an exciting and stimulating story, and this short novel of Robert Neumann's is both—up to a point. Whether it is a satisfying book, in the sense that it leads the reader to a solution of the problem stated, is another question; but perhaps Neumann offers no solution because he sees none. In some ways 'Children of Vienna' is as much a play as a novel, and it is at its best where it sticks to the concise, powerful dialogue of the stage and at its weakest where Neumann permits his adult characters to speechify." Stefan Heym

+ N Y Times p12 F 2 '47 800w

"The most illuminating book about postwar Europe that I have read. Although it is called a novel, it is really a fairy tale, and a rather wonderful one, at that. . . Such a setup could have collapsed at any moment into the worst kind of sentimentality, but Mr. Neumann keeps us laughing instead—not out loud but inwardly, the sort of laughter that can be as deeply moving as terror or tears." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 22:74 F 1 '47 360w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47
150w

"Everything rings true in a fairy tale, even the story of a rather hardboiled displaced boy from Eastern Europe knowing the Atlantic Charter by heart and reciting it as a 'poem'; everything rings true, provided the fairy-tale teller waves the right kind of magic wand to enchant his listeners. Robert Neumann wields it. And he who doubts it, has to pay fifty-five smokes." F. C. Weiskopf

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 F 15 '47 450w

"Children of Vienna is a terrible document, an appalling measurement of contemporary facts against ideas. . . It is a terrible story, a terrible report in which factual truth takes on the universal truth of parable. It defeats all words of pity and leaves us without comment." Kate O'Brien

Spec 177:492 N 8 '46 650w

Time 49:110 F 17 '47 500w

"Mr. Neumann is a craftsman. Plumbing the depths of feeling, he is yet sensitive to the response he is arousing in his reader. His touch is delicate, the effect cumulative; brutal though the story is, he is too good an artist to blunt the reader's sensibilities with bludgeon blows."

Times [London] Lit Sup p533 N 2 '46 460w

NEUSCHEL, RICHARD F., and JOHNSON, HARRY TALLMAN. How to take physical inventory. 159p $2 McGraw

658.787 Inventories

46-11870

"Development of the inventory-taking organization and procedures, selection and training of personnel, physical preparation for the inventory and summary. Appendix contains instructions showing applications of the theory presented." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:129 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 70w

Management R 36:124 F '47 130w

NEUSCHUTZ, MRS LOUISE (MORGENSTERN). 5,000,000 casualties on the home front; with a foreword by Margaret Culkin Banning. 184p $3.50 Beechhurst press

614.8 Accidents—Prevention 47-12538

"This handbook of home safety presents lessons in accident prevention. . . Stories and playlets designed to teach good safety habits to children occupy a part of the book, while chapters on first aid are detailed and specific. A questionnaire and a list of suggested supplemental reading follow each chapter." Chicago Sun Book Week

Booklist 44:179 Ja 15 '48

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 28 '47 80w

"Miss Neuschutz covers the ground carefully and in detail, including a chapter on first aid, and so arranging her book that it may be used as an ideal text in schools in which attention is given to accident prevention. The layman, however, may read it and profit." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 3 '47 700w

NEVIN, MRS EVELYN C. Sign of the anchor. 157p il $2 Presbyterian bd.

47-5405

Lykon, a boy who lived in Corinth, during the days of that city's domination by Rome, is the hero. When his father is jailed as a Christian plotting to overthrow Nero, the boy is sent into slavery in Rome. Thanks to the mysterious sign of the anchor the boy is rescued and returns to Corinth which has been liberated.

Kirkus 15:432 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Dull historical story which fails to bring the period to life or to make the characters real and their reactions inevitable." E. W. Turpin

— Library J 72:1694 D 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Margaret Goodloe

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47 160w

NEVINS, ALLAN. Ordeal of the Union. 2v 593;590p il $10 Scribner

973.6 U.S.—History—1815-1861. U.S.—History—Civil war—Causes (47-11072)

Narrative history of the United States from 1847 thru 1857. "These two volumes begin a series in which the author hopes to write the history of the Civil War era. It will be primarily a narrative history; only a careful narrative can lay bare the inner meaning of the crisis, as only an ordered story can do justice to the suspense, drama, and human passion of the era. But room will be found for purely analytical and descriptive elements, and the whole civilization of the country will be brought under examination." (Pref) A third volume will bring the history up to the summer of 1861. Index.

"The three decades immediately preceding the War Between the States have attracted some of the finest talents in the field of American historical scholarship. Allan Nevins's Ordeal of the Union would seem destined to become a major contribution to the impressive list of studies dealing with that period of national travail and with its tragic denouement." J. H. Powers

+ Atlantic 181:125 Ja '48 550w

Booklist 44:66 O 15 '47

"I have read a good many books about this period, because of an inherited interest in the Civil War. Nevins's transcends all others in scale. He not only hits a nail on the head, but he seems to remember the nails he missed." G. N. Shuster

+ Commonweal 47:202 D 5 '47 420w

Kirkus 15:634 N 15 '47 170w

"Winner of the $10,000 Scribner prize in American history, this study, written in the crisp, telling style we have come to expect from Professor Nevins, superbly traces the course of an extremely important period in our history." Highly recommended." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 72:1267 S 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by R. W. Leopold

Nation 165:684 D 20 '47 1300w

"The volumes are written in clear, understandable and at times eloquent English and should at once take a position as the most authentic and unbiased history of the time." B. J. Hendrick

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 O 26 '47 3100w

"This kind of history is not meant to gather dust: it is intended, as was Macaulay's, to be read. Comprehensiveness of scope is combined with arresting detail, vastness with pleasing particularity, wide-searching analysis with colorful portrayal. The author knows the intricacies of the subject; the reader gets the distilled result." J. G. Randall

+ N Y Times p1 O 12 '47 2200w

"Substantial, objective, and illuminated by a lively intelligence."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 18 '47 50w

"Mr. Nevins writes excellently, never letting his discourse descend to that dead-level rehash of dates and names which too many of us were taught as history in our youth." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 23 '47 1100w

"'Ordeal of the Union' will immediately take its place as the standard history of the Fifties. It is ample, quick-moving, and accurate, and well deserves the Scribner $10,000 American history prize." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 O 18 '47 1250w

School & Society 67:15 Ja 3 '48 20w

NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE. Committee on medicine and the changing order. Medicine in the changing order; report of the Committee [Malcolm Goodridge, chairman]. (Studies) 240p $2 Commonwealth fund 610 Medicine—U.S.

"A report of the committee of the New York Academy of Medicine appointed to study the problems of medical administration under current conditions. The committee consisted of thirty-three physicians and seventeen others. The report considers such topics as the national health, medical care in urban and rural areas, public health services, hospitals, nursing and medical insurance." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by H. J. Morgan

Am J Pub Health 37:1188 S '47 380w

Reviewed by P. A. Dodd

Ann Am Acad 253:237 S '47 800w

Booklist 44:7 S 1 '47

NEW YORK ACADEMY OF MEDICINE—Cont.
Christian Century 64:559 Ap 30 '47 70w

"A valuable educational document for medical men." M. M. Davis

+ Nation 164:550 My 10 '47 600w

Reviewed by Waldemar Kaempffert
N Y Times p22 Je 29 '47 1400w

"Interesting reading for the layman. . . The Academy, in its exhaustive analysis of the medical scene, has placed its finger on most of the sore spots. . . But, when it comes to the problem of financing the cost of measures to extend and improve medical care, one gains the impression that it has feared to face the magnitude of the problem, and the implications of governmental responsibility for medical care, and has sought refuge in half-way measures that have already been discarded in other countries." E. P. Boas, M.D.

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:24 Jl 26 '47 1650w

Springf'd Union p9 Ap 10 '47 150w

"Much more might have been accomplished if the later chapters of the report had been infused with the same level of scholarship that is apparent in the earlier, historical ones. There is no evidence, for instance, that more than a superficial study of European health insurance experience was made. Few works are cited and these, with one or two exceptions, are secondary sources. . . The discussion of current legislative proposals in the United States is too brief to be weighty." M. M. Davis

+ — Survey G 36:307 My '47 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:191 Je '47 300w

NEW YORKER (periodical). Book of war pieces, 562p $5 Reynal

940.53082 World war, 1939-1945 47-11417

Selections from the New Yorker all pertaining to the war and covering events from London, September 3, 1939 to Hiroshima, August 6, 1945.

Booklist 44:132 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:456 Ag 15 '47 160w

"A few of the pieces seem a little too polished and contrived, but when bound together in 152 pages, the New Yorker war-reporting job adds up as the most detached, least phony and truest account that the war produced." Norman Grieser

+ — New Repub 118:28 Ja 19 '48 500w

"In a good many of these pieces, the untidy and disagreeable emotionalism which, after all, has its field day in wartime, is so securely enameled over that it cannot be seen at all. The prevailing tone is briskly and competently maintained, so that you do not, on the whole, feel uncomfortable about its subject matter, which is, on the whole, death. But this said the fact remains that it would be impossible to find better war reporting than there is in this book." Vincent Sheehan

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 N 23 '47 900w

"The skill and color of this writing make the usual official war reports look sick. . . These pieces are like letters home, and since Mother has taste and intelligence and a college degree, they must be civilized and suave and vivid. The exact chosen incident in verified particulars will give this record the texture of war experience. Sharp as the telling details are, easy as it is to look at personal miniatures, after a few hundred pages of total recall the effect becomes overpowering." D. A. Stauffer

+ — N Y Times p3 N 9 '47 1200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 17 '47 550w

"There is little of the simple, grass-roots humanity which illuminated Ernie Pyle's best writing. There is horror in the book, and sentiment, and stink. But it is all transmuted into something tasteful and temperate by the urbane prose of The New Yorker, as if these 562 pages were lifted right out of the magazine's own Department of Understatement. . . There is a certain poignancy about the book the editors may not have intended. It comes when after reading about 1944-45—when the watchword was unity and objectives were clear—you put down the volume and pick up today's newspaper." Lee Rogow

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 N 29 '47 800w

Springf'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 150w

NEWBY, P. H. Agents and witnesses. 254p $2.75 Doubleday

47-4065

The scene of this novel is an island (purely fictional) in the Mediterranean. The plot revolves around the attempt of a young man to stage a revolution which will make his father president. A number of people are drawn into this intrigue without knowing much about it, notably the chief character—a young French architect and the young girl with whom he is in love.

Reviewed by Enid Sheppard

Canadian Forum 27:167 O '47 170w

"As a matter of fact, nothing projected in the story comes to a head—it's all rather amorphous and confused. . . And yet one is still conscious of an elusive sort of charm in the author's style and conveying of mood."

+ — Kirkus 15:174 Mr 15 '47 250w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 My 16 '47 70w

"Mr. Newby has a remarkable talent for evoking an atmosphere, and his characters are closely observed. Unhappily, the present collection of people differs little from that in his previous novel, of which this is almost a postiche. There is a similar vaguely Mediterranean background, slightly out of focus so as not to detract, and the same sort of frustrated people who are not quite sure what they want from life. It is all very cleverly done; but from so promising a writer as Mr. Newby one expected a great deal more." John Morris

+ — New Statesman & Nation 33:358 My 17 '47 190w

Reviewed by J. D. Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Je 8 '47 550w

"This is the second novel by the talented young British writer, P. H. Newby, to appear in America in the last few months, and one can say without any hesitation that the effect is anti-climactic. The evocative and sensitive prose style that made 'Journey into the Interior' notable, is present in 'Agents and Witnesses,' but otherwise the present novel carries much less weight. Neither the characters nor the plot are significant enough to sustain each other or the reader's lasting interest; for the characters, while vividly drawn, only achieve a kind of literary reality. They evaporate once the book is closed." John Bicknell

+ — N Y Times p16 My 25 '47 650w

"A deceptively light novel with a deep undercurrent of emotional tension, in which Mr. Newby examines penetratingly, if inconclusively, the tragic quality in the lives of a number of unheroic, even trivial, people."

+ New Yorker 23:101 My 24 '47 160w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage

Spec 178:536 My 9 '47 350w

"There is little to be said of the book by way of criticism that may not appear somewhat unkind. Mr. Newby's determined rejection of the commonplace, or of what he conceives to be the commonplace, and his moments of clever observation both deserve acknowledgment, but the scene, the characters, the emotions and incidental statements of value in this novel lack the power to persuade."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p209 My 3 '47 430w

NEWCOMB, COVELLE (MRS ADDISON BURBANK). Cortez, the Conqueror; il. by Feodor Rojankovsky. 106p $3 Random house

B or 92 Cortés, Hernando—Juvenile literature 47-30849

The tale of the conquest of Mexico, which is told for children, tho the author "has not softened the violence of the story for younger readers." Illustrated with large sized drawings in black and white.

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 166:237 D '47 170w

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p1a N 19 '47 80w

"In a way the show book of the autumn, though Miss Newcomb's story of Hernan Cortez is written with nowhere near the sweep and rhythm of Rojankovsky's pictures."

Commonweal 47:151 N 21 '47 50w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 23:435 N '47 120w

"A dramatic episode, vividly recounted."
+ Kirkus 15:506 S 15 '47 160w

"Recommended not only for content but for distinguished illustrations by Feodor Rojankovsky." E. J. Anttonen

Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 70w

"The story is tensely told in a spirit of romantic hero worship; the effect is glittering."
M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
N 16 '47 360w

"The author has told the story of Cortez in brief, colorful form, with sympathy and accuracy. The many illustrations by Rojankovsky, several of them page size, are most attractive and help make this a book of unusual distinction." R. A. B.

+ N Y Times p43 N 16 '47 140w

"Illustrated with many stunning drawings in strong black and white. These drawings are so arresting, so dramatic that the book is a treasure for art lovers. Miss Newcomb has not softened the violence of the story for younger readers. . . One wonders what the young people of today will think of this book."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 O 18 '47 230w

NEWCOMB, REXFORD. Ceramic whitewares; history, technology and applications. 313p il $5 Pitman

666.3 Clay industries 47-1154

Study of the manufacture of all types of white-bodied ceramic articles, including the processes used for pottery, porcelain, and china. Includes a historical introduction by Carlton Atherton. Partial contents: Raw materials for ceramic bodies; Body preparation; Forming and drying the ware; Firing; Glazes and decoration; Ceramic products in the home; Electrical applications of whiteware products; Industrial uses of whiteware products. Index.

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

"It could very well be used as a textbook or as a ready reference to the subject of whitewares. The diagrams and illustrations are appropriate, well chosen, and up to date." R. M. Campbell

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1393 My 12 '47 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:4 Ja '47

NEWELL, MRS HOPE (HOCKENBERRY). The little old woman carries on; pictures by Anne Merriman Peck. 64p $1.50 Nelson

47-19863

Further adventures of the little old woman who used her head, in order to arrive at such odd conclusions. This time she goes traveling with her pets, the geese and the rats, but finally decides that it is better to stay at home. For ages four to eight.

Booklist 43:313 Je 1 '47

"Good to read aloud to the 4- to 8-year-olds, these adventures in everyday housekeeping and travel sparkle with delightfully foolish logic."
Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 18 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:164 Mr 15 '47 60w

"Recommended." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 60w

"These Little Old Woman stories . . . have the matter-of-fact touch necessary to good nonsense, enough repetition to build up interest, and a basic idea found in practically every folk literature going. . . Quite possibly some of today's little readers may hand this Old Woman on to another generation by word of mouth—and that's the way a story becomes a folktale." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
My 4 '47 400w

"Children and grown-ups alike will love the way the old woman reasons, and the exaggerated truths in human character will cause many laughs. It is a grand book to read aloud to children of assorted ages. The illustrations are just right, especially the end-papers." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p22 My 11 '47 130w

NEWELL, MRS HOPE (HOCKENBERRY). Story of Christina; il. by Anne Merriman Peck. 207p $2.50 Harper

47-30885

When Christina Little, called Teeney, lived on the farm with her cross uncle and aunt she was so unhappy she ate a great deal and became very fat. Then she joined a circus as "the fat girl" and there she was so happy and contented she grew quite thin. But though Teeney lost her job as "the fat girl" she remained with the circus in a more suitable job and was happy ever after.

Chicago Sun Book Week p6a N 19 '47 140w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:42 Ja '48 150w

"Despite the bizarre circumstances of the story, the plot and characters remain unsensational and simple. The high level of interest is sustained throughout and teen agers will find sympathetic handling of varied teen-age problems as they are solved by the young people in the story."

+ Kirkus 15:339 Jl 1 '47 170w

"Recommended." M. M. Smith

Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 70w

"Is a topnotch story for teen-age girls. . . This is a real story of personalities bubbling over with joyous reality and the knowledge that one makes one's own happiness. Girls will add Christina to their list of the people they like best for many years to come." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p41 O 5 '47 180w

"Told with natural humor and peopled with live and enjoyable characters, the 'Story of Christina' might well be the choice for the 1947 Newbery medal." Natale Mayo

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47 200w

"Here is a circus story with a different approach. . . We cannot help being reminded here of Rachel Field's 'Hepatica Hawks,' although for subtlety and perceptiveness the two books have little in common. While this is lacking in sensitiveness and effective characterization, it has color and novelty and is entertaining. The variation of the Cinderella theme should make it popular."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:50 N 15 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:136 O '47

NEWKIRK, LOUIS VEST, and ZUTTER, LA VADA. Your craft book. 212p $5 Int. textbook

680 I handicraft

47-30140

Instructions, illustrated with large, simple drawings and diagrams, for making toys and games, cards and decorations, masks and puppets, woven and knitted articles, etc.

Reviewed by Elizabeth Johnson

Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 30w

"An expensive book that will be a good purchase if additional handicraft material is needed."

Wis Lib Bul 43:71 Ap '47

NEWLIN, DIKA. Bruckner, Mahler, Schoenberg. 293p $3.50 King's crown press
780.81 Bruckner, Anton. Mahler, Gustav. Schönberg, Arnold 47-2162

"This book portrays the creative life of the three composers, Bruckner, Mahler, and Schoenberg—proving the existence of a definite link connecting the work of all three, and forming the basis for what the author calls the 'Neo-Viennese' school of composition." (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:29 S 15 '47

"The author is more than successful in her attempt, and the book will appeal to the musicologist or the well-versed music lover. This is distinctly not a book for the layman who wishes to read biography, however. The work is not excessively burdened with technical terms, but its approach is sufficiently scholarly to demand a good knowledge of music and its fundamentals." T. V. Enslin

+ — Crozer Q 24:378 O '47 180w

"The cultural and musical background is based on learning rather than insight which leads to some misqualifications. The antithesis of faith and race is, to say the least, extremely dangerous. Book might serve as a first introduction for readers equipped with the fundamentals of theory." Wolf Franck

Library J 72:465 Mr 15 '47 110w

"A painstaking, accurate and often greatly illuminating study. . . Detailed and helpful analyses of their chief works."

+ Theatre Arts 31:82 O '47 60w

NEWTON, JOSEPH. Introduction to metallurgy. 2d ed 645p il $5.50 Wiley

669 Metallurgy 47-31206

"Excellent text on introduction to the field of metallurgy as a whole; provides a foundation for advanced and special studies in metallurgical subjects. Largely rewritten with new material on pyrometallurgy, corrosion and powder metallurgy. Illustrated." (Library J) For first edition see Book Review Digest 1939. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1616 N 15 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:53 J1 '47

NICHOLL, LOUISE TOWNSEND. Life is the flesh. 52p $2.75 Dutton

811 47-27075

"A collection of some thirty poems meditative in mood and quietly intense. One of the finest, 'How Beautiful It Is' deals with the dualism of human experience which is the prevailing theme of the book." Sat R of Lit

Kirkus 15:361 J1 1 '47 170w

"The brevity of the book and of the individual poems gives one the impression that Miss Nicholl is an intelligent and severe critic of her own work, which is patently not an anarchic outpouring of her every random thought but a restrained expression of ideas long and seriously contemplated. There is a certain coldness about even her best poems that may come from much rewriting and polishing, but one must be ungrateful indeed, in our age, to chide a poet for an excessive concern with craftsmanship." Milton Crane

N Y Times p34 O 12 '47 400w

"Miss Nicholl's language, like her conviction of immortality and final good, is clear and persuasive. Her decorations are restrained, her use of metaphor is sparing. . . The unobtrusive power of Miss Nicholl's work and her own critical selectiveness, combine to give this volume unusual distinction." Robert Hilkey

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 N 1 '47 500w

NICHOLS, BOB. Skeet and how to shoot it. 177p il $3.75 Putnam

799.31 Trap shooting 47-4835

First published 1939 (Book Review Digest 1939). The 1947 edition is a revised reprint omitting many of the illustrations used in the earlier edition.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

"Expert Bob Nichols, pioneer 'shot' and pioneer writer on the game, has probably aided more gunners to proficiency in skeet and field wingshooting than any other one person."

His manual . . . is comprehensive in scope, rich in material and written in a home-spun manner that gives 'Skeet' an arresting style despite the heaviness of some phases of the sport." Frank Elkins

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 10 '47 360w

NICHOLS, JAMES HASTINGS. Primer for Protestants. 151p $1 Assn. press

284 Protestantism 47-30372

"The book is written for the man—Protestant or Catholic, minister or layman—who thinks that the significance of Protestantism lies in protest. It goes back to the original meaning of the term, the meaning which its Latin source (pre testari, to be a witness for) makes clear. And it shows by means of two approaches, one historical and the other doctrinal, this affirmative, positive content in the Protestant movement and witness." Christian Century

Booklist 43:354 J1 15 '47

"Dr. Nichols' book may, and should, prove one of the most valuable to reach American Protestant congregations in many years. Its appearance now, on the heels of the Inter-seminary Series which has been so warmly praised in these columns, is one more indication of the mental and spiritual stirring that is growing in Protestant ranks. . . [It] is done with a clarity and freshness of style that makes every page good reading, but without the slightest trace of any such 'writing down' to the reader as the first word in the book's title might suggest." Paul Hutchinson

+ Christian Century 64:948 Ag 6 '47 1100w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:1521 D 10 '47 370w

Reviewed by T. F. Opie

Churchman 161:19 O 1 '47 110w

"While the ground is covered adequately it seems doubtful if young people not already committed to the church would read through the book. An assumption is made of interest in the church, its history and ecclesiastical organization, such as is not patent in the characteristic youth of today. But those already interested need a book like this to make their allegiance intelligent."

+ Kirkus 15:305 Je 15 '47 190w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 17 '47 50w

"It is a small book, but every chapter is a valuable one. . . The facts that Mr. Nichols sets down are not new, of course, but his presentation of them is concise and valuable and his clear uncompromising statement of Protestant principles should be stimulating reading for anyone bewildered either by the furious winds of doctrine blowing about the world or by the widespread and dangerous confusion between tolerance and indifference." W. H. H.

+ Springf'd Union p14 J1 17 '47 250w

NICHOLS, MARY EUDORA (EVE BROWN, pseud). Champagne Cholly; the life and times of Maury Paul. 324p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Paul, Maury Henry Biddle 47-3435

The life story of the late Maury Paul who wrote society gossip columns for the Hearst papers under the name of Cholly Knickerbocker. The author was his secretary, who at times wrote his column for him when he was indisposed. Index.

Reviewed by Adeline Fitzgerald

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 11 '47 400w

Cleveland Open Shelf p9 My '47

Kirkus 15:121 F 15 '47 170w

"His biography is appropriately flip, cynical, hardboiled and considerably more amusing than its subject ever was." E. F. Walbridge
Library J 72:634 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Although she had a great loyalty to Maury Paul, and obviously a good deal of admiration for certain of his manifold abilities, Miss Brown was not fooled by him. She maintains a nice balance. . . This is a pretty good story, sometimes very funny, indeed, and it may even be crammed with social significance—depending on how one looks at it." Stanley Walker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Ap 27 '47 850w

"Like the champagne which he saw consumed by thousands of quarts (but which he seldom drank himself), this biography of the late Maury Paul sparkles and bubbles with intimate tales of New York's social world during the lavish Twenties and the thrifty Thirties. And unlike some vintages, it never goes flat." F. A. Wrensch
+ N Y Times p27 My 11 '47 650w

"A fairly entertaining fin-de-siècle item, but rather scurrilous on the whole."
New Yorker 23:99 Ap 26 '47 120w

NICKERSON, HOFFMAN. New slavery. 271p $3.50 Doubleday

331.57 Labor and laboring classes—Russia.
Labor, Compulsory 47-31242

"Defines proletarian as 'a man legally free but without productive property and also without the spirit of civic responsibility which goes with ownership.' Sees the proletariat as particularly the victims of economic instability fostered by finance-capitalism and in turn as a source for further explosive social instability. Notes the Marxian contribution in pointing up the plight of the proletariat, then castigates protective welfare legislation as a solution to the problem inevitably leading to state serfdom. Examines, in detail, state serfdom in Soviet Russia. Suggests some system of general property ownership as an antidote to the spread of a similar serfdom throughout the world. Interprets, on a world scale, the significance of Dallin and Nicolaevsky." Library J

Kirkus 15:415 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Original, provocative, and obviously crucial." R. E. Kingery
+ Library J 72:1191 S 1 '47 140w

"This author has written a number of valuable studies of military strategy and tactics. His present work, however, deals with the philosophy of government. His theories are not of recent maturity. . . Such sentiments would prove interesting to some millions of Europeans had not the crematories of Buchenwald, Dachau and Maidanek done their work so efficiently." Harrison Salisbury

N Y Times p54 N 9 '47 1050w

NICOLL, ALLARDYCE. History of late nineteenth-century drama, 1850-1900. 2v v 1 $3.50; v2 $5.50 Macmillan

822.09 English drama—History and criticism 47-5128

"We have before us the story of English drama, beginning in a period of degeneration and advancing toward a period second only to the Elizabethan in brilliancy of accomplishment. How the drama emerged gradually from what Mr. Nicoll calls 'the gray shadows of the Victorian stage' into the daylight of the modern era is the subject. Proceeding by decades from the '50s through the '90s, the historian associates each period of ten years with two major dramatists: Boucicault and Tom Taylor; Robertson and H. J. Byron; Gilbert and Albery; Jones and Pinero; and Wilde and Shaw. . . Mr. Nicoll recounts this story in his first, slim volume. His enormous second volume is a check-list of some twenty thousand plays of this half century." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by Harold Hobson

Christian Science Monitor p19 D 7 '46 650w

"Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:164 Ja 15 '47 60w

"It cannot have been easy to resist the temptation to allot space on the plays' merits as literature, but that is where Professor Nicoll succeeds; his survey is justly proportioned and a true history." F. H.-W.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 1 '46 300w

Reviewed by S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ap 20 '47 1100w

"Mr. Nicoll's study of Shaw is the most brilliant passage in the book. Oscar Wilde, Henry Arthur Jones and the others are in turn analyzed. This is a fine if not exciting work which brings the result of enormous research, of careful scholarly thought, of genuine devotion to an ideal, to the student, the historian and the writer. Every theatre collection in the country will rejoice in Professor Nicoll's latest work and will demand more." George Freedley

+ N Y Times p14 My 18 '47 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 25 '47 60w

"It is a scholarly compendium for the use of scholars. As such it possesses all those merits we have grown to expect of one of our masters of dramatic research." Norris Houghton

+ Sat R of Lit 30:42 Je 7 '47 800w

"Mr. Nicoll's indefatigable energy in assembling and checking all this data while directing the Department of Drama at Yale, serving with the British Embassy in Washington during the war or (as at present) holding the chair of English Language and Literature in the University of Birmingham is impressive indeed. He has long been one of the outstanding historians of the theatre. His latest volumes merely emphasize the fact and confirm his position among the 'indispensable' authorities for every library."

+ Theatre Arts 31:76 My '47 480w

Times [London] Lit Sup p445 S 21 '46 4800w

Reviewed by H. T. Perry

Yale R n s 37:170 autumn '47 650w

NIEMOLLER, MARTIN. Dachau sermons; tr. by Robert H. Pfeiffer. 97p $1.50 Harper

252 Sermons 47-658

"Six sermons, preached to his fellow prisoners in the . . . fatal Dachau camp, the first on Christmas Eve, 1944, the last on Easter Monday 1945 shortly before the arrival of American occupation forces brought release. The characteristic common to all these sermons is the deep penetration to the foundations of spiritual health and strength beneath whatever untoward circumstances may destroy comfort and threaten death." Christian Century

Booklist 43:235 Ap 1 '47

Christian Century 64:48 Ja 8 '47 100w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 24:190 Ap '47 200w

"Direct and simple gospel sermons, poignant and moving because preached in prison, to prisoners and by a prisoner. There have been many greater sermons preached, but few more eloquent human documents produced."

Kirkus 15:59 F 1 '47 170w

"They are notable for their simple and direct reaffirmations of some fundamental articles of faith."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 23 '47 50w

NIEMOLLER, MARTIN. Of guilt and hope. [tr. by Renee Spodheim]. 79p $2 Philosophical lib.

274.3 Germany—Religion. Church and state

Two sermons, a letter and an interview recorded by an American army chaplain, all expressing Pastor Niemöller's feelings on the guilt of the Germans and the church for not opposing the Nazis more strongly.

NIEMOLLER, MARTIN—Continued
 Booklist 43:235 Ap 1 '47

"While suffering from poor translation, the book is a valuable source for any study of the future of religion in Germany." J. F. Davidson
 + Canadian Forum 27:72 Je '47 210w

Christian Century 64:435 Ap 2 '47 20w

Reviewed by K. M. Chworowsky
 Churchman 161:17 Je 1 '47 190w

"This book is of significance because of its author, not because of its contents. As a matter of fact, it is a slight volume, both in size and in the nature of its contents. . . But such has been the furor created by Niemoller's recent visit to the United States that many will wish to read his every message, even if they are not very profound and would be of little importance if they came from any other Christian leader."

Kirkus 15:161 Mr 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by A. C. Dieffenbach
 N Y Times p20 My 25 '47 430w

"Some people will be annoyed by a note of whining here and there, and probably few will be able to swallow one sentence, in which the Pastor attempts to ease his people's conscience. It is from the sermon that was addressed to all Germans and that gives the book its title, and it reads, in part, 'You know, Our Lord Jesus cannot ask us what we cannot do, for He bears our burden and our guilt.'"

New Yorker 23:103 Mr 8 '47 160w

NILES, BLAIR (RICE) (MRS ROBERT NILES, Jr), ed, Journeys in time; from the halls of Montezuma to Patagonia's plains; a treasury, garnered from four centuries of writers (1519-1942) with comments, profiles, and personal experiences, 404p $4 Coward-McCann

980.082 Latin America 46-11931

Anthology of travel literature, showing the reactions of travellers to Latin America from the time of the Conquistadors to 1942. Each section is prefaced by a profile of the author, and includes personal experiences and comment. No index.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun Book Week p12 N 24 '46 650w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 12 '47 240w

"Despite the lack of discrimination, [the compiler] has performed a great service to the new North American interest in the southern half of this hemisphere by collecting so much of the best that has been written about it. The very variety of the selections mirrors that of the land which we are beginning to realize is not one but many. Though Mrs. Niles' romantic enthusiasm is stronger than her critical sense, and her book would be the better for some omissions of both selections and editorial matter, it is the most absorbing and revealing single volume on the intangibles of Latin America which has come this reviewer's way. It is also an excellent introduction to some neglected classics of English travel literature." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 45:380 Ja 24 '47 550w

Kirkus 14:573 N 1 '46 120w

"Fragments all, but evocative fragments in a single pattern that has been woven in the mind of Blair Niles as she remembers her reading and her journeying. A highly personal anthology that should give pleasure to all admirers of Miss Niles's own books, to all armchair travelers of poetic sensibility, and to all who, like the anthologist, have taken journeys in time through the Latin-American lands and learned to understand something of their spirit." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 29 '46 1150w

"'Journeys in Time' can be read with pleasure for its descriptions of nature, for its glimpses of Latin America's colorful history and for its sketches of native life. Some of the best sections are Mrs. Niles' own contributions and her running biographical comment on the writers included. She has skillfully arranged her text to capture that aspect of Latin America which most appeals to the love of adventure in all of us, the haunting sense that the southern continent is somehow the last citadel of the unknown." H. R. Hays

 + N Y Times p9 Ja 12 '47 750w

NIMS, JOHN FREDERICK. Iron pastoral. 86p $2.50 Sloane

811

47-4500

First book of poems by an American scholar, who is an associate professor of English at the University of Notre Dame, and an editor of Poetry.

"Since Carl Sandburg's 'Chicago Poems' appeared in 1916, there has been no volume of city poetry that compares favorably with Nims' 'The Iron Pastoral.'" H. C. Webster

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 20 '47 550w

"There are several things to be grateful for in these poems by John Frederick Nims. One is a blunting of the social and mental pieties of contemporary poetry. The concern is there—with death and danger, with the evasions and frauds of this hunted world—but it is not too fashionably spoken. I think Nims has too much of an eye for existence to enjoy playing mental metrics and too much humor to let himself be caught up in the self-conscious arrogance of some of the metropolitan poets. I also like Nims's energy. He is in a great hurry with his images sometimes. They load and clog his lines. But he sees. He has a direct and masculine delight in the facts and details around him. . . . When all credit has been given these poems . . . one wishes that they could break away from their pile of symbols and images, for the end result is confusion." John Hay

+ Commonweal 45:572 Mr 21 '47 500w

"Nims is a new voice worth listening to."

+ Kirkus 15:235 Ap 15 '47 120w

Library J 72:890 Je 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Parker Tyler

Nation 165:79 Jl 19 '47 500w

"John Frederick Nims's first book of poems reveals sprightly wit combined with social and moral integrity, sensuous responsiveness combined with an inquisitive intellect. He is capable of being very light and playful." M. L. Rosenthal

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 29 '47 550w

"Mr. Nims' book is written in a new language—often witty and brilliant, at times unpolished, but always refreshing to the eye and ear. And, fortunately, for both the poet and his reader, the book is not a mere collection of new poems but is a book in itself, each poem in it distinctly related to the title and the city in its foreground." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p36 My 25 '47 650w

"Sharp-sighted and keen-witted though he is, Nims does not release us, as he should, into the world of the imagination. He continually hampers that escape not only by his artfulness, his involutions, and his studied grotesquerie but by a fundamental lack of humility of motive. The dominant tone of the poems is one of knowing all—well, almost all—the answers. So Nims' ability, in his metaphors and similes, to create a relation between the seemingly unrelated, as well as his frequent fresh angle of approach, become but incidental virtues. The greatest gifts of ingenuity cannot make up for the lack of a basic seriousness of intention." Louise Bogan

— + New Yorker 23:102 Ap 5 '47 600w

"The flaws in the book are those of much young poetry. I have spoken of epigrammatic insistence. Closely allied to it is an overvivacity of diction, as though the poet were in constant dread of being detected in a commonplace." Dudley Fitts

Poetry 71:149 D '47 950w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '47 150w

"Without wishing to fasten the kiss of death, from a much older and more conservative poet, upon the vivid first book of a young and vigorous one, the work of John Frederick Nims seems to me to rank high among modern verse. . . . A good poet is sometimes more inclined toward extravagance than a mediocre one; and Mr. Nims is a good poet. Ordinarily his sense of balance and sense of humor do not fail him." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 Mr 22 '47 750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:243 S '47 180w

NIN, ANAIS (MRS IAN HUGO). Children of the albatross. 182p $2.75 Dutton

47-11456

"The 'Children of the Albatross' are Djuna, Sabrina, Lillian, Donald, Michael, Jay, Paul, Lawrence. Though not children in years, they have no last names. . . . Anais Nin's characters are children of light and movement, artists, bohemians, dancers. Floating through the studios, cafés and carnivals of Paris, they are concerned principally with their egos, their dreams and their relationships with each other." N Y Times

Kirkus 15:440 Ag 15 '47 110w

"What Miss Nin records are subjective states, configurations of character, the fields of electric tension, movement and resistance in human relationships. She defines these with elegance and insight in apothegmatic general statements of a sometimes pretentious sort with their carefully designed series of parallel constructions. . . . The result is an abstract, psychic music, a dance of generalities and types, charming and suggestive in a narrowly romantic way." R. G. Davis

N Y Times p36 N 23 '47 800w

"Another demonstration of Miss Nin's free-wheeling sensitivity and total disregard for the conventional framework of a novel. . . . Despite a generous use of incandescent metaphors and images, the author's attempt to light up some of the clouded regions of the human personality is successful only about half the time; frequently she seems to be merely rambling on."

New Yorker 23:131 N 8 '47 80w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin

Sat R of Lit 30:16 D 20 '47 750w

NOBLE, RANSOM ELWOOD. New Jersey progressivism before Wilson. 175p $2 Princeton univ. press

974.9 New Jersey—Politics and government A46-5138

"A case history of the subject, to explain the political background of Wilson's achievements as state governor. The author is Assistant Professor of History at Pratt Institute." Current Hist

"This is a careful work of scholarship, clearly if not inspiringly written. But it also leaves many questions about New Jersey Progressivism unanswered. One would like to know more, for example, about the relations of New Jersey Progressivism with both antecedent American liberalism and the national Progressive movement." G. E. Mowry

Am Hist R 52:761 J1 '47 800w

Reviewed by K. W. Hechler

Ann Am Acad 249:195 Ja '47 500w

Current Hist 11:510 D '46 30w

"This slender volume contains the first penetrating analysis of eastern Progressivism. . . . On all save the question of origins, Noble's study of the movement in New Jersey will stand as definitive." C. McA. Destler

+ J Pol Econ 55:174 Ap '47 950w

"Few scholarly works are readable, brief, and at the same time entirely comprehensive. Such a book is New Jersey Progressivism before Wilson." A. S. Link

+ Pol Sci Q 62:157 Mr '47 800w

"Scholarly, detailed, and very readable."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:321 D '46 180w

NOLAN, JEANNETTE (COVERT) (MRS VAL NOLAN). Florence Nightingale; il. by George Avison. 209p $2.50 Messner

E or 92 Nightingale, Florence—Juvenile literature 46-8374

Biography of Florence Nightingale for the junior and senior high school girl. It traces Miss Nightingale's life from childhood to her death in 1910, but stresses the years of her greatest activity, when "the lady with the lamp" was one of England's most famous women.

Booklist 43:191 F 15 '47

Kirkus 14:392 Ag 15 '46 90w

"Readable, human account, not overly fictionalized and apparently based on authentic sources. . . . Both junior and senior high school girls will read this eagerly. Highly recommended for young people's collections." Margaret Scoggin

+ Library J 72:86 Ja 1 '47 80w

"Biography for the earlier teens has made a place for itself somewhere between the novel and the so-called fictionalized biography for adults; if it is well done, it can be uncommonly useful to its special audience, and this book is uncommonly well done. It is easy to lose one's temper over Florence Nightingale and even easier to sentimentalize her; this took place with intensity during her lifetime and has been kept up on both sides by her biographers. To maintain a straight path between these extremes is not the easiest thing to do, and that Miss Nolan so seldom slides toward either is worth noting." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ja 5 '47 320w

Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:58 Mr '47

NOLDE, OTTO FREDERICK, ed. Toward world-wide Christianity. (Interseminary ser) 263p $1.50 Harper

280 Church unity 47-171

"The areas and means of achieving cooperation among Christian churches, with special attention to the American scene. Surveys ecumenical history in less detail than does Brown's Toward a united church but discusses more fully goals and methods. Bibliography." (Booklist) No index.

Booklist 43:216 Mr 15 '47

"The list of contributors, every one of them a man of light and leading, is enough to make the reader sit up and take notice. The book is one that ought to be widely read, studied and discussed, topic by topic. My Uncle Jerome, who was editor of this paper's predecessor, a little more than fifty years ago, seldom reviewed a book without saying, 'This book should be in every preacher's library.' It is a statement I never use, but I refrain from using it here only because it ought to be in the libraries of many persons besides preachers, and on the tables of many who do not have libraries." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:271 F 26 '47 1400w

Reviewed by C. L. Willard

Churchman 161:17 Je 1 '47 220w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:249 S '47 100w

NORBERG, SVERRE. Operation Moscow. 319p $3.50 Dutton

947.084 Communism, Russia—Foreign relations. World politics 47-4440

A former chief of the Northern European regional section of UNRRA reviews the Soviet postwar policy. He distinguishes between the Russian people and their leaders, and insists that it is the leaders, not the people, who are responsible for the present situation, and offers suggestions to bring about world peace instead of another war.

"A rambling, unauthentic propaganda piece, made up of half truths and a convenient memory, which adds nothing to understanding of the Russian problem, except fuel to the fire."

— Kirkus 15:328 Je 15 '47 170w

NORBERG, SVERRE—Continued

"Often dogmatic, voluble, frequently superficial, especially in its application of the terms and methods of psychology to world politics. Sometimes shocking, against the pastoral background of the author. Not essential in general collections." R. E. Kingery
— Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 S
28 '47 110w

"Dr. Norberg's analysis is important. It is important primarily because he is a studious, perceptive observer of the Western world who has reached the not too reluctant conclusion that an agreement between America and Russia is impossible. . . In a study so diffuse as that of Dr. Norberg it is difficult to find a point specific enough to challenge. But one can question the statement that 'to the Politburo Teheran loomed up as a victory more stupendous even than Stalingrad.' To an observer who was in Russia when the implications of Teheran were being absorbed, such an allegation is bound to seem unrealistic." Harrison Salisbury
N Y Times p13 Ag 24 '47 800w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer
Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 30 '47 900w

NORDHOFF, WILLIAM A. Machine-shop estimating. 486p il $6 McGraw

621.75 Machine shop practice 47-1371

"Provides a scientific basis for evaluating the performance of machine shop operators by showing how to estimate the time it should require to perform a job. The book lists all of the elements of operations performed in an average machine shop and establishes reasonable time values for their execution by the average operator. All machine operations are fully described and various methods of estimating the time required to fabricate machined parts are explained. Tables supply machinery elements which are generally variable. Sample estimates are shown for all machine operations to assist the reader in doing his own estimating." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 90w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:11 Ja '47

NORLING, MRS JOSEPHINE (STEARNS). Pogo's lamb; a story of wool [il. by] Ernest Norling. 44p $1.25 Holt

Wool—Juvenile literature 47-30279

In this story of the boy John, his dog Pogo and their friends on a western sheep ranch young readers are given a picture of the various processes by which a sheep's wool becomes a boy's protection against cold and snow.

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

Kirkus 15:238 My 1 '47 90w

"A good story as well as correct information easy enough for children from five to eight to understand. Many pictures by Ernest Norling explain the text. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
My 11 '47 230w

"The excellent end-paper drawings of scenes and implements might have more value to young readers if they were used at pertinent places throughout the book. This is a book for 6-to-10-year-olds whose interest in manufacturing is being aroused through their social science studies, and a good reference book for older children." Lois Palmer

N Y Times p17 J1 6 '47 230w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 J1 '47

NORMAN, CHARLES, ed. Golden book of love stories. 317p $3 Current bks.

Short stories—Collections 47-4041

Contents: The snowstorm, by Alexander Pushkin; A heifer of the dawn, by F. W. Bain; The apple-tree, by John Galsworthy; The lovers of Orelay, by George Moore; Red, by W. S. Maugham; The lady with the toy dog, by Anton Chekhov; A last love at Pornic, by Frederick Wedmore; A humble romance, by M. E. W. Freeman; Letter found on a drowned man, by Guy de Maupassant; Wild oranges, by Joseph Hergesheimer; Search through the streets of the city, by Irwin Shaw.

Kirkus 15:242 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by James McBride
+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '47
70w

NORMAN, CHARLES. So worthy a friend: William Shakespeare. 316p il $4 Rinehart

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Biography
47-11854

Short biography of Shakespeare based on facsimile documents and on interpretations of his writings. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:169 Ja 1 '48

"In the main this makes no controversial or original points, but is rather a serious, orderly study, perhaps jeopardizing general reader interest in its faithful documentation. . . A biography which is conscientious and reverential—but is not the enlightened interpretation of say Dover Wilson."

+ Kirkus 15:453 Ag 15 '47 180w

"Written with felicity and genuine devotion. Recommended for university and large public libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 80w

"Readers who are acquainted with Mr. Norman's biography of Marlowe will know what to expect from this companion volume on Shakespeare. There is the same bright and brittle style in narrative and the same enthusiastic and sincere delight in poetry for its own sake." S. C. Chew

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
D 21 '47 800w

"A lively, thoughtful, opinionated, sometimes exasperating, thoroughly enjoyable book." W. B. C. Watkins

+ NY Times p18 D 14 '47 800w

NORRIS, KATHLEEN (THOMPSON) (MRS CHARLES GILMAN NORRIS). Secrets of Hillyard house. 273p $2.50 Doubleday

Mystery story. 47-5251

Kirkus 15:243 My 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ag 3 '47 140w

"The pace of the story is too slow to please most mystery fans, but those who like romance with a puzzle element will have no reason to complain." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 10 '47 180w

NORTH, ROBERT. Town and country games; il. by Garry MacKenzie. 179p $2.50 Crowell

793 Games. Amusements 47-11940

This book of games for children contains indoor and outdoor games, singing games and counting games, fun with words and with numbers, "it" games, and riddles. Illustrated with line drawings. Index.

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

"An attractive and useful aid to those who plan parties and entertainments for children and young people." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 24:49 Ja '48 80w

"A good collection. . . The quaint line drawings by Garry MacKenzie should amuse children." E. W. Turpin

+ Library J 72:1784 D 15 '47 40w

"Never, in the recollection of this reviewer, have so many of the games made popular through generations of children been gathered together in one volume. . . Robert North has been especially happy in his illustrations. One goes on from the gay and attractive jacket to pages that are alive with tiny, individual figures, some of them realistic and some purely imaginative. It is a very happy-looking book."

+ Sat R of Lit 31:29 Ja 10 '48 150w

NORTH, STERLING. So dear to my heart.
255p $2.75 Doubleday

47-31241

The life on a small Indiana farm some forty years ago is the background for this novel. The chronicle is woven around a ten-year-old orphan, being brought up by a stern, scripture-minded grandmother. The main incidents are the loss of the boy's pet black lamb, and the weaving of a beautiful story-telling counterpane by the grandmother. Many folk songs crop up during the course of the book.

Reviewed by Dorothy Hillyer

+ Atlantic 180:188 N '47 310w

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"The contrast of sterner principles and softer sentiments provide a story of genuine charm, although its distinct regionalism may limit its wider appeal."

+ — Kirkus 15:374 J1 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
N 9 '47 250w

"The story has lost none of its original country flavored charm in its matriculation to the adult class, but it hasn't gained any great profundity. Grown-ups, seeking respite from these troublous days, will enjoy its graceful, if somewhat idealized recreation of a less complicated way of life, its homespun characters and homespun balladry—and they can then pass it on to Junior without a qualm." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p36 N 9 '47 550w

"[The novel] isn't helped very much by what appears to be an awkward attempt to pilfer the best prose style of the Old Testament."

— New Yorker 23:113 S 27 '47 80w

"Mr. North has woven a nicely reminiscent tale of the farm world as it used to be. . . At the same time—and this is what raises Mr. North's little story to a level higher than I may have made it seem—he suggests something of the struggle and the catharsis that goes on in Granny's spirit as she weaves her colored counterpane in which she is picturing the story of what she has always believed to be the sinfulness of Jerry's mother." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 7 '47
550w

"The story rings with music everywhere; it is itself a kind of prose ballad of backwoods Indiana, merry with a gnarly humor, rapturous with devotion to the teachings of the Good Book." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 S 27 '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

NORTHROP, HERBERT ROOF. Unionization of professional engineers and chemists. 52p pa $1.50 Industrial relations counselors

331.88 Trade unions 47-1296

"This study examines the union movement among professional engineers and chemists. The issues involved in collective bargaining with these groups and their status under the National Labor Relations Act have posed problems not only for employers but for the professional societies concerned. The discussion is concerned only with engineers and chemists who are engaged in work predominantly intellectual, varied and creative in character, usually requiring the consistent exercise of discretion and judgment, as well as an advanced type of knowledge in a field of engineering or science that can be acquired only by study in a specialized institution of higher learning or long experience." Foreword

"The author, who has long been a student of industrial relations, came to his task with none of the preconceived ideas with which most engineers approach this question. The result is a dispassionate and enlightening review of developments up to the middle of 1946."

+ Eng N 138:95 F 6 '47 180w

Management R 36:236 Ap '47 20w

NORTON, ALICE MARY (ANDRE NORTON, pseud). Rogue Reynard. See Reynard the Fox

NORWAY, NEVIL SHUTE (NEVIL SHUTE, pseud). Chequer board. 380p $2.75 Morrow

47-30177

An English salesman, a captain in the late war, discovered that as the result of a wartime airplane crash he had only a few more months to live. When he was in the hospital there were three other men in his ward, all more or less in trouble, as was the captain at the time. He decides to seek out these three with an idea that he might help them before his death. The first he found in Burma, happily married to an educated Burmese girl. The second, a shy American Negro, had married a white girl in Cornwall; and the third man is quite happy in his peacetime shop. So gallant Jackie Turner could face death in peace.

Booklist 43:223 Mr 15 '47

Bookmark 8:16 My '47

"A vivid, suspenseful narrative, in which the author combines his usual talent for fashioning sympathetic characters, with a disarming philosophy of reasoned optimism. It is unfortunate that the story is marred by the contrasting of Buddhism and Christianity to the latter's discredit (on a naturalistic plane however), and by one character's tendency to regard marriage as a necessary legal nuisance."

+ — Cath World 165:286 Je '47 200w

"One of the most interesting stories in years. We all knew that this story had to be told, and we can be thankful that it has been done so honestly and so simply, and given its true proportion in the larger context of man's impulse toward civilization." George Dillon

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 30 '47
450w

"It may not be surprising to find that Mr. Shute has felt impelled to contribute his own observations on the race problem, specifically on that aspect of it having to do with color differences. What is astonishing is the fact that he retains all of his poise, and does not succumb to sensationalism, prejudice, despair, hate, ugliness, or any other of the emotional trappings which are liable to empurple books on this theme. No, Nevil Shute brings to his subject all of his old narrative skill, plus quietness, humor, and great good will." M. W. Stoer

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 1
'47 500w

Commonweal 46:70 My 2 '47 60w

"The conversations are thick with well-disguised sermons on tolerance and understanding. Unfortunately sympathy for the individuals has betrayed Mr. Shute into a far from admirable indifference to values. Buddhism for instance is represented as a satisfactory solution to Turner's worries about the afterworld. . . In short, Mr. Shute solves his problem by a fatally easy Nathaneseque escape into myth." F. X. Connolly

Commonweal 46:98 My 9 '47 350w

"In itself, each story has values, but the whole lacks the sense of suspense one looks for in Shute. The race angle will puzzle some and offend others. But Shute tells a good yarn, better than most."

+ — Kirkus 15:36 Ja 15 '47 260w

NORWAY, N. S.—Continued

"This absorbing well-written story, while it may offend some, treats the subject of individual worth with a valuable lack of prejudice. Recommended." Anne Whitmore
Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 My 23 '47 90w

"Shute's little sermon on the brotherhood of man falls disappointingly flat."

— New Repub 116:33 Ap 21 '47 140w

"It is hardly necessary to mention the consummate skill of Mr. Shute as a storyteller. As a spokesman for England and her people, through such characters as Jackie, Philip Morgan and Mr. Frobisher, he is the best we have heard in a long time. . . Mr. Shute brings us a different England, one as simple and as hopeful as the vernal equinox. Whether or not Americans agree with 'The Chequer Board,' they will be informed and set to thinking by it, and they will get from it an understanding of the English people. Mr. Shute has performed a diplomatic service while telling a superb story." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Mr 30 '47 1700w

"It is a clever book, a readable book, and in terms of ideas, particularly on the problem of racial prejudice, his most significant book. But it is also a too overtly didactic book, checker board neat in its development. Put it on the shelf below 'Pastoral' and 'Most Secret.'" Charles Lee

N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '47 850w

"Mr. Shute at his most homiletic and at far from his most entertaining."

New Yorker 23:109 Mr 29 '47 80w

"Mr. Shute's ideal of the common brotherhood of man may not be your idea. But if it makes you wonder if it is at all possible that Mr. Shute is a little closer to the right track than you are, no harm will have been done, and you will have had some good reading to boot." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47 1050w

"Mr. Shute, in clear, logical, and unsentimental terms, creates the final oneness of mankind. . . 'The Chequer Board' not only puts first things first but it makes virtue palatable and injects justice with joy." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 3 '47 550w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 270w

Time 49:112 Mr 31 '47 400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p249 My 24 '47 480w

Wis Lib Bul 43:83 My '47

NORWOOD, HAYDEN. Marble man's wife, Thomas Wolfe's mother. 200p $2.75 Scribner
B or 92 Wolfe, Mrs Julia Elizabeth (West-all)

47-30129

Study of Thomas Wolfe's mother, the Eliza Gant of Wolfe's Look Homeward, Angel. The book is based on a series of talks which the author held with Mrs Wolfe not long before her death.

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

"Even more clearly than the letters published in 1943 does this book reveal the extent to which Wolfe exploited the materials of his own life and family. Yet it gives little new information." A. M. I. Fiskin

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 9 '47 270w

"For the Thomas Wolfe devotees—primarily—but a self portrait of a shrewd and spritely woman who has a certain character charm."

+ Kirkus 14:630 D 15 '46 110w

"A revealing self-portrait of an extraordinary individual. Of interest to Wolfe enthusiasts for the illuminating glimpse into his heritage and for the sources of incidents and characters appearing in his books." B. E. Libaire

Library J 72:160 Ja 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F 16 '47 800w

"Perhaps the book is not for the small number of readers who are impervious to the spell of Thomas Wolfe's genius, who find the style and thought of the North Carolina colossus a shade too rich for their blood. Such rare, unfortunate creatures may dismiss Mrs. Wolfe as garrulous, wandering and superficial, and Mr. Norwood's awe in her presence as juvenile. Rather, this book is for the faithful of the Wolfe cult, for those who would at least sympathize with the North Carolinian who exclaimed fervently that 'Tom is the greatest man this country every produced!'" N. K. Burger

N Y Times p37 F 9 '47 750w

New Yorker 22:98 F 8 '47 80w

"Mrs. Wolfe was a sprightly but average woman and unfortunately, 200 pages of the lady have no more interest than, say, 200 pages on Mrs. Beethoven or the mothers of Tinker, Evers and Chance." Keith Kay

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 9 '47 450w

"Mr. Norwood has been remarkably successful in winnowing Mrs. Wolfe's wealth of words. He has chosen those that are interesting and informative, and that complement and explain Wolfe's writing—and there is much new Wolfe material here—without losing the Eliza Gant flavor." LeGette Blythe

+ Sat R of Lit 30:21 Ap 5 '47 900w

"There is every indication that Mrs. Wolfe's memory is remarkably trustworthy, and even now, as the story stands without comment, the reader of Wolfe's novels can be thankful that Mrs. Wolfe in telling her story and Mr. Norwood in writing it down, have been thoroughly honest and meticulous."

+ U S Quarterly BkI 3:262 S '47 300w

NOSTRADAMUS. See Notredame, M. de

NOTH, ERNST ERICH, pseud. See Krantz, P.

NOTREDAME, MICHEL DE. Complete prophecies; tr., edited and interpreted by Henry C. Roberts. 350p $3 Crown

133.3 Prophecies 47-1275

Bilingual edition of the prophecies of Nostradamus, the sixteenth century Frenchman who is said to have predicted the deeds of Hitler and Mussolini and World war II. French and English texts are in parallel columns. The translator is an American bookseller.

"As a prophet, Nostradamus at least was nobody's fool. He concocted good, sound prophecies, prophecies that sooner or later, somewhere, were bound to come true. That he still has readers (and, for that matter, editors) is probably a wholesome sign; there are still a few serious thinkers who prefer to curl up with a good volume of prophecy rather than spend the evening in a saloon, playing 'Open the Door, Richard' on the juke box." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '47 420w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 16 '47 120w

Spring'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 300w

NOVIKOFF, ALEX BENJAMIN. From head to foot; our bodies and how they work; il. by Seymour Noydorf. 96p $2 Int. pubs.

612 Physiology—Juvenile literature Med47-941

A brief physiology for teen-aged readers. "Examining each life process as if through a microscope, Dr. Novikoff describes the amazing variety of jobs our bodies do—breathing, digestion, circulation of the blood, development of sex organs, sending and receiving nerve impulses, contraction of muscles." (Publisher's note) Index.

Chicago Sun Book Week p10 F 23 '47 90w

"There is a market for a simple physiology text for this age level. . . . But Dr. Novikoff's book falls far short of meeting that need. . . . [The treatment of] many of the topics, approached from the angle of body chemistry presupposes more knowledge of chemistry and allied science than most adults—certainly most young people—have, and it adds up to a bewildering mass of unassimilated information, too loosely tied together for practical applications. . . . In format the book gives an immediate impression of color and liveliness, but further examination proved disappointing, and at times disagreeable, to this reader anyhow. Examine before buying!"

Kirkus 15:33 Ja 15 '47 400w

"Language is simplified, but there is a magic about the never condescending text that vitalizes the subject and engenders respect for the body." B. W. Bell

+ Library J 72:230 F 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 9 '47 360w

"A book for 12-year-olds and up which is excellent." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p35 F 23 '47 180w

"Listed as being for 'age 12 up,' the book can be used with value for children younger than that. Parents wanting to be frank with their children will find this book and its simple illustrations a great assistance, and will be happy to find the information so up to date it even includes the RH factor in blood. Even Papa and Mama may learn a thing or two." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Union p7 My 1 '47 120w

NOYES, ALFRED. Collected poems. 704p $5
Lippincott

821

47-11084

A one-volume collection of poems, chosen by the author, from twelve or more of his published volumes. He has included those poems which he most desired to preserve of his life's work. Some of the poems have been revised.

Booklist 44:113 N 15 '47

"One of his best gifts is certainly the song, lineally descended from old English folk music and 'books of airs,' though always in his own voice. . . . Out of 'Tales of the Mermaid Tavern,' so richly various and containing delightful things, I will only speak of 'The Companion of a Mile.' If Mr. Noyes had written this one poem alone he would be certain of a lasting place in English verse." W. R. Benét

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 N 15 '47 1150w

NOYES, ALFRED. Horace; a portrait. (Great writers of the world ser) 292p $3.50 Sheed

874.5 Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus)
47-5233

A study of the life and writings of the Roman poet Horace. In his preface the author says: "It is with Horace, the lover of life, the friend of poets, the wise adviser of so many different kinds of men, that my book is engaged." (p.ix) No index.

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

"Mr. Noyes's critical biography of Horace, the first in a series of 'Great Writers of the World,' has a general appeal and should interest student and casual reader alike. With its careful, sensitive rendering of quotations from the poetry, it is an alive introduction to one of the world's enduring delights." James Binder

+ Cath World 166:93 O '47 450w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 28 '47 30w

"Mr. Noyes's enthusiasm is great, and his pretensions to scholarship modest; from the warmth and enthusiasm of his pages, from his real love of his subject, there is recreated, without too much false light or sentimental glamour, a stubborn, plausible, engaging little human being, a poet of the first order." Rolfe Humphries

+ Nation 165:20 J1 5 '47 360w

"Quite apart from its excellent critical and personal evaluation of Horace, this is a memorable book. The prose is a poet's prose, illuminated by beautiful words, showing the labor of the file only in final smoothness. It has too a keen ability to relate the present to the past, and the wit is nearly Horatian. Horace has, definitely, found his biographer." E. H. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 S 28 '47 600w

"The book is not a scholarly work, but neither is it a vulgarization aimed at the ignoramus who must be seduced into admitting the validity of the ancient classics. It is an engaging and delightful performance, and it should win many friends to a cause which one hopes is not utterly lost. True, there are lapses of taste. The opening pages of the book typify them. . . . This sort of thing is the literary equivalent of Hollywood's treatment of Wilson, Jolson, Gershwin, and others of the conjecturally great. It is sticky, it is cloying; but it is not typical of the book as a whole." Dudley Fitts

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 17 '47 750w

Reviewed by E. T. Booth

Sat R of Lit 30:15 O 4 '47 330w

School & Society 66:201 S 13 '47 20w

"Mr Noyes' own versions run well; but he adds his own romantic colour. . . . It is rash in such a free translator to refer to another poet's 'appalling version' and to praise Horace for his 'disciplined style.' In spite of this, the book is full of very real affection for Horace; and the modern man perhaps prefers his classics with a seasoning of romantic imagination." J. T. Christie

+ — Spec 179:470 O 10 '47 750w

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 150w

"Mr. Noyes's book is rightly entitled a portrait. It is an artist's impression of a well-known subject, and his individuality prompts every touch and tempers all the colouring. . . . This is a book that can be recommended if it is treated with caution as a source of information and taken as a strong and enjoyable stimulant."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p522 O 11 '47 2500w

NUNN, GUY THEODORE. White shadows.
246p $2.75 Reynal

47-3014

In Mexico Pablo had worked hard and had a flourishing small farm, but when he offended the local gentry, his farm was ruined. With his wife and three children he managed to cross the border into the United States. There he struggled for years to make a decent living and to get an education for his children, and in time became a citizen.

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

"The author writes simply, vividly, out of the heart of things. He makes one laugh with Lombardo; he makes one ashamed of the 'white shadows' on the lives of our minority peoples. And yet the story is told on the level of human beings and rarely as a social indictment, primarily."

+ Kirkus 15:78 F 1 '47 180w

"Guy Nunn writes skillfully and well. If all his Mexicans seem singularly admirable that perhaps indicates how insidiously we may be affected by the attitudes summed up in such wretched words as 'Spic' and 'Greaser.' He never rides a thesis and never forgets that he is first of all a novelist but he manages to do something more than paste a few brittle surfaces neatly together. His book is illumined and warmed by meanings that raise the few hours one spends with it to the level of an experience." Milton Rugoff

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 20 '47 650w

NUNN, G. T.—Continued

"White Shadows" is notable for the fact that it discusses, at the same time that it describes with admirable clarity and economy, the confusions and struggle of illiterate immigrants in the American scene during a time when public emphasis was centered on labor relations, depression and the recent war." B. V. Winebaum
N Y Times p28 Ap 20 '47 800w

NUSSBAUM, ARTHUR. Concise history of the law of nations. 361p $4.50 Macmillan

341.09 International law—History 47-31376

A study of international law written by a former professor at the University of Berlin, who has been for many years at Columbia university. "Each period of time is preceded by a brief outline of political events, followed by discussion of outstanding doctrines and developments. . . . Copious footnotes, appendix, survey of the historiography of international law, index." (Library J)

"For all its wealth of particulars and its calm detachment, the book is readable. It looks to me like prolegomena to any future study of international relations in the light of the historical backgrounds." W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:1456 N 26 '47 280w

Reviewed by Edward Littlejohn

Commonweal 47:77 O 31 '47 600w

Current Hist 13:357 D '47 50w

Kirkus 15:268 My 15 '47 170w

"Moderately-sized work of sound and solid scholarship. . . . Written in simple and clear language, book definitely fills a gap as no comparable treatment of the subject is in existence. . . . Indispensable addition to any library with interest in history, political science or law." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:1104 Ag '47 130w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

Sat R of Lit 31:8 Ja 3 '48 900w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 20w

NYE, HARRY. Home is if you find it; il. by Paul Galdone. 251p $2 Doubleday

47-3819

Partly farcical, partly serious novel dealing with the attempts of a young GI veteran and his wife to find a home for themselves.

Reviewed by C. W. Roberts

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47

270w

"Not for quieter tastes in humor, this is broad, bumptious, and pretty hilarious generally."

Kirkus 15:254 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26

My 25 '47 230w

"The story idea—that of the married veteran who can find no home of his own—has been treated, with variations, in serious versions. Treating it humorously might have done a lot for the situation, but Mr. Nye makes it funny in the manner of the comic strip." Anne Richards

N Y Times p20 Je 8 '47 270w

"Bud Nye is a discharged paratrooper, and young—27—according to the engaging autobiography on the back of the blurb. He is not a polished craftsman—not yet. But he has the true humorist's most priceless possession—a sense of timing. And he has a devastating talent for satirical portraits sketched with conversation alone. And through the book runs a quality of harsh gallantry, which is unstated and which must be a reflection of the author himself." Phyllis Liapes

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 14 '47 700w

"The story is told with much good-nature and wit, even if the basic situation does deserve a tear." Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 My 17 '47 380w

NYE, NELSON CORAL. Barber of Tubac. 203p $2 Macmillan

47-1901

Western story.

Booklist 43:348 Jl 1 '47

Kirkus 15:15 Ja 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Mr 23 '47 100w

NYGAARD, NORMAN EUGENE. Deep forest. 246p $2.50 Reynal

47-1461

Simple but tragic story of the lives of a group of small farmers who have literally hacked out their homes in the jungle up the river from Cartagena, Colombia. They are so worn down by hard labor and their inability to make a living that they send one of their number to the city to ask for help. Luis Romero is the chosen man and the story is of his successes and failures.

"No one could quarrel with Nygaard's purpose, which is simply to tell Luis' story. But he fails to give the narrative direction by not making his purpose clear in the beginning. And because he fails to identify himself with his characters and their surroundings, the reader fails also, and Luis, the principal personality, is not capable of carrying the burden of the tale." Martha Read

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 2 '47
180w

Kirkus 14:608 D 1 '46 160w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
Mr 9 '47 170w

"Dr. Nygaard brings to his first novel a bounding enthusiasm that all but makes up for its didactic shortcomings. He has created a vivid ethnological report of a little-known racial group that makes for interesting reading. . . . His story loses much of its force under the weight of too many catastrophes." W. M. Kunstler

+ N Y Times p14 F 23 '47 450w

"Mr. Nygaard has written in such utter and unadorned simplicity that his pages seem often to come out of a primer. Yet his simplicity becomes a literary virtue because it is wed to profound emotion, perhaps the profoundest that he, a practising minister, can experience." N. L. Rothman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 1 '47 450w

O

O. HENRY MEMORIAL AWARD. Prize stories of 1947; sel. and ed. by Herschel Brickell. 296p $3 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections (21-9372)

Contents: The white circle, by J. B. Clayton; Rest camp on Maui, by E. L. Burdick; The nightingales sing, by Elizabeth Parsons; Little Victor, by Robert Lewis; The echo, by Paul Bowles; Homecoming, by Ray Bradbury; The skeleton and the Easter lily, by Bessie Breuer; The hot day, by Jane Cobb; The holiday, by Mary Deasy; You can wreck it, by Walter Elder; An American home, by Helen Eustis; Miss Winters and the wind, by C. N. Govan; The record, by D. C. DeJong; The rosebush, by Susan Kuehn; The burden, by J. A. Lynch; The valiant woman, by J. F. Powers; What we don't know hurts us, by Mark Schorer; The great fire of 1945, by Margaret Shedd; Fighter, by J. C. Smith; The hope chest, by Jean Stafford; Old boy—new boy, by Benedict Thielen; The whole world knows, by Eudora Welty; Horace Chooney, M. D., by Jessamyn West.

Booklist 44:50 O 1 '47

Reviewed by John Cournos

Commonweal 47:257 D 19 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:372 Jl 15 '47 170w

"In a volume purporting to be a 'cross-section of contemporary fiction,' the editor could not do otherwise than search the commercially successful magazines. Though of necessity they contain much escape stuff of little or no consequence, there are, as well, some good things in what Mr. Burt—no stranger to them himself—calls 'the big flats.' . . . It is chiefly when Mr. Brickell picks from publications of small circulation that he comes up with material belying his assertion that 'sureness of touch' is 'essential.'" Virginia Dale

+ — N Y Times p14 S 14 '47 1050w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 5 '47 850w

"In several ways it is a disappointing selection. No new writer has been found by editor Herschel Brickell and his assistants who can be heralded as an important discovery. Writers whose stories have won prizes in recent years have not lived up to expectations and have produced mediocre work or have been silent. The themes in these short fictional studies of contemporary America do not lack originality, but it is impossible to find one with enough vitality to assure either its tenacity over a long period or that its inventor will develop into another Steinbeck, Hemingway, Wolfe, or Faulkner." Harrison Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:17 S 13 '47 1200w

OAKLEY, MRS AMY (EWING) and OAKLEY, THORNTON. Kaleidoscopic Quebec; ill. by Thornton Oakley. 278p $4 Appleton-Century 917.14 Quebec (province) 47-30130

Describes with much historical detail a trip which the author took thru the province of Quebec with her illustrator husband. Quebec itself, which the author calls one of the ten most beautiful cities in the world, occupies a prominent place in the book. "The result is a sort of Grand Tour with two amiable conductors. Mrs. Oakley maps out the route, selects the key sights, puts an historical footing under them, finds some typical natives to introduce, adds a dash of sentiment and a spot of humor, and names the preferred hotels. Meanwhile her husband, Thornton Oakley, sketches in the sights, adding a bit of visual atmosphere." (Christian Science Monitor) Index.

Booklist 43:203 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by T. M. Longstreth

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 12 '47 420w

"'Kaleidoscopic Quebec' may serve to interest its readers in the most fascinating province of Canada, but it is not reliable in its facts. The author seems to have been content to accept casual hearsay uncritically, and in some cases she has obviously garbled her information. The statement that the Chateau Frontenac was 'established by the Canadian National Railway' is a not untypical howler. Mrs. Oakley's militant Protestant attitude will alienate many Catholic readers. The numerous drawings by the author's husband are far more attractive and accurate than the text." Mason Wade

+ — Commonweal 45:526 Mr 7 '47 260w

Kirkus 14:634 D 15 '46 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 Ap 20 '47 320w

"Those who know the Province of Quebec will delight to saunter reminiscently through its past and present with the author and the illustrator of this model travel book. . . . Her picture of Quebec is as sharply and truly recorded as are the illustrations by her artist husband Thornton Oakley." P. J. Philip

+ N Y Times p34 Mr 30 '47 270w

"It is inevitable that a book about the Quebec country should perhaps lean a little too heavily on the 'recorded-in-memory-loom' motive, but on the whole, Mrs. Oakley has preserved an admirable balance between the past and the present development. The book is recommended reading for prospective visitors to Quebec." J. V.

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47 160w

Wis Lib Bul 43:80 My '47

O'CASEY, SEAN. Oak leaves and lavender; or, A World on wallpaper [a play in three acts]. 163p $2.50 Macmillan

822

47-2276

A play based on life in and around a manorial house in the west of England in 1940. The central figure is Feelim O'Murrigan, the Irish butler.

"A clever play."

+ Christian Century 64:626 My 14 '47 30w

"The latest play of one of the world's outstanding playwrights is rather disappointing but is nonetheless important to all drama lovers and is highly recommended for drama collections." George Freedley

+ — Library J 72:311 My 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 25 '47 400w

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

N Y Times p18 My 11 '47 750w

San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 11 '47 140w

OCCUPATIONAL information monographs. il 12 nos. ea 6c Vocational guidance centre, 371 Bloor st. W, Toronto 371.425 Occupations

"The Vocational Guidance Centre is a division of the Ontario College of Education, University of Toronto. The monographs are three- to four-page leaflets, each signed either by an individual active educationally in the field or by an official professional group. The customary vocational information is given in informative, concise style, with the latest available statistics and short, up-to-date bibliographies. The treatment is entirely adult and no effort is made, even in the bibliographies, to popularize the material." Subscription Bks Bul

"There are apparently no other recent occupational monographs covering Canada, except the Canadian Legion Vocational Monographs, which are published strictly for the use of veterans and are not released to libraries. Recommended."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:18 Ap '46 120w

O'CONNELL, CHARLES. Other side of the record. 332p $3.50 Knopf

780.883 Musicians. Music—U.S.

47-31377

The author has been for many years director of recordings for Columbia and Victor, and as such has known most of the contemporary musicians. This is a collection of biographical sketches of some of these people he has known best. Contents: Grace Moore; Lily Pons; José Iturbi; Eugene Ormandy; Lauritz Melchior; Arturo Toscanini; Kirsten Flagstad; Sergei Rachmaninoff; Arthur Fiedler; Helen Traubel; Jascha Heifetz; Pierre Monteux; Artur Schnabel; Serge Koussevitzky; Leopold Stokowski; The organists; Index.

Booklist 44:64 O 15 '47

"Two famous artists he finds practically without reproach: Stokowski and Heifetz. The rest stand revealed, warts and all, as they appear to Mr. O'Connell. . . . Mr. O'Connell is guilty of a gross breach of taste when he includes in his book an offensive chapter on Grace Moore, written before she was killed in an air crash. His explanation that, since she was 'basically and naturally honest and candid,' her memory 'is better and more respectfully served by preserving those qualities in dealing with her' is weak and unconvincing. This book seems headed for a succès de scandale." L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 17 '47 460w

O'CONNELL, CHARLES—Continued

"These genial and sometimes less genial appraisals are controversial. However, the book is literate, witty, and urbane; its strongly personal character should be unwelcome only to the cult of Toscanini and to other idol-worshippers. If the reader emerges with less respect for the motives and principles of record-makers, he also gains some knowledge of the music business as a whole." George Hanson

Library J 72:1612 N 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by B. H. Haggin

Nation 165:561 N 22 '47 700w

"In the roster of celebrities there are two whom he stands in the corner, Grace Moore and Arturo Toscanini—a strange pair! . . . 'I think,' writes Mr. O'Connell, 'that Mr. Toscanini has had a baneful effect on musical beliefs and standards in America.' Why he thinks so makes interesting reading, whether you agree with him or not. And even more interesting, here and elsewhere in the book, are the vicissitudes of the recording studio—the strange aberrations of an industry headed for art, controlled by commerce—Mr. O'Connell invariably in the middle." J. N. Burk

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
O 19 '47 650w

"The reader who dotes on behind-the-scenes anecdote about famous personalities will find O'Connell a shrewd, fresh journalistic observer writing from an unusually intimate vantage point. . . . 'The Other Side of the Record,' as its jacket blurb indicates, belongs on the same shelf as Oscar Levant's 'A Smattering of Ignorance.' But its somewhat broader scope and the sharpness of its prejudices make it even more entertaining to the musically sophisticated reader." Winthrop Sargeant

N Y Times p6 N 2 '47 600w

"The writing is distinctly of the 'let me say it before I burst' variety and so it follows that the musicians you meet here aren't the Fauntleroy's publicity boys would have you believe they are. But, in most instances, the completely human beings that emerge from the brutal close-ups are pretty likable at that. Mr. O'Connell still likes most of them." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 12 '47
900w

O'CONNOR, JACK. Hunting in the Rockies. 297p il maps $5 Knopf

799.2 Hunting—Rocky mountains Agr47-210

Descriptions of the author's experiences in hunting sheep, elk, caribou, bear, goat, and other wild animals in the western United States, Canada, and Alaska. There is some history of the animals. The book also includes information on equipment. Illustrated with photographs. Index.

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Kirkus 15:149 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Best book on subject." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:43 Ja 1 '48 30w

New Yorker 23:99 Ap 26 '47 80w

ODELL, MARGARET K., and STRONG, EARL POE. Records management and filing operations. 342p il $4 McGraw

651.5 Business records. Files and filing (documents) 47-4788

"Book deals with importance of a records department and a centralized control of both decentralized and centralized files showing advantages and disadvantages, need for policies pertaining to a records department including economical methods of records retention and disposal and how to organize a department. Filing and findings operations based on job analyses. Foreign name indexing and how to prepare an operating manual are included in this first complete book on records and management." Library J

Booklist 44:8 S 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 80w

"The thoroughness of this text should promote better understanding by management of the problems of filing. It is hoped that many executives will read it, for much will be gained through application of the many practical ideas presented." I. A. Herrmann

+ Management R 36:610 N '47 600w

O'DELL, SCOTT. Hill of the Hawk. 413p $3 Bobbs

47-31207

Historical novel of California in 1846 and '47. The hero is Grady Dunavant who appears first at the head of a pack train making for Los Angeles. As the story ends he is with Kit Carson, ready for the march on Los Angeles, this time with the Army of the West.

Booklist 44:69 O 15 '47

"Intensely interesting. Love element beautifully handled. Reader gets real feel of the land and people of old California. Highly recommended for all readers." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 80w

"Mr. O'Dell is concerned with primary colors and primary emotions, with surfaces rather than subtleties, and he has written a book brimming with action." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O
5 '47 360w

"Into the hands of that vast horde who escape the present by plunging into the romantic upheavals of the past, this book will settle with a rewarding bulkiness. Its 413 pages are filled with the kind of factual, colorful background, the dangers and intrigues, the love interest (there are three beautiful women instead of the usual one) that are now the accepted ingredients of most historical novels. . . . The reader cannot help but be impressed with the author's handling of such personalities as Kit Carson." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p22 O 5 '47 350w

"'Hill of the Hawk' is better than most of the novels of early California we'll get written for the California centennial years. It's a good deal better than some we've had already. And Mr. O'Dell earns a salute for his interpretation of the historical background, with which he has taken very few liberties and which he presents in its true balance and significance." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 10 '47
550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON. Understanding society; the principles of dynamic sociology. 749p il maps $5 Macmillan

301 Sociology 47-31378

A college textbook which presents the principles of dynamic sociology. The author is Kenan professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. Copiously illustrated. Maps. Bibliography at end of each chapter. Index.

"This book is a text written in language which approaches the colloquial. He has not attempted what so many professors vainly strive for, namely, a book which is presumed to meet the requirements of both the scholar and the so-called general reader. 'Understanding Society' is candidly a text book in the best American manner, furnished with assignments, readings, and workshop exercises. He has written not in a retrospective mood but rather with futuristic urgency." E. C. Lindeman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 D 27 '47 1500w

School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 10w

"In the reviewer's opinion this is the most exciting new departure in the way of a textbook in general sociology that has appeared in this country in a decade. It is unique in a considerable portion of its content, in its approach to the subject, in its spirit, its objectives, and its pedagogical devices and procedures." J. O. Hertzler

+ Social Forces 26:238 D '47 1300w

ODUM, HOWARD WASHINGTON. Way of the South; toward the regional balance of America. 350p $3 Macmillan

309.175 South—Social conditions 47-2217

Analysis of the cultural heritage of the South, which studies its problems, social and economic, and the past and future stages in their solution. The author is Kenan professor of sociology at the University of North Carolina. Index.

Reviewed by L. F. Brewster

Am Hist R 53:193 O '47 390w

"Any evaluation of The Way of the South will vary greatly with the purpose and type of the reader. Scholars will generally prefer to seek the originals from which much of the material has been selected or summarized. . . The reader—scholar or non-scholar—can hardly keep from learning from the pages of this book that the South is a region of great diversity, that there are in reality many Souths held together by historical, geographical, and sentimental ties. . . Yet whatever the evaluation of the book itself, the author is once more revealed as a thinker of rare objectivity and perspective especially in his treatment of racial, political, and regional tensions, as one who dreams vividly and concretely of a better day for the South, and as a practical statesman who has been for years an inspiration to struggling Southern liberals." H. C. Brearley

+ Am Soc R 12:733 D '47 550w

Reviewed by E. R. Embree

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ap 20 '47 330w

"In training, experience and, perhaps even more important, in his feeling for the south, Mr. Odum is unquestionably qualified to appreciate his problem and his opportunity. He knows what he is writing about. Yet, in the last section, when he comes to his thesis, achieving a 'regional equality and balance' in America through planning, he is least convincing. He stops painting life on a canvas and begins to put chalk on a blackboard. . . Perhaps the weakness is the result of crowding. Mr. Odum ran out of pages." R. V. McLain

+ Christian Century 64:1174 O 1 '47 650w

"The book glows with readable descriptions of the old south and the new, of folk tales, of the romance, and the poetry in its past, of its religion, folk songs and music." A. W. Taylor

+ Churchman 161:18 J1 '47 180w

"A strangely amorphous, lyrical piece of scientific inquiry for Southern consumption. I question whether the average reader in other parts of the country would find it provocative of interest."

— Kirkus 15:118 F 15 '47 160w

"Result reads like a rhapsody rather than scholarly statement. Unspecified references and quotations. Major attention to the Negro-White dilemma, but sketchy over-all picture of history and psychology of the south. Seems a rush job, almost a scissors and paste job. In short, a noble purpose inadequately handled. Not essential." E. L. Lewis

— Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 80w

"As a recapitulation the book must of course stand on its presentation of largely familiar material. It is precisely on this score that 'The Way of the South' does its author a disservice. It mixes history and sociology, rhapsody and catalogue, impressionism and scholarly abstraction, in a totally unreadable pastiche." W. J. Gold

— Nation 164:574 My 17 '47 600w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 27 '47 1600w

"Throughout most of the book Dr. Odum is explaining the South rather than seeking panaceas for conflicts between the sections. He is not an apologist for the South; he is an analyst. In the role of investigator, he is without equal. No one is a surer guide to the complex of forces that have produced the region's 'biracial culture.' And no one, when intra-sectional planning is under discussion, is less prejudiced and more clear-sighted. His discouragement, it is hoped, is only temporary. But it is there, and it cannot be ignored by those who, like himself, dream of bringing about the regional equality and balance of America." Herbert Lyons

+ N Y Times p7 Ap 20 '47 800w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 27 '47 360w

Reviewed by M. S. Watson
Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ap 26 '47 700w

School & Society 66:80 J1 26 '47 20w

Reviewed by J. C. McLendon
Social Educ 11:332 N '47 500w

Reviewed by F. R. Yoder
Social Forces 26:102 O '47 1000w
Social Studies 38:287 O '47 30w

Reviewed by S. H. Walker
Survey 83:230 Ag '47 650w
Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

"Professor Odum has presented here a summary statement on 'The Way of the South' intended for the general reader. The book has been assembled from new and old writings, pieced together in an uneven fashion, but presenting under one cover for the first time the range and richness of Professor Odum's thought. As such, it is an excellent means for the uninitiated reader to make first acquaintance with the work of Professor Odum and his colleagues at the Institute for Research in Social Science at the University of North Carolina; and for other readers to assess the present progress of those researches." John Sirjani

+ Yale R n s 37:187 autumn '47 800w

OELLRICHS, INEZ HILDAGARD. Murder helps. 247p $2 McKay

47-4930

Detective story.

"The cleverest bit of work done by Matt is his discovery of what became of Uncle Walt. Aside from that, the story is notable chiefly for its depiction of a group of most unpleasant characters." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p27 J1 13 '47 260w

"Underplayed, well characterized and effective." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p11 J1 6 '47 50w

"Granting that authorities would so quickly deputize a talented amateur, this is capably plotted tale of homespun tec doggedly sifting cantankerous suspects."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 26 '47 50w

OFFORD, MRS LENORE (GLEN). My true love lies. 254p $2.50 Duell

47-2539

Detective story.

"In 'My True Love Lies' Mrs. Offord avoids (as usual) all the lesser and more cloying failings of the romantic tec, but here she has not been able to shake the principal one. Her heroine does clam up disgracefully and needlessly and she is, in consequence, subjected to a fretwork of terrors and dangers that are also a little irritating because they are unnecessary. Otherwise this story of murder and its grisly concealment in an old plaster works is a very sound and enjoyable one, a highly competent balance of terror, humor and narration which rises above routine because its people are credible and engaging." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 20 '47 290w

New Repub 116:35 Ap 14 '47 50w

"Mrs. Offord imagines a more lifelike cast than usual, rings the changes on various amorous angles and manages her tease routine with skill. Inspector Geraghty is a knowing snoop." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 Ap 6 '47 180w

"A little less skipping about from one episode to another might have made the story a bit easier to follow, particularly in the early chapters." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p36 Mr 30 '47 170w

OFFORD, L. G.—Continued

"The tangle" is worked out deftly by the law. There is a lot of knowing chatter about sculptors and their habits."

New Yorker 23:108 Ap 5 '47 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 6 '47 100w

"Swiftly-paced, well-worked-out, and especially well-characterized tale."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 50w

OGBURN, WILLIAM FIELDING, and others.

Social effects of aviation. 755p il $5 Houghton
387.7 Aeronautics, Commercial 46-7985

"The present volume is concerned with the problem of predicting the social effects of aviation in the modern world. It is based on the thesis that inventions, such as the railroad, the automobile, or the airplane, make certain changes in customs and social institutions." (p. 3) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by S. M. Rosen

Am J Soc 52:540 My '47 1100w

"It satisfies logic that Professor Ogburn, who gave us the helpful concept of 'cultural lag,' should write this book, a pioneering and notable work. . . His report presents an extraordinarily imaginative and inclusive analysis of possible consequences resulting from our newest form of transportation. He is, however, shrewdly cautious in his statements. He seldom attempts exact estimates or precise prognostications, pointing out repeatedly that the 'possibilities' and 'probabilities' will depend on such interrelated imponderables as pricing, profit, public policy, and consumer-acceptance. . . He presents an amazing variety of data and summarizes an extensive bibliography. In fact, the ambitious scope of the book leads to an elaborate subdivision of subjects within each chapter, with the result that many of the sub-subjects are treated in no more than a brief paragraph. Because of this desire to be inclusive, and because of the interrelationships between the topics, there is considerable repetition. But the presentation is always lucid and of interest to the general reader, even when dealing with technical matters." R. G. McKelvey

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:588 Je '47 700w

Foreign Affairs 25:696 Jl '47 20w

"The present volume is obviously not an accurate picture of where aviation will stand in 1960 or 1970, but an approximation good enough for most business men and certainly good enough for Federal, State and city officials—who have to think in terms of expanding airports, traffic congestion, accidents caused by collisions, international relations, the noise of propellers, and the rise and fall in real estate values." Waldemar Kaempffert

N Y Times p25 F 16 '47 850w

"Social Effects of Aviation is an effective book both as a reference for studying the development of aviation and as a landmark in the progress of the science of prediction in the realm of social and human affairs." A. T. MacNutt

+ Social Studies 38:186 Ap '47 750w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:184 Je '47 240w

OGG, DAVID. Herbert Fisher, 1865-1940. 205p $3 Longmans

B or 92 Fisher, Herbert Albert Laurens

[47-11085]

A biography of the English educator and statesman who was born in 1865 and died in 1940. His father was at one time secretary to the Prince of Wales, and Herbert Fisher himself won distinction in three fields: the academic life; in scholarship and literature; and in public life. Index.

Reviewed by J. L. Hammond

Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 12 '47 700w

"The general effect, in spite of some suggestive criticism of Fisher's method and some of his judgements, is depressing. After all it is only a little over seven years since Fisher died. Oxford, and many other cities, are full of people who knew him intimately in one or other of his many rôles and could have enabled Mr. Ogg to impart to his subject some warmth and life. . . It is well enough to paint a personality against a background; it is fatal to let the background shift its place and get in front." Wilson Harris

— Spec 179:116 Jl 25 '47 750w

"Excellent book, which reflects with effective ingenuity a great deal of the cool, dispassionate, but always amiable and courteous, superiority of Herbert Fisher himself."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p409 Ag 16 '47 5100w

OGILVIE, ELISABETH. The ebbing tide. 310p $2.75 Crowell

47-4042

Third in this trilogy about life on an island off the coast of Maine. Joanna Bennett is the central character, and the theme is the difficulties she meets and weathers when her husband, Nils, is sent to the Pacific. Dennis Garland provides both help and another problem, but Nils comes home from the war wounded, and Joanna's troubles recede.

Booklist 43:359 Jl 15 '47

Cath World 166:189 N '47 220w

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 29 '47 270w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 20 '47 410w

"Third in the trilogy concerning Bennett's Island, and Joanna Bennett, this again combines the warmth of human interest and scenic detail which has made these books sell widely—to women. . . With incidental side issues and interests, this is generous, communicable sympathetic women's reading."

+ Kirkus 15:200 Ap 1 '47 140w

"Plot seems forced and unnecessarily melodramatic in its concern with the problems of returning war veterans, though the descriptions of natural phenomena and the appeal of several minor characters are compelling. Recommended for summer reading and rental collections." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 70w

"It is an unhurried story, sometimes tranquil and sometimes troubled, with the cadence of wind and lapping water."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 Jl 6 '47 100w

"The next time I get down East, I'm going to ask Cap'n Clarence Meservey how he liked 'The Ebbing Tide.' If he says, 'Not bad,' I'll know I'm not misplacing my admiration of folk-reporter Ogilvie, and offhand I wouldn't know a better critic of such a book." John Gould

+ N Y Times p5 Jl 6 '47 420w

Spring'd Union p3 Jl 25 '47 100w

O'HARA, JOHN. Hellbox. 210p $2.50 Random house

47-30414

Twenty-six short stories most of which have been published in The New Yorker.

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 31 '47 270w

Kirkus 15:290 Je 1 '47 150w

"Inconsequential. Not recommended." J. E. Cross

— Library J 72:1108 Ag '47 20w

"The twenty-six short, very short stories that comprise John O'Hara's 'Hellbox' resemble nothing so much as skillfully patterned and blended cocktail sandwiches, each of them promising something new, even an adventure, but each of them gone almost at a touch. The result, to the reader, is a strange mixture of suspense followed by frustration, light, and a rather brilliant light at that, followed by a most annoying darkness." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 3 '47 550w

"O'Hara writes here, as he has almost always done, not only with accuracy and brilliance, but with a kind of terrible, unmerciful disgust. The clarity of his observation and the easy, practiced, implicative power of his work are accompanied by a grim, almost moralistic attitude toward his subjects. . . . Running through every story in this book—and memorable in much that he has written before—is a constant, abiding, nearly obsessive attention to the objective value and meaning of human acts." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 17 '47 700w

"All are short, sharp, projected with the kind of exactness of intonation that has always been the author's mark. Just in case you think O'Hara can't be tender, though, let me commend to you, for example, the stories 'The Moccasins' and, say, 'Doctor and Mrs. Parsons.' Not that O'Hara is ever really hard-boiled; the sympathy is there, however wryly expressed, which is why he's the writer he is. But in those two pieces it comes close to the surface." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 4 '47 700w

"Written in the abrupt, bony, close-mouthed prose with which O'Hara muffles his social comment, they foregather a little uncomfortably in book form. An O'Hara story has a way of standing out like tattooing in Harold Ross's magazine, and a quick glance at a swatch of dialogue any place on the page is usually enough to identify one of his stories, without looking at the end for his name. Taken one by one, with a week or two in between, they seem to me to be at their best, but I have had, and still have, the feeling that O'Hara's stories don't bind well." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 Ag 9 '47 750w

"These 26 stories have the neat and durable ring of O'Hara's best writing."

+ Time 50:98 Ag 11 '47 440w

OJIKE, MBONU. I have two countries. 208p $3 Day

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 47-30832

The author of My Africa (Book Review Digest 1946) here describes his experiences in the United States, as a student at Lincoln University, the University of Illinois, and at Chicago University. He also relates his various attempts to supplement his money by working at times as general handy man, and as a lecturer on Africa.

Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Bucklin Moon

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Jl 20 '47 400w

"Ojike is worth listening to. Like his previous book, 'My Africa', in which he described African village life, this book on the American education of a young Nigerian makes one laugh, question, and think." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Jl 23 '47 700w

"For all his thirty years, Mbonu Ojike writes with the unspoiled naturalness of a pre-adolescent. There is the same unconscious preoccupation with self; the same sense of wonder in each day's discoveries; the same calm expectation of welcome and affection from all whom he encounters. . . . His narrative, the story of his seven years in America, reads as though it had been dictated by a youngster full of himself, and then published without editing or correction. Therein lies its charm. . . . This book has no sociological significance. It is an unabashed study, not of American mores and morals, but of Mr. Mbonu Ojike." L. J. Trese

Commonweal 46:359 Jl 25 '47 390w

Kirkus 15:181 Mr 15 '47 150w

"The numerous anecdotes of his school career and of his difficulties in holding a job are amusing but of slight importance. Of more substance are his experiences as a lecturer, particularly in the South. Unimportant sequel to the important My Africa. Needed only by libraries emphasizing Negro material." G. W. Wakefield

Library J 72:958 Je 15 '47 110w

"Warm-hearted and informative book." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 13 '47 550w

Time 50:94 Jl 7 '47 350w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 Jl '47

OLDDEN, ROSEMARY, and OLDDEN, STEEVER. Sailing primer. 148p il $2.50 Cornell maritime 797.124 Sailing

47-320

"An elementary and practical guide to the art of sailing, written for the novice and the small-boat owner. The main features of small sailing boats are described, but most of the instruction and advice is based on the use of a fifteen-foot sloop, selected as a typical beginner's boat. A general discussion of the principles of sailing is followed by explicit directions for carrying out various sailing maneuvers. Chapters on the care of boats and sails, selection of ground tackle, cruising and simple piloting, are included. There is a brief glossary of seafaring terms." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:220 Mr 15 '47

Bookmark 8:7 My '47

N Y New Tech Bks 31:56 O '46

"Here is a little book that is just what its name implies—a primer, written for the land-lubber. And the authors, Rosemary and Steever Oldden, have done a very shipshape job. . . . The authors do not pretend to have written everything there is to be known about sailing. But they have pretty well succeeded in doing a book that covers the basic information needed to handle a small boat." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p23 Ap 6 '47 400w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 23 '47 80w

OLSCHKI, LEONARDO. Guillaume Boucher: a French artist at the court of the Khans. 125p 10il $2.50 Johns Hopkins press

B or 92 Boucher, Guillaume A46-4208

"Consisting of two chapters, this volume might be described as two long, related articles bound together in one book. The first chapter relates all that is known of the thirteenth-century French craftsman, Guillaume Boucher, at the Mongolian court of Mangu Khan. The career of this artist is known only indirectly through the mentions of his activities by William of Rubruck. . . . The chapter also provides a useful account of the organization of Mongol society and the status of the various Christian sects at the capital of Karakorum. The second chapter, almost a separate article, is concerned entirely with the fabulous wine fountain which Boucher constructed for his Mongol patron." U S Quarterly Bkl

"The author has used his imagination to good purpose, though one wonders if he does not on occasion carry conjecture a little far. But as a description of 'the oldest example of cooperation between Western Europe and Eastern Asia in the field of the fine arts' this book has few, if any, equals." A. W. Hummel

+ Am Hist R 52:360 Ja '47 320w

Geog R 38:172 Ja '48 600w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:7 Mr '47 280w

OLSEN, D. B., pseud. See Hitchens, D. B.

OLSON, CHARLES. Call me Ishmael. 119p $2.50 Reynal

813 Melville, Herman

47-3036

Study of Herman Melville's Moby Dick, and the influences upon Melville which produced the book. There were two versions of the book, and between the writing of the two versions Melville read Shakespeare's King Lear for the first time. The effects of this reading, among others, are thoroly investigated.

OLSON, CHARLES—Continued

"To those who know Melville and Shakespeare well, there are bits of interest and sudden illumination in the 100 pages that dispose one to feel friendly toward the whole book. But the author's arrangement and style repeatedly turn delight into either irritation or inappropriate amusement. It is not always clear whether he is quoting Melville's notes on Shakespeare or launching into rhapsodic comments of his own. He jumps about. Suddenly, on page 40 he remembers to give thanks to helpful friends. His style ranges from Sears-Roebuck cataloguing to prose as fantastic and willful as e. e. cummings' verse. . . . He can throw around such fancy words as reify, dromenon, usufruct, sorites. His simpler words often break into CAPITALS. He seems bent upon becoming nominated prose laureate of eccentricity. Old friends of Melville, nevertheless, may run upon fallen fruit in this tangled luxuriant jungle. Others should beware getting lost in the undergrowth." Robert Berkelman

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 18 '47 340w

"Stimulating study. . . Mr. Olson writes in a style which is elliptical, gnomic, and occasionally rather heavily loaded with social significance. Recommended for larger libraries as well as college and university Americana." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:460 Mr 15 '47 80w

"This is so jagged a book that lots of people will just as soon not hold it in their hands. But it carries a healthy shock of idea and idiom as well as, more obviously, of typography. It records, often brilliantly, one way of taking the most extraordinary of American books. In spite of difficulties and excesses, it needs to be read and pondered." W. E. Bezanson

+ New Eng Q 20:410 S '47 950w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 116:33 Mr 31 '47 550w

"The book has been eagerly awaited. Now, at last, with the aid of a Guggenheim grant it arrives, and turns out to be not only important but apocalyptic." Ferris Greenslet

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 23 '47 2450w

"Mr. Olson has been a tireless student of Melville and every Melville lover owes him a debt for his Scotland Yard pertinacity in getting on the trail of Melville's dispersed library. This was a biographical contribution of no mean order; for Melville's underscorings and marginal comments give a real clue, often datable, to his thoughts and feelings. With this record of scholarly research behind him, his 'Call Me Ishmael' is something of an anomaly; for though the author makes some use of his fresh knowledge, the work mainly follows the intuitive line of D. H. Lawrence and Edward Dahlberg, and the reader is forced to take or leave Mr. Olson's thesis without benefit of persuasion or scholarly argument." Lewis Mumford

N Y Times p4 Ap 6 '47 550w

"There are high lights, of course. In so full a book it is impossible to follow precisely each thread of the discussion. One thing you may be sure of, however, Mr. Olson's 'Call Me Ishmael' is one of the most stimulating essays ever written on 'Moby Dick,' and for that matter on any piece of literature and the forces behind it. For that matter, Mr. Olson has written something a good deal more than a literary essay too. This is a literary piece with social undertones and overtones; it is a study of poetry as well as of drama and the novel; it is an examination of America, its past related to its tomorrows; finally it is a study of Man himself, elemental Man and his myth. One way and another, in a good many years of reviewing, I've seen the results of a lot of Guggenheim awards but I've never seen one better justified by its result than Mr. Olson's." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 20 '47 900w

"This is a book to rejoice those admirers of Melville who like to identify him with Ahab. It will have a quite different impact on the scholars and critics who have been trying to disperse the fogs which the myth-makers have been sending up around Melville for the past quarter of a century. . . . There are more satisfactory ways than Mr. Olson's to account for Melville's delay in finishing 'Moby-Dick'—for one thing, the state of his eyes during the winter of 1850-1851. Unless some solid evidence is adduced to substantiate this hypothesis of a replanned and rewritten novel, Melville's biographers should beware of Mr. Olson's flat assertion that 'Moby-Dick' was two books." Willard Thorp

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 My 24 '47 600w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:135 Je '47 200w

OMAN, CAROLA. See Lenanton, C. M. A. O.

O'MEARA, WALTER. Trees went forth. 253p $2.75 Crown

47-1335

A picture of life in a Minnesota lumber camp in 1906. The hero is Matt Bradley, who has to give up going to the university in order to support the family, after the death of his father.

Booklist 43:256 Ap 15 '47

"Sincere, but one questions its popular appeal, in contrast to livelier books of its genre." Kirkus 15:37 Ja 15 '47 180w

"This is a rare occasion in the world of fiction dealing with the timber, a novel that will stand up beside anything that has been written in this generation of the life and times of lumberjacks. . . . To many readers the joy of Mr. O'Meara's first novel will come from the authentic pictures he conjures up of life in a logging camp. He has a fine feeling for the drama inherent in the business." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 23 '47 950w

"There is enough about Mr. O'Meara's first novel to suggest that it might have been an appealing, unambitious but forceful piece of writing. The narrative frame is unpretentious. . . . Yet the dramatic force and human relevance inherent in the situation are dissipated, and the watered effect is chiefly caused, I believe, by the novel's lack of focus. The character of the young boy is revealed neither steadily nor significantly. Without discernible reason the novel shifts time and again into dull outlines of statistics and handbook facts about the state of the timber business in Minnesota around 1906." Frederick Brantley

+ N Y Times p33 Mr 30 '47 270w

"A fascinating chapter of American life, written with great taste and restraint."

+ New Yorker 23:97 F 22 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

ONEAL, JAMES, and WERNER, GUSTAVE ADOLPH. American communism; a critical analysis of its origins, development and programs. 416p new & rev ed $5 Dutton

335.4 Communism—U.S. 47-4665

"Revision and extension of Oneal's same title published in 1927 by the Rand School. To original thirteen chapters now slightly revised, Werner adds nine, covering events since original publication, including discussions of the Trotskyites in America, the dissolution of the Comintern, recent Communist tactics before and during the war, postwar trends and the alternatives facing the American people today." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:72 O 15 '47

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 166:87 O '47 220w

"The Oneal portion is coldly factual and well documented. There is no doubt of its value as a concise chronological account of the various left-wing movements in this country, both those underground and those in the open. . . . But this early story is unsympathetically told and appears to miss the essential point. . . . Unlike the early portion, the second half of the work is largely undocumented." Griffing Bancroft

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 3 '47 470w

"Mr. Oneal's chapters are thoroughly documented, recounting the innumerable factions, splits, shake-ups, and revisions which the Communist Party in the United States endured in its first decade. . . . Professor Werner's chapters are more readable and cover a period of Communist activity with which the public is more familiar. Neither section of the book really jibes with the other. Where Mr. Oneal is too ponderous and too factual for the lay reader, Professor Werner is not sufficiently so. Thus there remains the need for a really adequate work defining the place and meaning of Communism in the United States." Roland Sawyer

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 14 '47 600w

"James Oneal and W. G. Werner have written a thoroughly documented, highly readable account of the communist movement in the United States. Forsaking the usual frenzy which surrounds so much of our discussion of communism, they have preferred to write objectively, letting the record of the communists as they themselves have compiled and written it stand up for examination. . . . Whether 'American Communism' is the best book on the subject one cannot say offhand. That it is a good book there can be no argument, except from the communist press. Chapter and verse of the Party's aims are quoted, with the Party usually doing the talking. This makes it rather difficult to refute. For those who wish to write or talk about Communism (with a capital C) this book will be invaluable. Its hundreds of references and its complete index make it an excellent source book." J. B. Kelley

+ Commonweal 46:410 Ag 8 '47 750w

Kirkus 15:233 Ap 15 '47 340w

"The original sections are careful and judicious, the latter, somewhat less so; but documented whole adds up to a clear picture of the development of Communism in the United States which authors insist is not a political party in our sense but an agency of the Russian dictatorship. Essential in all collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 120w

"What we really need is a long, sober, dull and heavily documented history of the Communist party in the United States. The Oneal-Werner 'American Communism' supplies only part of this need. It is based on a study of American Communism written twenty years ago by the veteran right-wing Socialist James Oneal. . . . Dr. G. A. Werner, Professor of Russian History at the College of the Pacific in California, in consultation with Oneal, retained the first eleven chapters, enlarged on Oneal's last two and added nine of his own. This arrangement must have struck someone as good editorial procedure, but the result is a mixture of tone and style which weakens the impact and impairs the usefulness of the book." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

N Y Times p3 Je 29 '47 1100w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 90w

"It is unfortunate that there is no connected story here of Communism in the United States during and since World War II. Taken as a whole, however, this book should be valuable in promoting a more widespread knowledge of American Communism and its program."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:296 S '47 280w

O'NEILL, HUGH. Modern pension plans; principles and practices. 382p $5 Prentice-Hall

331.252 Pensions 47-3856

"Presents nontechnical descriptions of the various types of pension plans, suggests criteria to be used in selecting a plan, and surveys 612 pension plans established, for the most part, since 1932. Has value for the employee as well as the employer. Appendixes: deferred severance schemes, minimum and maximum pensions, mortality and interest tables." Booklist

Booklist 44:46 O 1 '47

"This study should be useful to the employer in establishing a new pension plan as well as in evaluating any plan he may currently have in operation, and it will also enable those who are covered in such programs to appraise their prospective or present pension benefits."

+ Management R 36:612 N '47 60w

OPPE, A. P., ed. See Sandby, P. and T. Drawings

OPPENHEIMER, JANE MARION. New aspects of John and William Hunter. 188p il $6 Schuman

926.1 Hunter, John. Hunter, William. Home, Sir Everard, bart. Med47-2159

"Two of the most colorful and creative careers of eighteenth-century medicine are those of the Hunter brothers. Both were born and bred in Scotland, and both rose to fame in London, John (1728-1793) as a systematic anatomist and surgeon, and William (1718-1783) as a teacher of anatomy and obstetrician. John Hunter's magnificent collection of comparative anatomical and surgical specimens . . . became after his death the Hunterian Collection of the Royal College of Surgeons of London. One hundred and fifty years later it was almost wholly destroyed by German bombs. In the present book Miss Oppenheimer inquires into the mystery which has surrounded another act of destruction which was visited upon the manuscripts of John by his literary executor and brother-in-law, Sir Everard Home (1763-1832). . . . Concerning William Hunter as an anatomist and as a high priest of Lucina much has been written. . . . But it is with a hitherto little known aspect of William Hunter's life that Miss Oppenheimer is concerned, namely, his political activities and his relations with the royal family and the nobility." N Y Times

Reviewed by O. H. Wangenstein, M.D.

Am Hist R 52:779 Jl '47 320w

"Well produced and fully annotated, her book presents some new aspects of the two great brothers, one of whom made surgery a science, while the other made obstetrics respectable." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 31 '47 240w

Reviewed by M. F. Ashley-Montagu

N Y Times p21 Jl 14 '47 450w

"Miss Oppenheimer has written a fascinating and very probably final commentary. . . . No student of the Hunters and their time can afford to leave this book unread, and many others should find it absorbing as an exploration of human motives." H. H. Bashford

+ Spec 178:310 Mr 21 '47 650w

ORGANIC reactions; editorial bd: Roger Adams, ed-in-chief, Werner E. Bachmann [and others]. v3 460p $5 Wiley

547. Chemical reactions. Chemistry, Organic (42-20265)

"In each of its nine chapters this book discusses a widely used organic reaction from the preparative point of view. A bibliography follows each chapter as well as tables listing compounds prepared by or subjected to the reaction under discussion." (Chem Eng) Index. For volume 2 see Book Review Digest 1944.

"The articles in this volume seem even better integrated editorially than in the two preceding volumes. As in the past, the chapters selected are clearly written, the scope and limitations being presented for each reaction. . . . Thirty-one reactions have been covered in the three volumes. It is hoped the editors will continue this undertaking because, without question, the availability of the several chapters has been a helpful stimulus in expediting organic research." C. D. Hurd

+ Chem & Eng N 25:802 Mr 17 '47 650w

Chem Eng 54:272 Jl '47 60w

"Perhaps in no other source is there so much readily available knowledge concerning the following subjects."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:208 Je '47 250w

ORMSBEE, THOMAS HAMILTON. Storehouse of antiques. 155p il $5 McBride

745 Collections and collecting. Art industries and trade. Art objects. Furniture 47-30483

"Discussion of those kinds of antiques most in demand today: furniture, grouped by makers, uses and materials, glass paperweights and novelties, sandwich glass, silver, colonial American jewelry, Wedgwood and other china-ware, delft tiles, some early painters, pewter buttons, table silver, and samplers. Reprinted from Antiques magazine." Booklist

Booklist 44:86 N 1 '47

"A smattering of information with nice illustrations; but every librarian should register a protest at the impossibly small type which shocks one in a book of this size and price." A. S. Plaut

Library J 72:1689 D 1 '47 90w

"It attempts to cover so much that the information given in any one field is considerably less than adequate. The illustrations, while numerous, are badly reproduced and if you have less than 20-20 vision you'll get nowhere with the text for the entire book is printed in a minute type that should be reserved for footnotes." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 D 14 '47
100w

ORTEGA Y GASSET, JOSE. Six color reproductions of paintings from the Prado museum. See Velazquez, D. R. de S. y

ORTIZ FERNANDEZ, FERNANDO. Cuban counterpoint: tobacco and sugar; tr. from the Spanish by Harriet de Onís; introd. by Bronislaw Malinowski; prologue by Herminio Portell Vilá. 312p il $4 Knopf

338.1 Tobacco. Sugar. Cuba 47-1035

"A weaving together of several strands of social history, mainly of tobacco and some of sugar, with many references to early Spanish authors, comprises the 'counterpoint.' Some space is given to the history of sugar and tobacco economies: the former was from the start capitalistic—in that it required fair outlay for land and mills—whereas, tobacco cultivation was carried on in small holdings, and cigar manufacture in small shops. The sugar industry called for labor of the type that encouraged slavery. It was always something foreign to Cuba—parasitic—serving foreign rather than national interests. Also some discussion of 'transculturation.'" (Library J) Glossary. Index.

Reviewed by R. R. Hill

Ann Am Acad 253:230 S '47 380w

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

"'Cuban Counterpoint' is Don Fernando at his best. He is learned, witty, interesting. He can always present his thought in a new form, find another image to clarify his ideas. . . [It] is worth reading both on the history of Cuba's two main crops, tobacco and sugar, and as a study of their sociological implications." Lorenzo Medrano

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 23 '47
290w

Reviewed by Edna Lonigan

Commonweal 46:20 Ap 18 '47 320w

Current Hist 12:372 Ap '47 110w

"A book of sociological as well as industrial importance, but only for scientific shelves." + Kirkus 15:22 Ja 1 '47 110w

"Recommended for its charm and erudition." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by Jeannette Mirsky

Nation 165:535 N 15 '47 1400w

"It is a spirited and fragmentary notebook. . . This reviewer found it a stimulating medley of diverse facts, some trivial and some major, some flashing and some tedious. Many of its pages seem more like a museum of thought than thought itself. Paragraphs of penetrating brevity emerge from the lore and prove the talent of the author; the whole book shows zest.

Many excellent reproductions of old tobacco prints and labels illustrate his lively interest and humor." Herbert Feis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 F
23 '47 1050w

"A book remarkable in a purely literary way, quite apart from the fund of antiquarian detail between its covers. The translation by Harriet de Onís sticks very closely to the original. . . And though the strange lack of focus might easily have been done away with in a free translation, it is perhaps just as well that it was preserved, if for no other reason than to emphasize the simple truth that Spanish-speaking peoples have their own mental habit, a habit which they prefer and do not intend to abandon. This habit, in the case of Señor Ortiz, inclines him to be interested in the magical and occult components of history, less in the material components, and he writes accordingly." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p10 F 16 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 21 '47
50w

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Mystery of the lost letter; il. by Robert Doremus. 112p $1.50 Lippincott

46-7568

For mystery fans under ten.

Kirkus 14:493 O 1 '46 60w

"There are a secret passage, a cave, distant footsteps, and books missing strangely from the library; but all is explained. Ken and Marilyn make new friends and Ken gets a workshop of his own where he and his new friend can work in peace. A completely possible and plausible story with real boys and girls as characters." Margaret Scoggin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N
10 '46 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:40 F '47

ORTON, MRS HELEN (FULLER). Mystery up the chimney; il. by Robert Doremus. 109p $1.75 Lippincott

47-4012

Mystery story for younger boys and girls.

Kirkus 15:338 J1 1 '47 85w

"Recipe is basic and conforms to conventions but will be liked by its audience of third- and fourth-graders (ages 8-9)." Gertrude Andrus

Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 70w

"This is a real country story, with everyday doings of everyday children. The mystery is not very broad nor very long, but it is the kind that will satisfy the 9-year-old who loves to think he is reading an exciting story." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p13 D 21 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 20w

OSBORN, MRS MARGARET GRANT (LA FARGE). Ring and the dream. 274p $2.75 Harper

47-2902

A strikingly beautiful woman, who married at nineteen, hoping for love, is the heroine. In place of love Julia found only passion. For years she lived on, hostess to her fabulously wealthy husband, but oppressed by the wickedness of the life in which she was trapped. Many years later, an old and lonely woman, she found an answer to her tragic existence.

Kirkus 15:77 F 1 '47 110w

"This book with its strange, final confrontation, its violent contrasts, is much less simple than it seems on the surface. Possibly because it concerns itself with moral problems rather than with moods or events, possibly because it so sharply contrasts poor with rich, it has an odd but agreeable air of being, somehow, old-fashioned in the sense that certain flowers are sometimes said to be so. At moments it may be a little over-written for some tastes. The character drawing is extremely simple. . . Admirably clear and seen in much more detail is Julia herself. . . But, sharpest of all, Mrs. Osborn's story leaves behind it, together with the sense of sadness and futility that clings about an old, empty house, a sense—at once revealing and disturbing—of what it may mean to be very old and very much alone and not inhospitable to death." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ap 13 '47 650w

"In spite of her careful and sensitive writing, the novel is weak in its construction. . . It is a pity that Mrs. Osborn did not present it in full dramatic and social significance, characterization and conflict. The parable of the evil in wealth is perhaps overstressed and, although labored even in italics, is not successful. . . After the wreck of her marriage and her life, it is quite anti-climactic to return to the little criminal creeping up on the solitary old woman. He, himself, is not convincing with his web of wild coincidences and has no real importance in the story or its symbolism. And the faintly ironic outcome of his thieving does nothing to strengthen the structure of the novel." Hubert Creekmore

N Y Times p22 Ap 27 '47 500w

New Yorker 23:117 Ap 12 '47 130w

"Miss Osborn has a tendency to speak too much for her characters rather than to let them speak for themselves. But she compensates for this fault by the picture she gives of the relentless and the weight of age. No Rabbi Ben Ezra optimism here. Where she really excels is in creating atmosphere, in depicting the sense of menace and the encroachment of death and decay about the old house that holds the jewels." Jane Voiles

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47
300w

OSGOOD, CHARLES GROSVENOR, and others. Modern Princeton. 159p il maps $2.50 Princeton univ. press

378 Princeton university 47-4776

"Seven distinguished Princetonians discuss the development of the university since 1896, explaining its aspirations, problems, and accomplishments of the past 50 years." School & Society

"This charming little volume on modern Princeton is written chiefly by three emeritus professors."

+ Am Hist R 53:183 O '47 100w

"Charming book. . . Even a Yale man can read it with admiration, and all the more because its opening chapter—as lovely an essay as anybody ever wrote about a college and its town—was written by a long-time Princeton professor, Charles G. Osgood, Yale 1894. The book is recommended not only to Princetonians but to all who need reassurance that American higher education has not turned sour."

+ Christian Century 64:997 Ag 20 '47
150w

School & Society 65:431 Je 7 '47 30w

O'SHEEL, PATRICK, ed. See United States marine corps combat correspondents. Semper fidelis

OTHMAN, FREDERICK C. Man on the half shell; il. by Bernard Thompson. (Whittlesey house publication) 211p $2.50 McGraw

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-2152

Autobiographical chapters by a Hollywood reporter, describing his first attempts to be a newspaperman, his coverage of the Mexican trouble, days in Washington under Raymond Clapper, and his highly colorful experiences in Hollywood.

"'Man on the Half Shell' is a jolly book by a writer who hasn't a mean bone in his considerable body. Unlike books by other columnists, such as Earl Wilson's 'Behind the Eight Ball,' the Othman opus is funny without trying to be." Dale Harrison

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr.30 '47
240w

"Kind of inconsequential—kind of funny in its own way."

Kirkus 15:25 Ja 1 '47 120w

"'Man on the Half Shell' rounds up the choicest of the author's interviews and thumb-nail sketches and ties them in with chapters of autobiography. He gives himself the same light treatment he bestows on all other subjects, and the result is unadulterated entertainment."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S
14 '47 170w

OTT, SUSANNA CLAYTON. The Good Night at San Gabriel; front. by Carlos Merida. 63p $1.50 Harper

Christmas stories 47-12065

Christmas story the scene of which is the Mission of San Gabriel in California on a Christmas eve in the 1780's. A devout young priest has taught the Indians a Christmas play, and Father Junipero Serra comes to award the prize.

"A roundabout way of telling the Christmas story which attains high plausibility, much simple fun and deep orthodox conviction."

+ Commonweal 47:260 D 19 '47 130w

"Told with tender humor and beauty of language. Very human qualities of the story make it doubly appealing. An excellent choice for Christmas reading." E. F. Clift

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 70w

OURSLEER, WILLIAM CHARLES. Departure delayed. 215p $2 Simon & Schuster

47-5298

Mystery story.

Kirkus 15:350 Jl 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S
14 '47 120w

"An absorbing yarn." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p32 S 14 '47 200w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p13 S 21 '47
90w

"High grade thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 S 20 '47 50w

OUSPENSKY, P. D. See Uspenskii, P. D.

OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB OF AMERICA. Deadline delayed. 311p $3.50 Dutton

909.82 World politics. World war, 1939-1945

—Personal narratives, American. Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-2422

Twenty-two newspaper stories which for various reasons had not been previously printed. They are by such well-known foreign correspondents as Edgar Snow, Bob Considine, Gretta Palmer, Richard Tregaskis, Henry J. Taylor, Irene Kuhn, and J. P. McEvoy. The articles were selected by an editorial committee of the Overseas press club of America.

Reviewed by Thomas Daffron

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 13 '47
400w

"Generally interesting, but frequently dull and too often vulgar."

Christian Science Monitor p15 Ap 26
'47 80w

"At times it is disillusioning reading, but often entertaining, and despite the title, there is much of lively interest today. Valuable source material for history—and extremely readable."

+ Kirkus 15:50 Ja 15 '47 120w

"Of uneven merit, but on the whole useful as a collection of lively and entertaining footnotes to recent history." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:385 Mr 1 '47 80w

OVERSEAS PRESS CLUB—Continued

"If there is little in 'Deadline Delayed' that is startling, and much that is quite the reverse, there are several stories that make good reading." John Lardner

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Mr 16 '47 600w

"Trained observers as they are, their harvest is rich, their descriptions vivid. And since the club's editorial committee had the choice, it selected a variety of reports whose subjects are as diversified as they are colorful." C. L. Heymann

+ N Y Times p41 Mr 30 '47 650w

"Here some of the most respected members of their profession have joined to give Americans a new and different reflection and interpretation of certain events, realities, states of mind. Offered by these men and women frankly in the interest of freedom of the news everywhere, in a day when that principle is being reaffirmed against the few who would destroy it, the book is the best imaginable justification of that principle. It is also a hefty package of lively reading which few will want to miss." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 9 '47
1100w

Reviewed by Donald Armstrong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Ap 19 '47 700w

OVINGTON, MARY WHITE. The walls came tumbling down. 307p $3 Harcourt

B or 92 National association for the advancement of colored people 47-30961

Autobiography of one of the founders of the National association for the advancement of colored people. Miss Ovington began her work as a well-to-do young woman who became a social worker. By 1904 she was at work on a study of the Negro, and has been associated with the N.A.A.C.P. since its beginning in 1909. Index.

Booklist 44:89 N 1 '47

"Miss Ovington, at 82, writes with the zest and energy of youth. Walter White, in his foreword, describes her as 'a fighting saint.'" W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1207 O 8 '47 160w

"The book is an interesting study of one woman who was impelled to use inherited money and natural talent in a fight that has advanced immeasurably the whole perspective of genuinely-functioning democracy in America." Harold Preece

+ Churchman 161:17 D 15 '47 180w

"She writes objectively, without preaching or pointing; she is wise enough to realize that the documented facts alone are eloquent. Her one fault is the author's tendency to alternate between offhandedness and preciseness. On one page she tells us of engaging the great William Burns to investigate a lynching at Coatesville, Pa., then hurries on to something else without telling us how it all came out." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 46:628 O 10 '47 550w

"Socially important; humanely interesting."

+ Kirkus 15:499 S 1 '47 90w

"As an account of an American woman's education in the broader implications of democracy Mary White Ovington's autobiography presents an arresting personal history. As a record of the labors and achievements of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People by one of its founders it has a second level of interest and may well claim another group of readers. Both audiences, however, will find it enormously rewarding." Arna Bontemps

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
S 21 '47 550w

Reviewed by B. M. Murphy

N Y Times p34 N 2 '47 550w

"This is an heroic account told in the simplest of terms." Henrietta Buckmaster

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 S 27 '47 650w

Reviewed by Bruno Lasker

Survey 83:324 N '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:139 O '47

OWEN, FRANK, ed. Fireside mystery book. 309p $2.50 Lantern press (N.Y.)

Short stories—Collections

47-2028

Anthology of short mystery and detective stories. Contents: The Belfry, by A. V. Elston; Leg man, by William Irish; Goodbye, Hannah, by Steve Fisher; Chance observer, by Frederick Skerry; Black magic, by Sax Rohmer; Pale pink porcelain, by Frank Owen; Figure a dame, by Richard Sale; The Huddleston murder, by Jared Van Wagenen; The Adventure of the mouse's blood, by Ellery Queen; A Study in amber, by Richard Kent; The Cruise of the Lola Montez, by Louis Paul; The Skull, by Norman McGlashan; Little memento, by John Collier; Information obtained, by William MacHarg; The Mulbie murder, by William Roughhead; Phil Beta copper, by David Kent; Holding the bag, by Vincent Starrett; I'll be killing you, by Philip Ketchum; The man on the roof, by W. C. Brown; Fountain pen, by Cornell Woolrich.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47
90w

"With almost no feminine representation, this is a selection which is by no means typed. . . A panel of popular writing and good reading."

+ Kirkus 15:45 Ja 15 '47 80w

"Some of [the stories are] very good and some indifferent. Many of them are mere crime stories with little or no mystery in them. A notable exception is 'Fountain Pen,' by Cornell Woolrich which has mounting suspense plus puzzle element." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p20 J1 20 '47 140w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 2 '47
50w

"Majority of yarns new to collections, but not worth collecting. Bottom of barrel."

— Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 50w

"This [anthology] has been carefully and intelligently put together and provides first class entertainment." R. F. H.

+ Spring'd Union p2 Ap 24 '47 90w

OWEN, WILLIAM VERN. Labor problems. 570p $4.50 Ronald 331 Labor and laboring classes 46-5463

"The author, to quote from his preface, undertakes to offer a 'thorough survey of the principles and problems of labor economics,' and to do this not by presenting 'a vast array of factual matter about the laws and regulations affecting labor' but by a treatment 'largely analytical rather than descriptive.'" Ann Am Acad

Reviewed by A. Morgner

Am Pol Sci R 41:143 F '47 550w

"Unreasonable demands that results in 'feather-bedding,' the employment of stand-by workers that do not work, the exemption of labor from some of the restraints imposed by law on others, the conditions that make a Petrillo or John L. Lewis possible—all these factors are a part of labor problems today and are largely passed by or referred to very lightly in this text. It is not the business of a reviewer to tell an author how he should have titled his book, but it seems to this reviewer that a treatment of 'Labor Problems' calls for relatively less emphasis on the purely economic and more on the social and political aspects of these problems." J. H. Bentley

Ann Am Acad 250:159 Mr '47 550w

OXFORD cyclopedic concordance. 370p il col maps $2.50; lea $4.50 Oxford

220:2 Bible. Whole—Concordances 47-3914

"This is a rearrangement of the greater part of the material contained in the well-known and highly useful Oxford Helps to the Study of the Bible, with some additions. The bulk of that book was made up of a concordance and a dictionary of names, but there were also 45 other departments of classified information. In the new volume, this is all put into one alphabetical arrangement for convenient reference.

The material has been revised and, where necessary, modernized." Christian Century

"The student will still often need a more complete word-concordance, but for a one-volume collection of 'helps,' this is undoubtedly the most for the least."

+ Christian Century 64:997 Ag 20 '47 130w

"The material has been brought up to date through the best modern scholarship." J. V. Z.

+ Churchman 161:17 D 15 '47 90w

OZAKI, MILTON K. Fiend in need. 232p $2.50
Ziff-Davis

47-3523

Detective story.

"Bendy provides the laughs, while Caldwell does the serious sleuthing and does it uncommonly well." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 Je 29 '47 160w

"Pornographic-book racket basis of slightly implausible tale, with blonde-chasing secretary playing ribald foil to dignified and pedantic detective."

Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 26 '47 50w

P

PACE, MRS MILDRED MASTIN. Juliette Low; with drawings by Jane Castle. 186p $2 Scribner

B or 92 Low, Juliette (Gordon) 47-2524

Biography of the founder of the Girl Scouts, from her earliest days in Savannah during the Civil war, to her death in 1927. For teen-aged girls.

"Many girls besides the Scouts will be fascinated by this vivid portrait of a beautiful Southern belle who had a vision and the energy to make it come true." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn BK 23:219 My '47 120w

"A superficial, a sentimental approach to a woman whose name should carry inspiration. Too bad there isn't a better book for the backing of the Girl Scouts."

— Kirkus 15:129 Mr 1 '47 280w

"Well-written and very entertaining account. . . . Will be welcomed by librarians, Girl Scout leaders and Girl Scouts everywhere." Margaret Taylor

+ Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 70w

"Not all the tests of her great spirit are set down in this book for little girls. But her spirit comes through, as it did." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ap 6 '47 500w

Reviewed by Phyllis Fenner

N Y Times p23 Je 1 '47 150w

"It is a conscientious but telescoped account of a brilliant woman with a broad vision and the will and determination to make her vision a reality."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 70w

PACIFIC islands handbook, 1944, by R. W. Robson. North American ed 371p maps $4 Macmillan

919 Oceania—Yearbooks (45-35060)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"The material is presented in a concise, readable style. . . . An index of place names has been provided, which covers all the island groups, but does not list many of the individual islands. . . . A few important individuals are also included, but there are some strange omissions. . . . The indexing, however, is accurate as far as it goes. Statistics are the most recent which are available in view of wartime dislocations. Most of the tables close with figures compiled within the period from 1933 to 1940. Where possible, as in the case of the Samoa territory, the statistics include 1943 data. Most of the maps are easily read. . . .

The format of the Handbook is attractive, the print is large and clear, and the volume is well bound. The Pacific Islands Handbook, 1944, is a useful reference tool. Any defect in the organization of the material is compensated by the wealth of authoritative information which the book contains. The Pacific Islands Handbook is recommended for all libraries."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 17:19 Ap '46 700w

PACKER, PETER. White crocus. (Whittlesey house publication) 275p $2.75 McGraw

47-30558

Character study of an adolescent girl, living in London during World war I. When Daisy's father came back from war to discover his wife had been unfaithful, he reenlisted, putting Daisy in care of her grandfather. The effect on the girl was deplorable, and when, after divorce, her father married again, her reactions became tinged with criminal tendencies.

Reviewed by D. A. Koch

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 31 '47
180w

"A sad, often squalid story of the mental and emotional ruin of a youngster, this is nonetheless, an effective first novel, with little evasion, little illusion."

+ — Kirkus 15:322 Je 15 '47 170w

"The devices dreamed up by Mr. Packer are too stagy for credibility. Although from time to time Daisy Thorne bursts alive in the pages as a pulsing, pitiful little being and even her father has the occasional power to move you, the book too often becomes case history." Virginia Peterson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Ag 31 '47 400w

"The basic situation . . . is eminently sound. The development of this theme . . . is ingenious and plausible—but only up to a point." Andrea Parke

+ — N Y Times p16 S 14 '47 470w

"Apart from the flaw of its improbability, the book is suspenseful enough, and fleshy enough—dealing as thoroughly as it does with the erotic impulses and actions of its characters—to hold a large audience. It is, however, too melodramatic to be a good psychological study and too psychological to be good melodrama." Luther Nichols

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 14 '47
600w

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w

PADGETT, LEWIS, pseud. See Kuttner, H.

PAGANO, JO. The condemned; il. by Joseph Stefanelli. 215p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

47-31379

A story of a kidnapping, a murder, and a lynching and what lay behind these actions, posing the question: Who was really to blame?

Kirkus 15:440 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Mr. Pagano has constructed his novel with skill and has furnished it with plenty of emotion and sensation. He does not dwell unduly on lust or horror, but there are enough, certainly, of both. The characterizations are generally skilled and the writing highly effective, although the opening chapter, which airs the opinion of a cabinet maker, a psychologist, an evangelist and an astrologer, is unfortunate." Robert Molloy

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
O 19 '47 450w

Reviewed by Lawrence Dodd

N Y Times p31 N 2 '47 270w

"This is, to be sure, a horrifying story, as the author intends it to be. But it leaves the thoughtful reader with more than just the question of why men kill other men. The final act of killing is only the extreme. Man, the author suggests, is murdering himself through the society he has arranged for his own good, which has turned on him and is destroying him, and this is manifest in many another way than in such specific violence as this book describes. That's what Mr. Pagano wants his readers to think about." J. H. Jackson

PAGANO, JO—Continued

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 5 '47
750w

"Jo Pagano in this book has a try at the ethical problem of crime and punishment. It is a good try, and that is no condescending phrase but an exact statement of quality. Men like Dostoevsky and Dreiser covered a great many more agonized pages than has Pagano, in their pursuit of the same problem. . . And if they did better than he, one reason (among others) may be just that matter of space and extension. Pagano's job is good, intense, sincere; but it is also slick, speedy, tailored." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:17 O 18 '47 450w

PALENCIA, ISABEL DE. Alexandra Kollontay, ambassadress from Russia. 309p il $3.50 Longmans

B or 92 Kollontai, Aleksandra Mikhaïlovna
47-1120

Biography of the Russian champion of women's rights, who was at various times minister to Norway, to Mexico, and Sweden. Alexandra Kollontay was the modern world's first ambassadress, and first woman member of a cabinet. The author, who is a personal friend, was the Spanish counterpart of Madame Kollontay, and represented her country in Sweden and Finland. Index.

"To the author neither her subject nor the Soviet Union can do any wrong. Hence her story is written from the point of view of an admirer eager to point out the accomplishments of Mme. Kollontay and her associates in the Soviet Government and to justify, as far as possible, actions which less devoted observers might criticize. Students of the Soviet Revolution and regime will find little of value in this book's analysis, therefore, but may find some of the personal background given for Mme. Kollontay useful." Harry Schwartz

— + Ann Am Acad 253:223 S '47 320w

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Marie Seton

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 2 '47
320w

"The Kollontay that emerges from these pages is, perhaps, more fascinating than factual. . . All this is understandable, because Isabel de Palencia is both admirer and devoted friend of Mme. Kollontay. She is, moreover, a Spanish Republican, overwhelmingly grateful to Soviet Russia for its aid to her countrymen in the Spanish Civil War. She tells her story more through sweeping affirmation than by meaningful incident. Superlatives fall easily from her pen, and unbounded admiration is often substituted for concrete detail." B. B.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 5 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Foreign Affairs 25:704 Jl '47 20w

"The author tells a warm personal story, in narrative style, with personal episodes and colorful individuals to enliven the telling. Not only is this entertaining biography, but it throws considerable light on Soviet diplomacy and policies at home, on the efforts of those sincere liberals who looked on the Revolution and Communism as the solution for bettering the lot of the common people. This might prove a good antidote to anti-Russia literature, and provide good reading for many Americans."

+ Kirkus 14:480 S 15 '46 160w

"The value of this biography is two-fold: it provides for the first time, the story of one of the great and picturesque contemporary women, and reflects through her eyes the whole gamut of experience of the birth and growth of the Soviet Union. Regrettably, it is much too fragmentary an account for its complex subject. Nevertheless, it adds to our data on important Soviet figures. Recommended." Toby Cole

+ — Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 140w

"If enough is not told in detail, it is ungrateful to complain. There is so much to tell. Suffice it, that Mme. Palencia does give a picture of one of the foremost women of our times that has long been wanting. She corrects many misunderstandings floridly exploited by journalists. . . This biography is unevenly written. But it reminds us that there is treasure to be quarried in the lives of the Russian women of our times, and Kollontay is a key to their ways of thinking, and working, and judging what is important to be done with life and love." Ernestine Evans

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ja 26 '47 1600w

"Here is the story of a remarkable and distinguished woman, told by another remarkable and distinguished woman. Isabel de Palencia's biography of her friend, Alexandra Kollontay, is a readable and wholly admiring book; and yet, the author's failure to fill in the subject's character with a sufficient number of telling details, and her tendency to pass over briefly the notable people with whom Mme. Kollontay worked—Lenin, Stalin and Litvinoff among others—make it little more than a superficial achievement." M. C. Hastings

+ — N Y Times p24 My 25 '47 800w

Springfd Union p6 Jl 12 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:81 My '47

PALMER, JOHN LESLIE. Comic characters of Shakespeare. 135p $2.50 Macmillan

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Characters
[46-8586]

According to the publisher's note this book represents only a part of a longer work on Shakespeare's comedies, left incomplete at the author's death. In this book are studies of the chief "comic" characters in five Shakespearean plays—Bernowne, Touchstone, Shylock, Bottom, and Beatrice and Benedick.

Reviewed by Claire McGlinchey

N Y Times p14 My 18 '47 450w

San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '47
150w

"There was probably nobody better qualified than John Palmer to write on Shakespeare's comic characters. He had pondered much on comedy, had written about Moliere and about the English comedy of manners, and had given us a brilliant little book on the nature of comedy. That, by itself, would not be enough for the book in hand; but, added to these qualifications, Palmer had an intimate knowledge of the drama as it actually comes out in the theatre, a deep human appreciation and a practitioner's understanding of creative work." Bonamy Dobrée

+ Spec 177:368 O 11 '46 900w

"Mr. Palmer's imaginative sympathy makes his essays on these very different creations of the poet pleasant as well as illuminating." R. G.

+ Theatre Arts 31:72 Ag '47 240w

"A good deal of John Palmer's book amounts to a reading of favorite passages, with a running commentary. The method already employed in his 'Political Characters,' induces the mood for appreciation; and occasionally fresh points of view are suggested, more easily perhaps than in a formal treatise. They do not always stand investigation, but the new approach leaves something to be remembered."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p562 N 16 '46
2100w

PALMER, STUART. Miss Withers regrets. 223p $2 Doubleday

47-3660

Detective story.

Booklist 43:348 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47
90w

"A welcome return of a favorite."

+ Kirkus 15:143 Mr 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42
My 11 '47 270w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 My 18 '47 160w

"Plenty of spinstar chitchat is provided for the lady detective's fans."

New Yorker 23:108 My 10 '47 70w

"Its been six long parched years since the last novel about the horsefaced schoolteacher, and it's high time that the Grand Old Man of the humorous detective story returned to demonstrate to the modern upstarts just how it's done." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 11 '47
100w

"Enjoyable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 50w

PALUELLO, LORENZO MINIO-. See Minio-Paluello, L.

PANETTA, GEORGE. Jimmy Potts gets a haircut; il. by Reisle Lonette. 190p $2 Double-day

47-1012

Tempest in a teapot, all about Jimmy Potts, aged four, who went to Romani's barbershop to get a haircut. His mother gave him a note to take to the barber, but unfortunately a horse ate it. So Jimmy arrived at Romani's with very strange instructions which were followed explicitly, and that started the ball rolling.

Kirkus 14:580 N 15 '46 170w

Reviewed by George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Mr 9 '47 410w

"Readers of 'We Ride a White Donkey' know that George Panetta has a talent for verbal caricatures and a mimic's command of Italianized English. His compatriots in Bleecker Street, along with Irish and Jewish people, are in for it again in this extravaganza about a little boy's utter confusion in a crazy world." Nona Balakian

+ N Y Times p5 F 9 '47 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 12 '47
70w

"This slight little book of some forty thousand words is intended as a comedy of misapprehension, mainly among the foreign-born of Bleecker Street. . . . When Mayor LaGuardia's voice enters the story, Mr. Panetta achieves a moment of really bright satire. Unluckily, he is so pleased with it himself that he does the whole thing again, at far greater length and, this time, with a trowel. Mr. Panetta writes with refreshing simplicity and he has a remarkable ear for melting-pot-ese. There are some sharp scenes in the book. But every time I started to enjoy myself, Mr. Panetta spoiled it with an out-of-key guffaw. His gibes at Catholicism, for instance, struck this hap-hazard Protestant as being in singularly poor taste. Also his gibes at child psychology." Jack Iams

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:32 Mr 15 '47 230w

PANTER-DOWNES, MOLLIE (MRS CLARE ROBINSON). One fine day. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 241p $2.50 Little

47-11261

The war was over in England and Laura Marshall was glad, but the new problems were almost insurmountable. The novel considers one day in Laura's life, showing the effects of the war and the peace upon Laura; her husband, Stephen; their daughter, Victoria; and some of their friends.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 N 9 '47
230w

"Though announced as a novel, 'One Fine Day' is not a novel in the ordinary sense of the word. It gets nowhere, promotes no particular idea, and nothing much happens to anybody in it, unless the somewhat contrived ending, depicting the main characters settling down at home, after all, can be called an important event. It is, however, a most readable and enjoyable little book." P. P. S.

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 10 '47
600w

"Mrs. Panter-Downes's distillation is so rare, so faint, that only the most delicate, the most acute, astute palate will perceive infinitive variety of her exquisitely blended flavors. . . . The book's real value lies in its author's objectivity. . . . Here, rare, etiolated, is thernody, for a way of life that led once to the making of much good literature." Anne Fremantle

+ Commonweal 47:380 Ja 23 '48 650w

"There is little story here, rather sketches of England today which for all their awareness, sensitivity, acuity, may not capture American readers."

Kirkus 15:478 S 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '47 60w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:28 N 24 '47 270w

"There is a great measure of grace and color and feeling in the simple tale, all of whose characters are vivid in the extreme—including the elderly but flirtatious dog whose escapade has caused the heroine to deviate so rewardingly from her daily habits. The writing, as always with Miss Panter-Downes, is as limpid as it is sharp and persuasive. Each detail is clear as in a miniature, bathed in sunlight more preciously golden because of an unmissable cloud on the horizon. The whole picture, like everything that speaks of the transitory, is curiously touching and singularly sad." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
O 26 '47 600w

"It has its merits, part humorous, part melancholy. It is another of those exercises in localism that are so much favored by literary Englishwomen, but Miss Panter-Downes has made it into something special by her power to invest the trivial and commonplace with a sudden freshness and wonder. . . . But the value of Miss Panter-Downes' book as a historical record is merely incidental. You will find yourself more taken by the geniality of her prose, with its new and spontaneous tropes, her lively observation, and her skillful strokes of portraiture." J. M. Lalley

+ — New Yorker 23:130 O 25 '47 500w

"There is a great deal more than physical action in the novel. Much tenderness and gallantry and quiet humor. Much loving kindness, much warm regard for a pleasant past, a casual shrug for an unpromising and uncertain future." E. D. D.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 4 '48
550w

"This is an English view and a few of the details are not ours, but it is a moving picture and the nostalgia for other more peaceful days translates itself into our own idiom and our own experience. Superficially it is an amusing, well-observed, well-written account of one woman's problem day, but it is much more than that. It is a picture of a village in transition, of England in the throes of change, and of Our Time as well." R. C. Benet

Sat R of Lit 30:16 N 15 '47 850w

Spring'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 120w
Times [London] Lit Sup p5 Ja 3 '48
300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

PARK, WILLIAM EDGAR. Quest for inner peace. 207p $2.50 Macmillan

252 Sermons

47-1971

A volume of sermons preached in schools and colleges thruout the country, by the president of the Northfield schools. Partial contents: The quest for inner peace; The century of the uncommon man; The dull ache of loneliness; On knowing God's will; Overcoming fear; Mastering ourselves; The ministry of music; Using our failures; Wise choices; The mystery of life.

PARK, W. E.—Continued

"Primarily for thoughtful young people and those who need to be made thoughtful."

+ Christian Century 64:559 Ap 30 '47
20w

"These sermons are notable for their practical wisdom, their choice illustrations, and their readability. But they are deserving of higher praise than this. They are set in an atmosphere of eternity. They illustrate a saying of Phillips Brooks, which I quote from memory: 'No exhortation to a good life which does not have behind it a doctrine deep as eternity can seize and hold the conscience.'" C. S. Detweiler

+ Churchman 161:18 Jl '47 90w

"The acknowledged purpose of the author was to write sermons which would appeal to young people in a simple straightforward manner. The author, it seems, in his effort to gain simplicity and in his overzealous desire to appeal to youth somehow loses the exalting and exhilarating element which accompanies great preaching. Perhaps the secret of the original effectiveness of these messages is explained in the speaker and the audience. His personality and the spirit of the audience were apparently inadequately conveyed in the written reproductions. The author has preached the sermons in forty schools and colleges; so there must be something in them which the reviewer did not discover." J. H. Ivey

Crozer Q 24:280 Jl '47 400w

"A sense of humor, an aptitude for incisive illustrations, a bringing of truth to bear upon the issues of life today are among the characteristics of this preaching. Ministers will find herein much illustrative material and suggestions for sermons of their own. Young people, their parents and teachers will find in it much food for thought."

+ Kirkus 15:63 F 1 '47 150w

PARKE, NATHAN GRIER. Guide to the literature of mathematics and physics including related works on engineering science. 205p $5 McGraw

016.5 Mathematics—Bibliography, Physics—Bibliography 47-3599

"First integrated reference guide covering the entire range from pure mathematics to their engineering and medical applications. List of 1800 titles classified under 50 subject headings, and author index. A consensus of many universities and libraries selected from the standpoint of the applied scientist and research engineer working in the industrial scene. To include certain aspects of modern physics, all articles except symposia have been cited from Review of Modern Physics 1929-1945. Reading reference and library technique comprise the first part of the book." Library J

Booklist 44:82 N 1 '47

Chem Eng 54:278 Ag '47 100w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:37 Ap '47

PARKER, DANIEL FRANCIS. ABC of horse racing. 216p $2.50; pa $1 Random house

798.4 Horse racing Agr47-218

"A primer that goes the full distance in explaining what every young man should want to know about the turf. Basically factual, the book touches on all phases of the sport—its origin, its growth into a multi-million dollar industry, its entertainment value and its future." (N Y Times) Contains a list of American race tracks; a trotting track directory; and a racing glossary.

Kirkus 15:117 F 15 '47 130w

"It is one of the better sports books in its field, but it is not likely to rest well with some of those whom Mr. Parker accuses of being concerned with the 'improvement of the greed.'" J. C. Nichols

N Y Times p12 Je 29 '47 230w

"Although this is not the first book of its kind to hit the stands, it certainly is the most readable. Parker knows how to make with the wise crack one minute and lay out one of his pet peeves with a lead pipe the next. He covers everything from how to translate a form sheet without being rushed to Mission Emergency Hospital to finding your way to the right mutual window." Ace Baillie

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 Jl 6 '47
170w

PARKER, GEORGE HOWARD. World expands; recollections of a zoologist. 252p $4 Harvard univ. press

B or 92

47-556

"Professor Parker (Emeritus, Harvard), writes a delightful autobiography, telling of his life and work in pleasant, modest fashion. It has little to do with zoology, but it is full of personal memories. Descriptions of travel in the old, scholastic Europe and in the Far East are full of anecdote and dry humor." Current Hist

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 2 '47
100w

+ Current Hist 12:238 Mr '47 100w

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

N Y Times p30 Ap 20 '47 410w

School & Society 65:16 Ja 4 '47 40w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:150 Je '47 300w

PARKER, HARRY EWING. Simplified engineering for architects and builders. 2d ed 245p $3 Wiley

624.17 Building. Engineering 47-30936

New edition of a book first published in 1938 [Book Review Digest 1938]. "Changes in the building code have necessitated much revision to bring up to date. New material, tables, and problems have been added." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 44:113 N 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1039 Jl '47 30w

PARKER, NORTON S. Table in the wilderness; il. by Joe Tillotson. 452p $3 Ziff-Davis

Joseph, the patriarch—Fiction 47-756

A retelling of the Biblical story of Joseph. Beginning with the time when he was sold into bondage by his brothers, it follows the course of his life thru the years of failure and success in Egypt.

Reviewed by J. J. Weinstein

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 27 '47
400w

"Joseph's coat of many colors has been retailored in a modern drape, much padded and silk lined. . . . The book will be welcomed by those who find the Biblical account inadequate." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 6 '47 90w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p20 Ap 13 '47 500w

"Mr. Parker with no claims to pretension has invigorated the old Biblical story with a nice blend of fact, legend, history, and pure myth and produced a story of the Brotherhood of Man as well as a spectacular and dramatic account of Joseph's adventures in Egypt. Usually Joseph suffers from severe moral priggishness, but not in Mr. Parker's story, and in addition to his excellent characterization of the Israelite leader he has given his book definitely dimensional background figures." L. S. M.

+ Springfield Union p3 My 10 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

PARKES, HENRY BAMFORD. American experience; an interpretation of the history and civilization of the American people. 343p $3.50 Knopf

917.3 U.S.—Civilization 47-31448

An interpretation of the history and civilization of the United States as evidenced in the people themselves: their writings, manners, and customs.

Booklist 44:105 N 15 '47

"The general reader will find much that is fresh and interesting in this volume." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ja 9 '48
360w

Reviewed by Walter van Horn
Commonweal 47:324 Ja 9 '48 1900w

"It is a startling book, to some no doubt a shocking book. It is arrogant, somewhat superficial, and occasionally erroneous as regards matters of fact. But it is shrewd, penetrating and, except to professional patriots, highly amusing, although Mr. Parkes is anything but a humorist. Its extreme solemnity, indeed, is what makes it amusing." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
D 28 '47 650w

"This must be a pleasant way to write history. The study of a historical document becomes annoying when the student is confined to what it says, and psychology has taught us that even the best of men do not always say what they mean. Much simpler, therefore, to trust yourself to put the right words into the mouths of Edwards, Emerson, and James. And if you should be blessed with powers of divination beyond those of your predecessors, the road is open at last." Perry Miller

N Y Times p10 D 14 '47 850w

"It would be difficult to find anywhere a more searching analysis more readably presented than Mr. Parkes'. A liberal thinker in the best sense of that term, he is quite as willing to point out the faults and weaknesses of the left as he is willing to note those of the right. And he is solidly against the encouragement of class conflict in America—something both right and left would like to see." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 11 '48
1900w

"Of course no one can write a 350-page interpretation of American history without inviting a barrage of criticism—for particular omissions, emphases, opinions, and indeed for merely having the temerity to undertake such a task. Each reader will have his own complaints; my most serious one is that the scant 120 pages devoted to America since the Civil War don't allow the author to do justice to his exposition of our modern dilemmas. But few readers will allow their disagreements with specific parts of the book to spoil the richness of the analysis as a whole." John Lydenberg

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:10 D 20 '47 850w

School & Society 66:367 N 8 '47 10w

PARKES, JAMES WILLIAM. Emergence of the Jewish problem, 1878-1939; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 259p $5 Oxford

296 Jews—History. Jews—Political and social conditions. Palestine—Jewish-Arab problem 47-2765

"In this work no attempt is made to survey the whole field of Jewish history between 1878 and 1939. . . . Instead of this general survey, the three problems have been chosen which will certainly need international planning and international action for their solution—Palestine, the Jewish minorities, and anti-Semitism as a political weapon. . . . This volume brings the story down to 1939, because it is still too early to get into perspective the disastrous events which have befallen Jewry during the years of war." (Pref) Bibliographical notes. Index.

Foreign Affairs 25:697 J1 '47 30w

"Dr. Parkes is incapable of discussing any aspect of the Jewish problem without illuminating it, but since his book was planned the scene has changed so completely that much of what he says about the Jews in Eastern Europe is now of little more than academic interest. This does not detract from the value of his researches as a contribution to the study of Jewish history. He has done a workmanlike job in giving shape and meaning to a series of obscure but not unimportant events never before—at least in English—so fully and so objectively described." Leonard Stein

+ Spec 177:678 D 20 '46 800w

"It is uncommon and unexpected to have the subject of Jewish rights and wrongs presented free of emotional emphasis. Dr. Parkes rarely wanders from the track of historical narrative, and for the most part he leaves the facts to convey their own moral."

Times [London] Lit Sup p611 D 14 '46
1200w

PARKES, JAMES WILLIAM. Jewish problem in the modern world. 1st Am ed 242p $1.25 Oxford

296 Jews—Political and social conditions 46-8141

"Why there is a Jewish question and what is the present world position of the Jews is explained in this . . . survey. Phases of the subject stressed include the unique religious and historical experience of the Jews, their emancipation in the 19th century, their status between wars, the catastrophe in Germany, hopes and conflicts in Palestine, the grave problem of anti-Semitism and the responsibility of non-Jews 'in combating this menace to democracy.' Bibliography. Index." Bookmark

Bookmark 8:4 Ja '47

Foreign Affairs 25:521 Ap '47 20w

"The book is crammed full of concise analyses and illuminating insights. Here and there, however, the critical reader will find spots in the sun. Thus it is not clear what Mr. Parkes has in mind when he suggests that the 'basic cause of anti-Semitism' lies in the fact of 'an intolerant minority under an intolerant majority.' . . . Mr. Parkes has some excellent things to say about the future of the Jewish people in America and Russia. His comments are subtle and profound. Like the rest of the book, they deserve the careful study of all who profess a genuine interest in 'the Jewish problem.'" Leo Shapiro

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p43 N
24 '46 700w

"Mr. Parkes writes as an historian who has set out to report the record as it was made and to interpret its dynamic with sympathy and without prejudice. His narrative is 'objective' but not cold; detached and reserved, yet stirring to pity and terror via a smooth, even, waltz-time prose that seems to flow without accent and without climax. There is a pervasive understatement which is very telling." H. M. Kallen

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 Mr 8 '47 1400w

PARKMAN, FRANCIS. Journals; ed. by Mason Wade. 2v il maps $10 Harper

B or 92 Historians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Voyages and travels 47-11938

These two volumes contain the Parkman diaries and workbooks, recently discovered by the editor in a Boston attic. The contents deal with Parkman's travels for background material for his most famous works, The Oregon Trail, and France and England in North America. "The text of the journals is published verbatim, as Parkman wrote it. The editor's explanatory notes on historical background, persons and places, are grouped at the back of the book. Besides a general preface, Mason Wade has written an introduction to each journal linking it to Parkman's life and work and including essential background material." (Publisher's note) Index.

Kirkus 15:459 Ag 15 '47 90w

"Early journals of New England, Canada and Europe (1841-44) are first rate narratives of compelling interest. Oregon Trail Journal of 1846 contains facts and observations omitted from his most popular work, The Oregon Trail, and is a major document of western history. Later journals are of less general interest but their bibliographical and historical notes will serve scholars as source material on Parkman and his period. Exceptionally well edited by Parkman's recent biographer, Mason Wade... Important addition to historical collections."

PARKMAN, FRANCIS—Continued
G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Howard Doughty
Nation 165:595 N 29 '47 1350w

"All the materials now made public by Mr. Wade with the permission of the Parkman family and the Massachusetts Historical Society are important because they throw light on the intellectual development of a great writer, but the Oregon Trail Journal has further significance as a primary document concerning the climax of American westward expansion." H. N. Smith

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1
D 14 '47 1450w

"Hereafter everyone who has a set of Parkman (and he is the American historian best worth owning complete) will wish these volumes to place beside it. They show what clear aims he had in view from his nineteenth year; how much importance he gave to personal scrutiny of places, physical remains, weather, people, and social customs as compared with study of books and documents... how industriously he polished his style... But the interest of the journals is by no means exclusively biographical or historical. Taken together, they constitute an excellent travel book, full of vivid pictures of men, scenes and manners." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Times p1 N 23 '47 1750w

"For Western readers in particular, the hundred odd pages of the Oregon Trail Journal constitute the most valuable part of the entire work, and by far the most interesting." Oscar Lewis

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 21 '47
1000w

Time 50:66 D 29 '47 800w

PARRISH, MRS. MARY FRANCES (KENNEDY) (M. F. K. FISHER, pseud.). Not now but now. 256p $2.75 Viking

47-30568

"The tale of the wandering wanton, whose character contains no glimmer of human decency, whose driving force through successive incarnations is the lure of sex, whether used as bait to wreck the lives of a Swiss household, or to disrupt a happy below stairs kingdom, or to inject suspicion of lesbianism into a normal girl's adolescence, or to out-tart the tarts of the Gold Coast—Jennie sweeps her callous way. An odd tale, told on four levels of time, 1938, 1847, 1927, 1882,—England and Europe and America—virtually four novels woven together by the insidious Jennie, harlot supreme, whose spirit continues to attempt to escape and find freedom." Kirkus

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 17 '47
220w

Kirkus 15:245 My 1 '47 130w

"Mrs. Fisher is an authority on cooking and eating... This is her recipe for a novel: to a generous helping of ham and corn, add artificial color and artificial flavor. Beat the whole into a light fluff. Half bake." John Farrelly

— New Repub 117:30 S 8 '47 550w

"Most satisfying is the relatively recent Swiss episode... The atmosphere of bourgeois decorum which wicked Jennie so completely wrecks is solidly established, and the psychological equilibrium between the four main persons involved is remarkably well designed. This is a really striking, sinister, brilliantly written piece. The attempt to display the identical woman in similar situations but throughout successive decades was, in any case, a bold one. It does not entirely convince." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ag 17 '47 450w

"It is not easy to convey the ironic charm with which Mrs. Fisher presents her stories. She has the sophistication to write simply, with a minimum of affectation. Her mockery is not jaundiced; she laughs with you at Jennie but is careful to make you keep your distance. The dialogue has a natural sparkle rarely found in a first novel. Mrs. Fisher loves the flow of dresses, the intimacies of food. In the midst of such praise, it is perhaps boorish to add that this novel is not without a serious blemish. The third tale, set in an Ohio college town, seems definitely out of place. Here Mrs. Fisher loses her sureness of touch, and her characters bog down in a mire of unconvincing detail." J. W. Chase

+ — N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '47 600w

"It may be that what Mrs. Fisher is trying to say is that evil is ageless and that Jennie, being the personification of evil, is ageless also, but since that is not a particularly novel idea, and since all that Mrs. Fisher brings to her treatment of it is a sort of brittle preciousness, I think we can dismiss the whole thing. Quirkishly." Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 23:64 Ag 30 '47 600w

"It's my notion that Mrs. Fisher has the making of a novelist, even though 'Not Now But Now' has weaknesses. Among these the careful reader may note an over-emphasis on certain symbols repeated from episode to episode... She has also a tendency to draw an emotion out too fine; now and then the tension is too great, the thing slips over the edge and becomes, for a moment, almost hysterical. But these are minor matters. What is interesting is that the author here shows more fully than in any of her books so far, her ability to imagine creatively and her always admirable way with words, at once graceful and sharp as a knife." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 15
'47 700w

"It is to Mrs. Fisher's credit as a beginning novelist that she is able to make Jennie's wicked progress through a century amusing and witty and to give it qualities of savor and enchantment of which the publisher speaks. But though it is on the same page compared to Virginia Woolf's 'Orlando,' 'Not Now But Now' does not offer the esthetic and intellectual satisfaction as that minor work of art." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ag 30 '47 1100w

PARSONS, MRS. ALICE (BEAL). World around the mountain. 219p $2.75 Dutton

818 Country life 47-30049

A volume of essays, informal and personal in tone, describing the author's life in her country home not far from New York, her neighbors and their ways, social and political, the events and occasions which give rise to philosophical musings.

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:9 My '47

"The more pretentious and 'literary' of these essays seem to me to possess little spontaneity or freshness, and are marred by such examples of conventional ignorance as a reference to 'intellectual darkness... in the Middle Ages from which modern man was only just beginning to emerge when the first European colonists came to America.' But in such penetrating and slightly malicious studies of modern women as 'Her Terrible Husband' and 'Emily Is Wonderful' we have a lively and significant comment on the life of a suburban community dominated by the social and economic magnetism of Manhattan; and in the informal personal essays on bus riding and winter walks the same life is very pleasantly portrayed." J. T. Frederick

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 2 '47
180w

"A deep feeling for her fellow man and a keen appreciation of nature's beauty, especially that of the Hudson River near her home, run throughout the book. It is good reading for those who look beneath the surface of life." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:160 Ja 15 '47 110w

"One finishes her book with a feeling of warm satisfaction in having met a mature woman whose senses are acutely alive to the Infinite variety of the world she lives in."

Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 F
2 '47 700w

Reviewed by Lewis Nichols

N Y Times p22 Mr 9 '47 800w

"These sketches mirror the reflections of a woman of vintage. It is a companionable book that she has written, filled with the friendliness of familiar things and happenings. Mrs. Parsons does not fear natural change, but she does fear the commercialization and the distortion of the things that are fine and of good repute."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47
230w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ap 26 '47 550w

Wis Lib Bul 43:35 F '47

PARTRIDGE, BELLAMY, and BETTMANN, OTTO. As we were; family life in America, 1850-1900. (Whittlesey house publication) 184p il $4.50 McGraw

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs

46-11989

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"The text is on the high school level but the illustrations are excellent selections and of possible interest to social historians."

Am Hist R 52:568 Ap '47 40w

Bookmark 8:9 Mr '47

"'As We Were' is an enchanting book that greybeards may read with pleasure, and youngsters with profit." D. L. Cohn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 F 8 '47 500w

"The collaborators have succeeded in recapturing much of the atmosphere of the period which began during the troubled years before the Civil War and ended with the revolutionary advent of the automobile. The book presents an excellent and clear interpretation of a significant and colorful period of American history."

+ Social Studies 38:237 My '47 140w

"Although Mr. Partridge is a distinguished historian of the not so distant past his personality is lost in the fascinating pictures Dr. Bettmann has dug out of his archives."

+ Spring'd Union p7 My 1 '47 180w

Theatre Arts 31:79 My '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:21 Ja '47

PARTRIDGE, DAVID, pseud. See Salomon, H. J.

PASCHAL, NANCY, pseud. See Trotter, G.

PASHKO, STANLEY. Black Sheep patrol; il. by Frank Rigney. 180p $2.50 Roy pub.

46-8528

"This story of a summer's activities of a group of Boy scouts is written by a man who is close to the scouting movement and writes with a firsthand knowledge of modern boys." Library J

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 178:166 D '46 40w

Booklist 43:192 F 15 '47

"Lively story written with full understanding of Scout activities and their possibilities for rendering community services. Stanley Pashko knows boys and their lingo and gives a realistic portrayal of different members of the Black Sheep Patrol in a spirit of fun and comradeship as well as of appreciation."

+ Horn Bk 23:111 Mr '47 80w

"Fast moving story of special interest to cub scouts."

+ Kirkus 14:493 O 1 '46 80w

"While written in the vernacular of the times, it is a fresh and vigorous story which should appeal to boys of twelve to fourteen. Emphasizes the ideals of scouting without being preachy. Written in the first person." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:169 Ja 15 '47 70w

"Does not come alive. Told in the first person, the stereotyped adventures would fall flat with all who had been nourished on anything but 'Tom Swift' and the 'Rover Boys.' Even the scouting propaganda, the only real reason for the book's being, is so overdone that it becomes boring. Not recommended." S. J. Johnson

— Library J 72:169 Ja 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr
9 '47 360w

"Plenty of action and interesting, well-developed characters." R. A. E.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 10w

PASHKO, STANLEY. Boy showman. 245p il $2.50 Greenberg

790 Amateur theatricals. Amusements

46-8516

"A book for would-be youthful entertainers but with special emphasis on the duties of the director. Gives directions and other useful information for staging circuses, fairs of all kinds, minstrel and vaudeville shows, pageants, plays and sports tournaments." Library J

Booklist 43:174 F 1 '47

"Well-made book which will be most useful for boys of the Boy Scout ages, 12-15, but will be found helpful to anyone who is called upon to organize and produce amateur entertainments. Recommended." A. M. Wetherell

+ Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 70w

PATAI, JOZSEF. Star over Jordan; the life of Theodore Herzl; tr. from the Hungarian by Francis Magyar. 356p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Herzl, Theodor

46-21013

"Theodore Herzl, the founder of the Zionist movement, was born in Budapest in 1860 and died in Vienna in 1904. . . . At the outset he was not at all interested in the Jewish question. In fact he called the notion of a home for the Jews in Palestine childish. His ambition was to be a playwright. . . . The first evidence of his change of heart was his publishing in 1886 of The Jewish State: Attempt at a Modern Solution of the Jewish Question. For the next years he devoted himself to the cause of Zionism." Cath World

Reviewed by B. L. Conway

Cath World 164:474 F '47 350w

"To the extensive literature of the life of Dr. Theodore Herzl, Patai's book is a valuable contribution. The life story of the modern Moses is told with beautiful simplicity and reverence which lend the book irresistible charm, but at the same time deprive it of deep insight into the soul of one of the most remarkable men in modern history." Mendel Kochanski

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 D 15 '46
360w

Foreign Affairs 25:707 Jl '47 10w

"The volume, a translation from the Hungarian, is written warmly, and skillfully creates the mood of messianic exaltation which was never absent in Herzl's lifetime." A. L. Sachar

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
Mr 23 '47 430w

PATCHEN, KENNETH. Selected poems. 86p $1.50 New directions

811

Selections from the author's six previous volumes of poetry, which were published from 1936 thru 1945.

Reviewed by Margaret Avison

Canadian Forum 27:21 Ap '47 420w

"Patchen has a real poetic talent. It comes to nothing because he has no respect for poetic form, no concern about the meaning of words, and no way of judging the value of his emotions." Delmore Schwartz

Nation 164:220 F 22 '47 1100w

PATCHEN, KENNETH—Continued

Reviewed by Framjam Taylor

+ Poetry 70:269 Ag '47 1400w

"Reading through these selected poems that often show Patchen as a poet of gifts, one would like to urge on him the search that Keats made his earnest preoccupation—the search for integration. . . Here, side by side with poems of high seriousness, are puerile cartoons and essays in an argot that another Kenneth—Kenneth Fearing—manages much better." J. S. Untermeyer

Sat R of Lit 30:16 Mr 22 '47 800w

PATON, GEORGE WHITECROSS. Text-book of jurisprudence. 493p $6 Oxford

340 Jurisprudence [46-20538]

A comprehensive textbook on jurisprudence by a professor in the University of Melbourne. The text is divided into five books "dealing respectively with the nature and purposes of law (pp. 1-148), sources of law (pp. 149-205), techniques of law (pp. 206-248), an analysis of legal concepts (pp. 249-463), and, finally, an analysis of law on the basis of interests (pp. 463-493)." (Ann Am Acad)

"Professor Paton's book reveals a vast range of reading in English cases and in the secondary sources of English legal development, Roman law, American law, and continental jurisprudence. Although he cites or discusses a few cases decided in the United States and in continental Europe, the overwhelming number of cases cited are English and Dominion, with Australian decisions accounting for the majority of the latter. This fact may deter its widespread use in colleges in the United States where the 'august corpus' of the common law has been atomized by 48 jurisdictions. Nonetheless, the book will prove valuable to American scholars for its selection of English cases on the basis of their general significance and recent interest." R. J. Harris

+ Ann Am Acad 252:110 JI '47 360w

"This is a splendid book, with such shortcomings as the Recording Angel may be pleased to overlook. I should prefer that students read jurisprudence rather than about it; but if they can be inspired to do both, this text-book belongs in their libraries." E. N. Cahn

+ Columbia Law R 47:521 Ap '47 550w
Foreign Affairs 25:695 JI '47 10w

"Of this new Text-book of Jurisprudence it must be said that, though the author exhibits throughout a wealth of accurate learning in the detail of the law, he fails to handle satisfactorily the deeper issues of jurisprudence. The conflict between the conceptions of law as will and law as reason is dealt with only in a casual way. Nor is there any adequate examination of the meaning and the definition of justice."

Times [London] Lit Sup p160 Ap 5 '47 1750wPATRICK, VICTOR. Three to make murder. 255p $2 Curl

47-17764

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47 50w

"Shifting viewpoint and vague characterization make this yarn hard to follow."

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47 60w

"Tawdry."

— Sat R of Lit 30:30 F 22 '47 40w

PATTERSON, CALEB PERRY. Presidential government in the United States; the unwritten constitution. 301p $3.75 Univ. of N.C. press

353.03 Presidents (U.S.)—Powers and duties. Executive power. U.S.—Politics and government 47-30530

The thesis of this work is that American government has been so altered in the passage of the years that it is no longer a limited but an unlimited democracy, that an unwritten constitution has been substituted for the written constitution, and that there is inherent danger that it may become an 'irresponsible executive government . . . in the hands of one man'—the president. Finally the author proposes, as a solution, a change to a responsible cabinet government. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 31 '47 320w*Current Hist* 13:294 N '47 50w

"The proposal has much to recommend it, though whether or not it would provide better supervision over the administration than at present is to be doubted. At least it would provide the essence of party responsibility now so lacking. Suggestions such as those in [this] volume are greatly needed and some must be tried so that our creaking legislative machinery will be made not only well-oiled but strong enough to carry the tremendous burden of representative government in the world today." J. P. C. Carey

+ Survey G 37:32 Ja '48 270wPATTERSON, ERNEST MINOR. Introduction to world economics. 704p $5 Macmillan

330.9 Economic conditions 47-1640

"A comprehensive study of world economic conditions beginning with elementary facts on population, vital statistics and population theories, so that the advanced student may refresh his memory and the beginner start from scratch. A portion is devoted to postwar conditions. The author is Professor of Economics at the University of Pennsylvania." (Current Hist) Index.

"The book is a substantial volume, containing a large amount of valuable information assembled from a variety of sources and presented in a clear and readable manner. The book is largely descriptive and covers a wide variety of subjects. It will be especially useful to students of international affairs who desire a factual background accompanied by interpretation and analysis. It is sufficiently elementary to be understood by the general reader." J. P. Young

+ Ann Am Acad 252:137 JI '47 420w*Current Hist* 12:500 My '47 60wPATTERSON, RICHARD FERRAR. Story of English literature. 348p il $3.75 Philosophical lib.

820.9 English literature—History and criticism 47-31248

"A series of two hundred and fifty biographical sketches of some of England's greatest literary men and women, by a former Cambridge fellow. . . The author is more concerned with his subjects' lives than with criticism of their works." New Yorker

Canadian Forum 27:215 D '47 100w

"Small libraries might find this valuable in place of more expensive reference book, but it is unnecessary for large libraries. Quite useful in the small private library." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1191 S 1 '47 110w

"His book makes a nice, easygoing reference guide, though it is too opinionated to be considered a biographical dictionary."

+ New Yorker 23:126 O 11 '47 80w

"Has the virtue of terseness and the defect of disproportion. . . The approach is by way of poetry, prose and drama to 1660, then to the end of the 18th century and the novel to Scott, so that the works of numerous writers are discussed in more than one place. The word 'British' instead of 'English' might more properly have been used in the title." D. B. B.

Springf'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 230w

PATTON, GEORGE SMITH. War as I knew it; annotated by Colonel Paul D. Harkins; il. with maps. 425p $3.75 Houghton

940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. U.S. Army 47-6664

"The famous 'Georgie' Patton, four-star general, conqueror of Palermo and commander of the 3d Army in its great sweep across Europe, kept a diary. . . Military writers are agreed that the time for its publication is not yet. Instead, this volume has been assembled from a group of 'open' letters the general wrote to his wife during the African and Sicilian campaigns; from a terse and rather technical account of the operations of the 3d Army, which the general, with his diary before him, set down after the end of the war, and from a group of observations and maxims on the arts of war and generalship with which Patton concluded his long career in 'the profession of arms.'" N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by Sherman Miles
Atlantic 180:128 D '47 3200w
Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

Reviewed by R. E. Merriam
Chicago Sun Book Week N 15 '47 700w

"General Patton's stirring story, written sometimes in the heat of battle, is too detailed in places for the reader unacquainted with the war in Europe. But it is infused with enough of the General's candid, frequently critical, and occasionally caustic remarks to make it generally exciting." M. K. Gilstrap

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 17 '47 650w

Current Hist 14:38 Ja '48 50w

Kirkus 15:492 S 1 '47 240w

"'Entertaining' seems an inappropriate adjective for any serious contribution to so brutal a subject as war, yet it is hard to find another which so well fits the volume. The reader will not learn much about the history of the 3d Army, beyond a record of its intricate daily movements, and nothing in detail about the Mediterranean campaigns, but he will learn a great deal about the nature and problems of modern high command and he will get a fascinating self-portrait of an American professional soldier of top ability." Walter Millis

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 9 '47 950w

"In the introduction of this book . . . Douglas Southall Freeman writes, 'It is to be hoped that General Patton will be among the first to attract a competent biographer and that others will leave him alone. He was a man to win, to intrigue and sometimes to enrage his fellow-commanders.' He was also a man to dismay those around him who were conscious of American ideals; and Patton, himself, who in all fairness was not one to hide anything about himself, is characteristically blunt and peppery about disclosing in his book the causes for their dismay." Ira Wolfert

+ — N Y Times p3 N 9 '47 1200w

New Yorker 23:137 N 15 '47 120w

"These military memoirs are exceptionally valuable source material in American history, in which General Patton has earned a distinguished place. Even his severest critics must admit that this country will be fortunate indeed if in time of future peril it can find his equal." Donald Armstrong

Sat R of Lit 30:36 N 29 '47 450w

Time 50:113 N 10 '47 750w

PAUL, pseud. See Hollister, P. M.

PAUL, ELLIOT HAROLD (BRETT RUTLEDGE, pseud). Linden on the Saugus branch. 401p $3.50 Random house

818 Linden, Massachusetts—Social life and customs 47-4861

A detailed account of the author's boyhood, spent in a small New England town at the turn of the century. The characters and the life of the town from church fair to the ebb and flow around the drugstore and saloon are vividly portrayed. The story of the nervous breakdown of a pretty young school teacher is the central episode. This is the third in the author's autobiographical volumes (Items on the grand account), the others being The Last Time I Saw Paris, and The Life and Death of a Spanish Town.

"The reader must accept Mr. Paul's memories on their face value; or else he will occasionally find himself in a mildly argumentative state, and inclined to quarrel with the author's blithe intimations that this particular spot in the coastal swamps of New England was populated with gourmets, philosophers, liberal thinkers, lovable spinsters, open-handed uncles, priapic males, and indulgent females. . . One must register a formal protest at the idea that the collective love-life of any New England village in the early nineteen-hundreds could have been as feverish as in Mr. Paul's Linden." Russell Maloney

Atlantic 180:126 Ag '47 480w

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

"Elliot Paul has already published two segments of his autobiographical narrative. This is chronologically the earliest and certainly the most entertaining." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 13 '47 380w

Kirkus 15:302 Je 1 '47 160w

"A somewhat ribald undertone is forgivable, for the net result is a book that is a joy to read. Paul is no misanthrope. He has a genuine love for the place of his birth and a warm sympathy with, and friendly understanding of the numerous characters he portrays. . . A delightful, nostalgic book." R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:1031 Jl '47 130w

"The book is written in a manner that almost but never quite suggests Tristram Shandy. Paul breaks off his stories to introduce, at length, a new character and to describe the other events in which he or she figured, or to dwell upon the changes of season in Linden, or to contemplate an idea. But unlike Sterne, he does not appear to do this as a deliberate joke. The book is designed to follow no special course and many of the anecdotes seem so incidental that it is hard to tell where they end." A. L. Goodman

New Repub 117:30 Ag 4 '47 1000w

"If there is a dull paragraph it is not discoverable at a first reading. The prose is sometimes shockingly bad for a man of Mr. Paul's natural and acquired cunning, but the spirit and the subject matter make almost anything forgivable; seldom has New England been more entertainingly and more accurately portrayed. . . Mr. Paul is still a lover of life, a disbeliever in theology and a matchless story teller." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Jl 13 '47 1100w

"Though discursive and rambling towards the end, it compares favorably with 'The Last Time I Saw Paris' and 'The Life and Death of a Spanish Town.' It is also part of Paul's larger life story to be generally titled 'Items on the Grand Account.' Linden may once have been a backwater, but it's famous now." W. G. Dooley

N Y Times p6 Jl 13 '47 900w

"Mr. Paul seems possessed of suspiciously total recall, and occasionally his writing is sloppy, but these are only minor criticisms of a consistently entertaining and observant book."

+ — New Yorker 23:66 Jl 26 '47 200w

"Mr. Paul paints the portraits of his Linden with loving care and a capacity for remembering odds and ends that will floor the average American whose boyhood is generally a pleasant jumble of half-recalled emotions and incidents. Now and then he is fairly ribald, but so was small-town life then." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 15 '47 950w

"The days of his youth evidently left an indelible impression upon the mind of Elliot Paul and his memories of the past bubble up easily and vividly. Some of the bite and pungency, as well as the rollicking good humor which Mr.

PAUL, E. H.—Continued

Paul's earlier books have led us to expect from him are lacking but it, too, is good reading."

Amy Loveman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:31 J1 19 '47 400w

"Employing either the faculty of total recall or a ready knack for improvisation, Paul sets down in detail a persuasive picture of New England life at the turn of the century. Author Paul is essentially a yarn-spinner, and Linden is largely a string of amusing and often indelicate anecdotes, but those who knew the area and the people will vouch for the genuine flavor."

Time 50:94 J1 14 '47 650w

PAUL, RANDOLPH EVERNGHIM. Taxation for prosperity. 448p $4 Bobbs

336.2 Taxation—U.S.

47-2894

"Mr. Paul [has had] long and successful experience as a private tax lawyer and a Federal official concerned with taxes (he was general counsel of the Treasury and tax adviser to the Secretary of the Treasury during the recent war.) . . . 'Taxation for Prosperity' is written in three parts: 'Taxation in Retrospect,' covering the development of the federal tax system from 1893 through 1945, 'Problems of Future Tax Policy,' and 'A Federal Tax System for the Future.'" Sat R of Lit

"This volume merits the study of every businessman in America, because the author argues persuasively that taxation can measurably help to produce the kind of business world we want." J. G. Hervey

+ Ann Am Acad 254:188 N '47 360w

Booklist 43:325 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by J. W. Oliver

Management R 36:497 S '47 800w

"'Taxation for Prosperity' is too honest to be dogmatic about the way to achieve a sound tax system. It is easy to read. But the fact that an intelligent, semi-popular discussion of tax problems requires 418 pages and does not reach final conclusions raises a puzzling question as to the development of tax policy in a democracy. Only a few voters will read it, and voters cannot be expected to understand the whole tax structure. So it can only be hoped that the experts and the politicians will present the broad principles in such a way that the voters can make an intelligent choice. This is, at least, an excellent guidebook for the layman who is sufficiently interested to check up on the experts and the politicians. It might also persuade the professionals to face a few practical problems." C. E. Noyes

+ Nation 164:576 My 17 '47 1000w

New Repub 117:29 J1 21 '47 250w

"The author of this volume is a distinguished tax expert. . . His rather long study of the realities of our tax structure doesn't make light reading, but then, painful truths seldom do." H. J. Bresler

+ — N Y Times p6 My 25 '47 750w

"'Randolph Paul's book is neither dull nor dismal. . . He writes clearly and with verve. He has wit and irony as Beardsley Ruml will discover when he reads Chapter Thirteen on the Ruml Plan and Current Tax Payment. But he writes from a sober, serious point of view, and with a sense of real urgency, about the importance of trying to influence the course of action in the field of federal taxation during the years ahead.'" P. M. O'Leary

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:15 My 24 '47 1050w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:267 S '47 260w

PAUL, RODMAN WILSON. California gold; the beginning of mining in the Far West. 380p il maps $4.50 Harvard univ. press

979.4 California—Gold discoveries. Gold mines and mining. Frontier and pioneer life—California. 47-5141

"Mr. Paul, an instructor in history at Yale, here examines the gold rush from a somewhat different point of view from that of most writers who have tackled this extremely complex subject. He believes that the literature of that great mass migration tends to stress its picturesque and romantic elements and to devote only passing attention to matters equally interesting and, from the standpoint of economics, far more important. So, in setting out to restore the balance, Mr. Paul soft-pedals the human element, paying small attention to the familiar story of how the argonauts behaved under the abnormal stresses of life in a remote and gold-mad country, and devoting himself instead to picturing how they went about the business that had brought them to California: that is, the actual mining of the gold." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliography.

"An unusual and welcome contribution to the literature on the California gold-rush period. It is an addition to our knowledge of the important happenings during that period rather than to the romantic mythology of the school of Bret Harte and Mark Twain. Rodman Paul, a historian, here reports on what appears to have been an exhaustive study of primary sources, contemporary newspapers, technical publications, public documents, and the like. . . Perhaps this study was intended to serve as a qualification of the Turner theory of the role of the frontier in American history. What makes it significant for the sociologist, however, is the light that it throws on the complex processes of cultural change." R. T. LaPiere

+ Am J Soc 53:305 Ja '48 1700w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 31 '47 360w

"It is a scholarly work, the fruit of long research. . . This is not to suggest that Mr. Paul's book is worthy but dull. Unsentimental treatment does not detract from the fascination of the subject; moreover, the author has enlivened his pages by reprinting some miners' songs full of authentic folk melancholy and by reproducing some excellent contemporary prints." Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 165:386 O 11 '47 550w

"A reading of these scholarly and well organized pages will go far to correct the still widely held belief that California's gold was all extracted with the crude equipment used during the first months of the rush." Oscar Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 24 '47 650w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:49 J1 '47

"This is a book that has been crying to be written—a straightforward and scholarly history of the first quarter-century of mining in California. Although including two early songs for atmosphere, the book does not strive much for color or folklore, and it does not attempt to gain factitious unity by setting out to be the biography of a man or a river. . . Dr. Paul not only has chosen a subject which has long needed well-balanced scholarly attention, but also has written an excellent book." G. R. Stewart

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 10 '47 600w

"That this carefully documented and on the whole accurate book will attract those who like to read in the field of Californiana goes without saying. Mr. Paul has been exact about his figures, and his appendix tables of gold production and miners' wages are valuable. If his book has a weakness, however, it lies in the approach, which all but ignores the human side. . . As it stands, 'California Gold' is a most useful volume, and will be a mine of information to many, particularly in the earlier chapters in which the author goes into detail about methods. Perhaps, indeed, its greatest value will turn out to be its function in directing further reading for the student of the time and place." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 23 '47 750w

PAULI, WOLFGANG. Meson theory of nuclear forces. 69p $2 Interscience

539.2 Nuclear physics. Mesotrons 47-1382

"The lectures that make up this volume were delivered in substantially their present form at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1944. In them the author critically examines various problems and hypotheses that might support a meson theory of nuclear forces. Among the hypotheses (or theories) discussed are: The theory of extended source, The quantum theory of scattering; The theory of neutron-proton scattering; and The strong coupling theory of the two-nucleon system. The discussion is largely in mathematical terms and is intended for persons with an advanced knowledge of physics." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by G. F. Kinney
Chem Eng 54:295 Ap '47 100w

"Professor Pauli's discussion gives a balanced account of both the successes and the failures of the theory to date." E. L. Hill
+ J Phys Chem 51:1215 S '47 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:14 Ja '47

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. The bear coughs at the North Pole. 226p $2.75 Dodd

47-31334

A novel of political intrigue in wartime Chungking. The action takes place during two days in 1939. There are seven main characters: a corrupt European mixed up in the opium racket; his mistress; his son; a young foreign office official and his father; and two half-starved peasants.

"The river rats, the vodka factory, the Street of the Prostitutes, the illicit traffic in opium, the stench of the bath-house, murder, promiscuity, and sudden and violent death give the story its dominant effect of sordidness, that sometimes becomes gruesomeness. To call it a picaresque novel would be an understatement: the only characters with any admirable qualities in the book are the two Chinese government officials. Mr. Payne's detailed descriptions of intimate sexual relations, always promiscuous, recall Robert Herrick's discussion of the difference between literature and dirt in the old Bookman. They could well have been omitted without any loss of interest or dramatic effectiveness." Bonaventure Schwinn

Commonweal 47:179 N 28 '47 350w

"Chapter one quickly reveals that this is neither a fairy tale nor for children, for the way it operates on our minds is by a series of violent explosions (of sensual feeling) which may make squeamish readers put the book down. They should not do so, because the images which are then conjured up are worth reflecting on. . . Here are a wise man and a weak man and a simple man; here is also a man between East and West with a heart corrupted but not inaccessible to grace." Paul Bloomfield

Manchester Guardian p3 J1 18 '47 480w

"A gracefully written little narrative that is both interesting and dissatisfying. It has scenes of remarkable sadism most casually presented; it has Japanese air raids bathed in unreality, and melodramatic characters almost mystically regarded. Payne writes with traces of distinction, but his story-telling and his symbolism are more mannered than effective." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:29 O 6 '47 230w

"There is a freshness about the writing and characterisation that evokes the Chinese scene very vividly, while, for all the author's evident sympathy with the Chinese people, he has not attempted to minimise their internal divisions, the corruption of their ruling clique, the depressed ignorance of their poor folk, or the difficulty of reconciling Eastern and Western attitudes towards life." George Woodcock

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:215 S 13 '47 260w

"No other novel of modern China that I have read in recent years has been as successful as Robert Payne's new book in recreating the flavor of a Chinese city, in making real the sense of crowded life in narrow streets and the courtyards beyond them, in evoking the feeling of the worn land and those driven from it, or in setting down the emotional reaction of the Chinese at war." J. J. Espey

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
O 19 '47 1050w

Reviewed by John Bicknell

N Y Times p29 N 30 '47 650w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 16 '47
330w

"A smooth, vivid, and readable story. At the scenic level, it fixes the reader's attention with almost hypnotic power, but unfortunately it rarely achieves more than a scenic reality. . . Readers will inevitably be reminded of Malraux's La Condition Humaine, but, compared to that masterpiece, this tale is an exceedingly arbitrary and artificial piece of contrivance. Considered merely as a rather pretentious thriller, however, it does grip."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p413 Ag 16
'47 360w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. China

awake. 424p $4 Dodd

951 China—History. Students—China

47-11267

Pages from the diary of a young British writer, who was an instructor in English during the last two years of his five years' residence in China. In it he "exhibits no ideology, but reports the Chinese world of nature and man as he experienced it: first in the university community in Kunming as the war of resistance was ending in 1944-45; later in Chungking, Yenan and Kalgan, as the civil war was breaking in the first half of 1946." (N Y Times)

Booklist 44:149 D 15 '47

"Robert Payne writes of China with a superlative skill and a sound knowledge of the country he greatly loves. He has the heightened perception of a poet, a warm human understanding." D. G. Bennett

Cath World 166:280 D '47 420w

"This book falls far short of his 'Forever China' and is merely additional evidence to support the belief that Mr. Payne is beginning to wear thin." T. H. D. Mahoney

Commonweal 47:309 Ja 2 '48 160w

"This book can be read for information—it contains an enormous and fascinating amount—or for the writing, which is exquisite. Intelligent, varied, generally outstanding. Highly recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 130w

"The book conveys the atmosphere of student life in a way which may make it a useful source book for posterity." Guy Wint

Manchester Guardian p3 D 2 '47 180w

"Robert Payne, himself a poet, dramatises every experience. This is perhaps the weakness of the book which is written as a personal diary." Dorothy Woodman

New Statesman & Nation 34:454 D 6
'47 240w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
N 2 '47 650w

"Robert Payne writes as a poet, sensitive to color and feeling, responsive to the passions and terrors and philosophies of people immediately around him. . . In these sensitive and eloquent pages we can glimpse the deeper springs of Chinese action, the liberal's blind persistent search for individual freedom and social justice, the resentment of the scholar for the men of force, the patriot's rising contempt for Chiang Kai-shek and his American backers—things which must come within our calculations now." J. K. Fairbank

+ N Y Times p6 O 19 '47 1000w

"Payne's writing has a special charm. It is leisurely, philosophical, reflective, like the country he describes. It is in part sensitivity of eye to color and to the mists and mystery of China, and in part a sheer love of words." Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p12 O 26 '47
600w

PAYNE, P. S. R.—Continued

"There is much here for the sensitive reader who is less interested in the politics of China than in the essential experience of man. But 'China Awake' is required reading for anyone who wishes insight into both the Kuomintang, which seems to know little of American democracy, and Chinese communism, which seems to have little in common with Soviet Russia." Gordden Link

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 O 25 '47 650w

Social Studies 38:380 D '47 30w

"Mr. Payne's diary, as a diary, fails on almost every count. His reader is rarely unconscious of being addressed. . . . The matter is keyed up to a pitch which hardly admits of differentiation between the vital and the casual. . . . It is for all that a book of much merit, and expresses genuine and generous interests and enthusiasms. It is often dramatic, sometimes moving, and the author frequently lapses—if the term may be so misused—from 'fine writing' to something much better."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 3 '48 1050w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. David and Anna. 262p $2.75 Dodd

47-1793

Romance of David, an English rubber planter in Malaya, and Anna, his exquisite Eurasian wife. They are idyllically happy for several years, before Anna's adored younger sister, Teresa, arrives. David and Teresa are drawn into a love affair, but briefly, and after Teresa leaves David and Anna are happy again.

Booklist 43:242 Ap 1 '47

"Author Payne knows his East. His writing has the slow, exotic, inexorable qualities of the jungle itself, the jungle that is always one of the main actors in the drama. And like the jungle, it must be said, his writing sometimes seems overripe, with a dense, tangled quality that now and then makes 'David and Anna' pretty slow going. All in all, however, Payne has in this new book another achievement to add to his earlier solid successes. Starting with a simple, basic story he describes the subtle currents of human emotion with such sharp perception, with such a wealth of color and atmosphere, that his book will leave you with a spellbound almost drugged feeling that is the greatest tribute one could pay to this kind of writing." Clinton Tector

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 6 '47 420w

"Mr. Payne's inordinate love of language and precious, exotic description sometimes rather avoid than explore meaning. But in such an ambitious novel the faults seem minor, the seriousness and the subtle excitement of a large part of the writing display a rich and honest talent." Frederick Brantley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 9 '47 650w

"Here again, as in 'Forever China' and 'Torrents of Spring,' the young English author communicates his enchantment in prose of rare pictorial beauty and again succeeds so clearly in evoking an atmosphere that readers will seem to breathe the heavy air of Malaya and hear the pounding of the China Sea. . . . The one crisis which disturbs the otherwise calm flow of this story is inexplicable in human terms. . . . Compensating for such vagueness in characterization, however, are moments of delicate poignance and beauty." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '47 750w

"A book that is more like a poetic reverie than a novel, in which Mr. Payne again gives proof of his rare and varied talent. It is a delicate and remarkably perceptive story."

+ New Yorker 23:116 Mr 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47 110w

"If Mr. Payne has concocted anything noteworthy in his new novel, it is atmosphere. . . . and, fortunately for Mr. Payne and his readers, atmospherically he concocts extremely well.

Whether or not we are going to be impressed with his story and theme, we cannot escape the impact of his scene, nor the richness of his prose. But even as we hand to Mr. Payne the proverbial cake for his understanding of Malaya and its tradition, we think twice about giving it away for his people, his examination of motives and values, his ability to root them firmly in the story and effect his changes inevitably through their personalities." N. G. Chaikin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 15 '47 650w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:767 summer '47 350w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Revolt of Asia. 305p $3.50 Day

950 Asia—Politics, Asia—Nationality

47-31380

"This book is about the revolt of the peoples of Asia which began in its full flood in the autumn of 1945, still continues. [Countries under consideration are] Indonesia, India, China, Indo-China, Burma, Korea, and the Philippines." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 44:66 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Carlyle King

Canadian Forum 27:238 Ja '48 320w

"The hard-bitten Western rationalist will balk at the apocalyptic tone of this book, which is, nevertheless, packed with facts, judgments, interpretations, of extraordinary value." Robert Peel

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 29 '47 450w

"Beautifully written, carefully organized, documented survey of the problems of resurgent Asia by the prolific author of Forever China. . . . One of the best and most intelligent books ever written about Asia. Recommended for all libraries." A. S. Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1268 S 15 '47 110w

"Robert Payne, poet and novelist, in 'The Revolt of Asia' has turned to political reporting, and his book offers a fresh and challenging approach to the understanding of social change in Asia." J. K. Fairbank

+ Nation 165:422 O 18 '47 1650w

"Among the book's greatest values is the way in which it indicates America's particular spiritual responsibility for that unrest, and exposes our dismal failure to take advantage of our opportunities for democratic leadership. . . . The Revolt of Asia is impressive as well as optimistic in its account of the great promise of the Oriental renaissance, but it is not cheering in its report on America's negligence toward a hopeful world movement for which she served in considerable part as a source and inspiration." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:27 O 6 '47 1300w

"In his provocative book, Robert Payne attempts to jar us into a realization of the far-reaching significance of events in India, China, Indonesia, Indo-China, Burma, Malaya, Korea, and the Philippines. If at times he beats his drum a little too stridently, he may be pardoned, for he feels that this is the only way the Western World can be aroused to the enormous implications of the Asiatic upheaval. . . . Mr. Payne's book has its faults, but it is a pleasant relief to read a volume on Asia less concerned with the interplay of power politics than with the aspirations of the peasant in the field and the revolutionaries who speak for him. It gives the insider's viewpoint." A. T. Steele

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 S 28 '47 1900w

"While Mr. Payne's analyses of the Indonesian revolt and of events in Indo-China, Korea, Burma and Malaya seem based more on generally careful scholarship than direct observation, it is these parts of his book that are frequently clearer than sections on China and India, which he knows best. At worst this is a severe criticism, but, more generously, China does remain Asia's most perplexing problem-child. . . . 'The Revolt of Asia' (incidentally, marred by careless proofreading) stands with Harold Isaacs' recent 'No Peace for Asia' as a useful and well-written study of the East in turmoil." Robert Shaplen

+ — N Y Times p6 S 28 '47 1050w

"The Revolt of Asia' is more than a quick survey of political phenomena. It succeeds to a remarkable degree in making evident to Western readers the deeper causes of Asia's revolt and the solid foundations on which her leaders are building." G. G. Stevens

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 12 '47 1100w

"This is vivid, simple writing and though one may quarrel with some of Mr. Payne's political rocket flights there can be no quarrel with his literary skill." Robert Okin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 O 11 '47 850w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT. Rose tree. 157p $2.50 Dodd

821

47-5281

"Robert Payne, whose remarkable fecundity of prose in praise of China is equally remarkable for its fecund beauty of language, gives us in 'The Rose Tree' a collection of his poems. Not all of these poems praise that which is China, to be sure—but the best ones do. The title-poem, long and somewhat Whitmanesque in its rhythms, is an elegiac rhapsody written in April 1945, after the death of Franklin Delano Roosevelt." Sat R of Lit

"This volume of poems has many qualities of excellence. A score of poems, especially among the purely lyrical works, succeed by music, feeling and image in charming the reader. Nearly all the rest have at least a few lines indicative of the true poetic temper. But too often the poet, though deeply moved, takes the line of least resistance, that facile path beset with strained figures, recognizable echoes, diffuseness, and rhapsodic exclamations." Robert Hilmyer

+ — N Y Times p5 J1 27 '47 270w

"Despite faintly disturbing echoes of considerably older and greater poets—of Yeats, Whitman, Donne, Hopkins, even of Shakespeare ('There were pearls that were his eyes')—the total effect of these poems is that of a new voice. It may be that Robert Payne's best writing is to be found in the distinguished prose of his 'Forever China.' But to read 'The Rose Tree' straight through is an exciting experience. Here, at last, is a poet with a tongue of gold!" Starr Nelson

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:33 O 4 '47 700w

PAYNE, PIERRE STEPHEN ROBERT, ed. White pony; an anthology of Chinese poetry from the earliest times to the present day, newly translated. 414p $4 Day

895.1108 Chinese poetry—Translations into English 47-6700

An anthology of Chinese poetry in translation from its beginnings in the book of songs to the present day.

"It is an excellent one-volume collection, representative of the best works in a vast field of poetry. The translations—simple, unrhymed, but rhythmic—are new, being the work of Chinese scholars edited and revised by Payne. One feels that his own contribution is greater than he admits. Through an appreciative introduction and informative pages on each poet, the anthology has further value as a brief history and interpretation of the three thousand years of poetry in China." Gerald MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1688 D 1 '47 90w

"Robert Payne arranged that the translation of each poem should be entrusted to that Chinese scholar who considered himself most sympathetically endowed for the work of translation. . . . [His own] introduction is a learned study of Chinese poetry in its relation to Chinese culture. . . . One of the most interesting sections of the book is that of modern Chinese poetry." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p8 D 21 '47 700w

"Robert Payne's anthology is the most comprehensive selection of Chinese poetry in English so far available. Though a number of collections exist for particular dynasties and particular poets, 'The White Pony' is unique as a one-volume survey text for China's three thousand years. It lacks examples from a few types and periods, but its choices and the proportions accorded those choices carry out the editor's intention to 'suggest the immensity that lies behind even the briefest exploration of Chinese poetry.' . . . 'The White Pony,' whatever its spavins, however patched its harness, will, because of its size and road-coverage, make many friends." Jeremy Ingalls

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:18 D 27 '47 1100w

PAYNE, WILLIAM LYTTON. Mr Review; Daniel Defoe as author of The review. 147p $2.25 King's crown press

B or 92 Defoe, Daniel. Review (periodical) 47-30312

The book is chiefly a study, illustrated with extensive quotations of Defoe's contributions to the English periodical, The Review, which he edited for several years. In The Review Defoe was accustomed to express his views on politics, economics, and the arts. The book gives an idea of Defoe's mental processes as well as a picture of the politics of Queen Anne's time. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 20 '47 40w

New Yorker 23:107 Ap 5 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 27 '47 120w

Sat R of Lit 30:41 Je 7 '47 50w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:135 Je '47 140w

PEACOCK, MAX, pseud. See Woodruffe-Peacock, D. M. C.

PEACOCK, THOMAS LOVE. Pleasures of Peacock; ed. with an introd. by Ben Ray Redman. 458p $5 Farrar, Straus

47-30805

"Comprising in whole or in part the seven novels of [the author] Headlong hall, Melincourt, Nightmare abbey, Maid Marian, Misfortunes of Elphin, Crotchet castle, Gryll Grange." (Subtitle) Nightmare Abbey, and Crotchet Castle are here complete; the other five novels are abridged with connecting narrative links by the editor. The book has a biographical sketch of Peacock as introduction.

Booklist 44:51 O 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 28 '47 850w

Reviewed by E. W. Bates

Christian Science Monitor p17 N 15 '47 650w

Kirkus 15:222 Ap 15 '47 230w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich

Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 70w

N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p20 S 21 '47 470w

"The selections are generous and well chosen. I could dispense entirely with 'Melincourt,' Peacock's one mistake. Swift or David Garnett might have got away with Sir Oran Haut-Ton (Orang-outang), potentially a fine satirical conception; Peacock, incapable either of Swift's savagery or of Garnett's sustained fantasy, is embarrassed." W. B. C. Watkins

+ — N Y Times p6 S 7 '47 750w

"It is a good thing to have these novels reprinted, and Mr. Ben Ray Redman, who has edited the volume, contributes a well-informed introduction that touches briefly on almost every side of Peacock. But this book has what seems to me the serious defect of being mainly a collection of excerpts. Only two novels are given complete. The other five appear merely in selections. . . . Each of his books as a whole shows the same delicate sense of form as each of the episodes and each of the sentences, and it is a pity to take them to pieces—especially since they are all so short." Edmund Wilson

PEACOCK, T. L.—Continued

+ — New Yorker 23:72 Ag 23 '47 4300w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 9 '47
170w

"'Nightmare Abbey' and 'Crochet Castle' appear complete in the collection. It is a disappointment to find that space requirements apparently made it impossible to reprint the other five novels in their entirety. However, Mr. Redman's editorial bridges are extremely helpful. Like all ardent Peacockians he cannot help but have a feeling for the Peacockian mood, so to speak, to the extent, anyway, of never entirely cutting us off from the atmosphere of good cheer which pervades Peacock's 'house-party novels.'" Richard McLaughlin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 O 25 '47 1100w

Time 50:112 S 15 '47 460w

PEARCE, THOMAS MATTHEWS, and THOMAS, ALTON PARKER, eds. Southwesterners write; the American Southwest in stories and articles, il. by Helen S. Pearce. 364p $4 Univ. of N.Mex. press

917.8 Southwest. American literature—
Southwest 47-2137

"T. M. Pearce, now head of the department of English at the University of New Mexico, had the assistance of the late A. P. (Tony) Thomason, described as a gypsy scholar and teacher, in assembling this anthology of Southwestern literature. . . . It contains sections devoted to interpretation, fiction, narrative and opinion. Among the names represented are the late Charles J. Finger, J. Frank Dobie, John A. Lomax, D. H. Lawrence, Ruth Laughlin Alexander, S. Omar Barker, Leo Crane, etc." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 43:357 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 23 '47
320w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 7 '47
450w

"An excellent job, though it suffers somewhat from the defects that seem to be inherent in all such collections—its editors left out some good stuff, included some that is not so good and have turned out what we reviewers are fond of describing as an 'uneven' book. But, uneven or not, it has a fine variety and enough of the first-rate writers are represented here to satisfy most critics." Stanley Walker

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
My 18 '47 800w

"I wish somehow they had chosen a little bit better and more definite title for such a fine anthology. By Southwest is meant, in this instance, Arizona, New Mexico, Oklahoma and western Texas. That's only a little less formidable job than compiling an anthology of the Middle States with New England thrown in. That these editors succeeded so admirably is a large tribute to their knowledge, their gifts of selection, and their love of their land." Struthers Burt

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 30 '47 470w

"The volume is a solid cross-section admirably put together. You'll find good writing, intelligent writing, and good evidence, particularly in the final section of the book, that the Southwest's writers are examining their part of the country with inquiring eyes and a sense of the future." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 14 '47
650w

PEARSON, HAYDN SANBORN. Countryman's cookbook. (Whittlesey house publication) 311p il $3 McGraw

641.5 Cookery 46-8564

This cookbook contains recipes for country dishes, chiefly of a New England flavor, interlarded with informal anecdotes, personal opinions, stories of the author's childhood.

Booklist 43:164 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:6 Mr '47

"This is the most enticing cookbook that has come my way this season—or for that matter, in many a month (and I am a push-over for cookbooks). I found myself at midnight carefully copying out recipe after recipe for my own use."

+ Kirkus 14:565 N 1 '46 170w

"Haydn S. Pearson's 'The Countryman's Cookbook' is a hearty, back-slapping twin to his 'Country Flavor,' and has even more gusto, and the humor known as 'homespun.'" Idwal Jones

N Y Times p24 Ja 12 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:18 Ja '47

PEARSON, HAYDN SANBORN. Successful part-time farming. (Whittlesey house publication) 322p $3 McGraw

630 Agriculture—U.S. Farms Agr47-270

By the author of Success on the Small Farm (Book Review Digest 1946). The book contains practical advice on part-time farming as to location, distance from work, transportation, water, supply, electricity, acreage and neighbors. Partial contents: The vegetable garden; The home orchard; Milk-goats; The family flock of hens; The pig—economical meat producer; Small greenhouse business on a part-time farm; Strawberries—one of the best part-time farm crops; Asparagus—a dependable and profitable crop; Peaches—a good part-time farmer's crop in certain locations; Cultivated blueberries—an excellent side-line crop; Good recipes based on farm-raised foods. Index.

"A heartening and extremely useful book."

J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 22 '47
70w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

"Mr. Pearson's latest book presents the project from an extremely practical viewpoint. The latter sections of his highly competent book present 'helpful pointers' on the various products for sale and home use." E. S.

+ Commonweal 46:294 J1 4 '47 120w

"There's lots of sound advice on limitations and restrictions on part-time farming, as to distance from work, transportation facilities, electricity, ample water-supply, neighbors, size of acreage. There's plenty of practical how-to-do-it as regards soil, the farm shop, power tools, the kind of vegetable garden, the advisability of going slow on the home orchard, the pros and cons of pigs, goats, rabbits, chickens, etc. Excellent lists of government bulletins. And so much enthusiasm and zest for the way of life, that almost I was convinced. (Not quite.)"

+ — Kirkus 15:151 Mr 1 '47 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 110w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
S 21 '47 230w

"For those who want to combine country living with city working, Haydn S. Pearson offers an excellent handbook which can be most helpful if consulted before the move from city to country is made." M. W. Teller

+ N Y Times p14 Je 20 '47 90w

PEARSON, MRS VIRGINIA EDWARDS (TAYLOR). Everything but elephants. (Whittlesey house publication) 211p il $2.50 McGraw 918.6 Colombia—Description and travel

47-30326

Describes two years spent in the Colombian jungle where the author's husband was a member of the medical staff of an American oil company. Her experiences which were enervating and baffling at first were nevertheless enjoyable, and she and her husband learned "tolerance, understanding, and appreciation of other nationalities and other ways of life."

"Informally written and entertaining but slight."

+ Booklist 43:329 Je 15 '47

"A delightfully refreshing book."
+ Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47
"A personal record which is light, slight and engaging."

+ Kirkus 15:209 Ap 1 '47 160w
Reviewed by Margaret Hubbard
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
S 28 '47 550w

"From the alluring señoritas of Bogotá to the Motilone Indians of the jungle Mrs. Pearson has done very well by her South American friends." Gwen Jones

+ N Y Times p28 Je 22 '47 550w
Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47
180w

PEATTIE, RODERICK. Struggle on the veld.
264p il $3.50 Vanguard

968 South Africa—Native races 47-1939

"The geographer who was head of O.W.I. activities in the Union of South Africa during the war has written a warmly humane appraisal and appreciation of the peoples and cultures of the high veld country. He writes objectively, without formality or technicality. In an attempt to interpret South Africa to residents of the U.S." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:239 Ap 1 '47
Bookmark 8:12 My '47

"Written by a dispassionate, objective reporter, 'Struggle on the Veld' should be required reading for those who ponder how much of a potential peril conditions on the Dark Continent are to world peace." J. O. Supple

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Mr 30 '47
270w

Reviewed by John Broderick
Commonweal 46:46 Ap 25 '47 290w

"In a small volume Dr. Peattie covers a great deal of ground. He writes with cool logic, but also with sympathy and understanding of the difficulties besetting a very divergent group of peoples. It is a readable and timely book in this problem-burdened world." Mary Light

+ Geog R 37:688 O '47 480w

"A rather general but very entertaining book about the Union of South Africa."

+ Kirkus 15:86 F 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison
Nation 164:691 Je 7 '47 230w

"His interest, fortunately, is in people, and he presents them as they are with only enough historical background and geographical description to make for understanding. His purpose is to explain the South Africa of today, not that of the game hunters or vortrekkers, and although volumes could be written about each facet of this land of many problems, Mr. Peattie condenses effectively." M. C. Hubbard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Mr 2 '47 1500w

"This book is intelligent and perceptive—and very timely." John Barkham

+ N Y Times p23 Je 8 '47 750w

PECK, ANNE MERRIMAN. Pageant of middle American history; with decorations by the author. 496p $4 Longmans

972 Central America—History. Mexico—History 47-2138

"The theme of this book is the interlocking history and present relationships of the peoples of Middle America. It is the bold attempt to tell the story as a whole, in broad sweeps, picking out the highlights, following the threads that link them together. Details must be neglected, history telescoped into a small space, but this is the story of peoples rather than academic history." (p. 2) Bibliography. Index.

"In the fullness and fairness of its interpretation this book should prove as acceptable to mature readers as to younger groups. Both classes will appreciate the artistry and the interest she imparts to a long and difficult summary of events in a strategic area." I. J. Cox

+ Am Hist R 53:200 O '47 400w

"The trader, the tourist, the investor, the beginning student, or anyone else in search of a panoramic view will profit from reading the book; but it contains nothing for the specialist, who will recognize at once that the narrative is incomplete and superficial, devoting little attention to the moving forces in the modern history of the region and omitting many important phases of economic development." J. F. Rippey

— + Ann Am Acad 253:219 S '47 160w

Booklist 43:275 My 1 '47

Christian Century 64:832 Jl 2 '47 150w

"The earlier chapters, with their fine accounts of the ancient Indian civilizations, will be new to most readers, as will be the accounts of nineteenth-century Central America. The material on Mexico, on the other hand, will not seem so new. The book, as a whole, contains a rich, dramatic, and thrilling story, which the author has told well." R. A. Brown

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 10 '47 950w

Foreign Affairs 26:233 O '47 10w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:219 My '47 80w

Kirkus 15:4 Ja 1 '47 100w

"Recommended for senior high school students and adults." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
My 25 '47 800w

Reviewed by Milton Bracker

N Y Times p21 Jl 27 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 11 '47
70w

School & Society 65:214 Mr 22 '47 30w

"For the general reader and the young student interested in Latin American affairs this book is almost must reading. For the specialist in history it offers a very fine summary and an excellent bibliography for further research." H. M. Clark

+ Social Studies 38:328 N '47 900w

"Mrs. Peck is writing for a large public; but the fact that her second name is Merri-man might lead one to suppose that she had a historical sense, and this is the case. The book is fair, not only to the smaller Middle American countries, but to the largest of them: Mexico." J. B. Trend

+ Spec 179:410 S 26 '47 700w

Springf'd Union p11 Ag 20 '47 170w

Times [London] Lit Sup p519 O 11 '47
190w

Wis Lib Bul 43:80 My '47

PECKHAM, HOWARD HENRY. Pontiac and the Indian uprising. 346p il maps $4.50
Princeton univ. press

970.2 Pontiac, Ottawa chief 47-11041

"The story of the rebel leader betrayed is one of the most dramatic of history. Robert Rogers, leader of Rogers's Rangers, recognized the remarkable theater qualities of Pontiac's story while the Indian chief was still alive, and tried to put them into his dramatic tragedy, 'Ponteach,' published in 1766. More than fourscore years later the distinguished historian Francis Parkman found the tale so impressive that he made of it his classic 'History of the Conspiracy of Pontiac.' Now Howard H. Peckham, to whom scholars of American history are already indebted for his competent curatorship of the historical manuscripts of the William L. Clements Library of the University of Michigan, presents the story again, illuminating it with much pertinent material only recently discovered." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"Mr. Peckham's careful research and excellent writing have produced a valuable contribution to midwestern colonial history. The record is more creditable to Pontiac than to some white enemies, especially those who instigated his murder after the war was over." W. E. G.

PECKHAM, H. H.—Continued

+ Christian Century 64:1616 D 31 '47 210w

Current Hist 13:356 D '47 60w

"A work of such magnitude as this requires a tremendous amount of research and evaluation. It also requires the most careful organization into a consistent whole. Mr. Peckham has done so well in this respect that it is here reported with reluctance that his work is sometimes peppered with the kind of error which a checking of his own index would have eliminated. . . These are minor faults. They detract in no way from the fact that 'Pontiac and the Indian Uprising' is an excellent piece of work. It is well documented, generally sound history and its narrative is permeated with a consciousness of the human drama it involves." Carl Carmer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 N 30 '47 1250w

"The story of this great Indian's life, Peckham has told ably. He does not, as Parkman did, make him the hero of a tremendous and closely organized conspiracy. Though many pages are necessarily given over to background and the times that produced him, interest is always focused on Pontiac, yet without magnifying his importance. The author seeks not to praise or condemn but to understand and evaluate." J. F. McDermott

+ N Y Times p8 Ja 4 '48 600w

"Peckham's greatest strength—his meticulous scholarship—is also his book's greatest weakness, for the more he rummages in the archives the more he reveals the paucity of reliable accounts of his subject. . . 'It's an excitin' gold-durned book,' the Old Scout offered. 'While he was describin' the siege of Ft. Detroit, every once in awhile I caught myself feelin' the back of my head to see if my scalp was still there.'" Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 30 '47 460w

PEDLER, MARGARET (BASS) (MRS W. G. Q. PEDLER). Unless two be agreed. 368p $2.75 McBride

47-3257

A modern romance with an international setting—the Alps, the English moors, London, and Cairo. Anne Chetwyn, the central character, is a person of charm, an actress, and fluent in French, Italian and Arabic, as well as her native tongue. In the course of clearing up a difficulty in her own love affair, Anne manages to straighten out that of another woman.

"It does not go very deep, nor does it make such pretensions, but the plot is expertly devised, with a new twist to the twin-brother romantic complication." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 Ap 27 '47 90w

"Miss Pedler is not one to stint on plot or characters. Her followers will find the mixture as before." Andrea Parke

N Y Times p25 F 16 '47 110w

PEDRICK, JEAN. Fascination. 198p $2.50 Houghton

47-2363

Psychological novel which traces the story of Ellen Jason from childhood to her early twenties. It takes her from her first childish love affair, thru two other affairs, and ends with her rescue from her basement apartment in Boston by her understanding aunt.

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 6 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:109 F 15 '47 110w

"The lame musician is the only figure in this slight narrative with something more than surface reality. 'The Fascination' is well written but lacking in substance." George Conrad

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 4 '47 320w

"This reader was annoyed at the outset when the heroine started wandering in a cold rain. . . Nor could I feel expectant when the first person she encounters, and instantly and irrevocably loves, is a lame musician. But the book does show promise in the middle section when the author stops being literary and self-conscious long enough to let a little life in." E. S. Holsaert

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 20 '47 190w

"There is nothing original about the plot. Miss Pedrick's descriptions of Boston have a sure, firm touch, but she does not do so well with her characters. The ideas and emotions she tries to express keep losing themselves in her curling and spiraling prose." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47 150w

"This is a first novel of promise with occasional flashes of sensitivity and some honest writing. At the moment Miss Pedrick lacks sureness, and her individual style has not yet been developed." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 Je 14 '47 400w

PELLMAN, CHARLES. Overcoming stammering; with a foreword by Frederick Martin. 160p $3 Beechhurst press

616.87 Stammering Med47-55

An analysis of some of the current physiological and mental theories and practices in the corrective treatment of stammering. No panaceas are offered but the author recommends the introduction of remedial speech work into our educational system. An appendix gives an account of the author's brother's experiences as a stammerer. Bibliography. Index.

"A lucid and instructive compendium for the layman." A. H. Weiler

+ N Y Times p25 D 14 '47 320w

School & Society 66:334 O 25 '47 20w

"Written with the authority of a speech correctionist and gives valuable guidance. . . For those who would avoid harmful therapeutics in correcting stammering, this book is enthusiastically sponsored by Dr. Martin, director of speech clinics for Rhode Island and director of National Institute of Voice Disorders, who writes the foreword." H. S. Neal

+ Spring'd Republican p11C D 7 '47 120w

PEMBER, TIMOTHY. Needle's eye. 341p $3 Reynal

47-31281

A love story and a study of character growth are combined in this story of Harold Wick, grandson of the local gentry of a small English village, and Catherine Byrne, daughter of the outcast radical socialist newspaperman.

Kirkus 15:373 Jl 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. L. Lewis

Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 165:388 O 11 '47 800w

"The clash and conflict between the generations, the sexes and the classes makes an agreeable, muted pattern, of music in this rather unusual novel by a new author." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 5 '47 550w

"Pember has intentionally sacrificed normal transitions, and is always thrusting the reader immediately and relentlessly into the midst of situations for which no obvious preparation has been made. It is probably an earned compliment to his mode of attack that after the first few chapters, one comes to accept it as a form of organizational shorthand and may even prefer it to the more laborious signposting of the traditional English novel. Pember's chief success lies, however, in making his people grow upon the reader as they grow, and move the reader as they are themselves moved—a skill rare enough in modern fiction to make this new author worth keeping in mind." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 S 28 '47 850w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 15 '47
1150w

PENTECOST, HUGH, pseud. See Philips, J. P.

PEPPER, STEPHEN COBURN. Digest of purposive values. 100p $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

121 Worth 47-5453

"That purposive values are facts, whether those values are physiological, esthetic, moral, or rational, is the basic position of this preliminary study of value theory. . . . The purpose of the digest is to invite public inspection and to provide something tangible for classroom discussion. Mr. Pepper seeks to provide an entirely empirical orientation to the 'problem' of value." (U S Quarterly Bkl) No index.

"The digest, paradoxically, is a prelude to a larger work. Such a reversal of normal order has much however, to be said in its favor. Most important, it will evoke criticism which may be of considerable use to Professor Pepper in the composition of his longer work. This is not at all to minimize the worth of the digest which, as a step toward the establishment of an empirical basis of ethics, is of considerable importance." A. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '47
150w

"Perhaps the most significant thing about this book is that the author seeks constantly for empirical data. A convincing sense of reality therefore illuminates the text and pervades the illustrations in this unusual philosophical inquiry."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:253 S '47 280w

PERCY, THOMAS, bp. Percy letters; David Nichol Smith and Cleanth Brooks, general editors; v. 2, The correspondence of Thomas Percy and Richard Farmer; ed. by Cleanth Brooks. 218p $3.50 La. state univ. press

326 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (44-9765)

"Percy, best known for his Reliques of Ancient English Poetry, 1764, was a leader in the antiquarian movement of his day and a friend of such scholars as Edmond Malone, Thomas Warton, and Edward Capell. The letters that he wrote and received illuminate the beginnings of literary scholarship in England. The present volume contains all the existing letters exchanged by Percy and Richard Farmer, the Cambridge antiquarian, during Percy's most active period, the period of the Reliques, the translation of Mallet's Northern Antiquities, and the abortive editions of Surrey and Buckingham. Only one letter and a fragment of another have ever before been published." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"The correspondence as far as it goes is mainly that of two explorers of our earlier literature, discussing special questions, antiquarian and bibliographical. Percy's extant share is much larger than Farmer's, but not livelier. He had great opportunities in his encounters with Samuel Johnson, but he did not turn them to account in these documents of a scholarly preoccupation. Nothing that he says of the Rambler in real life quite comes up to such an expression as Farmer lets fall in the Essay mentioned: 'What [Johnson] sees intuitively, others must arrive at by a series of proofs.'"

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Ap 12 '47
280w

"The editor is correct in claiming that despite Percy's regrettable 'improvements' in the text of many ballads in the Reliques, these letters show him to have been aware of the value of accurate collation and of bibliographical evidence, and justly respected by other scholars for his learning. The abundant editorial notes clarify the many allusions to persons, books, and poems. The account of the lost edition of Surrey is a useful contribution to the knowledge of Percy's methods as editor and literary historian. The book is handsomely printed."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 2:275 D '46 240w

PERELMAN, SIDNEY JOSEPH. Acres and pains; with drawings by R. Osborn. 126p $2 Reynal

817 47-30433

"Mr. Perelman turns himself loose on the subject of buying and remodelling a country house, and all that goes with it—antiques and architects, week-end guests and pests, animal husbandry, and larcenous hired help." New Yorker

Booklist 44:148 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 S 7 '47
280w

Kirkus 15:299 Je 1 '47 150w

"The funniest book of all time on country living." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ag 10 '47 750w

"Perelman's fabulous virtuosity in embroidering a theme never showed up to better advantage than in this volume. The master of every cliché in the English language, he runs through them backwards, as witches do the Lord's Prayer, producing in the reader's mind a pleasant daze similar to that experienced by users of cocaine. He is a stylist whose style is absolutely indescribable." Russell Maloney

+ N Y Times p6 Ag 24 '47 360w

"It is a short book, and it probably sets some kind of record for crowding so many heart-rending and catastrophic events into so few pages. It is also a funny one."

New Yorker 23:64 Ag 9 '47 80w

"Here is humor at its most unrestrained and satisfying level. It should make all sellers of country real estate run to the nearest attic and hide there until the storm of laughter has run its course." P. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47
200w

Reviewed by Howard Cushman

Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 9 '47 230w

Time 50:104 Ag 18 '47 330w

PEREZ, LUIS. El Coyote, the rebel; il. by Leo Politi. 233p $2.75 Holt

B or 92 47-3864

Autobiographical sketch which describes the author's life in Mexico, where he was born, and in the United States, where he now lives. Starting as a soldier at the age of eleven, he has done many kinds of work from picking cotton, to teaching music. His story is told in simple style. Glossary.

Booklist 43:358 Jl 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

Kirkus 15:184 Mr 15 '47 160w

"Chiefly valuable for vivid, inside views of the rebels' lives. Style exasperatingly simple." Joseph Borome

Library J 72:806 My 15 '47 110w

"'El Coyote' has much charm, in a minor key, many pictures of engaging Mexican rascals and a few horrid Americans. It is doubtless all true, but it reads like a dream." Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Je
8 '47 900w

"At the age of 11, Luis Perez was a full-fledged soldier in a Mexican rebel army. The boy's rifle was bigger than he was, but looking back today, Mr. Perez gets down more of the meaninglessness, the waste and the melancholy charm of life in such an internecine war than half a dozen historians. His whole book is a study in understatement; and its impact, like everything really Mexican, is delayed." Milton Bracker

N Y Times p24 Je 22 '47 500w

PEREZ, LUIS—Continued

"Mr. Perez writes simply and with a wealth of humor and good-feeling, a feeling matched admirably by Leo Politi in his many illustrations." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47
140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 J1 '47

PERKINS, DEXTER. The United States and the Caribbean. (American foreign policy lib) 253p maps $3 Harvard univ. press

327.73 Caribbean sea. U.S.—Foreign policy
47-11619

"A comprehensive analysis of the Caribbean Republics. Professor Perkins presents in detail the national problems, politics, culture, economy and the manner of life of these small countries. He then indicates the role of the United States in their national life and shows how we influence these people sometimes to our benefit and often to our detriment. Statistics, suggested reading, maps." Library J

Booklist 44:144 D 15 '47

"Until a broader work appears, the Perkins book will be the handiest source available for its scope." R. K. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p22 D 11 '47
480w

Kirkus 15:527 S 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich
Library J 72:1466 O 15 '47 70w

"Here is the Caribbean in a capsule, hard-packed, well written, candid Dexter Perkins, long a competent interpreter of inter-American affairs, has given us the best single volume on our American Mediterranean." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
D 28 '47 1250w

Reviewed by R. G. Tugwell
Sat R of Lit 30:9 D 27 '47 1350w

PERRAULT, CHARLES. All the French fairy tales. 94p il $3 Didier pubs.

398.2 Fairy tales 46-8459

A combined edition of French Tales (Book Review Digest 1945) and More French Fairy Tales. The volume contains the nine fairy tales attributed to Charles Perrault, retold with an introductory foreword by Louis Untermeyer. The book is illustrated with twenty-eight of Gustave Doré's famous drawings.

Kirkus 14:592 D 1 '46 70w

"An excellent gift book selection." V. W. Schott

+ Library J 72:84 Ja 1 '47 30w

"The most distinctive thing about the book is the reproduction in gravure of twenty-eight of the Doré drawings, made almost a century ago. . . The golden cover with its fine reproduction of Donkey-Skin sitting beside the spring with her lambs around her makes this book look as precious as it is." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 29:29 D 14 '46 270w

PERRY, CLAIR WILLARD (CLAY PERRY, pseud). New England's buried treasure. (American cave ser, v 1; Stephen Daye press bk) 348p il $3.50 Ungar

551.44 Caves. New England—Description and travel 47-2632

"The publisher announces that this is 'the first volume of the American Cave Series, officially approved by the National Speleological Society.' It is also an old (1939) book previously entitled 'Underground New England' [Book Review Digest 1939] by the same author, now somewhat enlarged and containing new photographs. . . Its subject is really caves, both natural and man-made, and of these the volume gives a chatty and entertaining account. . . The index lists caves by states, locations, and gives dimension in many instances." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by Horace Reynolds

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 5 '47
600w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 27 '47 270w

Springfld Union p3 J1 25 '47 330w

PERRY, GEORGE SESSIONS. Cities of America. (Whittlesey house publication) 287p il $3.50 McGraw

917.3 Cities and towns—U.S. U.S.—Description and travel 47-1791

"Mr. Perry, over a period of many months, undertook a series of peregrinations on behalf of the 'Saturday Evening Post.' He made studious visits to twenty-two cities. He soaked in their local facts and foibles, their long un-simple annals, their atmosphere, color and character, and from each such soaking distilled a magazine article." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) These articles are here assembled in book form. The cities included are: New Orleans; New York; Salt Lake City; Baltimore; Dallas-Fort Worth; San Francisco; Chicago; Philadelphia; Detroit; Portland, Maine; San Antonio; Cincinnati; Seattle; Boston; Denver; Atlanta; Pittsburgh; Madison, Wisconsin; Los Angeles; Kansas City; Rockdale, Texas; Washington. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by M. R. Davie

Ann Am Acad 254:222 N '47 400w

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

"An entertaining and suggestive vista of great centers across America." J. W. Rogers
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 23 '47
750w

"National portraiture in facile, engaging terms."

+ Kirkus 15:89 F 1 '47 150w

"Probably none of these proud cities will erect a Perry monument or name a street after him, for the sweep of his observation and research brought out some of the dust that boosters brush quietly under the red carpet which is customarily put out for any visitor who might open either a factory or a writer's notebook. Mr. Perry's fresh eyes also lit upon the finer, more flavorful aspects of each city on his gadabout agenda. On balance, their native sons should be rather generally pleased with these articles. . . For better or worse, each sketch, having been cut to a magazine's pattern, is almost exactly the same length as all the others. That is the only standardized fly in Mr. Perry's well mixed ointment." Edward Angly

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Mr 30 '47 1050w

"In the main, the sketches are frothy, exuberant vignettes which lean heavily on regional cooking, municipal fonts of culture, local celebrities and the trivia of indigenous folklore. Since it is these things precisely which set apart the special quality of one American city from another, the author's assignment stands well discharged." H. J. Bresler

N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '47 320w

"Mr. Perry has done a remarkable job of city character reading. Each city is presented as she is today with enough of yesterday's story added to help the reader understand how she got that way. Naturally, in many cases his impressions are first impressions, but he spent enough time in each city to get the feel of the community and to check facts in newspaper morgues and court records." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 30 '47
600w

"This is a collection of entertaining but often perceptive 'visiting-firemen' eye-views of twenty-three American cities. . . They are by a reporter with unusual gifts for ambling through municipal atmospheres and cataloguing their differences—sometimes, one fears, close to the point of becoming 'precious.'" Duncan Alkman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ap 19 '47 600w

PERRY, JOSEPHINE. Light metals industry. 128p il $2 Longmans 668.7 Aluminum. Magnesium 47-2811
History of aluminum and magnesium and description of their manufacturing processes. The book is one of the series America at work. Index.

Booklist 43:297 My 15 '47

Chem & Eng N 25:3174 O 27 '47 70w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 23:268 J1 '47 30w

"More and better photographs would improve the book. Recommended for upper elementary and junior high school level." F. L. Morrison
+ Library J 72:738 My 1 '47 70w

School & Society 65:269 Ap 12 '47 30w

Social Studies 38:336 N '47 10w

Wis Lib Bul 43:101 Je '47

PERRY, JOSEPHINE. Plastics industry. (America at work) 127p il $2 Longmans
668.4 Plastic materials 47-1897

Methods of molding, latest uses, research in plastics, probable future development in the industry, its history and its status in various countries, are presented for young people. (Adapted from publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 43:275 My 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn BK 23:268 J1 '47 30w

"Recommended for school and public libraries serving upper elementary, junior high and high school students." S. J. Johnson
+ Library J 72:532 Ap 1 '47 70w

"This volume would make an excellent introduction of the whole set to any librarian among whose clients are those who want to know what these new industries are doing, and how, and why." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 9 '47 130w

School & Society 65:184 Mr 8 '47 20w

Social Studies 38:240 My '47 20w

PERRY, JOSEPHINE. Rubber industry. (America at work) new rev ed 127p il $2 Longmans

678 Rubber industry 46-8101

First published 1941. The 1946 edition is revised and amplified to include new processes developed during World War II, especially with regard to research and development of synthetic rubber.

Booklist 43:140 Ja 1 '47

"Good reference material."

+ Kirkus 14:298 J1 1 '46 50w

"Revised edition with many valuable additions including new processes; deserves better illustrations. The unattractive and inadequate photographs should be completely modernized, since photographic progress has been remarkable in recent years." B. W. Bell

Library J 72:166 Ja 15 '47 40w

School & Society 64:368 N 23 '46 20w

PERSONS, STOW. Free religion; an American faith. 168p $3 Yale univ. press

211 Free religious association. Religion—Philosophy. Free thought 47-5568

"A history professor at Princeton University here brings us a forgotten but exciting chapter of American church history. At the conclusion of the Civil War there was organized a movement of religious liberalism which for a decade practically overshadowed American Unitarianism. . . . The F.R.A. [Free Religious Association] as an autonomous movement declined in the 1880's. Its work, by no means finished, did nevertheless accomplish the major objective of its founders; it did save Unitarianism from sinking back into a form of orthodoxy not unlike that from which it arose." Christian Century

Reviewed by E. T. Buehrer

Christian Century 64:830 J1 2 '47 900w

Sat R of Lit 30:41 Je 7 '47 40w

"Especially successful in explaining the origin and nature of the American free religious attitude, which has at times been a phenomenon puzzling to observers more familiar with the European churches, this book presents an absorbing story enlivened with touches of humor."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:254 S '47 230w

PETERS, CLARENCE A., comp. American capitalism vs. Russian communism. (Reference shelf) 305p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

947.084 Communism—Russia. Capitalism 46-5592

"In compiling the material for American Capitalism vs. Russian Communism, we have encountered a preponderance of highly controversial material written about Russia. The bulk of current literature about the U.S.S.R. reflects a bias which frustrates the student in his search for facts. Although there are a multiplicity of facts available in English-language books and periodicals, their interpretation occasions considerable controversy. In fairness to all writers on Russia, we have included all shades of opinion. . . . American Capitalism vs. Russian Communism is concerned primarily in presenting the wide range of matters over which the proponents of the American and Russian ways of life find disagreement. There is, for instance, a greater proportion of criticism of Russian economy than consideration of our own system. This proportion is consistent with the published materials on these issues. The American way of life is, perhaps, too familiar to us to warrant exhaustive treatment." (Pref) Bibliography.

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

Christian Century 63:991 Ag 14 '46 30w

PETERS, CLARENCE A., comp. Free medical care. (Reference shelf) 378p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

614.2 Medical economics. Insurance, Health Med46-24

"This volume is intended as a reference work on socialized medicine, with special application to the compulsory health-insurance program proposed by the Wagner-Murray-Dingell bill. The contents are a compilation from medical journals, popular magazines, lectures, radio talks and other sources. The book is divided into approximately equal thirds, the first a general discussion of the problem of the distribution of medical care with notes on the various methods used in other countries, the second the views of those supporting the bill or other similar measures, and the third the position of the American Medical Association and other groups and individuals opposed to any radical departure from the present fee-for-service method. There is an extensive bibliography and affirmative and negative briefs for a debate on the desirability of medical care being provided by the federal government." New Repub

"The title of the volume is most unfortunate since the point at issue is not 'free medical care' but prepaid medical care. This confusion is evident in the volume itself and reflects the popular misunderstanding engendered by the use of emotionally charged words like 'socialized medicine.' While the book is of little value to the serious student of medical care problems, it may be useful as an introduction to the subject. Its greatest use will be the one for which it is evidently intended, as a convenient reference and debating manual." Milton Terris

+ Am J Pub Health 37:102 Ja '47 140w

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

"The book is a handy compilation of both the facts and the distortions which have for so long been permitted to obscure them."

+ New Repub 115:606 N 4 '46 150w

"An informative, stimulating volume." M. R.
+ Survey 83:30 Ja '47 170w

PETERS, CLARENCE A., comp. International trade: cooperative or competitive? (Reference shelf) 306p $1.25 Wilson, H.W.

382 Commercial policy. Free trade and protection 46-6898

"This is Number 1 of Volume 19 of The Reference Shelf, containing articles of timely interest on the topic, reprinted from various sources. Both pros and cons are debated, making a useful document for the student." Current Hist

Booklist 43:134 Ja 1 '47

Current Hist 11:510 D '46 60w

Foreign Affairs 25:695 Jl '47 10w

PETERSHAM, MRS MAUD (FULLER) and PETERSHAM, MISKA. America's stamps. 144p il $3.50 Macmillan

383.22 Postage stamps—Juvenile literature 47-30193

"The story of one hundred years of U. S. postage stamps." (Subtitle) It is both an introduction to stamp collecting, and a rapid review of the events and the people responsible for the rise of the United States. Illustrated with photographic lithographs of the stamps, and many drawings. Checked for accuracy by the Philatelic foundation. Altho intended for children, the book would interest stamp collectors of all ages.

Booklist 43:243 Ap 1 '47

"The entire presentation is so logical and straightforward and inviting that the most indifferent reader will find himself moving steadily from page to page with a growing desire to seize a magnifying glass and peruse the stamps on his own current mail. Young collectors will start work with greater intensity than ever, understanding in advance many things which they have previously had to stumble onto." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 27 '47 430w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p4 My 15 '47 240w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:220 My '47 80w

Kirkus 15:166 Mr 15 '47 150w

"For the stamp collector, of whatever age, as well as the boy or girl interested in a pictorial history of our country." Elizabeth Burr

Library J 72:533 Ap 1 '47 90w

"Once more the Petershams ring the bell. . . I am convinced that many adults will be as glad to get it as the children will—indeed, the Philatelic Foundation endorses it as 'presenting the attractions of stamp collecting to all ages.' But for young folks in particular, its brilliant color plates, beautifully reproduced stamps, and running narrative combining history with philately combine to present the subject as an intelligent beginner might ask to have it presented." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 23 '47 370w

"There are a large number of illustrations, many in color. Some of the imaginative ones are especially fine and should be fascinating to children. The reproductions of the various stamp issues are full size; thus the volume could be used as a stamp album. It is unfortunate that the book contains many historical inaccuracies. Some involve new interpretations, as in the cause of Braddock's defeat; but altogether too many are errors of elementary fact, such as calling Benjamin Harrison a two-term President, or continuing McKinley in the White House for three years after his death. In general, the narrative that accompanies the pictures is too brief and dull to arouse much interest in either the stamps or their history." R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p33 Ap 20 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:152 D 6 '47 60w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p9 Ap 6 '47 90w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 70w

"This is a book for young and old, but especially valuable as a companion piece to any child's stamp album."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:246 S '47 140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:70 Ap '47

PETERSON, FLORENCE. Survey of labor economics. 843p $4 Harper

331 Labor and laboring classes. Trade unions 47-4391

"An appraisal of the major theories which seek to explain the causes and results of economic phenomena relating to labor. Its scope includes employment and unemployment, wages and hours, labor unions and labor-management relations, and social security. Each topic is discussed within a framework of economic analysis." (Publisher's note) Selected references at end of each chapter. Indexes.

Booklist 44:29 S 15 '47

"A useful outline of the American labor situation. . . While the author writes chiefly without bias, in her handling of compulsory health insurance, a growing issue, she is mistaken. She turned over the writing on this question, together with various other phases of social insurance, to one of the key promoters of Government health insurance on the staff of the Social Security Board. While this, doubtless, seemed logical for information on social security, the Board for years has been the outstanding agency for promotion of compulsory insurance for medical care. One result is a one-sided treatment of the problem, with an inadequate presentation of the substantial objections to the system." F. W. C.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 1 '47 390w

"The reader in search of important facts in massive doses will not be disappointed. But the reader who views this factual panorama in a manner other than that of a gigantic box of bonbons to be dipped into occasionally is apt not to be without regret. Encyclopedic comprehensiveness, for all its virtues, is not without its faults. . . In addition, the reader, perhaps unjustly, is apt to feel that the author is excessively, if silently, conscious of the varied opinions of academicians who will have to pass on this book if it is to be used widely in colleges. For such a purpose material presented with an eye to the lowest common denominator as regards conflicting opinions infrequently results in the highest possible clarity. . . Nevertheless, because of the great factual terrain this book covers, it merits strong recommendation." Julien Steinberg

+ Commonweal 46:555 S 19 '47 600w

"This book is replete with information in encyclopedic proportions—statistical and historical information for the most part—but it has as much value in helping understand labor problems as the dictionary would have in understanding James Joyce. It has a certain usefulness for reference purposes, yet it offers only a meager footnote to a discussion of one of the great issues of our time." M. S. Pitzele

+ N Y Times p10 S 21 '47 800w

Social Studies 38:379 D '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

PETERSON, ROGER TORY. Field guide to the birds; giving field marks of all species found east of the Rockies; il. by [the author] sponsored by National Audubon society. 2d rev & enl ed 290p $3.50 Houghton

598.2 Birds

47-5163

In this second revised edition "the changes are quite extensive, retaining the virtues of the older book and ironing out the rough spots. All the illustrations are new, there is much more color; black and white pattern is used only when it is more of an aid to identification than color would be. The cross-reference between plates and text will make the book easier to use as will the abbreviated line of field marks for each species on the key pages opposite the illustrations. Plates of the bills of Terns, Ducks overhead as the sportsman sees them, and the confusing fall Warblers are among the innovations. The greatest change in the text is the addition of sections on Similar species, . . . Accidentals (birds recorded less than twenty times in Eastern North America) and Subspecies are put into appendixes in the back of the book, where they will not confuse the beginner." (Pref) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1934, 1939.

Booklist 44:36 S 15 '47

"I'm no ornithologist, but I find the Peterson book the most satisfactory for steady use."

+ Kirkus 15:362 JI 1 '47 60w

"Practical to use with children as young as nine." V. K. Fitch

+ Library J 72:1115 Ag '47 100w

"The new Peterson field guide covering all birds found east of the hundredth meridian is easily the best of its kind ever put together, an invaluable convenience in sight identification." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p29 S 21 '47 240w

"This famous manual of Eastern land and water birds has been thoroughly done over and enlarged to nearly three hundred pages. The number of color plates has been increased from four to thirty-six, and among other innovations are cross references between text and illustrations, as well as a printed list for checking off the species you see."

+ New Yorker 23:88 Ag 16 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:114 JI '47

PETRULLO, VINCENZO. Puerto Rican paradox. 181p $3 Univ. of Pa. press

917.295 Puerto Rico—Politics and government. Puerto Rico—Social conditions 47-30192

Discussion of the political, economic, and cultural problems of Puerto Rico. In his preface the author says: "It is my hope that this book will contribute to a better understanding of the problems facing two million Spanish-speaking American citizens whose treatment by the United States has been neither entirely good nor entirely bad." Index.

Reviewed by Donald Rowland

Am Pol Sci R 41:809 Ag '47 500w

Reviewed by D. B. Burke

Ann Am Acad 252:118 JI '47 450w

Booklist 43:239 Ap 1 '47

"The author of Puerto Rican Paradox is rather vaguely identified on the dust-jacket as 'a researcher, writer, and adviser to government agencies.' However, even if the prestige of his publisher were not sufficient guarantee of his bona fides, Mr. Petrullo's book itself would be recommendation enough. It is the most objective, succinct, and readable book on Puerto Rico that it has been my good fortune to encounter." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 45:652 Ap 11 '47 490w

"A dispassionate but frank appraisal of the problem."

Current Hist 12:500 My '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:709 JI '47 30w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p35
My 11 '47 650w

Reviewed by Robert Okin

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ap 19 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p519 O 11 '47
1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:176 Je '47 250w

PETRY, MRS ANN (LANE). Country place. 266p $2.75 Houghton

47-11040

Novel about a group of people living in a New England town. A returned soldier discovers that his wife has been unfaithful to him, and that fact, plus a terrific storm, motivates the whole of the story.

"Most of the characters are well done, but, curiously enough, Johnny Roane, the hero, is not. . . Taken as a whole, though, Country Place is a good story, worthy of the telling.

It preaches no sermons, waves no flags. It tells a plausible narrative of, for the most part, some very human people in an earthy situation." J. C. Smith

+ — Atlantic 180:178 N '47 450w

Reviewed by E. B. Thompson

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 O 19 '47
290w

Reviewed by Francis Downing

Commonweal 47:306 Ja 2 '48 550w

Kirkus 15:346 JI 1 '47 160w

"There is much that is exceedingly good in Miss Petry's book, the feel of a small town, the integrity of dialogue, the portrayal of Johnnie, of Glory, of Mrs. Gramby. But it is not quite as good as it gives promise of being at the start. For one thing, Miss Petry switches the identity of the narrator; for another, some of the high moments of her story err on the side of the obvious." Rose Field

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 O
5 '47 380w

"Gossip, malice, calculation, infidelity, adultery, attempted murder, sudden death, and a set of surprise bequests that more or less straighten things out—these are some of the dominant matters treated in 'Country Place.' Yet, this is, despite the violence of its events, a rather quiet book, carefully and economically phrased, and a good deal different from the author's best-selling 'The Street.' . . In occasional chapters, and at the end of the book, the straight first-person point of view is reestablished; but the considerable sections which lie between, though in themselves full of fresh, effective writing, are always darkened by the doubt arising from a switched point of view." Richard Sullivan

+ — N Y Times p12 S 28 '47 550w

"Near the end, the story buckles somewhat under the weight of a couple of improbabilities, but on the whole the author has kept up to the form she displayed in 'The Street.'"

+ — New Yorker 23:122 O 11 '47 100w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 19 '47
50w

"Here is no tale for those who have fallen in love with country life. The book seems to say (though not for the first time) that humanity is as degraded in Lennox as in Studs Lonigan's Chicago. The trouble is that, while the reader is made to understand the social forces which produced Studs Lonigan, there is no comparable explanation for Mrs. Petry's characters. Her 'good' people—Johnny, his mother, the druggist who tells the story—are shadowy, while her 'bad' people lack motivation or background." Bradford Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:17 O 18 '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

PETTEE, GEORGE SAWYER. Future of American secret intelligence. 120p $2 Infantry journal

351.74 Secret service—U.S.

46-8204

"Dr. Pettee, now on the political science staff at Amherst College, had extensive experience during the war with American intelligence agencies. In this slim volume he criticizes those agencies and puts forward suggestions for a professional intelligence organization to function as an indispensable arm of our defense." (Foreign Affairs) Index.

"Surprise awaits the reader who encounters The Future of American Secret Intelligence. Sensationalism is anticipated. . . Instead, the reader encounters a realistic analysis of the problem of intelligence service on all levels as a phase of future governmental activity and concern. It seems to the reviewer that fresh ground is broken by this little book." C. W. Shull

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:590 Je '47 320w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 JI '47 50w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:74 Mr '47 280w

PEYTON, GREEN, pseud. See Wertenbaker, G. P.

PHELPS, EDITH MAY, ed. University debaters' annual; construction and rebuttal speeches delivered in debates of American colleges and universities during the college year, 1945-1946. (V32) 329p $2.25 Wilson, H.W.

374 Debates and debating (16-1455)

Topics covered in this year's annual are: Fraternities and sororities; U. S. foreign economic policy; Ownership of patents on atomic energy; American college in the postwar world; Compulsory health insurance; Compulsory arbitration of all labor disputes; British colonial policy in India.

Booklist 43:98 D 1 '46

Wis Lib Bul 42:162 D '46

PHENIX, RICHARD. On my way home. 267p $3 Sloane

B or 92 U.S.—Description and travel 47-5550

In October, 1946, the author was honorably discharged at Camp Crowder, Missouri, after five years in the army. He had his own car and some money, so he decided to see a little of the West before going back to his home in New Hampshire. This is an account of his trip and of the many and varied jobs he took in order to keep solvent, before he started East.

"There is no 'lost generation' in this book, which may set this year's record for the least number of neurotics between covers. In many ways, the Western America which Phenix observed and sampled seems just as it might have been before the war. Apparently emotionally well-balanced himself, endowed with a feeling for humor and an enviable capacity for pleasure in plain living and the beauty of nature, this writer found many persons of like temperament in his journeying." W. F. Morse
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47 360w

"Dick Phenix can write good dialogue, spare and natural. He gets interest and suspense into his account of everyday living. He has the gift to be natural. He writes about the things ordinary men and women do every day, not the things they dream of doing. . . This is good hot-weather reading. It is clean, credible life made entertaining." Horace Reynolds
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Jl 28 '47 800w

Kirkus 15:234 Ap 15 '47 110w

"Special in its appeal, primarily to recently discharged veterans who are themselves looking for 'something.'" R. E. Kingery
Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 110w

"He writes of this journey in a homely, unaffected manner and with a mildly pleasing sense of humor which, unfortunately, never reaches the level of wit or effective satire. The muted quality of Mr. Phenix's book is not relieved by any fresh insight into the well worked subject of the returning veteran, however, and, despite the author's impressive honesty and humility, 'On My Way Home' is a rather pedestrian performance." Spencer Klaw
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ag 10 '47 430w

"This is an unassuming little book. . . It is a good thing, too, that it is unassuming, since even the most sympathetic reviewer would have some trouble demonstrating that it possessed a beginning, an end, a significant arrangement of content, or any sort of overall excuse for having been printed. Yet, with it all, 'On My Way Home' is somewhat inoffensive, vaguely readable, touched with the wistful charm of incompetence." R. M.
N Y Times p19 Ag 24 '47 550w

"While all this is pleasantly and entertainingly written it won't mean a great deal excepting to the young man who went through—as thousands did—much the same sort of thing. . . It is this sense of recognition that makes 'On My Way Home' a book which thousands of others, remembering their own moment of being on the way home yet not quite there, will enjoy." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 29 '47 900w

"It would be nice to say that this first book by an ex-GI is a roaring success and indeed, in outline, it has the makings of a first-class yarn. Actually, it is a very dull and utterly pointless story. It is written in a monotone with little depth and less wit. The dialogue has an impressive authenticity but is as meaningless as backyard gossip." Ronald Schiller
Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ag 23 '47 550w

PHILIPS, JUDSON PENTECOST (HUGH PENTECOST, pseud). Memory of murder; four novelettes. 252p $1.98 Ziff-Davis

47-11528

Four detective stories all featuring John Smith, psychiatrist.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 7 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 23 '47 90w

"These are not the first detective stories in which psychiatry plays a part, but they are more convincing, and more absorbing than most." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p53 N 16 '47 180w

"Commendable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

PHILLIPS, JAMES DUNCAN. Salem and the Indies; the story of the great commercial era of the city. 468p il $6 Houghton

974.45 Salem, Massachusetts—History. U.S.—Commerce—History 47-11262

"Immense quantities of facts about Salem have been assembled and published in the past, but until Mr. Phillips published his 'Salem in the Seventeenth Century' in 1933 no one had really attempted to digest them. A second volume, 'Salem in the Eighteenth Century,' appeared in 1937, bringing the history of the place down to the close of the Revolution. 'Salem and the Indies,' the third of the series, covers the period from 1783 to the end of the War of 1812; that is, the great commercial era, when Salem vessels extended the frontiers of American trade to the most distant ports of Europe and Asia." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 15:359 Jl 1 '47 170w

"A book [which will] be read with genuine interest in widely scattered places. Mr. Phillips loves every stone of his Salem, and he has done well by her." W. M. Whitehill

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 30 '47 1150w

Reviewed by S. T. Williamson

N Y Times p7 O 19 '47 850w

"It is full of excellent pictures and a wealth of detail, both of ships and the men who sailed and financed them, and makes an invaluable contribution to the story of America's past." R. F. H.

+ Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47 140w

Time 51:74 Ja 5 '48 1200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:174 D '47

PICASSO, PABLO (PABLO RUYS). Forty nine lithographs, together with Honoré Balzac's The hidden masterpiece, in the form of an allegory. 90p $5 Lear; for sale by Crown

763 Lithographs 47-7174

"Various proof-stages of 'Girl's Head' and 'Bull,' among other new products from Picasso's stone, exhibited last spring at the Museum of Modern Art and now made into a book. . . Balzac's story of a painter who works for ten years on a portrait and then finds no one to understand its meaning makes a curious but rather ingenious allegorical accompaniment." Theatre Arts

"Lithographs in various degrees of progress make for interesting study. Well-made and ideal as gift-book; likely to be consulted in libraries before purchase." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 72:1689 D 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

N Y Times p55 N 9 '47 140w

"The combination of works is oddly interesting."

+ New Yorker 23:88 Ag 16 '47 110w

Reviewed by Hubert Buel

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 30 '47 100w

Theatre Arts 31:81 N '47 90w

PICKARD-CAMBRIDGE, ARTHUR WAL-LACE. Theatre of Dionysus in Athens. 285p il $7.50 Oxford

792 Theater—Greece

47-4032

"A history of the Theatre of Dionysus from its earliest origins to Roman imperial times, based on a careful study of the archaeological remains and on the fullest consideration of the evidence available from literary and epigraphical sources and of the work of modern scholars on the subject." Times [London] Lit Sup

Reviewed by Phillip De Lacy

Class Philol 42:257 O '47 850w

"This is probably the most important contribution to ancient Greek Theatre since Flickinger (1926). Deliberately limited in scope to the most important playhouse of the ancient world, it is illustrative of the whole field. Highly recommended for theatre and architecture collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:811 My 15 '47 70w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 10 '47 300w

"A scholarly volume presumably addressed to scholars, for very few of the Greek terms used are translated and none of the frequent citations from plays and other sources. The average reader will also find it somewhat difficult to follow the author's careful sifting and sorting of the evidence presented. But there are summaries of his conclusions at convenient intervals; the volume as a whole is succinctly written and appropriately illustrated. . . Mr. Pickard-Cambridge's volume will no doubt provide specialists with a valuable and well-organized survey of all the evidence available and a careful weighing of the pros and cons involved. But for most students of the Greek stage Flickinger will still serve admirably." Lee Simonson

+ — Theatre Arts 31:69 Ag '47 320w

"The work is admirably documented, copiously illustrated and beautifully produced, and is likely to remain for a long time the standard work on the Athenian Theatre."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p138 Mr 29 '47 370w

PICKL, JOSEF. The Messiah; tr. by Rev. Andrew Green. 333p $4 Herder

232.96 Jesus Christ—Passion. Jesus Christ—Messiahship. Bible. New Testament—History of contemporary events 46-20730

"This translation and abridgment of the author's German work, Jesus, Messiah-King, aims to show how much the political unrest of Christ's time and country interfered with His public mission and played a heavy part in His passion. From the conquest by Pompey a hundred years before down to the capture of Jerusalem forty years after, Palestine was in a constant state of rebellion against the Roman occupation. The aim of the Jewish partisans was to restore autonomy. . . Into such a political and religious confusion stepped Jesus with His message of the kingdom of God and His successfully proved claim to be the Messiah of His people." Cath World

Reviewed by J. A. McVann

Cath World 165:188 My '47 400w

"Though not above criticism in many details, and even in basic assumptions, this study is by far one of the most stimulating and significant works of recent years in the field of Gospel interpretation. . . This present English version is quite competently done, perhaps heavily in spots. Yet it seems to have been made upon the first rather than the second German edition which this reviewer had at hand. Not all the critical studies of the original have been included, among them one on the census under Cyrenus. Unfortunately, too, the many references to Josephus in the first part of the book have been largely dropped out in translation so that the American reader never gets to perceive how thoroughly the author has utilized his sources." H. G. J. Beck

+ — Commonweal 45:99 N 8 '46 420w

PIERCE, MRS EDITH LOVEJOY. Therefore choose life; poems. 76p $1.75 Harper

811

47-11636

A second book of poems by an English-born author whose verse is mainly religious and humanitarian. "With incisive strokes, Miss Pierce bares the wounds of our civilization while at the same time opening, with imagery and perception, a spiritual vista too rarely explored today." (Churchman)

Reviewed by T. C. Clark

+ Christian Century 64:1335 N 5 '47 250w

"In her profound search for the truth, she sacrifices none of the musical quality of her poems which at times approach sheer beauty."

+ Churchman 161:17 D 15 '47 50w

PIERCE, TRUMAN MITCHELL. Controllable community characteristics related to the quality of education. 88p $2.25 Teachers college

379.1 Public schools

47-5524

"This study has a strong bearing on the home rule structure and effective operation under it. It bears on such problems as the laying out of school districts, the allocation of control and the functions of central authorities. The close relationship of good schools to the concept in the public mind of what education should do points to the value of implementing the home rule principle through some method of bringing the school and the public closer together. This appears to be an essential step if the full potential of the community for good schools is to be unlocked. The direction in which this study points indicates the distinct possibilities of making schools better by attacking the problem of improving the community setting for education and of enlisting a more enlightened public understanding of what schools can do." (Foreword) No index.

School & Society 66:48 Jl 19 '47 10w

"Pierce has contributed in this study a carefully measured analysis of community characteristics as they relate to education. While the measurements he gives are undoubtedly valid for the select area of the study, the reader may well place a different emphasis on some of the conclusions reached when applied to a more rural or less wealthy area. . . Any person responsible for the betterment of a school system may read this book with profit." G. W. Brown

+ — School R 55:431 S '47 1000w

PIERIK, MARIE. Song of the church. 274p $3 Longmans

783.5 Chants (plain, Gregorian, etc.)

47-31109

"A scholarly work on the historical background of the Gregorian chant. The book embraces a discussion of the subject on many important points—its inheritance from Greek tradition and Jewish synagogue, its development in the early Church, its melody and its form, its use in the Church of the East and the Church of the West, the modes it employs and the symbolism of the Trinity as found in it. In the last chapter are included the tenets of the most distinguished authorities in liturgical plainsong, the Solesmes monks, Peter Wagner and others." (Library J) Index.

"Within the limits set [the author] writes with authority of a very competent scholar who is not only a highly trained musician and musicologist but is also, of necessity, well acquainted with the history of the Roman rite. Since she assumes that her readers will have a considerable acquaintance with both the theory of music and the Roman liturgy, her book is obviously intended for students of plain chant who already have had a good introduction to the subject. For them it is an important and valuable treatise. While Miss Pierik writes for Catholic students of plain chant, it is to be hoped that her book will come into the hands of Protestant musicians qualified to understand her treatise, and that Protestant church music may ultimately be enriched by an intelligent use of at least some part of this rich inheritance of Christian culture." H. W. Foote

PIERIK, MARIE—Continued

+ Crozer Q 25:84 Ja '48 700w

Kirkus 15:535 S 15 '47 100w

"Although its appeal is necessarily limited, the book itself is highly recommended." H. E. Bush

+ Library J 72:1613 N 15 '47 100w

PIGOU, ARTHUR CECIL. Income; an introduction to economics. 117p $1.50 Macmillan

339.3 Income [46-5989]

"Seeking to broaden the outlook of his students, the professor of engineering at Cambridge University asked the doyen of British economists to give them a short course of lectures. This little book, which discusses the forces affecting both the production and distribution of income, is the end-result." Nation

"In spite of a certain self-conscious attempt at simplicity of style, the book is by no means easy to read. . . . For this reviewer indeed, the book raises doubts as to whether the now-fashionable 'income approach' is quite so suitable as a painless introduction to economics as many have supposed. Professor Pigou's valiant attempts to avoid the 'forbidding' aspects of demand-and-supply analysis lead him at times into peculiar contortions." K. E. Boulding

J Pol Econ 55:492 O '47 1000w

"Reproduces a set of lectures given in Cambridge to students of engineering who would not be making any further studies in economics. It is thus a book for the 'general reader' who desires to get an idea of what economics is about but is not in a position to undertake any systematic study." J. R. H.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 23 '46 210w

"Written with rare lucidity and enlivened by a dry wit, it admirably achieves its author's aim of providing 'an outline sketch of an important part of economics that shall be intelligible and, if possible, interesting to non-economists.'" Keith Hutchison

+ Nation 164:721 Je 14 '47 110w

"The author is, as one would expect, largely successful in his task. The style is clear and the problems are reduced to their simplest terms; indeed, in many cases they are intentionally over-simplified. Much could be attained in an exposition of this kind by the judicious use of a little algebra, but, though this possibility is noted at several points, the traditional literary form of exposition has been followed. . . . The content of the book after the first chapter is not very different from that of a similar book written from the more traditional standpoint of the laws of supply and demand." J. R. N. Stone

+ Spec 177:98 Jl 26 '46 470w

"Professor Pigou has produced a very sound and simply written little book. It is sound in the sense that it contains little which has not been under discussion among economists for the last twenty years, but for the same reason it is not as interesting as it might have been. Readers may feel that the chapters on employment fluctuations and the distribution of income might have been enlivened by the introduction of some of the modern, if more controversial, theories, but the serious reader will also feel that the book provides a sound explanation of one of the more important techniques in economics."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p386 Ag 17 '47 370w

PIM, SIR ALAN WILLIAM. Colonial agricultural production; the contribution made by native peasants and by foreign enterprise; issued under the auspices of the Royal inst. of int. affairs. 190p $3.25 Oxford

338.1 Agriculture—Economic aspects A47-2257

"A survey of the relative importance of peasant producers and foreign enterprise in a number of British, French, Dutch and Belgian colonies in various parts of the world." Foreign Affairs

Foreign Affairs 25:696 Jl '47 30w

"The book has two minor defects. In the first place, the type is very small—undoubtedly for reasons of economy. The small type makes reading rather tiring. The second defect arises from the way many of the tables are presented. . . . [Nevertheless] the author has produced a scholarly, interesting, and timely book." J. M. Tinley

+ J Pol Econ 55:474 O '47 1100w

"Readers attentive to colonial administration will find much interest and instruction in the author's collation of the methods pursued by four different metropolitan countries in tackling the various problems confronting them in their colonies."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p265 My 31 '47 850w

PINCHOT, GIFFORD. Breaking new ground. 522p il $5 Harcourt

B or 92 Forests and forestry—U.S. U.S. Forest service. Conservation of resources 47-11529 Autobiography of Gifford Pinchot which stresses the years 1889 to 1912, and the beginnings of American forestry and the conservation of natural resources in the United States. Index.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

Reviewed by C. M. Hardin

Chicago Sun Book Week p16A D 3 '47 550w

"Enthusiastic though sometimes long-winded account of an active, crusading career, with perhaps more documentary than popular appeal."

Kirkus 15:620 N 1 '47 160w

Reviewed by Owen Lattimore

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 21 '47 1200w

"Candor compels me to say of 'Breaking New Ground' that it is somewhat less than a half-told tale. One gets the impression that the subject was not approached objectively. The title might well have been 'Gifford Pinchot and Forestry in the United States.' . . . One regrets that Gifford Pinchot's approach was always to be that of the zealot who had discovered a great new empire which he was to claim by right of discovery. Even so, he wrought exceedingly well for his country." H. L. Ickes

N Y Times p6 N 23 '47 1650w

"'Breaking New Ground' is lightened throughout by anecdotes of Pinchot and the men who worked with him. These sidelights on personalities and tales of the lands he was trying to save bring the entire story into its correct perspective." Stanleigh Arnold

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ja 11 '48 600w

Reviewed by Russell Lord

Sat R of Lit 31:25 Ja 17 '48 950w

PINDAR. Odes; tr. by Richmond Lattimore. 169p $2.75 Univ. of Chicago press

884.5 47-3185

Free verse translations of the odes of Pindar, in which an effort is made to have the work suggest Pindar's own meters. In an introduction the translator gives the few known facts about Pindar's life.

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47 80w

"I have studied Greek choral poetry pretty closely, and to me free verse at its best, especially that of Robinson Jeffers, has something of the feel of Greek choral poetry about it. Metrically, then, free verse is a good medium for the translation of Pindar. . . . Good free verse is difficult to write, and even its best makers frequently nod into prose. Mr. Lattimore's version of Pindar does this more often than one would wish, but the generous critic will not stress such lapses." Eugene O'Neill, Jr.
N Y Times p24 Ap 6 '47 700w

"This book was a very bold venture and is an extraordinary success. Pindar is not only a difficult author to translate literally into English. He is a very difficult author to understand in Greek, if by understanding a poet one means actually penetrating the nature of his imagery sufficiently to recreate it in another tongue. To experience Pindar poetically is a test of both a scholar and a poet, and he has waited for the combination a long time, as far as English authors are concerned. To render Pindar as Professor Lattimore has done is to do a great service to those who care about poetry and cannot read Greek. The version is clear and lucid, except when Pindar himself is otherwise, and then Mr. Lattimore, like a true translator, reproduces the obscurity of the original by an obscurity transferred to the English." David Grene

+ Poetry 70:340 S '47 950w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '47
20w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:141 Je '47 270w

PINSON, KOPPEL SHUB, ed. See Conference on Jewish relations. Essays on anti-semitism

PIOTROWSKA, IRENA (GLEBOCKA). Art of Poland, 238p il $6 Philosophical lib.

709.438 Art, Polish 47-3695

"This book is an attempt to present to the English-speaking reader the facts one must know in order to understand Polish art. Here, in one continuous narrative, the author discusses . . . those aspects which will enable the reader to form for himself his own independent and objective views. The work is divided into thirty-four chapters, devoted successively to architecture, sculpture, painting, the graphic arts, the decorative arts, folk art, and art protection. However, while all the more important branches of Polish art are outlined, the book does not attempt to give a thorough account of each epoch, but rather to draw the attention of the general reader to the versatility and vitality of this art." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by Frank Bourne

+ Cath World 165:283 Je '47 270w

Cleveland Open Shelf p17 S '47

"[The book contains] a considerable body of useful information on a little known subject. The information is not, however, easily digested. . . . Again, the author is overly chary of making value judgments; and many of the halftone reproductions are of poor quality. In view of the wholesale destruction of Polish buildings, the discussion of Polish architecture is disappointingly brief and the illustrations of outstanding or typical examples disappointingly few." David Burnham

+ Commonweal 46:148 My 23 '47 330w

"Copiously illustrated, this book should be decidedly useful."

+ Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 27 '47
210w

Theatre Arts 31:74 Ag '47 50w

PIPES, LOUIS ALBERT. Applied mathematics for engineers and physicists. 618p il $5.50 McGraw

510 Mathematics 47-159

"Mathematical topics treated in this advanced textbook include infinite series, complex numbers, Fourier series, linear algebraic equations, differential equations, Gamma, Beta and error functions, Bessel functions, Legendre polynomials, vector analysis, complex variables and the operational calculus. Applications that are discussed include vibration and oscillation phenomena in various types of systems, electrical network problems, heat flow problems and certain applications to the theory of structures. The book is based on a course given by the author to students in the Graduate School of Engineering at Harvard University." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1628 N 15 '46 90w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:12 Ja '47

PIRENNE, MAURICE HENRI LEONARD. Diffraction of X-rays and electrons by free molecules. 160p il $3 Macmillan

537.53 X-rays. Electrons. Diffraction

[46-7735]

"Monograph written for scientific workers concerned with research in molecular structure. Essential information on the phenomenon of diffraction of X-rays and electrons by gases and methods for determining the structure of atoms and molecules based on study of this phenomenon." Library J

"The reviewer is glad to recommend this volume to all present and prospective workers in the field, as well as to others who desire a logical, authoritative presentation of the subject." M. L. Huggins

+ Chem & Eng N 22:3102 N 25 '46 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:60 Jl '47

PIRSIG, MAYNARD E. Cases and materials on judicial administration. 1017p $8.50 West

340 Justice, Administration of 46-7581

"Inasmuch as courts have been made to function more efficiently through changes brought about by lawyers, individually and in groups, should not law students be made aware of the great progress in judicial administration which has been made in the last twenty-five years and of the objectives of current movements so that they may be prepared to take an intelligent part in this work when they start practice? This important question should be considered by every law school. . . . Professor Pirsig's book affords the basis for such a course, which is now given three hours a week for two quarters of the year at the University of Minnesota Law School, to law students who have had at least two years of study. It covers the ground in a very adequate manner and is the product of Professor Pirsig's twelve years of experience teaching the subject." Columbia Law R

"Here is a book that covers in an excellent manner the more legal phases of court administration, and that has already stood the test of the classroom." William Anderson

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:367 Ap '47 450w

"It is hoped that this excellent collection of cases and materials will induce many law schools which do not now have such a course to institute one. Professor Pirsig's book is not only exceptionally well adapted to its purpose but also contains material of much interest to all lawyers and particularly to those who, through the work of bar associations and judicial councils, are participating in improvement of judicial administration and the more efficient working of our democratic system." Will Shafer

+ Columbia Law R 47:333 Mr '47 850w

Reviewed by G. K. Gardner

Harvard Law R 60:680 Ap '47 650w

PIRSSON, LOUIS VALENTINE. Rocks and rock minerals; 3d ed. rev by Adolph Knopf. 349p il $4 Wiley

552 Rocks. Mineralogy

47-31208

"Since the publication of the first edition (1908) [Book Review Digest 1909] this work has been known as a reliable and convenient manual of the main elements of petrology including megascopic (but omitting microscopic) petrography. It has been extensively used both as a field manual by amateur collectors and professional geologists, and as a textbook in college courses. The scope of the work has not been changed in the present edition, but the text has been revised, rearranged, the type reset. Some parts of the original text have been condensed, new information on chemical analyses has been added, and there are changes in terminology and classification." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

PIRSSON, L. V.—Continued

Booklist 44:113 N 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 20w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:57 J1 '47

PISTON, WALTER. Counterpoint [musical il. drawn by Mario Carmosino]. 235p $3.75 Norton

781.4 Counterpoint 47-1928

"[The author] bases his account entirely on music itself. His hundreds of illustrations are from the masters; none are invented to fit a rule. The volume treats of counterpoint, the structure and meaning of melodic line as found in music from the time of Bach through the end of the nineteenth century, a somewhat larger counterpoint than the so-called 'Bach counterpoint' often used as a basis for musical training." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

"A highly enlightened textbook. . . Deals only with local aspects of polyphonic structure, perhaps unwisely leaving their applications in more extensive design to others. An adroit and mature book." G. S. Dickinson

+ Library J 72:465 Mr 15 '47 130w

"This is an important book in its field, yet it falls between stools. It is not a strict textbook—yet it is near enough to the textbook area to be limited in its scope from the viewpoint of the musician who, textbook or no textbook, wants to get at the real stuff of all music." E. T. Canby

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 Ap 26 '47 400w

"By no means an easy book, this treatise is both stimulating and significant. The exercises provided, though difficult, are neither stereotyped nor formalistic and offer an incentive to original work."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:129 Je '47 280w

PITTENGER, WILLIAM NORMAN. Living faith for living men; simple studies in great subjects for lay people. 103p pa 75c Cloister press

230 Christianity

"Short and simple studies for laymen on religious themes—God, Christ, the Holy Ghost, the church, the Eucharist, death, heaven and hell." Christian Century

Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 30w

"No pretense is made, as the author tells us, to treat the faith in an academic fashion, nor is there any attempt to present anything new. Its simple style, along with a generous sprinkling of literary allusion, makes this a very readable and informative book for the average layman." S. E. Stumpf

+ J Religion 27:224 J1 '47 330w

PITZ, HENRY CLARENCE. Practice of illustration. 146p il $7.50 Watson-Guptill

741.6 Illustration of books 47-23288

Describes the differences between book, magazine, and advertising illustration, giving the characteristics of each. Contains information on reproducing illustrations, on techniques, and on selling one's work. The author is director of the department of illustration, at the Philadelphia museum school of art. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf D17 S '47

"Expensive but worthwhile." A. S. Plaut
+ Library J 72:1036 J1 '47 60w

PLACKARD, DWIGHT HILLIS, and BLACKMON, CLIFTON. Blueprint for public relations. 355p il $3.50 McGraw

301.154 Publicity 47-1440

"Recent advances in the field of publicity and public relations outlined with case illustrations on how public relations and publicity programs are planned and carried out in large and small organizations." Library J

Booklist 43:341 J1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:390 Mr 1 '47 40w

Reviewed by E. K. Moss
Management R 36:300 My '47 150w

PLAIDY, JEAN, pseud. See Hibbert, E.

PLATT, RUTHERFORD. Our flowering world; with 168 photo. by the author, 38 in full color. 278p $6 Dodd

581 Botany. Paleobotany 47-11206

Study of the evolution of plant life from the simple horsetails and club mosses of Paleozoic times to the present. "It is a story to stir the most sluggish imagination. Earthquakes and ice ages and lost Gondwanaland are actors in the drama. The heroes are the cell and the seed. As Rutherford Platt tells the story, the reader, from the vantage point of present time, watches the action speeded up, sees forests retreat and advance, new species unfold, green life triumph over the barren world of primeval rocks." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:129 D 1 '47

"An advertising executive, a skilled photographer and winner of the Burroughs Award, Mr. Platt employs both word and lens for the reader's illumination and pleasure. One hundred and sixty-eight photographs, 38 in full color, illustrate his book, which merits a place on anyone's shelf, beside the favorites most read." H. P. H.

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 29 '47 360w

"The author has told vividly and compactly one of the great adventure stories of our planet." E. W. Teale

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 O 12 '47 1000w

"Beautiful, unusual, richly informative book." H. S. Pearson

+ N Y Times p34 O 19 '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:170 D '47

PLEASANTS, HENRY. Doctor in the house. 286p $3 Lippincott

B or 92 Physicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Med47-1975

Autobiography of an American doctor, recording his educational and professional experiences from his undergraduate days at Haverford college, thru his part in World war I, to his later work in the United States. He describes many of his cases in detail.

"Dr. Pleasants writes with charm and warmth. He is at home in this medium, having written eight previous books. His effectiveness lies in his lucid simplicity. Throughout bubbles a vein of humor revealing not only a competent physician but a man who must surely be close to the hearts of the multitude he serves so faithfully and well." Mary Geston

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p7 J1 27 '47 290w

"The attraction of 'A Doctor in the House' is the author's interest in people and his skill and humor in using stories of people as a way of getting over the more general information he wishes to give." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 9 '47 600w

"Dr. Pleasants writes with a minimum of technical language; the casual reader will need no medical knowledge to appreciate this delightful excursion into the doctor's world." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p21 Ag 10 '47 650w

Spring'd Republican p14B N 2 '47
130w

Wis Lib Bul 43:139 O '47

PLEDGE, HUMPHRY THOMAS. Science since 1500; a short history of mathematics, physics, chemistry, biology. 357p il $5 Philosophical lib. 509 Science—History

"The present book tries to fill a niche in the rather small group of studies of the history of modern science as a whole. . . . Brevity has been secured by suppressing biography and the human sciences, sociology, anthropology, psychology, economics. To balance this, the story itself has been thrown against a background of the human and economic factors in successive periods rather than against the more intellectual and philosophical backgrounds which have mainly interested writers of previous general works, such as Sir W. Dampier. . . . The plates have been chosen to emphasize not so much major figures and aspects, as neglected ones. . . . The charts and maps illustrate some geographical, personal, and instrumental factors. Many dates of births and deaths have been relegated to the index." (Pref) Bibliographical note, Index.

"As a broad coverage of the history of specific fields of science having sufficient detail to interest the informed man, this book has a definite place in the literature of science." J. H. Kuney

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1470 My 19 '47 420w

"The problem of condensing the history of science into a single book necessarily involved selection and omission. Mr. Pledge, Librarian of the Science Museum of London, has selected here for scholars and philosophers. His book is a concise and competent history. . . . Mr. Pledge's book was first published in England in 1939 and is already highly valued by scholars. This is a revised edition published here simultaneously with the new English edition." Gerald Wendt

+ N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p27 Mr 23 '47 320w

"Mr. Pledge's own specialty, one surmises, is mathematics, and here he does not fail to please, but when it comes to biology and medicine he tends to interpret events in traditional style with all the uncritical inclusions of prejudice and error. . . . But through the remainder of the book the author takes the subject and the reader in his stride on a journey which must be ranked as a very able performance, indeed. The illustrations are excellent, the bibliography is unusually helpfully arranged, and the indices are full and satisfactory. In conclusion, the hope may be expressed that the author's occasional extraordinary lapses from good taste will be eliminated in a future printing." M. F. Ashley-Montagu

+ N Y Times p28 Ja 26 '47 650w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 10w

PLUMB, RALPH GORDON. Succession in public office; a study of resignations, removals, retirements. 170p $2 Lake Michigan pubs, 845 Lincoln blvd, Manitowoc, Wis.

351 U.S.—Officials and employees 47-15770

"In view of the many volumes devoted to 'how men have gained public office,' Ralph G. Plumb has thought some attention should be given to their exits. Succession in Public Office is the result. Most of the facts, compiled from biographical dictionaries, are familiar to political scientists. The discussion is limited to selected presidents, cabinet officers, members of Congress, diplomats, military and naval officers, governors, and Confederate officials. In appended tables, Mr. Plumb shows that thirty-one senators have resigned to enter presidential cabinets, sixteen to become diplomats. The House has seen thirty-nine resignees emerge as governors, fifteen as cabinet members, and fourteen as diplomats." (Am Pol Sci R) Index.

Reviewed by G. H. Durham

Am Pol Sci R 41:813 Ag '47 150w

"The volume would be useful for larger and special libraries as a beginning study in the field."

+ Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

PODOLSKY, EDWARD. Red miracle; the story of Soviet medicine. 274p il $3.50 Beechhurst press

610.947 Medicine—Russia. Medicine, State Med47-1302

A general survey of the progress of Soviet medicine in the past three decades, with emphasis on state control. Brief biographies are included. Bibliography. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"'Red Miracle' is in general an interesting and valuable survey. . . . It should be welcomed as such, since all too little has been written for the general public on this subject. As propaganda for socialized medicine the book is rather ineffective. The author would have accomplished more if he had stuck to straight reporting of scientific accomplishments, in which Russian medicine has made great strides." F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p31 My 25 '47 650w

POLIAK, SAUL. Rebuilding the sales staff. 503p $4 McGraw

658.85 Salesmen 47-1036

"Practical techniques for the selection and training of salesmen." (Subtitle) The author is Vice president of Clapp & Poliak, Inc; formerly research and conference planning divisions, the American management association.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 90w

"Once in a blue moon a business book appears that makes the reviewer throw his hat in the air in delight. Mr. Poliak's product is one such." Erwin Schell

+ Management R 36:297 My '47 340w

POLLARD, JAMES EDWARD. Presidents and the press. 866p $5 Macmillan

071 Presidents (U.S.). Press—U.S. 47-1213

Traces the relations with the press of the thirty-two presidents of the United States, from George Washington to Harry Truman. The author is director of the School of journalism, Ohio State university. Index.

Reviewed by R. L. O'Brien

Am Hist R 52:759 Jl '47 850w

"The balanced judgments in The Presidents and the Press grow out of Dr. Pollard's extensive and excellent training in two fields, history and journalism." R. D. Casey

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1219 D '47 1000w

Reviewed by W. B. Graves

Ann Am Acad 252:113 Jl '47 600w

Booklist 43:248 Ap 15 '47

"On the whole, Dr. Pollard has made a substantial contribution to American political history, although for many uneventful administrations the analysis tends to become repetitious. He has treated all 32 Chief Executives exhaustively, however, and from this process has emerged a fascinating picture of how the government and the governed in the United States maintain a perennial counter-balance." W. F. Swindler

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 9 '47 800w

Christian Century 64:368 Mr 19 '47 140w

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 12:369 Ap '47 900w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 Jl '47 10w

POLLARD, J. E.—Continued

"A tremendous tome—full of anecdotal material, historical highlights."

Kirkus 15:50 Ja 15 '47 210w

"Scholarly, readable and monumental study. By thorough research and careful documentation, Pollard reveals much of interest for students of American history and his book might well be made required reading in all schools of journalism." M. M. Plumb

+ Library J 72:386 Mr 1 '47 110w

"This book is a mine of information on the broad subject of which it treats. Its chief shortcoming, a reliance on secondary sources rather than newspaper files, is forgivable in view of the fact that even a cursory search of bound volumes would take many years. More use should have been made, however, of trade papers, and particularly of that much-neglected repository of newspaper lore 'The Journalist.' Mr. Pollard writes with a praiseworthy combination of accuracy and anecdotal sprightliness." Allan Nevins

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
Ap 27 '47 1450w

"He has compiled the record very successfully indeed. Being an amiable character he is distressed by the hard words flung back and forth and hopes for pleasanter relations in the future. This may or may not be desirable. If President and press loved each other more, the public might be worse, not better, served. In any event, Dr. Pollard has done his part. His book is a valuable contribution to the history of American journalism." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Times p4 Mr 16 '47 1300w
New Yorker 23:102 Mr 8 '47 130w

"Professor Pollard has put all students of American political institutions under obligation to him by his meticulous, detailed, heavily documented study. He has assembled an impressive body of factual material which reveals aspects of presidential development heretofore insufficiently appreciated. Yet his method has certain shortcomings. By the very fact that he concentrates upon the comparatively narrow problem of press relationships, with chief emphasis upon the treatment received by each President, attention tends to focus upon personal incidents rather than upon the major issues. One gets little sense of the course of events marking each administration. His frequent use of quotations, often fragmentary in character, sometimes blurs his emphasis by obscuring the main thread of thought. These are minor matters, however, for the book as a whole represents a valuable addition to the literature on the President." L. H. Chamberlain

+ Pol Sci Q 62:436 S '47 700w

"Mr. Pollard's book performs no miracles, but for those who would like to bring historical perspective to today's White House reporting, it provides a basis and a beginning built from determined honesty and industrious research." Jonathan Daniels

Sat R of Lit 30:15 My 3 '47 700w

+ Springf'd Union p19 Ag 1 '47 400w
Times [London] Lit Sup p136 Mr 29 '47 420w

"Bearing the mark of extensive research, this book is characterized by objectivity and a fidelity of detail which makes it enjoyable reading for the student of history. It is, also, an excellent source of background material."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:167 Je '47 180w

POLLOCK, JAMES KERR, and MEISEL, JAMES HANS, eds. Germany under occupation; illustrative materials and documents. 306p pa $3 Wahr

940.5343 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945-. World war, 1939-1945—Documents, etc., sources 47-4850

"A wide variety of material relating to the current situation in Germany. The greater part of the contents is made up of official documents issued by American military government authorities, but there are also statements of Allied policy relating to Germany made at Yalta and Potsdam, the texts of three Land constitutions, the statute of the Länderrat, examples of Allied Control Council actions and speeches of certain Allied and German officials. Looking toward the future, the editors have included statements by Bevin, Molotov, and Bidault, as well as the Stuttgart address of Secretary Byrnes. The Hoover Report is added as a supplement, and several maps and charts are reproduced to make boundaries and organization clear." (Am Pol Sci R) No index.

"While there is always some difference of opinion as to what should be included in a collection such as this, it seems to this reviewer that the editors have displayed unusual discrimination. Perhaps some may question the emphasis on American documents and the U. S. Zone, but such emphasis is hardly surprising under existing circumstances. Teachers and students of comparative government may properly feel grateful to Pollock and Meisel for providing so substantial an aid; Professor Pollock deserves especial credit for his efforts in arranging the declassifying of certain of the official documents which have heretofore been restricted in circulation." Harold Zink

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:816 Ag '47 260w

"This reliable and concise publication will be appreciated by everyone who wants to form a balanced judgment on Military Government in Germany." W. F. Sollmann

+ Ann Am Acad 253:215 S '47 240w

POLNAY, PETER DE. See De Polnay, P.

POMEROY, EARL SPENCER. Territories and the United States, 1861-1890; studies in colonial administration. (Am. hist. assn. Albert J. Beveridge memorial fund publication) 163p $2.50 Univ. of Pa. press

973.8 U.S.—Territories 47-1735

"During the thirty year period covered by this study the territories of the United States included a large portion of the area of the United States. Yet until the publication of this volume there was not in print a descriptive account of the territorial system of government as distinct from a summary of the laws enacted by Congress for the territories and from the accounts of particular territories. The volume under review goes far toward filling in a commendable way an important gap in the history of the nation. . . . The selection of the years 1861-1890 seems a logical one. Apart from the shift in public interest in the territories from public lands and slavery to 'Indian Wars and mines, future congressmen and present patronage' which occurred about 1861 and apart from a shift in public interest, near the end of the period, from the continental territories to the insular possessions, there was during the three decades under study 'a territorial belt with relative political stability and with certain common social and physiographic characteristics. . . ." (Am Hist R) Bibliography. Index.

"While there are no maps or illustrations, there is a helpful index, a complete and detailed bibliography, and two long appendixes which contain the names and terms of territorial officials and delegates. The selection of this volume for publication from the income of the Albert J. Beveridge Fund is well-justified recognition of its quality and importance. The almost flawless execution of the details of editing and publishing deserves comment." G. L. Anderson

+ Am Hist R 52:751 Jl '47 480w

"This work is well documented and contains an extensive bibliography, largely of primary materials. The style is labored, however, and the choice of words does not always make for clarity." W. H. Smith

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:808 Ag '47 380w

Reviewed by G. E. Mowry
Ann Am Acad 253:218 S '47 380w

"An exceptionally well-written specialized study in American history." J. T. Frederick
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 8 '47 90w

"As a study in the history of administration, a field often neglected by American historians, this book should be of real interest.

The general nature of the problem with which the author is concerned is implicit in his title which indicates, what was in fact true, that the territories existed, to a considerable degree, independently of the national authority, which in the period covered no longer claimed to be paramount in colonial affairs as it had been in the early days of the Republic."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:177 Je '47 280w

POINSONBY, DORIS. If my arms could hold; a vivid and colorful romance of Bath in the time of Beau Nash. 360p $3 Liveright

Nash, Richard—Fiction 47-18600

"In the days when Beau Nash was the social arbiter of Bath the three Lucymain sisters were budding beauties with an impoverished Papa and a designing Mamma. Doris Poinsonby spins a long romance of their somewhat ill-starred adventures. . . One was thrust reluctantly into the arms of an elderly admirer; one eloped with a scoundrel; and the third (youngest and prettiest) lost her heart to a young man of wealth who—for secret reasons we shall not divulge—gives her an eighteenth-century brush off." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Booklist 43:256 Ap 15 '47

— Kirkus 15:111 F 15 '47 120w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 20w

"If My Arms Could Hold' is for readers who have time for a love story slowed up occasionally by long-winded portal-to-portal writing." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 9 '47 150w

"To the flood of historical novels now running, which bids fair to cover every last syllable of recorded time, Doris Poinsonby has added a full-dress eighteenth-century romance. It reflects faithfully and enthusiastically the color, costumes and customs of England when Beau Nash ruled at Bath. If you are interested in giving in marriage or giving of veils ('tips' in modern English), in fighting in the wars abroad or in dueling at home, Miss Poinsonby will satisfy your curiosity charmingly." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p22 Mr 16 '47 240w

POPE, ALAN Y. Wind-tunnel testing. 319p ii $5 Wiley

629.130723 Wind tunnels. Airplanes—Testing 47-31381

"Although much material on wind tunnel testing of aeroplane models and parts has appeared in periodicals, and certain aspects of the subject have been treated in books, this work is probably the first comprehensive textbook on the subject. It brings together current information regarding testing procedures, the correction of wind tunnel data, and extrapolation to full scale. The material on these subjects is preceded by concise discussions of the salient features of various types of wind tunnels, the salient principles of wind tunnel design, and a descriptive tabulation of wind tunnels throughout the world. Most chapters include review problems and brief bibliographies. In addition to its use in connection with formal courses, the book should be useful to laymen and experimenters interested in aerodynamics." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1379 O 1 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:60 Jl '47

POPE, LISTON, ed. Labor's relation to church and community; a series of addresses. (Inst. for religious and social studies. Religion and civilization ser) 182p $2.50 Harper 331 Labor and laboring classes—U.S.

47-5064

"This slim volume undertakes to provide an understanding of the concerns, activities and long-run objectives of American labor which is, for the most part, outside the field of industrial relations. The seventeen addresses which make it up form three distinct sections: 'Labor and the Community,' 'Labor and the Church' and 'Spiritual Autobiographies of Labor Leaders.'" N Y Times

Booklist 44:100 N 15 '47

"Gratitude is due to the Institute for Religious and Social Studies for having made these contributions available to a larger public, and to Dr. Pope for his careful editorial oversight in making them presentable in the form of a definitive volume such as this." D. J. Bradley

+ Christian Century 64:1335 N 5 '47 500w

"The most interesting part of this provocative little book is, in the opinion of the reviewer, the section devoted to the 'spiritual autobiographies' of labor leaders." McAlister Coleman

+ Churchman 161:19 O 1 '47 250w

"Easily the liveliest and most rewarding section is the last. This consists in brief autobiographies of six men and women who hold secondary, but responsible, positions among the leaders of American labor. These personal sketches are uneven, but they all provide testimony on the kinds of experiences, influences and motivations which push dissimilar individuals into active roles in the labor movement." Henry David

+ N Y Times p12 S 21 '47 600w

Reviewed by C. C. Shedd

Survey 33:327 N '47 600w

POPKIN, MRS ZELDA. Small victory. 280p $2.75 Lippincott

47-11005

The author went overseas in 1945 to report on the European theater of operations and this novel is based on her observations. It is the story of Randy Barlow, an American college professor, who volunteers for service in post-war Germany, and of his reactions to the conditions he finds there.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

"The narrative is a thoughtful revelation of things as they still are," Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 2 '47 100w

"The decaying cities, the bombed-out country, the relations between occupiers and occupied provide all the dramatic contrasts a novelist could ask for. Yet though she has chosen to write her novel on the level of a popular women's magazine, it is still an effective story. The problems it presents are ours and will be ours for a long time to come." Richard Plant

N Y Times p20 D 7 '47 600w

Reviewed by G. E. Lyon

Spring'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 240w

Wis Lib Bul 43:175 D '47

POPULAR MECHANICS (periodical). Primer for home builders. See Carpenter, J. A., and Guess, N. F., eds.

POPULAR MECHANICS (periodical). Your home and how to build it yourself. See Leckey, W. C., ed.

PORTEUS, STANLEY DAVID. And blow not the trumpet; a prelude to peril. 304p $3.50 Pacific bks, box 558, Palo Alto, Calif.

340.53969 World war, 1939-1945—Hawaiian Islands. Pearl harbor, Battle of, 1941 47-5219

"An analysis of the situation in Hawaii at the time of the Pearl Harbor disaster, showing why the natives were prepared for the attack and the military were not." Publisher's Weekly

PORTEUS, S. D.—Continued

"Good reading about a subject which will have increasing importance as time goes by."

W. M. Camp

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 13 '47
200w

"Inevitably any book about the Pearl Harbor disaster has an aura of post mortem about it. Since most people tend to shy away from post mortems it may be difficult to attract a large number of readers to this book by a psychologist who has turned to popular writing. Yet Dr. Porteus supplies a footnote to history that, in justice, needed to be told. He does so in a style often sharp and amusing, light in manner yet well weighted with facts."

Bradford Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 O 11 '47 550w

POTTEAT, EDWIN MCNEILL. Last reprieve? 105p $1 Harper

171 Ethics. Religion and science 46-8360

"Post-Hiroshima considerations, dealing not so much with the necessity of controlling the atomic bomb as with the necessity of a better understanding of man and the creation of an intelligent morality which will make it possible for men to live with each other and with the products of their inventiveness. The heart of it is the demand for 'a new Magna Carta' declaring the inviolability of human personality." Christian Century

Christian Century 63:1568 D 25 '46 70w

"The strength of this book lies in the clear picture it gives us of our modern atomic dilemma. Its weakness lies in its plan to find the basic moral law in science and through scientists. If science has taught us anything it is that science is not the whole of life and that the control of science must come not only from man's reason but also from man's innermost spirit." C. L. Willard

+ Churchman 161:17 Mr 1 '47 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

Reviewed by J. L. Clayton

Crozer Q 24:184 Ap '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:33 F '47

POTTER, JEAN CLARK. The flying North. 261p il $3.75 Macmillan

629.13 Aviators. Alaska—Description and travel 47-2662

Story of the pioneering "bush pilots" who were flying supplies, mail, and passengers into Alaska when the planes were not much more than crates, and the pilot's determination was the only hope of survival. Contains stories of such fliers as Ben Eielson, Archie Ferguson, Joe Crosson, and Bob Reeve. Map on end papers. Index.

Booklist 43:285 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Thomas Daffron

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 My 18 '47
270w

Christian Century 64:657 My 21 '47 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47

"Every air-minded reader will find this packed with excitement, adventure, heroism and humor—the thrilling story of the bush fliers in Alaska."

+ Kirkus 15:53 Ja 15 '47 160w

"Written during the war, pays almost no attention to the growth of Alaskan aviation under military necessity. Does demonstrate how important and natural 'the aviation' is to Alaska's present and future development. Follows, with high humor and engrossing anecdote, an important chapter in the history of aviation. Quoted profanity will limit use to adults. Otherwise recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 120w

"The author has done an exceptionally credible job and one in which there is little tendency for the reader's interest to lag. Obviously fascinated by her subject and impressed to the point of awe by some of the seemingly incredible flying feats she recounts, Miss Potter still has not lost sight of the fact that she may have skeptical readers. . . . Miss Potter tells the story with considerable skill and succeeds in making it arresting, entertaining and colorful." C. E. Allen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
My 4 '47 1100w

"Miss Potter has written an exciting and stirring book. Her characterizations are excellent." R. L. Neuberger

+ N Y Times p26 Je 22 '47 650w

Reviewed by Ernest Gruening

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ag 2 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

POTTER, MRS MARGARET YARDLEY. At home on the range; or, How to make friends with your stove. 214p $2.75 Lippincott

641.5 Cookery 47-4628

An anecdotal cookbook in which the recipes are imbedded in the text. Useful chapters are those on keeping prepared for influxes of week-end guests in a summer camp; giving parties painlessly; bread making modern style; etc. Practical, simple methods are emphasized. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"Mrs. Potter writes in a gay, neighborly, informal way, interspersing directions for cooking with anecdotes of family life. . . . Also good news is her resourceful suggestions for easy party giving. Her bread-making methods will encourage many to try this phase of cooking. A hostess following her guidance from soup to dessert would readily establish a reputation for good eating at her house." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p24 Je 15 '47 230w

"This is the anecdotal, talk-about-food kind of cookbook with recipes studded throughout the text, and one of those indexes in which, if you want to look up waffles, for example, you find it not under w, but under the arbitrary heading, 'Breakfast Dishes.' Presumably if you'd like a waffle for Sunday night supper, and a lot of people do, you can just get your recipe somewhere else. Mrs. Potter, however, gets a lot of good ideas into her book, and her advice to women on mixing drinks is first rate." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 3 '47
120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:148 N '47

POTTER, MRS MIRIAM S. (CLARK). Hello, Mrs Goose! [il. by the author]. 150p $2 Lippincott

47-23772

Another book of short episodes in the life of Mrs Goose and her friends who live in Animaltown. Good for reading aloud to small children.

Kirkus 15:336 Jl 1 '47 80w

"Each chapter being a complete story, the book is good for reading aloud. The stories 'A Trunk in the Attic' and 'Mrs. Goose Is Not at Home' are particularly well suited to that purpose, for they will bring chuckles to every listener." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 70w

"Ever since Mrs. Potter's 'Pinafore Pocket' stories came out in 1922 I have greeted her infrequent appearances in print by informing those who read aloud to very small children that she tells very short stories that make them listen with smiles. . . . Mrs. Goose is plumb silly, but a nice silly, for which her friends regard her with affection." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
O 19 '47 230w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:144 D 6 '47 50w

POTTER, RALPH KIMBALL, and others. Visible speech. 441p il $4.75 Van Nostrand 681.63 Deaf—Means of communication. Telephone—Apparatus and Supplies 47-5168
 "This book contains brief non-technical descriptions of the sound spectrograph and the direct translator, the electronic instruments which have been developed to convert the spoken sounds to visible pattern; but chiefly it is an exploration of the principles and potential applications of visible speech. It will be of more interest to teachers of speech and persons concerned with the education of the deaf than to engineers; but it should be looked over, at least, by all who are interested in important new developments. The authors are all present or former staff members of the Bell Telephone Laboratories." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

"A fundamental book to use in teaching the deaf to talk, to read speech of others and use of telephone; valuable to the scientist working in the fields of phonetics and language development. As all sounds can be recorded, it will be used by industry." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 70w
 N Y New Tech Bks 32:38 Ap '47

"This volume makes an important contribution to the science of applied acoustics, and should be useful to investigators concerned with the analysis of sound."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:320 S '47 280w

POTTER, ROBERT DUCHARME. Young people's book of atomic energy. 171p il $2.50 McBride

541.2 Atomic energy 46-8689

"A dramatic description of the Bikini tests, fundamentals of atoms and atomsplitting, of atomic power and its world significance are clearly explained for younger readers with no scientific background. Too simple for physics or chemistry students, perhaps difficult for grade school level, it yet fills an in-between reading need. Author writes for Science Digest and was an observer at Bikini. Illustrated with diagrams and seven photographs." Library J

Booklist 43:193 F 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p14 O 30 '47 120w

"Recommended for reading, not reference, for ages 12-15." F. L. Morrison

+ Library J 72:230 F 1 '47 100w

"Professor Potter's chapters on 'What Is an Atom?' and 'Energy—What Is It?' are amazingly clear and understandable for so complex a problem. . . . The tone of his book is calm and dispassionate, but underlying every word is an earnest plea for thought. His work is one that will answer many of the questions that young people are asking about the greatest and most dramatic of world problems." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Ja 18 '47 160w

POTTER, RUSSELL. Little red ferry boat; pictures by Marjorie Hill. 50p $2 Holt

47-30411

A bored little red ferry boat, whose whole existence had been spent in Hudson river duty, decided to go to sea. Against everybody's advice the ferry boat went out to sea for a vacation, and probably never would have reached home again, except for the kind help of a whale. For ages six to eight.

Booklist 44:39 S 15 '47

Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 60w

"Her adventures, told originally to Russell Potter's little daughter, are here set down to be read to those youngest listeners who can see the personality of a ferry boat and enjoy hearing what happened to her. Marjorie Hill's pictures give a sense of place together with their fun." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:354 S '47 80w

"Good for reading aloud to younger children." + Kirkus 15:337 Jl 1 '47 160w

"A delightful story. . . . Recommended."

Marian Webb

+ Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 21 '47 250w

"It is a nice book with colorful pictures but lacks any particular distinction or originality." Phyllis Fenner

+ N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:133 O '47

POTTE, FREDERICK ALBERT. Idiom of poetry. 2d rev & enl ed 234p $2.50 Cornell univ. press

808.1 Poetry 46-8517

In its original form this book consisted of six lectures delivered at Cornell university in the spring term of 1941 (Book Review Digest 1942). "In this edition I have carefully reviewed the six lectures which composed the original book, and have made a good many changes and additions." (Pref to second edition) To this has been added three other essays: An alternative beginning and a summary; Dogma, science, and poetry; The moral evaluation of literature.

Reviewed by Margaret Meagher

Cath World 165:570 S '47 700w

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 4 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 16 '47 120w

POWELL, RICHARD PITTS. And hope to die. 250p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

47-3258

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 29 '47 110w

Kirkus 15:202 Ap 1 '47 80w

"The Blakes aided and abetted by a beautiful and enigmatic blonde and a twelve-year-old expatriated American youngster, furnish an abundance of chills, thrills, chuckles and—ultimately—success." E. H.

New Repub 117:28 Jl 7 '47 110w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 Je 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 15 '47 180w

"Gay, often to the point of hysteria."

New Yorker 23:99 Je 14 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 15 '47 110w

"A-No. 1"

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 5 '47 40w

POWELL, VEE WALKER. How to make hats and accessories; il. by the author, de luxe ed 143p $2 Garden City pub. co.

646.54 Millinery. Clothing and dress 46-8066

Suggestions for making your own hats, with or without blocks, with directions for making gloves, belts, bags, and other accessories. Illustrated with many drawings.

Booklist 43:151 Ja 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p1 Ja '47

POWERS, ANNE. Ride east! ride west! a romance of the Hundred years' war. 328p $2.75 Bobbs

47-30848

Historical novel of fourteenth century England and Ireland, in the days of the Irish struggle for independence, and of the English aspirations toward the crown of France.

POWERS, ANNE—Continued

Booklist 44:70 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 O 19 '47
140w"Recommended." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 90w

"The narration is a bit confusing at times and there are moments when the reader wonders if the valiant Thomas isn't double-crossing friends and foes alike, but the swift action of 'Ride East! Ride West!' triumphs over those minor deficiencies." H. B.

+ — N Y Times p20 S 21 '47 400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

POWERS, J. F. Prince of darkness, and other stories. 277p $2.75 Doubleday

47-5299

Eleven short stories, five of which have to do with priests or other members of the Roman Catholic church. Three others are about Negroes. The remaining three are almost un-plotted sketches.

"There is rising in the land a growing band of young Catholic writers, brilliant, often profound, alive to the times, zealous for social justice, appreciative of the faith in which they have been baptized, in revolt against the overall mediocrity of American Catholicism, and, at times, bitterly critical of their clerical leaders. They write with force, not always tempered by kindness to their own. . . Such a one is J. F. Powers. He writes with skill, force, penetrating insight into character. He has caught the art of the short story. With a few deft strokes he limns a character. The sentences are terse, energetic, often vitally moving. There is an economy of incident and word. Simplicity of style and language does not conceal the telling phrase. Interest is sustained and suspense is not lacking." W. T. Gouch

+ Cath World 165:565 S '47 320w

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 15 '47
260w

"Mr. Powers does what few short-story writers can do. . . He is unabashedly inside his story, focusing on objects, catching nuances for us, and heightening the volume when he wishes. . . His perceptions are interesting not only for their acuteness but for the mass of dense particulars which they penetrate. In a story like 'Lions, Harts, Leaping Does,' he must cut through a good deal of very subtle moral theology in order to make his perception, but the perception comes through. . . The writing is almost perfect. It suffers occasionally from insistence (in, for example, 'The Lord's Day'), but I can think of nothing else which keeps it from being completely obedient to all that Mr. Powers wants to do with it." Henry Ragó

+ Commonweal 46:457 Ag 22 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:138 Mr 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Kenneth Fearing

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
My 11 '47 700w

Reviewed by E. S. Holsaert

N Y Times p20 My 4 '47 470w

"Varied and fresh stories, written in delightfully firm and straightforward prose, in which Mr. Powers proves that he has few rivals at creating characters with more than superficial reality."

+ New Yorker 23:104 My 10 '47 120w

"Mr. Powers knows what he is writing about. He is, one feels certain, a Roman Catholic; but he has the virtue which in these days of controversy has become a rare one in writers of that communion—he is neither a determined and conscious apologist for the Church of Rome, nor blindly revolting against her. . . The tone of the book is always dry, sometimes tart, but never bitter. . . It may displease some of the unco' guid among Catholics and Protestants alike, but the real agnostic and the real Catholic will welcome this expert picture of a novel world and the literary connoisseur will find a book which at its best will remind him of 'Dubliners.'" Basil Davenport

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 9 '47 700w

POWERS, MARGARET. Party table. 167p il
$3 Manual arts

642.8 Table. Handicraft. Entertaining
46-7116

Suggestions and directions for making things for the party table: the table covering, candles and candleholders, place cards and favors, centerpieces, dolls, flowers, etc. Index.

Booklist 43:275 My 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '46

PRATT, FLETCHER, and BAILEY, ROBESON. A man and his meals; il. by Inga. 251p
$2.50 Holt

641.5 Cookery 47-2910

Not a conventional cookbook but a discussion of what and how to cook to please the masculine palate, furnished with caustic asides on feminine tendencies toward "landscape cookery." Partial contents: Barons and barbecues; Soups and second-string meats; Ducks, drakes, and dinners; Stew—by the gill or gallon; Fish and frying; Variety and vegetables.

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

"For reading rather than doing—suggestive rather than specific."

Kirkus 15:94 F 1 '47 90w

"What they have produced is more properly a treatise or 'appreciation' of cooking—and from a highly personal approach. . . However, the authors do have some useful things to say in a general way on the proper approach to certain foods and the do's and don'ts of preparing them." Lois Palmer

N Y Times p28 My 25 '47 130w

Reviewed by Robert O'Brien

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 9 '47
850w

PRATT, HELEN GAY, and MOORE, HARRIET LUCY. Russia, a short history; issued under the auspices of American council, Institute of Pacific relations. rev & enl ed 282p il maps $4 Day

914.7 Russia—Civilization. Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Economic conditions

47-3477

This volume consists of a revision of Russia; from Tsarist Empire to Socialism, by Helen Pratt published in a small edition in 1937, together with two new chapters on the past decade by Harriet L. Moore.

Reviewed by W. B. Walsh

Am Hist R 53:170 O '47 320w

Reviewed by D. F. White

Ann Am Acad 254:198 N '47 300w

Booklist 44:72 O 15 '47

Reviewed by Louis Gottschalk

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 1 '47
380w

"The reader who expects to find in this 'Short History of Russia' an abbreviated version of Prof. Bernard Pares' standard work on that subject will have to adjust himself to a history perspective, not from the past, but from the present. . . It is pleasantly seasoned with copious descriptive passages from fiction—from Gogol, Chekhov, or Dostoevsky, or from the peasant poets. This 'history' makes no attempt to pass judgment on the Soviet Government of today. It takes the regime more or less at its own valuation." Henry Sowerby

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 9
'47 600w

Kirkus 15:95 F 1 '47 150w

"The authors' approach to the Soviet Union is warmly sympathetic, so much so that they slide very gingerly over such thin ice as the German-Soviet Pact of 1939." Keith Hutchison

Nation 165:188 Ag 23 '47 200w

"It is an excellent brief history, with the latter section providing the best short summary of its period to be found outside of Walter Duranty's brilliant and strangely neglected USSR." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:29 My 26 '47 60w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
My 25 '47 60w

"Interesting to read and valuable for reference purposes." A. K. D.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 J1 13 '47
100w

PRATT, LYDE STUART. Chemistry and physics of organic pigments. 359p il $6 Wiley 667.2 Pigments 47-4758

"Critical discourse on organic pigment colors. Draws together valuable information of interest to scientists, technologists and students concerned with coloring agents and their use. Exhaustive list of pigments is considered, and testing and identification methods are given in great detail." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:35 Ap '47
Special Libraries 38:89 Mr '47

PRATT, THEODORE (TIMOTHY BRACE, pseud). Mr. Thurtle's trolley. 214p $2.50 Duell 47-30410

Fantasy based on the adventures of an old trolley car and Conductor Thurtle who had cared for it for thirty-two years. Retired on a pension, plus a gift of the trolley, Mr Thurtle finds he has a strange power over the car, and that leads to an adventurous journey.

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Donald Freeman
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 10 '47
190w

"It seems fair to discard any intention of sermon or satire, and take the book simply as good fooling; to be enjoyed for what it brings to memory about old pre-automobile trolley-riding days, for the honest, friendly, decent characters that Mr. Thurtle, the Winches, and Mr. Thurtle's Nettie are, and the author's polite, restrained tone and neat contriving. Taken thus, the book can furnish a pleasant evening's reading, without any arguments or significances to clutter the attention. It is best for readers who have their sense of humor always handy." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 S 5 '47
420w

"A sunny fantasy, which comforts while it derides, this contributes a gentle touch to the current whimsy field."

+ Kirkus 15:370 J1 15 '47 160w

"The story makes one remember Topper and Mary Poppins. Recommended." W. A. Kalenich
+ Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 70w

"'Mr. Thurtle's Trolley' is a magic-carpet fairy tale for adults. It is untrammelled fantasy and great fun, with not too obvious a sermon going along just for the ride." George Conrad
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag
24 '47 390w

"Nearly everybody who can take extraganza mixed with whimsy and farce will ride along with Theodore Pratt in his latest fictional excursion—via the currently popular 'miracle' circuit." Hilda Lake

N Y Times p16 Ag 17 '47 270w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 21 '47
220w

"Fantasy is a form of writing beloved by stylists, and Mr. Pratt is a stylist; his style is that of a man who has determined that, come hell or high water, he will get two thousand words written before lunch. Here is a typical sentence from 'Mr. Thurtle's Trolley': 'Mr. Winch's salary had not been such as to mean much in the line of savings.' A writer in the habit of going back again and again to his manuscript, polishing and rephrasing and eternally seeking the right words to convey his exact meaning, might very likely develop some doubts about such a sentence; very likely, indeed. A book composed of similarly constructed sentences is imperfect communication and no entertainment at all." Russell Maloney

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 16 '47 410w

PREFACE to philosophy: textbook [by] William Ernest Hocking [and others; ed. by William Pearson Tolley] 508p $3 Macmillan
100 Philosophy 46-1826

In this textbook "little emphasis is placed on logic, aesthetics, or epistemology, and attention is focused on the 'more immediate problems' of ethics and religion. . . . The text is divided into five parts, the first and last of which are contributed by Hocking, who initiates the discussion with the question, 'What Is Man?' and concludes the text with a summary entitled, 'A World View.' Part II on 'Personal Ethics' is contributed by Blanshard, Part III on 'Social and Political Philosophy' is by Hendel, and Part IV on 'The Meaning of Religion for Man' is Randall's contribution." (Ethics) Index.

"In spite of this division of authorship, the text as a whole achieves a remarkable unity and in this respect serves as a good illustration of what might be accomplished in textbook writing through the proper kind of co-operative action." A. R. Turquette

+ Ethics 157:152 Ja '47 190w

Reviewed by J. M. L. Thomas
Hibbert J 45:283 Ap '47 440w

Reviewed by V. C. Aldrich
J Philos 44:80 Ja 30 '47 950w

School & Society 65:464 Je 21 '47 30w

PREGL, FRITZ. Quantitative organic microanalysis; 4th English ed; completely rev. and ed. by Julius Grant. 238p 94il $5 Blakiston

545 Microchemistry. Chemistry, Analytic—
Quantitative. Chemistry, Organic A47-5636

"The most complete book on the subject with details of recent developments drawn from English-speaking countries. A new section deals with miscellaneous physical methods which describe gas analyses, absorption, spectroscopy, colorimetry, general microtechnical technique, etc." Library J

"Compared with the standard works in microchemistry at the present available in America and which are largely unquoted, the present edition offers nothing of any importance and consequently the high sounding pronouncements of the author in the preface of the book remain largely unsubstantiated in the text." J. B. Niederl

— Am Chem Soc J 69:728 Mr '47 460w

"This revision of the pioneer work of Pregl is a worthwhile addition to the literature of organic microanalysis. The increased scope of the work covers many of the important quantitative microprocedures which are brought up to date by approximately 350 literature references. The book is nicely printed on good paper, making for easy reading, however a few typographical errors are present and the general format could be subject to some improvement. . . . It seems that some of the special sections dealing briefly with chromatography, absorption spectroscopy, polarography, and the like might better have been left to texts specializing in the field and the space devoted more profitably to greater detail in the major topics. Nevertheless it is felt that this book is a definite contribution in its field and will be found useful both by the novice as well as the more experienced microanalyst." A. I. Gebhart

+ — Chem & Met Eng 53:273 J1 '46 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:762 My 15 '46 60w

PRESTON, HELEN HARDT (SEATON), ed. Use of audio-visual materials toward international understanding; the report of a conf. sponsored jointly by the Am. council on educ. and the Film council of America, Je. 14-15, 1946. 168p pa $1.25 Am. council on educ.

371.335 Visual instruction E47-8

"The report of a conference sponsored jointly by the American Council on Education and the Film Council of America, June 14-15, 1946,

PRESTON, H. H.—Continued
in the interests of increasing the flow of knowledge and ideas between and among nations." Special Libraries

"Though the transcript may lack cogency, it is valuable in its demonstration of the obstacles to be met and the determination, talents and organizations already available for overcoming obstacles and realizing potentialities. . . This publication is good reading for librarians already aware of audio-visual aids but inclined to think of them within the narrow limits of the classroom." Kurtz Myers

+ Library J 72:382 Mr 1 '47 210w
School & Society 64:392 N 30 '46 20w
Special Libraries 38:55 F '47 40w

PRESTON, ISABELLA. Lilies for every garden. 160p il $2 Judd

635.93432 Lilies Agr47-10

"A simplified introduction to lily growing for the amateur. Incorporates some material from the author's Garden Illies, published in 1929, and as in that book the greatest space is given to description of varieties, including new hybrids. The author is connected with the Experimental farm at Ottawa, Canada." Booklist

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

"Lily fans will welcome this small but straight-to-the-point book by one of the world's top authorities on the genus." R. S. Lemmon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29
My 4 '47 100w

PRICE, CHARLES COALE. Mechanisms of reactions at carbon-carbon double bonds. 120p il $2.50 Interscience

547 Chemical reactions. Carbon compounds 47-2840

"First in a new series, Lectures on Progress in Chemistry. A group of lectures presented by the author at the Institute of Polymer Research of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. The seven chapters are Electronic Structure of unsaturated Organic Molecules; Ionic Reactions Involving Double Bonds; Free Radical Reactions Involving Double Bonds; Free Radical Addition Polymerization; Copolymerization; Emulsion and Suspension Polymerization; Polar Polymerization." Library J

"The last three quarters of this small book . . . is clear, and remarkably complete for so small a compass, and is based on the best available interpretations of the mechanisms involved, which have been largely clarified in recent years by physical chemical as well as by organic chemical evidence. . . The first chapter, however, is concerned with a theory of the orienting effect of groups attached to the benzene ring which the present reviewer is quite unable to understand. . . The reviewer can therefore only recommend to readers of the book the alternatives of skipping this chapter entirely or of devoting to it a great deal of critical thought and much more imagination than is at his own disposal." L. P. Hammett

+ Am Chem Soc J 69:3152 D '47 200w

"It is exceedingly well organized and presented. On account of the nature of the material included, every graduate student in chemistry should have a personal copy." C. F. H. Allen

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1147 Ap 21 '47 350w

Reviewed by G. F. Kinney

Chem Eng 54:278 Je '47 200w

"This book represents a distinct contribution to the chemistry of carbon-carbon double bonds and should be read by all organic chemists." R. T. Arnold

+ J Phys Chem 51:1029 Jl '47 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:642 Ap 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:15 Ja '47

PRICE, HOYT, and SCHORSKE, CARL E. Problem of Germany; with an introd. by Allen W. Dulles. 161p $2 Council on foreign relations

943.086 Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945-. Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 47-11523

The book "grew out of the work of a study group, headed by Allen W. Dulles, at the Council on Foreign Relations. The study group met to draw up memoranda on the economic and cultural aspects of the German problem in preparation for a non-official international conference which recently met in the Netherlands. [It] contains an introduction, which appeared as an article in Foreign Affairs, written by Mr. Dulles and summarizing the general conclusions of the study group." (N Y Times) No index.

"The conclusions are neither as detailed nor as startling as Mr. Brown's but they are carefully weighed. There is, however, an area of agreement with Mr. Brown. The re-establishment of a healthy German industry is recommended, and an end to reparations is suggested. The study also warns the victorious powers against annexing areas of Germany indubitably German. The reopening of the German border so that Germans may again establish cultural contacts with the world is urged." Shepard Stone

+ N Y Times p7 D 7 '47 400w

"Excellent study." W. E. Jackson

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 N 29 '47 550w

PRIESTLEY, HERBERT INGRAM. Franciscan explorations in California; ed. by Lillian Estelle Fisher; with il. by Frederick W. Corson. 189p $5 Clark, A.H.

979.4 California—History 47-928

"Professor Priestley was one of the leading authorities on Spanish American history and at the time of his recent death was director of the Bancroft Library of the University of California. In this volume he presents as a unit the record of one aspect of Franciscan activity in California, namely, that of exploration, from the founding of San Diego in 1769 to the decline of the Mexican military, political and ecclesiastical power in Alta California about 1822. The story of the founding of the missions by the Franciscan fathers has been often told. . . These matters lie outside the scope of the present monograph, which has to do only with the extension of geographical knowledge." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 64:1050 S 3 '47 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 23 '47 100w

PRIESTLEY, JOHN BOYNTON. Jenny Villiers, a story of the theater. 184p $2.50 Harper

47-11508

A weary playwright takes an overdose of sedative and falls asleep in the green room of an old provincial theater, somewhere in England. In a dream he sees the crucial moments in the life of a lovely young actress: Jenny Villiers, dead a century ago. Her last message is about the importance of the theatre, and the playwright comes to himself full of new vigor and a new belief in his profession.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 180:105 D '47 360w

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

"Enchanting bit of whimsy."

Cath World 166:286 D '47 120w

Kirkus 15:438 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Fascinating story of the theatre presented in a novel and charming way. . . Quaint, enchanting tale which is bound to please anyone who has a yen for the supernatural, the theatre or just a bewitching, alluring heroine. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 D 12 '47 210w

"This story within a story could easily be translated in terms of the theater. The device he uses is not new, but still highly effective. . . . One may well believe that only a playwright, and one who like Priestley, often concerns himself with two scenes at once, could so blend with the present the playhouse of the past." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
N 2 '47 650w

"Mr. Priestley (believe it or not) has trotted out the Green Room Ghost for this one, and lets the critter slip through his fingers, like so much ectoplasm. . . . At first, we mistook this slender volume for the scenario of a play Mr. Priestley planned to write later. As we turned the last page we doubted if even the Fabulous Invalid could stand the shock." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p24 N 2 '47 160w
New Yorker 23:110 N 1 '47 80w

"Here is a direct, loving tribute to the everlasting glory of the theatre. Purely and simply, it is for the stagestruck who must or should be legion." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 D 13 '47 350w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage
Spec 179:752 D 12 '47 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 13 '47
500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:176 D '47

PRIME, JOHN HENRY. Investment analysis. 442p $4.65 Prentice-Hall

332.6 Securities. Investments. Financial statements 46-8531

"Designed for both the student of investing and the investor himself, this comprehensive text is divided into two parts—the nature of investments, and the analysis of corporate financial statements. Under these broad headings, the author presents a wealth of useful information about various types of securities; market operation; investment mathematics; federal, state, and municipal bonds; the income statement and balance sheet; surplus and reserves; maintenance and depreciation; etc." Management R

"This volume, as the title would indicate, is factual and practical in its approach. . . . If this volume is intended for a textbook, it is particularly well suited for that purpose; the author has incorporated a list of appropriate review questions and assignments at the end of each chapter and has also given a useful list of sources and other practical information in the appendices. Moreover, in the opinion of the reviewer, this book on investment analysis problems has even greater significance than would a text and, because of its encyclopedic character, should be kept for ready reference by all financial libraries, investors, and economists generally." Lucile Bagwell

Ann Am Acad 252:144 J1 '47 390w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:815 My 15 '47 30w

Management R 36:240 Ap '47 30w

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY. Department of economics and social institutions. Industrial relations section. Wages under national and regional collective bargaining. See Lester, R. A.

PRITCHETT, VICTOR SAWDON. It may never happen, and other stories. 182p $2.50 Reynal 47-2727

Collection of fourteen short stories by the English author who is assistant literary editor of The New Statesman and Nation.

"The real weakness here is the heartlessness and distorted, night-marish portrayal of humanity. The author knows how to write, but he abuses his careful talent for irony by inflating his caricatures to the size of unwieldy, over-blown cartoons." Elizabeth Johnson

— + Commonweal 46:97 My 9 '47 450w

"I can think of nothing published in the last year that can compare with the best stories in V. S. Pritchett's new book. . . . The writer has a delightful gift for sensuous communication, for the picture, for textures, for precise gesture. His characters are identified by an abundance of exact idiom and physical characteristics, with just that touch of the peculiar that recognizes them as individuals." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 116:28 Je 2 '47 330w

"These fourteen stories are tenuous, cerebral, for the most part oblique. But on the other hand there is a story in this volume, 'The Fly in the Ointment,' that is as cruel as anything you have read in the best of De Maupassant. As cruel? That is certainly the wrong word. As kind!" Kenneth Fearing

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Mr 23 '47 550w

"The most impressive signs of virtue in the short stories of V. S. Pritchett are honesty and fullness of effect. These two attributes set the fourteen pieces collected in 'It May Never Happen' considerably above the standard level of contemporary short fiction. Most of the stories of our time suffer either from an openly artificial and rather silly contrivance or from a kind of fragmentary, inconclusive sketchiness. In Mr. Pritchett's work nothing seems faked and everything seems complete." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '47 550w

"The collection is an uneven one, but at least two of the tales—'The Saint' and 'The Fly in the Ointment'—come very near to perfection." New Yorker 23:118 Ap 12 '47 100w

"A precisely reported satire of English middle-class life, often funny, always vividly drawn, sometimes approaching the atmosphere of Dickens in the portrayal of humped-backed clerks and the damp English mercantile world." W. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '47
110w

+ Springf'd Union p11 Ag 20 '47 90w
Time 49:109 Ap 7 '47 650w

PRITCHETT, VICTOR SAWDON. Living novel. 252p $2.75 Reynal 47-11013

823.04 English fiction

"The invasion of Poland found Mr. Pritchett, British editor, short-story writer, and essayist, in the midst of writing a novel. The war put a stop to that. 'Without leisure or freedom to write what I wanted,' says he, 'I could at least read what I wanted, and I turned to those remarkable men and women: the great novelists of the past, those who are called the standard novelists.' From time to time he published his views on his reading in The New Statesman and Nation. Collected under the title, 'The Living Novel,' the thirty-two essays were brought out last year in England and are now first made available in an American edition." N Y Times

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

"These essays are unpretentious and pleasant to read. They are written creatively as well as critically. Pritchett escapes the bright superficiality and the complacency of which Connolly is sometimes guilty. He lacks Orwell's energy, however, and too much restraint makes parts of the book seem rather slight." R. L. Weaver

+ Canadian Forum 27:46 My '47 240w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"This is a wise, witty, and exciting book, which should start many readers on journeys of rediscovery of their own." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 47:236 D 12 '47 490w

Kirkus 15:519 S 15 '47 100w

"Possibly it would be more rewarding to hear these literary essays read aloud than to read them for one self. . . . [The author's] comments on writers and their writings are fresh, witty and sufficiently compelling to make one want to read or to reread the book under discussion." F. W. Stewart

Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 130w

New Repub 117:28 N 24 '47 430w

PRITCHETT, V. S.—Continued

"Mr. Pritchett neither squanders nor invests his intellectual treasure, but uses it as a means of bringing books and real life into touch with one another. The Living Novel is thus a singularly exact title. . . Mr. Pritchett is the picturesque traveller, the William Gilpin of literary criticism. He plays with the idea of moving a plantation or levelling a hill-top; the unexpected neatness of a ruin makes him digress; he is a tireless climber after views. Above all, having enjoyed the diversity of the journey, he carries both the enjoyment and the differing airs of the country into his own prose." Alan Pryce-Jones

+ New Statesman & Nation 33:13 Ja 4 '47
1900w

"The quest that inspired Mr. Pritchett's book has yielded other, and better, quarry than the intended one. Except by diligent inference his readers are unlikely to discover 'what a good novel ought to be.' But they would be ungracious, indeed, if they complained of the fare he sets before them. For 'The Living Novel' provides an invigorating series of fresh, often brilliant, insights into what has made certain novels live." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
O 26 '47 650w

"Since Mr. Pritchett wrote only of what he felt like reading, and felt no compulsion to treat his novelists exhaustively or according to any fixed scheme, his book has the virtue of being almost continuously interesting—and Mr. Pritchett has the joy of saying what comes into his head. If the collection has a vice, it is that the author skips (like the trochee in the old rhyme) from tray to tray—offering tidbits to his followers, but rarely pausing long enough to assuage anyone's hunger for more of the same. But the aim was to write an amusing and edifying glossary rather than a dull encyclopedia of fiction, and, in the phrase of Norton and Rushton, Pritchett's gloss is our gain." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p3 O 12 '47 1000w

"I read the book just after dipping into Saintsbury and was surprised that these more or less casual sketches should sometimes seem more illuminating than the work of the professional critic. Mr. Pritchett has the advantage of being a writer of fiction himself, and he is able to divine intentions and to appreciate effects in a way that is not always possible for the mere consumer of books. And though he is not so accomplished a writer as E. M. Forster or Virginia Woolf, he is sometimes a good deal more interesting than these other novelist-critics are." Edmund Wilson

+ New Yorker 23:105 N 1 '47 550w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 23 '47
320w

"Among the English critics, V. S. Pritchett stands about half way between Cyril Connolly and George Orwell. Not quite so afflicted by futility as the Menckenesque editor of Horizon, not so deeply enmeshed in economic turmoil as the London spokesman of the working class, Pritchett is an almost classical example of the 'liberal' mind in letters. Yet, with both feet firmly planted in the columns of the New Statesman and Nation, he has marked off his position with authority and grace. . . Fluent, witty, Pritchett's criticism is reminiscent of The New Yorker school." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R of Lit 30:20 O 11 '47 600w

"He brings off with complete success what he sets out to do: to see his subjects without preconceived notions, with the freshness with which one greets the new and exciting; and he so communicates his excitement that one's immediate impulse after reading him is to dash off and re-read, or read for the first time, the novels of Richardson, Scott, George Eliot, Arthur Morrison or Verga." Walter Allen

+ Spec 177:680 D 20 '46 900w

Time 50:118 O 13 '47 650w

"Mr. Pritchett has the gift of coming at once to good terms with his readers. He is not a button-holing essayist, he is not over-anxious to confide acumen, a vivacious taste or scrupulous browsing; he is neither too clever nor too warm-hearted. He is that rare being, the man of balanced sensibility, with a mind particularly open to the unexpected echo which good books of the past strike off our own time."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p564 N 16 '46
300w

PROCTOR, ROBERT VIDETTO, and WHITE, THOMAS LESTER. Rock tunneling with steel supports; with an introduction to tunnel geology by Karl Terzaghi. 271p il $2.50 Commercial shearing and stamping co, Youngstown 1, Ohio

625.13 Tunnels and tunneling 46-4612

"The first section of this book deals with types of rocks, mechanical and chemical defects of rock strata and rocks, the estimation of loads on tunnel supports under various rock conditions, and methods of forecasting rock pressures and hazardous rock conditions. The second and third sections treat in detail the selection and design of steel tunnel supports, and the fourth section is frankly a catalogue of steel tunnel supports and accessories manufactured by the Commercial Shearing and Stamping Company. The work is intended for engineers and contractors engaged in tunnel building. It is an excellent example of the type of manufacturer's literature that makes a contribution to its subject." N Y New Tech Bks

"The book contains a great deal of practical information on the general principles involved in supporting the roofs of tunnels with specific examples of the use of steel ribs and lagging."

+ Eng N 138:95 F 6 '47 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1333 O 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

PROKOSCH, FREDERIC. Chosen poems. 81p $2 Doubleday

811 47-2987

"Mr. Prokosch is already well known as the author of several books of original poems and translations, and of a number of novels. The present volume is a selection from his earlier poetry, together with some recent pieces. It is divided into several sections, Lyrics, Elegies, Landscapes and Legends, prefaced by a Prologue that was published earlier under the title 'The Assassins' and concluding with a long Ode." N Y Times

"Anyone who has read Prokosch's novels will recognize the characteristic note; a lyric beauty, a sense of tragedy, a fluid emotion, and above all a sense of things happening in a dream. This is a new note in English poetry—if it technically is not the best, it is in substance both good and fresh, and all Prokosch readers and many others will enjoy it."

Kirkus 14:632 D 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by Gerald McDonald

Library J 72:322 F 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Je 8 '47 400w

"They are the product of a talent given to a rich but too facile lyricism, anticipated in the Prologue, and are, in more ways than one, repetitious. The word 'fire' recurs so often that instead of blazing and burning it knocks on the ear with the sound of a dead clinker, and the exclamation 'O' dots the pages as it does the chatter of a romantic schoolgirl. The device of repetition is a useful one but readily exhausted, and Mr. Prokosch abuses it again and again. . . His verse suffers from a tendency to become verbose, literary, soft and damp. This is the more regrettable because Mr. Prokosch is a sensitive and gifted lyricist, perfectly aware of the moral foulness and the anguish that are the hallmark of our time." Babette Deutsch

N Y Times p12 Mr 30 '47 500w

"Displays a verbal sweetness so thick and fluid that everything floats in it like preserved fruit in syrup." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 23:116 My 3 '47 50w

"I opened Frederic Prokosch's collection with pleasant anticipation. If by the end of my reading I experienced some dismay at faults I had not expected, nevertheless there are enough fine poems in the book to set it very high." Robert Hilley

— + Sat R of Lit 30:24 J1 5 '47 600w

"This collection is doubly interesting, for its intrinsic worth, and as an example of the typical modern mode. The lyricism of Prokosch is the lyricism of that modern being, the thinking poet. What is sung is sung beautifully and what is thought is very up to date."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:243 S '47 170w

PROSKAUER, JULIEN J. The dead do not talk. 198p $2 Harper

133.9 Spiritualism 46-7977

The author, past national president of the Society of American Magicians, who has been an investigator of spiritist frauds for some time, continues the account of his investigations begun in Spook Crooks. Includes some case histories. Index.

Kirkus 14:272 Je 1 '46 90w

"Here are further entertaining and irritating stories of the exploitation of the credulous by the irresponsible. The author tells how to catch a medium, how to unhaunt a haunted house and how the racketeers work a hostile town, in spite of the police." Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 D 29 '46 700w

"Whoever has been fascinated by the occult should be amused by Mr. Proskauer's exposé of a very worldly side of the supernatural." A. F.

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 5 '47 220w

PROUDFIT, FAIRFAX THROCKMORTON, and ROBINSON, CORINNE HOGDEN. Nutrition and diet therapy; a textbook of dietetics. 9th ed 782p il $3.75 Macmillan

613.2 Nutrition. Diet in disease Med46-153

"This edition has been revised through condensation; yet it has been enriched by inclusion of the newest findings of research laboratory and clinical medicine. Reduction of the pages from 1069 to 782 was accomplished by use of a more concise style and elimination of needless illustrations. A chapter on Safeguarding the Food Supply has been added to rearranged Section I. Nutrition in Special Conditions is the new title of Section II. . . Diet Therapy, Section III, completely rearranged and condensed, shows the influence of the trend in modern hospitals and clinics toward fewer special diets. Section IV deals with the practical application of nutrition in elementary cookery." (J Home Econ) Index.

"This ninth edition of a well known nursing text has a number of new features to enhance its value for students in schools of nursing, and as a reference book for graduate nurses and dietitians." H. R. Sandstead

+ Am J Pub Health 37:607 My '47 180w

"The book is a thoroughgoing, practical, clearly expressed text for student nurses and food and nutrition majors." Euclid Smith

+ J Home Econ 39:170 Mr '47 250w

PROUDFIT, MRS ISABEL (BOYD). James Fenimore Cooper; il. by Robert Doremus. 208p $2.50 Messner

B or 92 Cooper, James Fenimore—Juvenile Literature 47-288

Fictionized biography of James Fenimore Cooper, who began his writing on a dare, and rose to fame as a novelist of the American frontier and the sea. For grades seven to nine. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:193 F 15 '47

Kirkus 14:392 Ag 15 '46 80w

"Cannot compare in usefulness to the Bobbs-Merrill series. Print excellent. Black-and-white illustrations attractive. Main use of the book will be with high-school age boys and girls needing background material on this author." C. W. Field

Library J 72:229 F 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 19 '47 210w

"His was a rich, well-balanced life. It is well told here." M. G. D.

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 F 15 '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:58 Mr '47

PROUTY, MRS OLIVE (HIGGINS). Home port. 284p $2.75 Houghton

47-3618

Murray Vale was a frustrated individual because he had lived so long in the shadow of a clever brother. "I am nothing except the brother of my brother," was the way he expressed it to his mother. A drowning accident at a summer camp gave him an idea; Murray Vale disappeared and Joe Jones, guide, took his place. With the chance to stand on his own feet, his reformation began, and with the help of a fine woman, he proved himself not the coward he thought, but a hero.

Booklist 43:359 J1 15 '47

"This is not a heavy, 'psychological' novel. The events of Murray Vale's life as a 'fugitive' are dramatic and fast-moving, and are the causative factors in his character development. It is probably this author's best work." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 8 '47 270w

"Second string Prouty, not measuring up to the really sound psychological novel, Now, Voyager. . . A readable enough yarn, but superficial and unimportant."

Kirkus 15:197 Ap 1 '47 100w

"Now and then the long arm of coincidence is wrenched; but the author must be allowed that privilege. 'Home Port' has plot and point." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 My 25 '47 170w

"Readers interested in the psychic blossoming of an underdog should find Murray's history entertaining. The reason for his disappearing seems a bit thin—but perhaps not to a neurotic. Life at the camp into which he dropped without a past is as diverting as his somewhat standard romance." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p16 Je 8 '47 230w

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 J1 '47

PROVINES, MARY VIRGINIA. Liz'beth Ann's goat; il. by Grace Paull. 40p $2 Viking

47-31382

Liz'beth Ann wanted a goat for Christmas and no amount of argument could change her idea. This read-aloud book shows in prose and picture what went before and after Liz'beth Ann got her wish.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p17A D 3 '47 50w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p12 D 9 '47 180w

Kirkus 15:466 S 1 '47 80w

"The incidents leading up to the actual arrival of the goat are amusing, more so to an adult, perhaps, than to a child. . . A read-aloud book for five- to seven-year-olds. Pleasant but not essential." E. A. Groves

Library J 72:1619 N 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 D 21 '47 100w

"Grace Paull's colorful illustrations add lots of charm to a very engaging story for 4 to 7 year olds." R. A. Gordon

+ N Y Times p50 D 7 '47 140w

Reviewed by Wilhelmina Harper

San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 100w

"Grace Paull has been especially happy in the points that she selects for illustration."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 40w

Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

PRUITT, ALAN, pseud. See Rose, A. E.

PRYOR, WILLIAM CLAYTON. Lazy gardener; il. by Jessie Robinson. 226p $3 Longmans

635.9 Gardening Agr47-198

A philosophical gardener, with a penchant for using the common names for plants, describes a year in the garden as he sees it. He discusses everything from planning your garden in bed, to tools, vegetables, herbs, flowers, shrubs, and landscaping.

Reviewed by C. R. Everitt
Atlantic 179:154 Ap '47 30w

Booklist 43:342 Jl 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 5 '47 360w

"A beguiling sort of gardening book, but misleading—if one really thinks it will chart the way to lazy gardening. What it comes down to is that an ardent gardener may find short cuts—here or elsewhere—but will use the time only to do something else, to make the garden bigger and better."

+ Kirkus 15:114 F 15 '47 150w

"Unfortunately, the bits of gardening wisdom offered are almost hidden in a maze of chatty verbosity in the form of dialogues. One might, with considerable truth, contend that the author is as much a protagonist of hazy writing as he is of lazy gardening." E. C. Hall

Library J 72:461 Mr 15 '47 70w

"While his book is a glorified gardener's calendar based on personal experience, he uses all the new gardening tricks, some so new that the reader finds many a lode of unexpected nuggets. Besides various planting charts for flowers and vegetables, he suggests shrub and vine to provide both food and nesting material for birds. Most valuable of all are plants to prevent erosion." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ap 20 '47 320w

Reviewed by O. S. Stull
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47 170w

PUBLIC relations directory and yearbook, 1945 [ed. by Karl E. Ettinger]. (V 1) 860p per year incl. suppl $15 Pub. relations directory & yearbook, inc, 82 Beaver st, N.Y. 5

659.111 Publicity—Directories (45-10347)

"The book is a combination of a handbook of information on public relations methods and a directory of agencies in the field. The first half is devoted to a miscellaneous collection of articles and data selected to aid the public relations staff. An editorial section of some fifty-seven articles by specialists discusses the various types and aspects of the work. A detailed calendar of featured weeks and days, birthdays, memorial days and other dated events provides suggestions for publicity; and the ethical codes of such professions as the National Association of Broadcasters and the American Society of Newspaper Editors are included. The directory, which comprises the latter half of the volume, gives the names and addresses of the public relations officers of a wide variety of organizations and institutions, including advertising agencies, research organizations, business firms, chambers of commerce, trade associations and professional organizations, schools, colleges and other educational institutions, federal, state and city offices, and others. Libraries are included among charity, religious and other non-profit organizations. Also listed are the editors of house magazines, radio commentators, newspaper syndicates and picture services, and services for the public relations profession. Arrangement is by type of organization, then alphabetically by state." Subscription Bks Bul

"There is evidence of haste and expediency in the arrangement and it is to be hoped that later editions will be more carefully prepared. . . The alphabetical index includes personal and firm names, with group headings, such as Advertising agencies, in large type.

Some of the entries are not well selected. . . The Directory seems to have been compiled from questionnaires sent to subscribers, business firms and other organizations and coverage is extremely uneven. For example only two advertising agencies are listed for the entire state of Ohio. Later editions may, of course, include many more entries. The book does contain useful information, however, particularly in the calendar of events section. Public Relations Directory and Yearbook is recommended for large public libraries having public relations officers or serving business and industrial firms."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 17:34 Jl '46 550w

PUDNEY, JOHN. Edna's fruit hat, and other stories [Eng title: It breathed down my neck]. 211p $2.50 Harper

47-30476

Sixteen short stories by an English author. Most of the stories have touches of fantasy and all are quietly humorous.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 24 '47 250w

"A collection of short stories . . . which combine narrative value and humor, fantasy closely allied to sobriety."

+ Kirkus 15:320 Je 15 '47 90w

"Connaisseurs of quiet humour will find stories to their liking in the collection." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 20 '46 110w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall
New Statesman & Nation 32:232 S 28 '46 70w

"Not all of Mr. Pudney's people are subject to odd experiences. But when the stories all are told and a choice is made between the normal people and the odd folk there isn't enough difference to put between two slices of bread. That in itself would be odd were it not for Mr. Pudney, who has the trick of making everything and everybody seem both odd and normal at the same time. If these sixteen tales are a fair sample of Mr. Pudney's work, we should long before have had his books in this country. He is a graceful, witty, mischievous narrator." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 24 '47 550w

"In a generally humorous writer like John Pudney (poet, and one-time RAF pilot) this fantasy has at the same time a curiously everyday tone about it that occasionally suggests the stories of 'Saki'—minus the sheer prankishness." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p12 S 14 '47 700w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '47 250w

"Most of the gently amusing stories in Author Pudney's book are prettily braided from the same wisps of fancy [as the title story]. For readers who find all whimsy emetic, Edna's Fruit Hat is no tonic. Others may find the whimsy effectively laced with the author's astringent loathing for British lower-middle-class gentility (the stories are laid in unspecified small towns in England). For Author Pudney deftly uses fantasy to show what devastating discomfort the intrusion of improbability can cause in the lives of people who mistake the prejudices of their social group for the laws of nature."

Time 50:97 Ag 25 '47 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p477 O 5 '46 420w

PULESTON, WILLIAM DILWORTH. Influence of sea power in World war II. 310p maps $5 Yale univ. press

940.545 World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations. Sea power 47-30931

"This is Captain Mahan brought down to date. Captain Puleston, U.S.N. (Retired) . . . in the present work applies to World War II the principles which Mahan developed and illustrated by his analysis of the dominant influence of sea power. . . He views air power as a subsidiary rather than a coordinate branch. Fast torpedo boats, then submarines, threatened to end the dominance of the big ships, but both proved most useful as auxiliaries. So, he holds, it is with airplanes. . . Battleships and overseas bases, he believes, will remain necessities as long as there is a possibility of war. But this argument, though strongly stated, occupies only a small place in the book. The bulk of it is a detailed, and doubtless a technically accurate, history of naval operations 1939-45." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by Henry Reiff

Am Pol Sci R 41:1250 D '47 450w

+ Christian Century 64:1145 S 24 '47 220w

Kirkus 15:448 Ag 15 '47 150w

"The material is well organized and presented in a succinct though not very stimulating fashion. Discussion of the future influence of the atomic bomb adds interest." Clarence Gorchels

+ Library J 72:1191 S 1 '47 120w

"'Not until the oceans cease to be the highways of the world will sea power lose its influence,' is the author's thesis, and demonstration of its truth is well formulated with abundance of evidence. . . Most of the book is devoted to naval campaigns and major engagements, their reasons and their results. For this alone Captain Puleston deserves thanks for giving such a remarkably clear and accurate account. Apart from argument, he is an outstanding man as historian, informed and readable, capable of displaying an entire seascape without distracting attention by following too many waves. Whether as history or as special pleading (but with no ax to grind), the volume is a credit to sound knowledge and professional ability." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 28 '47 550w

"Captain Puleston here attempts to carry the work of Mahan down through World War II. He has read the old grand master of sea power so thoroughly that he even produces a reasonable facsimile of the style of the original, including sentences beginning with 'And' to carry the clauses that cannot somehow be squeezed any other way. The only difficulty is that he lacks both his model's power of fearless analysis and his narrative clarity. . . In addition to being unoriginal, the book is superficial and confines itself to the safest, most official treatment of the safe, official topics." Fletcher Pratt

- N Y Times p12 O 5 '47 600w

"The book does bring Mahan up to date but it adds nothing new. Nonetheless, by reemphasizing the importance of sea power, Captain Puleston is rendering his country a service. When there is no longer a ship afloat and when all intercourse between nations is in the air, it will be time to reexamine Mahan. Until then Mahan and his disciple, Puleston, can be exonerated for urging their nation along a path of wisdom proved by the events of centuries and so recently validated again for those of us who are apt to forget." Henry Salomon

Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 18 '47 650w

PUMA, FERNANDO. Modern art looks ahead. 66p il $5 Beechhurst press

709.04 Art, Modern 47-1752

An analysis of the trends, problems, and future of modern art, set forth in question and answer form. Includes 122 halftone plates and five plates in full color, illustrating the work of modern artists. Index.

"Puma is full of indignation and much of it with good reason. He surges with ideas, feeling and thinking on a great many subjects that affect the artist and the world he lives in. A young and vigorous artist could not help but be thrilled and stimulated by the vitality with which Puma 'takes his hair down' on a broad range of controversial subjects. . . If this book is widely read and discussed, and the underlying rightness of its approach understood, many of the forces of misunderstanding which tend to stifle and frustrate the contemporary artist could be lessened. It is unfortunate that such an important message is not cast in a more solid form so that it might carry additional conviction." Richard Florsheim

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Mr 2 '47 270w

"The author is too ready to pigeon-hole some artists, too ready to say who is great and who is not great in the contemporary field. The book, nevertheless, should prove a valuable guide for the interested layman."

B. R. Rauh

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 Ap 12 '47 300w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 120w

PUMPHREY, FRED HOMER. Electrical engineering; essential theory and typical applications. 369p il $5.35 Prentice-Hall

621.3 Electric engineering 46-8563

"Text in electrical engineering for students specializing in other fields and for engineers in all fields needing a knowledge of electrical theory. Review of important physical concepts, assuming a general knowledge of physics, their typical industrial applications of electricity developed in recent years. Among the subjects are discussions of electron tubes and circuits, study of amplifiers as applied to strain gauges and of oscillators as applied to high frequency heating units." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:228 F 1 '47 70w

"Not written for electrical engineers, but rather for the engineering student specializing in other fields. . . The book will be a good one for any technical person who wants to know what electrical engineering is about." James Stokley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 F 23 '46 150w

PUNER, MRS HELEN WALKER. Freud, his life and his mind; a biography. 360p $4 Howell, Soskin

B or 92 Freud, Sigmund 47-11808

"Helen Puner's life of Freud is less a biography than what used to be called a 'psychograph.' It is satisfied with relatively little factual material and does not go for its data beyond the sources that are known to almost any student of Freud—Freud's own significant but sparse statements about himself, his analysis of his own dreams in 'Traumdeutung' ('Interpretation of Dreams'), and the scant and usually superficial accounts of a few disciples, patients and visitors. The greater part of the work is given over to the author's speculative attempt to form, on the basis of these facts, a theory of the hidden springs of Freud's character." (N Y Times) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:183 Ja 15 '48

"Some of her interpretations are as open to question as some of Freud's own might be, but they are absorbing and impressive, and quite possibly correct. . . There have been other fragmentary memoirs on Freud, but this is the first authoritative and profoundly perceptive biography of the man who more than any other has shaped the thinking of the Western World in this century. It is a brilliant performance, done without fear but doubtless invoking a variety of reproaches." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 7 '47 1350w

"Like so many moderns, Mrs. Puner dislikes the masculine and heroic character. What dismays her in Freud is the firmness of his mind and the declared force and commitment of his life. . . Nothing in the man seems to her so exasperating as his belief that he was right, although no one was more ready than Freud to revise cherished ideas if the evidence controverted them. And no one, on Mrs. Puner's own showing, could have had a clearer notion of the limitations of psychoanalysis." Lionel Trilling

N Y Times p4 D 14 '47 1000w

PUNER, H. W.—Continued

"Mrs. Puner's reasoning is ingenious but not always entirely convincing. Her book, though, is biographically informative, and her style is uncluttered and easy to read."

+ — New Yorker 23:142 D 13 '47 80w

"A serious and scholarly biography." W. W. H.

+ Spring'd Republican p8B D 21 '47 700w

PUNSHON, ERNEST ROBERTSON. It might lead anywhere. 290p $2.50 Macmillan 47-956

Detective story.

Kirkus 14:561 N 1 '46 60w

"Mr. Punshon makes a speciality of these detective birds nests. It would be unfair to call them boring; but they are the most exhausting crimes I ever met. And when you breast the tape alongside Bobby Owen you may drop dead beat." Ralph Partridge

New Statesman & Nation 32:469 D 21 '46 80w

"Mr. Punshon has kept the Bobby stories fresh and entertaining for goodness knows how long, and that goes for this performance, the title of which comes from our hero's opinion that in a murder case you never know." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 F 2 '47 230w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 F 16 '47 180w

"Just right for the admirers of the roast-beef-and-ale school of detection."

+ New Yorker 22:100 F 8 '47 80w

"Good characterization, gentle humor, logical working out somehow can't save this from seeming ponderous."

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47 70w

"Best British brand."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 F 8 '47 50w

PURCELL, JOHN FRANCIS. Class report. 313p $3 Vanguard

47-12105

Chronicles the experiences of an American war correspondent who meets several members of his own class at Harvard as he makes his beat around the various parts of the Pacific war theater.

Kirkus 15:404 Ag 1 '47 80w

"More instructive than many heavy tomes." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:1375 O 1 '47 80w

"Mr. Purcell has recorded his experiences in the objective and disciplined manner of a conscientious reporter. His description of a low-level bombing attack on Rabaul, an amphibious assault on Munda, and of Guy Waters teaching aircraft identification to naval pre-flight cadets are firmly grounded on authentic technical detail." Spencer Klaw

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 N 23 '47 500w

Reviewed by James MacBride

N Y Times p24 N 23 '47 300w

New Yorker 23:140 N 29 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 16 '47 800w

"Mr. Purcell's is one of those books of fiction in which imagination and fact seem to be mixed in about equal amounts; both are convincing. What's more, 'Class Report' includes an undeniably factual account of the ways and means of General 'Dugout Doug' MacArthur, an expose that has been too long in coming." Merle Miller

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 D 6 '47 430w

PURDY, CLAIRE LEE (STEWART) (MRS RUDOLF KOHL). Gilbert and Sullivan; masters of mirth and melody; il. by Eric Godal. 276p $2.50 Messner

927.8 Gilbert, Sir William Schwenck—Juvenile literature. Sullivan, Sir Arthur Seymour—Juvenile literature 47-30159

A combination of biography of Gilbert and Sullivan, with synopses of their successful comic operas. Includes numerous quotations with music, and descriptions of stage sets and costumes. For high school age. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:227 Mr 15 '47

Kirkus 15:131 Mr 1 '47 100w

"Miss Purdy has written another successful, delightful biography. . . . Gay snatches of melody and verse add a lively charm and will delight the reader. . . . Recommended for ages 12-16." S. J. Robinson

+ Library J 72:533 Ap 1 '47 80w

"It pulls together much information and shapes it with commendable skill into a story that marches straight ahead—by no means easy when the two men concerned were by no means always in step." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 My 11 '47 360w

"A fascinating story that anyone from 12 on will read with pleasure and amazement. . . . Amateur groups in schools and clubs who produce the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas will especially profit by the new understanding they will gain of Gilbert's devastating verses." Virginia Mathews

+ N Y Times p18 Ag 3 '47 200w

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:101 Je '47

PUTNAM, BRENDA. Animal X-rays; a skeleton key to comparative anatomy. 96p il $3.50 Putnam

743.6 Anatomy, Artistic. Anatomy, Comparative 47-4608

Drawings showing the bony structure of twenty-two mammals and ten birds, with superimposed line drawings showing the shape of each. Opposite the drawings are discussions about the animals. The purpose is to give young people an introduction to comparative anatomy, so that they may understand "how amazingly Nature can carry one great theme triumphantly thru countless variations." (Intro) For junior and senior high schools.

Booklist 44:75 O 15 '47

Reviewed by V. K. Fitch

Library J 72:1114 Ag '47 80w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét z

New Yorker 23:153 D 6 '47 80w

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER. Death Valley handbook. 84p $2 Duell

917.9487 Death valley, California 47-31474

Handbook which supplements the author's Death Valley and Its Country (Book Review Digest 1946). It contains monthly climatological records for 1936-1945, lists of plants, rocks, birds, and mammals, and highlights of Death Valley's history.

Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

"Though necessarily of restricted interest, it is a uniquely valuable reference work in its field."

+ Commonweal 47:269 D 19 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:416 Ag 1 '47 50w

PUTNAM, GEORGE PALMER. Mariner of the North; the life of Captain Bob Bartlett. 246p $3.50 Duell

B or 92 Bartlett, Robert Abram. Arctic regions 47-11306

Life history of Captain Bob Bartlett, one of the explorers with Peary on his successful expedition to the North Pole. Beginning in 1926 Bartlett made twenty annual cruises in his schooner the Effie M. Morrissey, carrying scientific expeditions to Greenland and Baffin Island. He died in 1946. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

"Captain Bob possessed a highly picturesque but most lovable personality, and his biographer has been successful in presenting this to his readers." W. H. Hobbs

+ Geog R 38:173 Ja '48 500w

Kirkus 15:388 Jl 15 '47 130w

"Authentic, Grade-A adventure." H. A. Lancour

+ Library J 72:1191 S 1 '47 130w

"Here is a book about a real man, even a great man, within his limitations, and if it does not make your blood tingle and your eyes light up, yes, and even give you an impulse to cast off everything and set off for the far places, you must be moribund indeed." Frank Merwin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13
Ja 18 '48 900w

"Though Mr. Putnam, in his easy, conversational style, gives an admirable sketch of the life of Cap'n Bob, he also ranges through the vast field of literature on polar exploration and opens wide vistas for those who wish to investigate that subject in detail." Robert Dinsmore

+ N Y Times p65 N 9 '47 230w

PUTNAM, SAMUEL. Paris was our mistress; memoirs of a lost and found generation. 264p $3 Viking

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. Paris—Social life and customs 47-3715

Memoirs of the American colony in Paris, especially Montparnasse, in the twenties and thirties, written by an observer of the "lost generation." Among the American expatriates participating in the picture are Gertrude Stein, Hemingway, Dos Passos, and Ezra Pound.

Booklist 43:357 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by William Peden

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 25 '47 370w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding

Commonweal 46:196 Je 6 '47 750w

"A very distinguished sidelight on the passing literary scene, perceptive, humorous, entertaining, written by a critic and editor who was one of the group of which he writes."

+ Kirkus 15:181 Mr 15 '47 140w

"Not a sentimental picture of Paris, it is rather an attempt to explain the reasons for the exodus and the return to the United States. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 120w

"Mr. Putnam's picture is uneven, crowded, gaudy, sorry and fascinating. There is a moving memoir of the author and his wife, snapshots, little gems of candid portraiture in color, terrifying gossip, comment on tragedy in many personal lives, outlines of much guerrilla warfare as a generation fought to find expression for their hopes, and power over the spirits of men." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
My 13 '47 1450w

"Mr. Putnam is not satisfied with merely setting down the facts of the pilgrimage to Montparnasse. His glimpses into the lives of the exiled greats and near-greats are interesting enough, and rewarding. The real value of this book lies in his attempts to search for the causes, both immediate and primary, of expatriation." F. J. Hoffman

+ N Y Times p3 My 18 '47 1100w

"Most of the book, which is less sentimental than Eliot Paul's The Last Time I Saw Paris, is fairly threadbare nostalgia, but the sections on the individuals who dominated the Left Bank scene—Ezra Pound, Hemingway, Picasso, Cocteau, and Aragon, among others—are fresh and animated."

+ New Yorker 23:120 My 3 '47 130w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 15 '47 120w

"There are portions of the book which sound perilously akin to the tittle-tattle of one of our gossip columnists, and to the reader who happens to have lived in Paris at that time these passages may prove interesting and amusing, but others may find them trivial and boring. . . The personality sketches in the fifth chapter and the 'Continental vignettes' in chapter seven form the most rewarding portion of the book. Here the author gives a convincing, though malicious, portrait of Ford Madox Ford, an amusing visit to the home of Gertrude Stein whose egotism is deftly brought out with uncton, and a somewhat flattering reminiscence of that very hard-boiled young man Ernest Hemingway. There is finally an ingenious, if not convincing apologia for Mr. Ezra Pound. In all of these sketches one is aware of Mr. Putnam's excellent reportorial instinct and experience and feels he has used both with good effect." R. E. Meyers

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ag 2 '47 950w

"Entertaining and analytic accounts of Cocteau, Hemingway, Picasso, Gertrude Stein, Pirandello; and an ingenious explanation of Ezra Pound's apostasy, as a kind of 'cracker-barrel philosopher.'"

+ Theatre Arts 32:70 Ja '48 80w

Time 49:108 My 12 '47 950w

PLYE, ERNEST TAYLOR. Home country. 472p $3.75 Sloane

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 47-30333

"This is Ernie Pyle's fifth book; that is, the fifth to appear between boards. By another reckoning it is his first, for it was written before the others. During the years 1935 to 1940, Ernie and That Girl who rode with him (his wife, Jerry) were crisscrossing North America in search of material for a daily newspaper column. In that period he turned out about a million and a half words. Not all of these are here, but an effort has been made to include his best-remembered writings of those years." (Foreword) Index.

Booklist 43:329 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by Thomas Daffron

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 1 '47 320w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 28 '47 90w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Commonweal 46:341 Jl 18 '47 280w

"A last salute to Ernie Pyle! The charm, the modesty, the homeliness, may tempt one to forget some other qualities. But no one should be permitted to forget that Pyle, who carefully cultivated the attitude of being a mouse, was a stubborn and tenacious man, not only one of the greatest reporters who ever lived, but a character solid with courage, integrity, a sense of justice and love for his fellow man." John Gunther

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
My 25 '47 1000w

"'Home Country' tells the story of five years of wandering across the continent, and throughout its pages the gentle spirit and keen perceptions of the author are constantly manifest. It combines autobiography with topical comment. It is full of folklore and Americana. With a simple approach Pyle at times becomes impressive in his descriptive passages, but he seems most at home when writing about people—the odd types which he seemed to find in every State he visited." Bruce Rae

+ N Y Times p4 Je 8 '47 1000w

Reviewed by William Hogan

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Je 1 '47 320w

"These columns, often composed when their author was harried by fatigue and hurried by newspaper deadlines, suffer somewhat in rounded and more permanent form. Yet the volume as a whole, whether this splendid reporter soliloquizes on death, on split infinitives, or on the wind that blows across the Midwest flatlands, is a superb source book of Americana, a valuable record of America and Americans, which easily surmounts its shortcomings."

PLYLE, E. T.—Continued

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:238 S '47 240w
Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

PYNE, MRS MABLE (MANDEVILLE). Little history of the wide world; il. by the author. [36p] $2.50 Houghton

909 History, Universal—Juvenile literature 47-3893

Using the same method as in her Little History of the United States (Book Review Digest 1940) the author here gives an overall view of the history of the world for ages seven to eleven. Many small pictures are used in the text, so that the story is told largely by the pictures, altho brief text accompanies the pictures.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p5 Ja 13 '48 150w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn BK 23:266 Jl '47 50w

"A book which will appeal to children of many ages and to adults as well. Recommended." N. L. Rathbun

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 60w

"This book is successful in the same way and to the same degree as her former work. Neither of these can do, or need to do, more than slip over the surface of history, leaving a series of memorable impressions. The chief value this book has is that, in doing so, it creates in a young mind the sense of continuity, of the steady pressure of age upon age, century upon century, yesterday upon today, today upon tomorrow, that is the life of history." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 8 '47 650w

"On the whole, a highly stimulating book for alert-minded youngsters of 7 to 11, and older ones who might dip into it for a refresher course." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p32 Je 8 '47 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:35 Jl 12 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 Jl '47

Q

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud., ed. Murder by experts. See Mystery writers of America

QUEEN, ELLERY, pseud of FREDERIC DANNAY and MANFRED LEE, ed. Queen's awards, 1947. 403p $3 Little

Short stories—Collections (46-8129)

Eighteen prize-winning short stories of crime and detection all of which have appeared this year in Ellery Queen's Mystery magazine. Biographical and bibliographical data on each author represented.

"Readers may disagree often enough with the judges but they will read all of the stories with interest and most of them with admiration observing with contentment their exceptional variety and steady competence." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week D 5 '47 480w
Kirkus 15:558 O 1 '47 80w

"A fine collection further adorned with biographical sketches and critical tail-pieces by the learned Ellery Queen, who, we sometimes think, knows more about the art of the whodunit than there is to know." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 23 '47 270w

"Altogether this is about the best collection of new detective tales that has come our way in a long, long time." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p50 N 30 '47 170w

"A slightly better than average collection for insomniacs."

+ New Yorker 23:144 N 29 '47 120w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p24 D 7 '47 170w

Sat R of Lit 30:88 D 6 '47 50w

QUENTIN, PATRICK, pseud. See Webb, R. W., and Wheeler, H. C.

QUIGG, JANE. Jenny Jones and Skid; pictures by Eloise Wilkin. 99p $2 Oxford

47-11385

Story of little seven-year old Jenny who spends a summer vacation in Vermont. For second and third grades.

"Eloise Wilkin has done the illustrations, which have a nice quality of humor and realism."

+ Kirkus 15:601 N 1 '47 100w

"Not essential, but an extra for the beginning reader." J. L. Lynch

Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 80w

"A 'really truly' story, whose words are within a six-year-old's grasp, it will help to make reading easier." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 26 '47 150w

"The author creates natural child-like situations that seven to nine year olds can understand and enjoy reading about. For the reader of this age, who wants a long story."

+ Wis Lib Bul 43:155 N '47

QUIMBY, CHESTER WARREN. John, the universal Gospel. 224p $2.75 Macmillan

226.5 Bible. New Testament—St John 47-3916

In his preface the author states his purpose is "to put before non-technical readers a well-rounded discussion of the main facts, findings and truths concerning the Fourth Gospel as set forth by present-day scholarship." The book gives the setting against which the Gospel was written and its essential purpose, and outlines the important elements in the message as delivered by John.

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

"Mr. Quimby has succeeded singularly well. He has already shown what he could do in this way, in his excellent Paul for Everyone; and no higher commendation could be given to this book on St. John than to say that it is up to that high standard." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 161:18 S 1 '47 150w

"A popular, accurate and readable account of John, the Universal Gospel... Clergymen and other Bible students prepared to accept the findings of Biblical scholarship will find this an illuminating and helpful book."

+ Kirkus 15:306 Je 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 17 '47 70w

QUINN, VERNON. Picture map geography of Asia; with maps and drawings by Frank Beaudouin. 122p $2.25 Lippincott

915 Asia—Description and travel 46-11838

"Interesting facts about the physical aspects, history, resources, industries, and people of the countries of Asia. Uniform in format and treatment with other titles in this series, the last of which was Picture map geography of the Pacific Islands. There are seven pictorial maps. Grades 4-7." Booklist

Booklist 43:121 D 15 '46

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p9 F 25 '47 160w

"Like Vernon Quinn's other pictorial geographies, this will be valuable supplementary aid in the schoolroom. The maps which show industries and crops afford great entertainment as well as much useful information."

+ Horn Bk 23:112 Mr '47 40w

Kirkus 14:347 Ag 1 '46 70w

"In spite of huge territory covered, author and illustrator have chosen the most significant, salient points. Designed to interest children in geography, but most adults would do well to digest material herein. Recommended for ages ten and up." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 72:167 Ja 15 '47 70w

QUIZ kids' book; stories and poems chosen by the Quiz kids; il. by Richard Dawson. 372p $2.50 Viking

808.8 Literature—Collections 47-11305

Anthology of stories, poems, jokes, and riddles chosen by the radio Quiz kids. There is a list of more favorites at the end of the book. Indexes.

"As would be expected, the selection is good; many libraries, however, will consider it merely a duplication of material. May serve as a stimulant to reading in places where there is an interest in the Quiz kids."

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

"The selections comprise a fine range of stories and poems not only of a high literary level, but with a healthy accent on humor. This book will make an excellent addition to the family library." B. J. Thompson

+ Cath World 166:237 D '47 50w

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6A N 19 '47 130w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p16 D 18 '47 270w

Kirkus 15:503 S 15 '47 170w

Sat R of Lit 30:62 N 15 '47 30w

R

RABER, BENEDICT FREDERICK, and HUTCHINSON, FRANCIS WILLIAM. Panel heating and cooling analysis. 208p $3.50 Wiley 697 Heating. Cooling 47-1700

"The book contains three fairly distinct although complementary parts. In the first part, the advantages and disadvantages of this method of heating and cooling are discussed in learned but non-technical terms; in the second, the design of heating and cooling panels is analyzed mathematically; and in the third, somewhat simpler procedures for design are presented. Except for the first part, which may be read by anyone who is interested, the work is definitely for persons with considerable training in mathematics and engineering. It is not intended for the practical installer of heating systems; and such topics as boilers, furnaces, controls, or even the practical construction of panels, are not treated." N Y New Tech Bks

Eng N 139:135 JI 10 '47 80w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:228 F 1 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:10, Ja '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:320 S '47 200w

RABL, SAMUEL SUPPLEE. Boat building in your own backyard. 192p il $5 Cornell maritime

623.8 Boat building 47-6994

"Practical book on how to build boats in your own back yard. Author tells woods to use, how to use tools, frame a boat, install the motor and gives good advice as 'be sure to have half enough money to purchase at least one-half of the material before any work is done.' Half of the book is devoted to 12 boat plans. No index. Illustrated." Library J

Booklist 44:179 Ja 15 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1616 N 15 '47 50w

"The author, a naval architect with considerable experience in magazine writing for hobby boat builders, presents his subject with skill and salty readability. While this handbook is designed, both in layout and in text, for the amateur, it sacrifices none of the fine points of professional boatbuilding construction accuracy... The text is punctuated with interesting anecdotes from the author's long experience as a boat-builder." R. S. Robbins

+ N Y Times p38 D 7 '47 220w

RADER, JESSE LEE. South of forty; from the Mississippi to the Rio Grande; a bibliography. 336p $10 Univ. of Okla press

016.976 Southwest—Bibliography 47-5360

A bibliography made up of almost 4000 titles of books about the area from the Mississippi to the Rio Grande. The books are listed alphabetically by author, and are numbered, and partially annotated. There is a subject index.

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 JI 20 '47 50w

"The field covered by Mr. Rader is immense in the sense of geographical extent and in its literature. One neither demands nor expects perfection in a survey of it, but one expects that in attempting an exhaustive bibliography an author should make the fullest use of the standard works already existing on his subject. Because Mr. Rader has not done this, and for other reasons, the catalogue he has produced is not a definitive bibliography of the great area 'South of Forty.'" L. C. Wroth

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 17 '47 1100w

RADKE, MARIAN JEANNETTE. Relation of parental authority to children's behavior and attitudes. 123p $2 Univ. of Minn.

136.7 Parent and child. Child study A46-6084

"The actual original research reported is based on a study of forty-three children of the nursery school and kindergarten at the University of Minnesota Institute of Child Welfare, and of their parents. Questionnaires, interviews, ratings, tests, experimental situations and projective techniques are all tried, and the results are reported in detail. The results perhaps extend our knowledge in this complex field and support the belief that parents still fail to recognize that the child, who like the parent is striving for power, is entitled to respectful treatment." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by K. M. Mauer

J Home Econ 39:362 Je '47 160w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:332 O 25 '47 120w

"The findings of this research on the nature and general trends of parental authority-disciplined patterns, as well as the meaning of these practices to children, will prove helpful to persons concerned with child development and parent education... While it is true that this research has not yielded 'answers' and that its statistical significance is open to question, the underlying point of view gives promise of a methodology that will lead to a greater knowledge and understanding of children." F. J. Estvan

School R 55:247 Ap '47 800w

"With generous documentation, thorough review of the literature, and the tedious detail and repetition all characteristic of the doctoral dissertation, this report of experimentation on the relation of parental authority to children's behavior is nonetheless interesting."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:77 Mr '47 140w

RADOS, WILLIAM. How to select better salesmen. 425p $5 Prentice-Hall

658.8 Salesmen

46-7645

"The President of the National Society of Sales Training Executives presents a usable plan, with basic charts, of the most important qualifications for salesmen, applicable to all types of business. Outlines, with many charts and examples, personnel problems of appraising existing groups, building up by effective recruiting, improving sales forces and how to interview. Chapters on aptitude testing are well covered." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:200 Mr 1 '47

"Practical, readable book." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. S. Schultz

Management R 36:231 Ap '47 380w

RAHV, PHILIP, ed. Discovery of Europe; the story of American experience in the Old World. 743p $5 Houghton

914 Europe—Description and travel. American literature—Collections 47-1223

A collection of letters, travel diaries, stories, chapters from novels, etc., in which Americans from Benjamin Franklin to Malcolm Cowley, have stated their discoveries about Europe and the Europeans. The selections are under the headings: Pilgrims extraordinary; The vaunted scene; War and revolution; and Between two wars.

"This anthology is a popular convenience on the subject of cultural interplay which will more and more be a stimulating experience for both general reader and students of European and American history." R. H. Heindel

+ Am Hist R 53:139 O '47 350w

Booklist 43:203 Mr 1 '47

"This is an extraordinarily stimulating book—a must reading for Americans and Europeans alike." Eric v. Kuehnelt-Leddihn

+ Chat World 165:375 Jl '47 900w

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week pl F 2 '47 1300w

Current Hist 12:372 Ap '47 90w

Reviewed by J. C. Ransom

Nation 164:368 Mr 29 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Dumas Malone

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 Mr 23 '47 900w

"Here is no broad inquiry into the discovery of Europe by America, but a narrow study of the repercussions of Europe on American intellectuals. . . . There is a tendency throughout to see more than seems to be there—to see, for example, in . . . Mark Twain's perfectly normal reaction to some of the frumpier of European culture some deep inadequacy in the American character. Yet these are minor matters. The book is a useful one, the selections on the whole are discriminating, and the comment judicious." H. S. Commager

+ — N Y Times p3 F 2 '47 1700w

"Mr. Rahv has written an interesting introduction, and his choices are good, except for the twentieth-century list, which seems a bit arbitrary. The Ring Lardner piece, for instance, is rather footling, there is no Fitzgerald, and the two excerpts from Thomas Wolfe are embarrassingly bad."

+ — New Yorker 22:78 F 1 '47 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p12 F 23 '47 80w

Reviewed by Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 30:17 Mr 8 '47 1000w

School & Society 66:80 Jl 26 '47 20w

"This book can be useful, in many ways, to the teacher of either American or World history. Students, even down to the junior high school level, will find many of the selections fascinating." R. A. Brown

+ Social Educ 11:286 O '47 420w

Reviewed by Dorothy Cathell

Social Studies 38:281 O '47 650w

"Some of the sharpest observation and writing about Europe has been done by U.S. visitors—diplomatic, literary or merely attentive to the ancestral scene. This big, intelligently edited book contains a selection of the best of it, from Benjamin Franklin to Gertrude Stein."

+ Time 49:100 F 3 '47 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:235 S '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:80 My '47

RAINE, WILLIAM MACLEOD. Cry murder. 256p $2 Phoenix

47-31383

Detective story.

"A bit of romance adds interest to an otherwise rather commonplace mystery." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p42 O 26 '47 130w

"All ingredients of good mystery present, but surprisingly sketchy handling and lugged-in-for-shock-effect climax rather spoil it."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 50w

RAISON, MILTON MICHAEL. Murder in a lighter vein. 246p $2.50 Murray & Gee

Detective story

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 14 '47 70w

N Y Times p19 Jl 27 '47 200w

"This latest exploit of Tony Woolrich, drama critic and detective, is in plot and writing simply down to Mr. Raison's standard; I list it only to warn you that this (to quote the jacket) 'intimate, behind-the-scenes tale of big-time radio' does not have even the virtue of reasonable accuracy in depicting the industry." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 90w

"Murder method is ingenious. Outside of that, story rambles rather aimlessly through Hollywood swamps of love, likker and intrigue."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

RALPH, PHILIP LEE. Sir Humphrey Mildmay: royalist gentleman; glimpses of the English scene, 1633-1652. 245p $4.50 Rutgers univ. press

914.2 Great Britain—Social life and customs. Mildmay, Sir Humphrey

"Social life in the early seventeenth century, in London and its environs, told by a very average country gentleman of the times, devoted mostly to the pursuit of idleness. The book reflects the economics of the period and some of the political chatter mixed in with family questions. The facts are quoted from the diary of Sir Humphrey, with the author's comments and explanations weaving the whole into a narrative." (Current Hist) Index.

Current Hist 13:164 S '47 70w

"An entertaining historical book. He has rightly refrained from printing the diary and account-books as they stand, for they would have been highly indigestible, but instead has woven out of them a realistic narrative."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 1 '47 800w

RAMUZ, CHARLES FERDINAND. When the mountain fell [tr. by Sarah Fisher Scott]. 221p $2.50 Pantheon bks.

47-11205

A novel based on historical incident—the fall of a huge avalanche in the Swiss Alps two hundred years ago. The avalanche buried twenty shepherds who were living for the summer in a high valley. All were given up for dead, but after seven weeks one man, Antoine Pont, came back to the village and his wife Thérèse.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

"For onomatopoeic cadence, for imagery, for dramatic tension, this novel has not been surpassed in modern literature. It has the grandeur of simplicity, the sincerity of a masterpiece." M. F. Corcoran

+ Cath World 166:282 D '47 350w

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week N 20 '47 550w

"Charles-Fernand Ramuz wrote a deliberate, stripped prose which, in translation, reads well so far as the descriptive passages are concerned. But in the dialogue, for which the author's ear was beautifully tuned, the translator fails to strike the same note. However, even in English, 'When the Mountain Fell,' though more like a song on one swelling line of melody than a symphonic novel, must be acknowledged as the work of a noble talent." Virgilia Peterson

+ Commonweal 47:100 N 7 '47 700w

Kirkus 15:476 S 1 '47 200w

"Tour de force for fine writing readers. Translation of Derborence, published in 1936. Not essential." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 80w

"It's style is the crooning Biblical prose long sanctified as the proper way to write about peasants, idiots, and other of God's innocent children. . . . In other words, 'When the Mountain Fell' is barbiturate literature for what the publishing trade proudly refers to as the discriminating reader. Alongside it our more lurid historical romances are good clean adolescent fact-facing."

+ Nation 165:533 N 15 '47 800w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:31 O 20 '47 850w

"As Ramuz tells the story it is half legend, half idyll, a poetic tapestry of summer in the Alps, with the story of man's destiny worked into the pattern in the form of a simple folk tale, with primitive symbols and a minimum of detail. . . . Because of Mr. Ramuz's style there is through it all a murmur of unreality, a lapping of spirit at the edges of life, an uprush of natural plan against the brittle cunning of man." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 O 12 '47 750w

"Ramuz' language is marvelously suited to his means and ends. It is swift, clean and concrete, a flexible, dramatic instrument. The effect is poetry unembarrassed by a 'fancy' or 'poetical' imagery; or painting executed in striking flashes of fine line drawing and bold brushed color. 'When the Mountain Fell' is vivid reading, but in terms of the conventional novel it is less than that it is epic, canvas, idyll." A. S. Morris

+ N Y Times p4 O 12 '47 750w

"In Ramuz's hands Thérèse's victory over the mountain acquires not only a wonderful beauty of form but a dramatic intensity and a spiritual richness that move the reader to terror and exaltation. I have not yet been able to find a French edition of 'Derborence,' but even in this English version there is evidence that we have here a novel that in beauty surpasses even 'Pêcheur d'Islande'—or in a word, a masterpiece." J. M. Lalley

+ New Yorker 23:129 O 25 '47 480w

Reviewed by James Edin

San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 30 '47 130w

"A brief novel, so dramatic, so simple, so essentially poetic in style that it must remain a classic among the stories of man's endurance and courage against the blind and implacable ferocity of nature." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 N 8 '47 800w

Reviewed by L. S. Munn

Springf'd Republican p9B N 9 '47 210w
Time 50:112 O 13 '47 600w

RAND, McNALLY AND COMPANY. Commercial atlas and marketing guide. (V78) 564p subs $39.50 Rand McNally

912 Atlases. Commerce

"According to the publishers, the Rand McNally Commercial Atlas and Marketing Guide 'is revised, corrected, and newly published each year. It contains over 550 pages of maps and statistics, all of which are included because of their proved value for commercial purposes. There are 250 or more maps covering every part of the world, the most complete list of cities and towns ever compiled, and many tables of economic and geographic statistics for practical commercial use. . . . An average of 75,000 alterations are made in the maps and indexes of the atlas each year. . . . The emphasis is definitely on the United States and its possessions, and to a lesser degree, the rest of North America. . . . The information following the maps of the United States territories and possessions includes physical and geographical items and railroads, but no special marketing information. The Philippine Republic has been transferred from this group to its new place among the foreign nations." Subscription Bks Bul

"As the title indicates, the Rand McNally Commercial Atlas and Marketing Guide is intended primarily for the use of business and industrial concerns, but the excellent maps and the wealth of statistical information included make it useful to libraries as a general purpose atlas as well. It is an invaluable tool for large public and college libraries, and business libraries, and many medium-sized libraries will find that it supplies the answers to a large proportion of their current geographical questions. It is recommended for such libraries."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:40 J1 '47 850w

RAND, WINIFRED, and others. Growth and development of the young child. 4th ed 481p il $3 Saunders

136.71 Child study. Growth. Children—Care and hygiene 46-5686

Fourth edition of a textbook first published in 1930 (Book Review Digest 1931). For third edition see Book Review Digest 1940. "In this edition, the authors have altered the content and organization to include changes in concepts and practices that have come from study and research in the last five years. . . . A greatly expanded discussion of intellectual, emotional, and social development, with due concern for physical well-being in relation to the all-round personality growth of the child is presented. Earlier editions, in contrast, gave an all-over picture of child development at the various age levels." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Index.

"This volume is not just another book offering advice to parents according to the opinion and good intentions of the authors. It fulfills a special need as a beginning college text, or a reference book, or a source book for parent education materials. Parents with good educational backgrounds and receptive minds will appreciate its value." A. H. Jones

+ J Home Econ 38:666 D '46 370w

School & Society 65:367 My 17 '47 30w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:330 O 25 '47 170w

RANDALL, JAMES GARFIELD. Lincoln, the liberal statesman. 266p il $4.50 Dodd

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 47-4344

Eight long essays by a well-known Lincoln scholar. Two of the essays have never before been printed; the others have been revised from the learned magazines in which they first appeared. Contents: Moot points in the Lincoln story; A blundering generation; The unpopular Mr. Lincoln; Lincoln's Sumter dilemma; The rule of law under Lincoln; Lincoln and John Bright; Lincoln's peace and Wilson's; Lincoln the liberal statesman. Index.

"Thoroughly at home in the Civil War period, a leading authority on Lincoln, a master of historical materials and of historical method, Professor Randall again attains the high standard he has led us to expect of him. So discriminatingly does he make his selections from his vast storehouse and so clearly does he develop the points of which he treats that he offers additional light to the more than casual student of Lincoln and fresh suggestions to those who may be classed as Lincoln scholars. Nor does he fail to relate the experience of the past to the problems of the present and to remind us that this is 'a time for greatness.' C. O. Johnson

RANDALL, J. G.—Continued

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1217 D '47 490w

Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

"In offering these essays Prof. Randall brings to selected phases of the Lincoln theme a richness of interpretation to be derived only from long, conscientious study. Like his other Lincoln writings, they represent the best in Lincoln scholarship." B. P. Thomas

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 22 '47 430w

"With rare pleasure, one reads the title essay. In Abraham Lincoln, the head and heart were in balance. His was the supreme quality of tolerance. He was friendly to labor and no foe to capital. He was no superficial optimist. For him, democracy was an experiment and its real dangers arose from within. The discussion is pertinent to conditions today. Professor Randall well sustains his commanding position as a Lincoln scholar." F. L. Bullard

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ag 9 '47 850w

Current Hist 13:164 S '47 60w

"Highly recommended for all libraries." J. H. Berthel

+ Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 25 '47 250w

Reviewed by Arthur Schlesinger, Jr.

Nation 165:509 N 8 '47 290w

"Mr. Randall carefully weighs the evidence. . . He ploughs deep and studies what he has unearthed. For all that he writes simply and engagingly, he wastes no time on superficialities." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 22 '47 1100w

"These essays, like all this author's work on the Lincoln period, are illuminated by tolerance, moderation and judiciousness. Now, judiciousness is not nearly so exciting as sensationalism, and the essays are exciting only as any finished craftsmanship is. . . One of the most entertaining of the essays concerns itself with moot points in the Lincoln story. Here Mr. Randall, a practiced gardener, digs up the weeds that have sprouted in the garden of historical research. There is little that is new here to the scholar, but much that is fresh in presentation." H. S. Commager

+ N Y Times p3 Je 22 '47 1350w

New Yorker 23:67 J1 5 '47 150w

Reviewed by Alfred Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ag 3 '47 600w

"Dr. Randall more than makes the case for Lincoln's liberal statesmanship. His concept is as clear as his scholarship is sound. The new book is a most useful addition to the Lincoln literature." G. F. Milton

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Je 21 '47 1250w

Social Studies 38:379 D '47 20w

Spec 179:664 N 21 '47 270w

Wis Lib Bul 43:139 O '47

RANDEL, WILLIAM PEIRCE. Edward Eggleston, author of The Hoosier school-master. 319p $3.50 King's crown press

B or 92 Eggleston, Edward A47-13

Biography of the author of The Hoosier Schoolmaster, one of the first realistic novels about the Middle West. Eggleston was, besides being an author, a preacher, reformer, and a teacher, always in search of a truth he could never define. The author of this volume is professor of English at the University of Missouri. Bibliography. Index.

"A thoroughly trustworthy and finished biography that has long been due and that, in almost every instance, reflects sound scholarship, precise evaluation, and a literary style that is vastly superior to that found in most doctoral dissertations." P. D. Jordan

+ Am Hist R 52:758 J1 '47 700w

Booklist 43:154 Ja 15 '47

Current Hist 12:239 Mr '47 20w

"This book about [Eggleston] is an important addition to the literature of Americana, a subject still open to vast discoveries." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p3 Ja 19 '47 900w

"Eggleston is a worthy biographical subject. He was not one of the great monoliths of American literature, but he was a milestone. He is high on the roster of the regionalists, and no literature owes more to its regionalists than does ours. Mr. Randel has done a compact and competent job. He quotes abundantly and aptly. He reads easily. If this be scholarship, let us have more of the same." J. T. Winterich

+ Sat R of Lit 30:33 Je 7 '47 360w

School & Society 65:127 F 15 '47 30w

"If at times the narrative is, somewhat unduly annalistic or resembles an itinerary, it is on the whole well knit and smoothly written, and most readable considering the quantity of information with which it is packed. Well aware of Eggleston's limitations, Mr. Randel has made no undue claims for a figure who is no less interesting for being secondary, and who originated trends rather than brought them to fulfillment."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:43 Mr '47 280w

RANDOLPH, VANCE, ed. Ozark folksongs: 4v; v. 1, British ballads and songs, 439p il $3.75 State hist. soc. of Mo, Columbia, Mo.

784 Folksongs, American (47-1554)

"Ozark Folksongs," collected and edited by Vance Randolph, is a book which indicates the immense, amorphous oral literature of the folk ballad and song in America. Songs which were popular in Chaucer's England persist in the Ozarks, but with that fluidity of change which shows a constant creation going on, as each singer changes slightly each version. . . Nearly all the songs in this collection derive, directly or indirectly, from the singing of the old residents in the Ozarks. Some of the oldest pieces came over from England in the seventeenth century, when they already had a long history. Others are later importations. Still others had their origin in the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee." N Y Times

"The end-papers picture by the Missouri artist, Thomas Hart Benton, is a rich, tawny evocation of Ozarkian waters, which the typography of the book does not live up to. Also a book like this has no business to be without an alphabetical list of titles and first lines. But these are minor faults in a major project, for which all lovers of American folksong will long bless the Missouri State Historical Society." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 5 '47 750w

Reviewed by Louise Pound

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 My 25 '47 1200w

"Mr. Randolph has fortunately not corrected the mistakes of the old Ozark singers. He has presented the dialectical peculiarities of the folk songs just as he heard them in various versions. . . It is good to have them between the covers of a single book, for balladry, Mr. Randolph fears, may wane in the Ozark country, due to the fact that the section is turning into a summer playground." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 30 '47 650w

RANDOLPH, VANCE. Ozark superstitions. 367p $3.75 Columbia univ. press

398.3 Folklore—Ozark mountains. Superstitions 47-3899

Beliefs of the people who live in the Ozark country. The author has lived there since 1920 and the material in this book comes from his card file of superstitions gathered from local sources. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:342 J1 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Books Week p5 J1 27 '47
260w

Current Hist 13:165 S '47 50w

Kirkus 15:297 Je 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. G. Fletcher
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je
22 '47 1300w

"A veritable treasury of backwoods custom and belief. . . What distinguishes this book among American folklore compilations is the wealth of circumstantial detail and cultural background with which Mr. Randolph surrounds all the separate items. . . Louise E. Jefferson's little drawings on Ozark themes are charming, and there is a good index." Carl Withers

+ N Y Times p7 Je 15 '47 800w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '47
120w

Reviewed by T. H. Benton
Sat R of Lit 30:17 J1 19 '47 600w

Time 49:102 Je 23 '47 440w

"Since Mr. Randolph has lived for many years among these hill people, he writes of them as an insider. His account is also sympathetic, and its gentle humor takes the reader into the hills with the author. The book deserves a place in any general collection of Americana and in all collections of folklore."

+ U S Quarterly Bk1 3:281 S '47 130w

RANDS, MRS MINNIE (FROST). Punk; her story of the island of Java; il. by Audrey Rands. 153p $2 Island press co-op, inc, 470 W. 24th st, N.Y. 11

913.22 Java—Juvenile literature 47-17001

A description of the native and foreign life of Java, as told by Punk, a Javanese girl employed as nursemaid in the home of an American stationed in Java.

"The story is varied and entertaining in its pictures of Javanese culture and art, especially in its details about the batik work of the women. The beauty of the landscape, too, is impressive. Picturesque drawings by Mrs. Rands' daughter are included."

+ Horn Bk 23:112 Mr '47 150w

"The book is rich in intimate details of everyday life, with particular emphasis on the botanic wonders of the beautiful land, but occasional didacticisms tend to make it a book for reference shelves rather than for general reading."

Kirkus 14:425 S 1 '46 130w

"Information about Java so entertainingly written that it reads like fiction. . . Recommended for supplementary reading by ages 10-12." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:467 Mr 15 '47 80w

RAO, V. V. LAKSHMANA. Decibel notation; its application to radio and acoustics. 179p il $3.75 Chemical pub. co.

621.381 Sound—Measurement 47-698

"Engineers in the field of acoustics and telecommunications will be interested in this work on the fundamental units of sound measurement. Although the author devotes most of his text to the decibel since it is the most useful unit, he discusses also the neper, the phon, and the bel. He defines all of the units, shows the relationships among them, then treats in detail the applications of the decibel notation to problems in circuit and apparatus design. Many useful formulas, graphs and conversion tables are included. The American edition has been reprinted from the original edition published in Madras, India." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:67 O '46

RASCOE, BURTON. We were interrupted. 342p $4 Doubleday

B or 92 Journalists—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-31239

"More of Mr. Rascoe's peppery reminiscences, which he began in 'Before I Forget' [Book Review Digest 1937]. This sequel deals with his adventures as a journalist in Manhattan, Paris, and elsewhere during the twenties." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:595 O 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 O
5 '47 1300w

"In the tradition of Huneker and H. L. Mencken himself, Rascoe was, in the middle Twenties, one of those who seemed to be raising our literary journalism to the level it occupies in France or England. Rascoe tells it in a highly readable style, too—a mixture of personal history, theoretical speculation, anecdote and gossip. Yet the curiosity and gusto of Rascoe's career are marred by a curiously opaque sort of egotism. Sometimes, instead of being the record of a period from the inside, 'We Were Interrupted' is merely an account of the celebrated personages whom Mr. Rascoe met and was better than, or at least whom he guided and instructed in the conduct of worldly affairs." Maxwell Geismar

+ — N Y Times p3 S 23 '47 800w

"It is an anecdotal social history of an era to which distance is lending an increasing enchantment, abounding in names of the famous and marked by Mr. Rascoe's customary enthusiasm, mordant humor, and airy disregard for accuracy."

New Yorker 23:114 S 27 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 14 '47
950w

"Here is a man with an unappeasable appetite for living, one manifestation of which is his unappeasable appetite for the arts. In 'We Were Interrupted' he has, with good sense, good temper, and good heart, encouraged his reader to sit and share both." James Gray

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 O 18 '47 1150w

RATH, MRS VIRGINIA. Dirge for her. 245p $1.98 Ziff-Davis

47-11564

Detective story.

"Capable workmanship with an affectionate detail compelling enough that the final surprise makes the deceptions which compose the novel seem improbable." James Sandoe

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 50w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '47
250w

"O.K."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 40w

RATH, MRS VIRGINIA. Shroud for Rowena. 250p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

47-3524

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Je 22 '47 140w

"The story describes at much too great length the steps by which Dundas clears up a most complicated mystery. This book is not for the reader who demands fast and furious action." I. A.

— N Y Times p20 Je 1 '47 160w

"Interestingly complicated plot, well-tailored to display S. F.'s courtier-detective at his most charmingly shrewd." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47
60w

"Dundas's detecting good, as usual. Somber secrets of fated Calif. cian satisfactorily shocking. Solution rather appalling—but checks up very neatly. Good grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 50w

RATHBUN, HELEN KELLEHER. Easter surprise; il. by Vera Neville. [62p] $1.50 Crowell

47-2601

Story of a loving little girl who planned her mother's Easter present months in advance. She saved her pennies and bought tulip bulbs, planted them and watched over their little garden. And on Easter they bloomed. For ages five to eight.

"Will delight little girls. The nice clear print, and the sprightly illustrations by Vera Neville, in soft tones of springlike green, will make it easy for seven and eight-year-olds to read to themselves. Younger children will enjoy having it read aloud, for it is a dear little story of a happy family." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p8 Mr 25 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:189 Ap 1 '47 170w

"A warmhearted little story without much variety of action but one which will be enjoyed by little girls of 8-10." K. H. McAlarney

+ Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 30 '47 360w

"The story is scant of action, centering a bit too closely on Bonnie Jo's project for complete realization of her every-day life, but it holds the delightful feeling of a secret shared with an understanding father and it encompasses the spirit of real giving. For 5 to 8 year olds." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p40 Mr 30 '47 150w

RAVEN, CHARLES EARLE. English naturalists from Neckam to Ray; a study of the making of the modern world. 380p $6.50 Macmillan

925.7 Naturalists

"In this book Canon Raven traces the emergence of English natural history from the bestiaries of the twelfth century to the birth of the Royal Society in the seventeenth century. He accomplishes this in a masterly way by describing the lives and works of a dozen naturalists: William Turner, Thomas Penny, John Gerard, Thomas Johnson, and others." (Manchester Guardian) Indexes.

"It would need exceptional knowledge of Professor Raven's subject fully to appreciate the scholarship and erudition of his most valuable book. . . . Of course, it is primarily a book for the specialist and the student; but the general reader, if he is prepared to do some judicious skipping, will find it has a great deal to offer him." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 S 2 '47 550w

"His book is a major contribution to the history of science. He brings to his work the knowledge and the critical apparatus of a scholar. . . . This is not a book for the casual reader: Canon Raven does not write in the tradition of Strachey or Ludwig." E. Ashby

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 9 '47 420w

Times [London] Lit Sup p414 Ag 16 '47 3550w

RAVENEL, BEATRICE ST. JULIEN, ed. Charleston murders. (Regional murder ser) 216p $3 Duell

364 Murder

47-11509

Reports of seven Charleston crimes beginning with the shooting of Nicholas Wightman by a footpad in 1788. Contents: The footpad's memorial—1788, by S. G. Stoney; Lovely Lavinia and the Drunken hangman—1819, by B. St. J. Ravenel; The killing of Captain Dawson—1889, by T. K. Peck; Self defense from ambush—1927, by T. R. Waring, Jr; The Annapolis graduate and the country boy—1928, by F. K. Myers; God's avenging angel—1935, by R. W. Tobias; First come, first serve—1936, by S. A. Cothran.

"More than half of the cases have no more distinction than the drunken brawls which engendered them, and the editor's own attempt to arouse interest in the legendary loveliness of Lavinia Fisher (hanged in 1819) is seriously impeded by maudlin history's failure to remember even whether she was blonde or brunette." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:590 O 15 '47 130w

"As it ventures into less wicked centers, this admirable series tends more and more to include matter of local rather than general interest—which is probably quite all right." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 2 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 9 '47 170w

Sat R of Lit 30:45 N 1 '47 40w

RAY, JAMES RALPH. Story of air transport; il. by the author. 104p $2.50 Winston 387.7 Aeronautics—Juvenile literature 47-11565

An account of the development of commercial aviation in the United States from the time of the Wright brothers to the present. For ages twelve or older. Index.

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

Reviewed by M. B. King

Chicago Sun Book Week N 29 '47 20w

Kirkus 15:603 N 1 '47 50w

"Stimulating reading; full of hard-to-find first facts in aviation history. American attributes of pioneering and inventiveness clearly brought out. Well illustrated with enough ink wash drawings to give splendid visual aid. . . . Good for reference and general interest reading." M. I. Ross

+ Library J 72:1695 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Austin Stevens

N Y Times p46 N 16 '47 100w

RAYMOND, FRED INGALLS. Limitist. 166p $2 Norton

330.1 Economic policy. U.S.—Economic policy 47-1894

The author, after examining the reasons for the failure of both socialism and unlimited capitalism to solve our economic problems, proposes a measure, here called "limitism," by which big business and big farming could be controlled and better distribution of wealth and produce obtained.

Reviewed by C. B. Hagan

Am Pol Sci R 41:608 Je '47 300w

"The book should be very suggestive to those who are unfamiliar with distributism, and may serve as an intellectual stimulus to readers with a conventionally capitalist or socialist point of view." E. P. Chase

Ann Am Acad 253:226 S '47 420w

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by A. Morgner

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ap 6 '47 360w

"The plan is novel but not fantastic. The author is a business man with much experience—some of it bitter. He thinks and writes clearly."

+ Christian Century 64:337 Mr 12 '47 150w

"The Limitist" is too small a book to go fully into the complexities which would devolve upon such a scheme. But it does suggest a legislative technique well worth exhaustive scrutiny. Mr. Raymond does say enough to indicate that he is well aware of the practical difficulties and his answer to them. He urges others to take up and improve his idea." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 45:571 Mr 21 '47 550w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:816 My 15 '47 60w

Management R 36:234 Ap '47 30w

"This book is worthy of discussion, some of its features may fit into our ultimate plan for freedom. The author is not dogmatic. He is proposing one possible technique for restoring free enterprise. His plan should be compared with many others." M. L. Ernst

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Mr 9 '47 950w

Reviewed by H. J. Bresler
N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '47 750w
Springf'd Union p4 Je 9 '47 300w

Reviewed by A. T. Mason
Survey G 37:34 Ja '48 380w

Reviewed by D. C. Coyle
Yale R n s 36:740 summer '47 550w

RAYMOND, LOUISE (BEATRICE ALEXANDER, pseud). Famous myths of the golden age; retold by Beatrice Alexander; il. by Florian. 61p $1 Random house

292 Mythology, Classical—Juvenile literature
47-2975

"An easygoing introduction to the well-known Greek myths (involving Prometheus, Pandora, Midas, Jason, Hercules, among others) for the very young. . . There are dramatic pictures, too, some of them in color." New Yorker

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 18 '47 120w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:146 D 6 '47 60w

RAYNOLDS, ROBERT. Paquita. 369p $3 Putnam

47-3256

The story of the young and lovely Paquita, daughter of a noble Spanish family living in Mexico in the early and turbulent days of the last century.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

Kirkus 15:175 Mr 15 '47 170w

"Vivid descriptions, exciting narrative, sympathetic feeling for both oppressor and oppressed, gay humor, excellent portrayal of tumultuous Mexico as well as an everything-turn-out-right-in-the-end romance. Heartily recommended." L. E. Miller

+ Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 90w

"Here is an involved and highly colored plot told as a love story. One doubts if such lurid romance contributes greatly to our understanding of our neighbors 'south of the border.' True to the Spanish tradition, Paquita remains almost, if not quite, pure till marriage, but her flirtations are as elaborate and whimsical as one of the American Scarletts. Here, in other words, is a book for our movies." E. L. Walton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 25 '47 750w

"Whimsy in the historical novel is rather rare these days when most examples of the type shriek with significance and steam with sex. But Robert Reynolds has told this tale of a high-born Spanish girl in a spirit of sheer playfulness. . . Mr. Reynolds by no means neglects to fill in historical data, but he does it in an offhand way." Mary McGrory

N Y Times p12 My 25 '47 320w

READ, HERBERT EDWARD. Innocent eye [autobiography]. 268p $3.50 Holt

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30359

"Recapitulation of youthful recollections made into wholly delightful chapters on boyhood in Yorkshire, study, and the first world war. Second part of the book is a statement of aesthetic principles by this most eminent art critic and writer. A discussion of the function of art, of its important place in the world and a promise of further essays to come bring this volume to a close." (Library J) "First published in London, 1940, under title: Annals of innocence and experience. 'The innocent eye' (p. 1-58) and 'In retreat' (p. 176-212) were originally published in 1933 and 1925 respectively." (Library of Congress card)

Booklist 43:358 Jl 15 '47

Canadian Forum 27:119 Ag '47 170w

"It is to be regretted that Read has spoiled what might have been an excellent autobiography by his garrulous editorializing. It would have been well had he realized that the 'innocent eye' of childhood looks out upon a world presumed to be equally innocent. Alas, the world is wicked, and Mr. Read won't admit it." R. R. Wohl

Commonweal 46:339 Jl 18 '47 450w

"A poet by nature and occupation, the early part of the book depicting his boyhood on a Yorkshire farm is very nice, written with integrity and simplicity of feeling. But the latter part, dealing with the author's intellectual growth, based on all great names of literature, philosophy and religion, is pedantic-choppy with citation. . . There may be a certain intellectual interest in this, but it is not for a popular market."

+ — Kirkus 15:208 Ap 1 '47 90w

"A valuable addition to our book collections." A. S. Plaut

+ Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 70w

"This is the case history of a non-snob English intellectual whose background is nearer that of Priestley or Arnold Bennett than of Cyril Connolly or Desmond MacCarthy, and it is marked by an earnest, almost plodding industriousness in reading. . . I confess that. . . at the close of the book, I am not sure I know what Mr. Read is talking about, or that he does." Irwin Edman

Nation 165:103 Jl 26 '47 1400w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 33:181 Mr 15 '47 450w

"The experience which Read shares with us in 'The Innocent Eye'—is rich, diverse, extensive and always rewarding. It is the special merit of this book to admit us to the most mysterious of all processes, through which the mind and heart create from lowly materials a noble architecture." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
Jl 6 '47 800w

"Consideration of the many problems raised by Read's philosophy, especially by his insistence on the unique and fundamental importance of the esthetic experience, would carry us beyond all reasonable bounds. It is the formation of the philosophy, not the philosophy itself, that is the issue here. Read does not tell us as much as we might wish, but the root of the matter is to be found in these fragments and the word for it is integrity." Granville Hicks

+ N Y Times p4 Je 15 '47 800w

"It is a quiet book in a noisy time, but I suspect that its readers, all but those who can't hear anything under a shout, are going to find it an exciting one." Hamilton Basso

+ New Yorker 23:92 Je 14 '47 260w

"Few writers manage to give the impression of having lived so richly, so fully, and yet with such deep awareness, as Herbert Read writing in autobiographical vein." Richard McLaughlin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 Je 28 '47 1150w

"Mr. Read's great quality as a writer is his immediately evident honesty. Whether he is describing his earliest memories of his home or his school or his life as an infantry officer, one is immediately convinced that what he writes represents exactly what he thought or felt. His descriptions of writing poetry or of fighting are so lucid that the reader, however remote the experiences described may seem, sees directly exactly what he thought or felt. . . It is a beautifully written autobiography, entirely serious, never dull." Stuart Hampshire

+ Spec 178:210 F 14 '47 650w

"As art critic and esthetic philosopher, Read is erudite and discerning; as a writer, he is precise and dry, so that his prose shows at its best on subjects that need no embroidery. Example: the World War I chapter named 'A Journal of the Retreat of the Fifth Army from St. Quentin, which English critics have justly ranked with the best war writing of the century."

READ, H. E.—Continued

— Time 49:98 Je 23 '47 650w

REAVEY, GEORGE. Soviet literature to-day. 187p $3.50 Yale univ. press

891.7 Russian literature—History and criticism 47-12406

"The author of this book lived in Russia during his childhood, at the time of the 1917 Revolution. He was Deputy Press Attaché at the British Embassy to Russia during the war. He thus saw at first hand (what the Russians call the method of 'historic realism') the two greatest crises in the story of Russia. He is a skilled poet, influenced by the French Symbolists, and has done some graceful translation from the Russian. Thus equipped, he has set out on this ambitious effort to survey the whole of Russian literary life since the U.S.S.R. began, and he has tried to draw sociological conclusions that will assist the rest of the world to understand the Russian point of view and practice, with a view to finding a bridge across the gap which we see widening so dangerously today." (Spec) Index.

Booklist 44:181 Ja 15 '48

"Amid so many books that generalise and oversimplify it is refreshing to meet in Soviet Literature To-day a study of one aspect of Russian life which emphasises its complexity and the fact that, however rigid the dialectical principles governing every activity in the U.S.S.R., their outworking is constantly changing. . . . The fairness of his presentation and the detailed account he gives both of the organised life of Soviet writers and of the quality and content of their fiction, criticism, and poetry provide the reader with enough material to form his own judgment." H. I. A. F.

— Manchester Guardian p3 Ag 5 '47 240w

"Mr. Reavey, by virtue of being on the spot at the time, was able to place the Soviet post-war literary crisis in its proper perspective." E. J. Simmons

— N Y Times p4 Ja 18 '48 750w

New Yorker 23:82 Ja 10 '48 150w

"Mr. Reavey has used this rare opportunity exceedingly well. His knowledge of the Russian language and his extensive studies of Russian literature stood him in good stead during his sojourn in the Soviet Union. He has written a well-balanced and penetrating study of contemporary Soviet literature, concerned mainly with the war years and the current transition period. He is not only well informed but has the gift of lucid and pungent expression." D. F. White

— Sat R of Lit 31:16 Ja 3 '48 650w

"[The author] has managed to maintain detachment, and his marked sensibility has enabled him to appreciate the intense and indeed fervid idealism—the naivety, one might call it—which underlies all the political trickery used by Russia as a part of the technique of Communism. The result is a book that is most helpful to the person who today is completely unplussed by the international situation." Richard Church

— Spec 179:118 J1 25 '47 800w

Time 50:66 D 29 '47 600w

"Mr. Reavey covers rather more ground than his title indicates. He has had exceptional opportunities of gaining first-hand knowledge of literary activities in the Soviet Union, and he discusses not only the contemporary phase of Russian literature but also the general background and traditions which have influenced its development. He also devotes an important chapter to the social status of the author and the organization of publishing in the Soviet Union, and he gives an account, necessarily brief, of the literatures in languages other than Russian which is not the least interesting feature of the whole subject."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p352 J1 12 '47 650w

RECHNITZER, FERDINAND EDSTED. Bonny's Boy; il. by Marguerite Kirmse. 266p $2 Winston

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-30005

Story of a boy and the cocker spaniel puppy he raised and trained out of love for an older brother, who was a navy flyer. The navy man returned from war just in time to see the dog win the coveted Best in Show at Madison Square garden.

"If the author had rewritten the last chapter and omitted several pat incidents in the body of the narrative, this book could be heartily recommended. . . . In spite of its defects, the book will be useful."

Booklist 43:156 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 16 '47 90w

"A very good dog story. . . . Recommended for ages ten and up." S. J. Johnson
— Library J 72:229 F 1 '47 70w

"A first-class dog story." M. L. Becker
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p8 Mr 9 '47 360w

"This should appeal to children who don't like sad animal stories, and it may easily arouse interest in caring for the family dog. Possibly, even, some of the message of self-reliance may linger on in the 9-to-12-year-old reader's mind." V. H. Mathews

— N Y Times p29 F 16 '47 190w

"A good story with irresistible drawings in black and white of a dog and a boy."

— Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 70w

REDDICK, HARRY WILFRED, and MILLER, FREDERIC HOWELL. Advanced mathematics for engineers. 2d ed 508p $5 Wiley

510 Mathematics. Engineering 47-822

New edition of a textbook first published in 1938 (Book Review Digest 1939). "Only minor changes have been made in this edition, but a few new problems and brief sections on the mechanical brake problem, combination of series and the vibrating membrane problem, have been added. A short discussion of dimensional analysis is now included in the form of an appendix." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:12 Ja '47

REDDIG, WILLIAM M. Tom's town, Kansas City and the Pendergast legend. 394p il $4 Lippincott

977.8411 Kansas City, Missouri. Pendergast, Thomas Joseph 47-3771

Political and social history of Kansas City, Missouri, from the middle 70s, to the present, the years which saw the rise and fall of the Pendergast dynasty, first Jim, then Tom Pendergast, the Democratic bosses of the city. Index.

Reviewed by R. S. Allen

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 14 '47 450w

"Tom's Town makes fascinating reading and is a beautifully executed piece of American civic history."

— Kirkus 15:120 F 15 '47 220w

"Mr. Reddig constantly interrupts the flow of the narrative with extraneous matter, for whenever he finds a good story about Kansas City he cannot resist throwing it in. . . . But they are usually good stories, so why complain? The casual reader will not complain, although the serious student of politics, looking for a case history of American bossism, may be a trifle annoyed. Indeed, the serious student may be annoyed by Mr. Reddig's light-hearted approach to the whole matter; but the failure there is his own, not the author's. Serious students find it hard to realize that one reason, and an important reason, why bossism has sprung up and thrived in every American city at one time or another is the very fact that many of its manifestations are gay and amusing." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 S 14 '47 1100w

"The story of the Pendergasts has been told over and over, in many places, and in many ways. It has hardly been told anywhere, however, with more fascinating detail and healthy irony than in this volume of William M. Reddig." Turner Catledge

+ N Y Times p6 S 14 '47 950w
New Yorker 23:105 S 20 '47 80w

Reviewed by W. A. P. White
San Francisco Chronicle p14 S 21 '47 170w

"Reddig has written his history of the Pendergast machine in a reportorial style which manages to combine plain city desk prose with a great deal of humor, irony, and insight. He has dwelt with obvious delight on the local characters, the factions, and feuds, and has given several brilliant personality sketches." J. D. Weaver

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 S 13 '47 1100w

REED, MRS ANNA (YEOMANS). Occupational placement; its history, philosophies, procedures, and educ. implications. 350p $3.75 Cornell Univ. press

331.1151 Vocational guidance. Employment agencies 46-4968

"Technical directions on the organization of local placement bureaus and operation of such organizations both public and private. Historical aspects, special services and future outlook of placement services are given in this second volume in the series concerning the educational aspects of personnel work by this author." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:80 Ja 1 '47 60w

School & Society 63:448 Je 22 '46 10w

"This publication is a timely and an important contribution. Those persons who wish to consider current placement problems in only the present frame of reference or persons who wish to 'start from scratch' when attempting to solve such problems will become impatient with the historical and philosophical approach which is used by the author. The book is not a ready reference or a presentation of forms currently used. It is, rather, an interpretation and an evaluation of the evolutionary steps in the development of placement services." R. C. Woellner

+ — School R 55:370 Je '47 550w

REED, BLAIR (ADAM RING, pseud). Killers play rough. 254p $2 Crown

47-579

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ja 5 '47 70w

"The story is gory as all get out, and that is about all that can be said for it." I. A.
N Y Times p39 F 9 '47 140w

"Little liquor, no luscious ladies; just slug, sap and shoot."

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47 70w

"Gangsters, hoods, sadistic torturers, fat and sinister 'emissary' of foreign power all make life tough and terrible for long-suffering sleuth."

Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ja 25 '47 50w

REED, HENRY. Map of Verona, and other poems. 92p $2.50 Reynal

811

47-31457

"Henry Reed is a young English poet whose work, until now, has been little known in this country. Many of the poems have legendary themes but their meaning is deeply rooted in our own 'age of anxiety.' The final pages are devoted to lyric interludes written for a BBC radio version of Moby Dick." Library J

"Only a few short lyrics in this volume are what could be called mature poetry, but the excellences either of intention or of partial achievement in most of his writing are worth some respectful attention. . . The longer poems, particularly 'Tintagel' and 'Triptych,' have beautiful moments in them—but neither poem has a sufficiently fresh intelligence to sustain its full length." Henry Rago

Commonweal 47:353 Ja 16 '48 420w

Kirkus 15:594 O 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Gerald MacDonald
Library J 72:1688 D 1 '47 50w

"It is a pleasure indeed to pick up a book of contemporary verse and to recognize instantly its excellence. . . The readers will be immediately struck by the directness and clarity of this English newcomer's verses at the same time that he will experience them as emotionally and intellectually adequate to his sense of the complex scene and times. . . There is something to be said for the deficiencies in the verses: they are not robust (though the flatness and tiredness are deceptive); they take on life, but it is often tentative; the poems are somber, and the sense of continuous and inevitable improvisation, the impact of fertility are absent. But there is more to be said about Mr. Reed's verse on the other side." Harvey Breit

+ — N Y Times p8 D 28 '47 900w

REID, JAMES. Where the new world begins. 218p $2 Abingdon-Cokesbury

242 Devotional exercises 47-1892

"Dr. Reid is a well-known British churchman. Until recently he was a Presbyterian pastor in London and was one of the many clergymen whose service to his parishoners during the war years was heroic. The chapters of this book first appeared as devotional articles in The British Weekly and have won for him a wide following in the British Isles. They are brief, three or four pages each, and deal with such themes as 'The Test of Experience', 'The Secret of Security', 'In Times of Despondency', 'Prayer and Protection', 'Harmonious Living', 'The Encompassing God.'" Kirkus

Christian Century 64:272 F 26 '47 110w

Reviewed by M. L. Eglinton
Churchman 161:16 Ap 1 '47 110w
Kirkus 15:158 Mr 15 '47 120w

REIK, THEODOR. Psychological problems of religion; v. 1, Ritual: psycho-analytic studies; with a preface by Sigm. Freud; tr. from the 2d German ed. by Douglas Bryan. 367p $5 Farrar, Straus

291 Psychology, Religious (46-8632)

"Translated from the German by Douglas Bryan this work which has been well known abroad for many years presents the first volume of Mr. Reik's study of the psychology of religion. Considering ritual rather than mythology, Mr. Reik analyzes the rites of primitive as well as of advanced cultures. The book carries an introduction by Freud." (San Francisco Chronicle) Index.

"Dr. Reik's book will be welcomed by those who believe as he does and who find that in the 'light of analysis' religion and religious ritual become crystal clear. To others with understanding and training in religious concepts such solutions appear naive and highly questionable." A. C. Washburne

Commonweal 45:405 Ja 31 '47 260w

Current Hist 12:240 Mr '47 100w

"Taken together these four essays make a very solid, extremely well written, exciting book. . . [The] preface, which the publishers for some reason do not mention on the dust-jacket, is a beautiful piece of psychoanalytical writing." William Maxwell

+ N Y Times p31 Mr 9 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 17 '46 60w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). The farmhouse. 246p $2.50 Random house

47-4557

Detective story.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

Kirkus 15:295 Je 1 '47 50w

"One of Mrs. Reilly's best." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 10 '47 180w

"Miss Reilly again reveals her artistry by producing a tale in which terror and menace are well sustained and provide a congruous background for McKee to wind up one of his best cases to date." Jack Glick

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 10 '47 180w

"This familiar setup is vastly enhanced by new twists including a smash surprise at end, and superb competence in telling." L. G. O.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47
90w

"Entertaining."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

REILLY, MRS HELEN (KIERAN). Silver leopard. 238p $2.50 Random house

46-7315

Detective story.

Booklist 43:207 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:16 Mr '47

"Amorous and apprehensive enough for almost everyone."

+ Kirkus 14:561 N 1 '46 120w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ja 5 '47 250w

"The Silver Leopard" is not up to the high standard set by Helen Reilly in her other Inspector McKee stories." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p35 Ja 12 '47 180w

Reviewed by L. G. Offord

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47
60w

"Satisfactory."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ja 4 '47 40w

REILLY, MICHAEL FRANCIS. Reilly of the White House; as told to William J. Slocum [Eng title: I was Roosevelt's shadow]. 248p $3 Simon & Schuster

B or 92 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. U.S. Treasury department. Secret service division

47-30779

The story of the man who guarded F.D.R. during the war years. Published serially in the "Saturday evening post" under the title: I guarded Roosevelt.

Booklist 44:67 O 15 '47

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 31 '47
750w

Kirkus 15:301 Je 1 '47 150w

"The book contains interesting material on the methods of protection and lively glimpses of Roosevelt in formal and informal postures. William J. Slocum tells it all in a tirelessly sprightly style." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

Nation 165:417 O 18 '47 100w

"His admiration and affection for 'The Boss' and his family, including Fala, are open and evident. But the book adds little that is new about the character of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Reilly is describing, not evaluating, and he is generally more interested in his own job than in anything else, which is fair enough. The book's most serious fault is its occasionally brash and aggressively colloquial style, which must be blamed on Slocum." A. L. Goodman

+ New Repub 117:29 O 6 '47 900w

"Mr. Reilly sticks faithfully to his cop's-eye view of events, so his anecdotes have the full ring of authenticity. They also provide the spice for his detective story of protecting the President." Jack Steele

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S
21 '47 550w

"One of the most amusing and light-hearted contributions to the expanding 'Roosevelt story' to come off the presses to date." Cabell Phillips

+ N Y Times p27 S 14 '47 700w

"Mr. Reilly's account . . . could hardly be described as the final historical document on those times, but for the sake of the score it should be noted as a vote cast against the interpretation of Franklin Roosevelt recently set forth by the disenchanted ex-Postmaster General."

New Yorker 23:68 Ag 30 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 12 '47
220w

Time 50:109 S 15 '47 800w

REILLY, WILLIAM JOHN. Twelve rules for straight thinking applied to business and personal problems. 131p $2 Harper

160 Thought and thinking 47-3028

"Taking his cue from procedures followed in scientific laboratories the author suggests application of the same principles to business and personal problems." (Wis Lib Bul) Index.

Booklist 43:303 Je 1 '47

"Fairly elementary, but people who need this sort of book don't want profundity."

Kirkus 15:28 Ja 1 '47 120w

"Simple and direct in treatment."

+ Wis Lib Bul 43:113 Jl '47

REINER, IMRE. Modern and historical typography; an illustrated guide. 127p $4.50 Struck 655.24 Printing—Specimens 47-1018

"Not a treatise on typography but a collection of designs—title pages, type ornaments, book-plates, labels, and advertisements—with short text. Probably of interest chiefly in connection with history of typography. Originally published in Switzerland." Booklist

Booklist 43:219 Mr 15 '47

"The title of this book is altogether too grandiose for its contents and for the author's apparent intentions; and Mr. Reiner's publishers do him a disservice by describing it as 'a scholarly compilation of the best typographic designs created throughout the centuries,' for it is nothing of the kind and does not pretend to be. It is in fact a quite agreeable selection from Mr. Reiner's scrapbook."

Times [London] Lit Sup p214 My 3 '47
360w

REINFELD, FRED. Botvinnik the invincible. (Wizards of the chessboard) 220p $2 McKay 794.1 Chess. Botvinnik, Mikhail 47-315

Since the death of Alexander Alekhine there has been a question as to the next world champion chess player. Some consider Mikhail Botvinnik the most likely prospect. This book describes the life and career of the young Russian player, and describes his match games, with diagrams.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

"Fred Reinfeld gives us this excellent sketch of the Russian champion, with sixty-two of his games thoroughly annotated and diagrammed. Casual followers of chess, as well as serious students, should scramble for this book." Dana Brannan

+ N Y Times p33 Ja 26 '47 200w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47
60w

REINFELD, FRED. Chess by yourself. 144p $2 McKay

794.1 Chess 47-314

"Contains ten master games arranged especially for the instruction of amateurs. The notes are voluminous and there are from six to sixteen diagrams per game. There is also an ingenious arrangement by which the student can grade his own ability through the valuations placed on his correct guesses of the master moves." N Y Times

Reviewed by Dana Brannan

N Y Times p33 Ja 26 '47 70w

"If you've been thinking you are really a player of master strength, only you don't have the competition to prove it, try Chess by yourself. It'll take you down a peg or two." R. O'B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47 60w

REIS, MRS CLAIRE (RAPHAEL). Composers in America; biographical sketches of contemporary composers with a record of their works. rev & enl ed 399p $5 Macmillan

927.8 Musicians, American 47-31210

The first edition (Book Review Digest 1938) has been expanded to include works of some composers no longer living, and of some who were not American citizens at the time. Includes lists of awards, broadcasts, recordings and major performances.

Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:385 J1 15 '47 85w

"A useful reference book." R. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 9 '47 100w

"An extremely valuable work, it is indispensable as a reference book to anyone with an interest in modern music. A tremendous amount of work over a period of years went into its compilation, and the author in her many official capacities, especially that of organizer and executive chairman on the League of Composers, knows her music as well as her musicians, from the inside." Victor Prahl

+ Springfield Republican p18A O 12 '47 400w

"A unique reference, the revised and enlarged volume not only adds data about composers listed in the 1938 edition and fresh entries about composers who have come to the fore since that time, but also includes information about many foreign-born musicians, such as Stravinsky and Hindemith, who have made this country their permanent home. Unhappily the book seems to have taken a long time in publication, for there are no entries later than the middle of 1946."

+ Theatre Arts 32:69 Ja '48 130w

REISCHAUER, EDWIN OLDFATHER. Japan, past and present; foreword by Sir George Sansom. 192p maps $2; text ed $1.50 Knopf

952 Japan—History 47-68

Concise history of Japan from early days to April, 1946, emphasizing the political and social institutions of the past which have shaped modern Japan. The author is associate professor of Far Eastern languages at Harvard, and was born in Tokyo. Index.

"In 192 smallish pages Professor Reischauer presents a very readable survey of Japanese development, with scholarship, objectivity, a firm grasp of the subject, and a nice sense of proportion. It is the sort of book which was so much needed before the war, which could have been read with profit by every participant in the Pacific campaigns, and which it is not too late to commend to the Americans who serve in the army of occupation." P. J. Treat

+ Am Hist R 52:796 J1 '47 240w

Reviewed by K. S. Latourette

Am Pol Sci R 41:586 Je '47 500w

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:10 My '47

Reviewed by J. K. Yamagiwa

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 26 '47 400w

Reviewed by Robert Peel

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ap 19 '47 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 J1 '47

"The history of Japan, in Edwin O. Reischauer's book, is remarkably clear and logical.

It is a genuinely pleasing book to read, especially written for those of us who are ignorant of the past and present of Japan: it is only 200 pages long; the sentences and paragraphs and chapters are in good style, simple and straightforward; eleven good maps illustrate the text; leading ideas are carefully called to the reader's attention. One is interested while reading, and then pleased with oneself for learning much that is worthwhile—now, indeed, almost obligatory for a citizen of the Occupying Power." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 45:452 F 14 '47 330w

Current Hist 12:152 F '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:708 J1 '47 40w

"The first short history of Japan which, in its brevity and simplicity, excels in summarizing Japan's history from ancient times to the present, relating it to her national character and conduct."

+ Kirkus 14:630 D 15 '46 170w

"Excellent, concise presentation. . . Clear maps supplement the text. Highly recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:75 Ja 1 '47 110w

Manchester Guardian p3 S 26 '47 180w

"Mr. Reischauer has his roots in Japan so that he is well qualified to record the history of that country with close understanding. He knows the language and has studied at both Tokyo and Kyoto Imperial universities. As a very short history of Japan, his book will serve as useful class-room material. It is also the kind of book that a traveler bound for Japan will readily stick in his pocket because it will give him an abbreviated and very readable version of a long and confused history. . . But when it comes to the modern phase—the period from the 1920s on—there are statements that may well be disputed." Wilfrid Fleisher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 12 '47 900w

"Generally speaking, Dr. Reischauer's thinking appears to be strongly influenced by the comparatively emancipated interpretations current among Japanese historians and political scientists twenty years ago. . . It may be for this reason that Dr. Reischauer passes on, without skeptical challenge, a number of well-worn conventional statements or presentations which certainly ought to be challenged." Owen Lattimore

N Y Times p10 Ja 26 '47 700w

Reviewed by R. G. Irwin

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Mr 30 '47 500w

Reviewed by H. W. Weigert

Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ap 5 '47 700w

Reviewed by Kingsley Davis

Survey G 36:404 J1 '47 330w

Reviewed by Chitoshi Yanaga

Yale R n s 36:746 summer '47 250w

REISING, OTTO (PAUL STRAHL, pseud). The quarrel. 248p $2.75 Duell

47-30759

Two men of the same name, living in the same Kentucky border town, and in love with the same girl, are the heroes of this novel of Civil war times and later. The quarrel which begins in the early 1860's is prolonged into the second generation.

Booklist 44:109 N 15 '47

Reviewed by D. A. Koch

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 31 '47 140w

Kirkus 15:321 Je 15 '47 120w

"Period atmosphere is good, but the narrative never seems to get anywhere." H. E. Peerless

+ Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 80w

"Hate is not a sustaining emotion and it is not easy to make it the theme of a novel which covers more than twenty years. The action lags when hate ceases to drive the principal characters, and when the feud flames again—after a dozen years—it seems unnecessary and unnatural. 'The Quarrel' is Mr. Strahl's first novel and for it he chose a difficult theme." H. B.

+ N Y Times p26 S 21 '47 280w

REISNER, MARY. Four witnesses. 271p $2.50
Dodd 47-5387

A murder story in which the reader's sympathies are enlisted on the side of the murderer and against the detective who attempts to bring him to justice.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 31 '47
350w

"This is not a mystery, but is far better than average murder thriller. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore
+ Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 70w

"Repetition and heavy writing hobble the story, and the author seems to sponsor a dubious doctrine that a man's guilt or innocence can be fully established—without trial, sworn testimony and legal verdict—if public opinion is unanimously in agreement." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17
S 14 '47 90w

"Has justice been defeated, or has a higher justice prevailed—a justice beyond the law? While those questions may disturb some readers, they will scarcely detract from the absorbing interest which the story holds." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '47 200w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47
70w

RENAULT, MARY, pseud. Return to night.
412p $3 Morrow 47-19153

Hilary Mansell at thirty-four was the town doctor of a small English town; Julian Fleming at twenty-three wanted to be an actor, but his mother said that was no profession for a gentleman. When Julian was thrown by his horse and brought to the cottage hospital, Hilary saved his life. That was the beginning of their romance, which due to Hilary's wise guidance, seemed headed toward a happy marriage.

Booklist 43:360 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ap 27 '47
290w

Kirkus 15:108 F 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by John Farrelly
New Repub 116:29 Je 23 '47 320w

"Miss Renault writes with competence and beauty, but what does she mean?" Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ap 20 '47 600w

"Miss Renault is an artist to her finger tips. She writes prose that is precise and lyrical, arrestingly sensitive to the charms of nature as well as to the subtle darlings of the human mind—a fine fusion, in short, of apparent fragility with unsuspected strength. She has a nice wit, can do a hospital scene to compare with Remarque, is expert at contriving civilized conversation, and has the ability to impart pulse to a wide variety of characters. She is sometimes too talky, too given to purely decorative effects. But her book triumphs over this." Charles Lee

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '47 700w

"An expert, vivid novel. . . Miss Renault sets forth the characters of three extremely complex people with a penetrating lucidity and a certain moderate reasonableness, making this not just an impassioned love story but a novel of considerable depth."

+ New Yorker 23:110 Ap 19 '47 230w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47
400w

Reviewed by Pamela Taylor
Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 2 '47 400w

"The story is well, though somewhat lengthily, told, and Miss Renault succeeds in engaging one's sympathy for her characters.

The novel's construction shows, however, several faults of method." D. S. Savage
+ Spec 179:284 Ag 29 '47 360w

Spring'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
70w

RENBORG, BERTIL ARNE. International drug control. 276p $2.50 Carnegie endowment 341 Drugs—Laws and legislation. International law

"The present monograph, originally published by the Division of International Law in mimeographed form in the fall of 1943, has now been revised by the author for inclusion in the Division's series of studies in the administration of international law and organization. The monograph sets forth in detail the administrative procedure and experience growing out of the international control of drugs. Apart from its factual value, the record of that experience is of interest because it furnishes an outstanding example of the necessary coordination in control between national and international authorities in dealing with specific problems which extend across boundaries and affect the interests of all or of the majority of states. . . This study was written when drug control was under the authority of the League of Nations. No attempt has been made to alter the original references to the League and its organs because of the subsequent dissolution of the League." (Foreword) Index.

"This is a valuable record of effective international administration, and it raises provocative questions in the reader's mind regarding the applicability of the techniques of control developed empirically in the drug field to other areas where international regulation is indicated." W. J. Ronan

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1253 D '47 340w

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 40w

RENCH, WALTER FREEMAN. Roadway and track. 3d ed 550p il $5 Simmons-Boardman 625.17 Railroads—Maintenance and repair
47-1372

"Modern methods of roadway and track maintenance are described and illustrated in this new edition. . . While written particularly for track supervisors, roadmasters and other maintenance officers, the book contains information of interest to transportation and mechanical officers who require a working knowledge of the fundamentals of maintenance-of-way practice." (Special Libraries)

Booklist 43:294 My 15 '47

Eng N 138:96 Mr 6 '47 240w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:16 Ja '47

Special Libraries 38:88 Mr '47

RENICK, MRS MARION (LEWIS). Swimming fever; il. by Dwight Logan. 181p $2 Scribner 47-3747

A combination sports story and mystery, for ages ten to fourteen. In it young Bill who did not want to learn to swim, was caught by his love for a mystery, and learned to swim besides.

"There's sound instruction, with diagrams (and a psychological slant). Gay characters, and impulsive talkative hero, easy style and small town atmosphere."

+ Kirkus 15:284 Je 1 '47 80w

"The mystery on which the story is based is poor and unlikely. Children will read it, because this age group will read almost any mystery. It is not much for two dollars." B. W. Bell

+ Library J 72:962 Je 15 '47 70w

"This is the most amusing of this lively lot of stories and as useful as they all are."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Jl 20 '47 500w

"This book contains a great deal of information about swimming and its excellent illustrations and diagrams should prove helpful to beginning swimmers. This should appeal to the 10-to-14-year-old group, and together with swift action should hold the attention of many young readers. The book is weakened by a plot that is often either improbable or too obvious." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p27 Je 22 '47 150w

"This is a very amusing story filled with real and amusing people—especially Bill."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 S 6 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 Jl '47

RETTINGER, MICHAEL. Applied architectural acoustics. 189p il $5.50 Chemical pub. co.

729.21 Architectural acoustics 47-24608

"A handbook intended for the use of architects, engineers and others, concerned with the acoustical properties of buildings and rooms. The first half of the volume discusses the theoretical aspects of sound reflection, reverberation and absorption, and the factors which are responsible for good or bad acoustical conditions. The remaining chapters, based on a review of current practices, describes the essential features in the construction of motion picture theatres, scoring stages and broadcasting studios. The design of hospitals, churches and auditoria is also briefly reviewed. The book includes a list of thirty-four references and a tabulation of data regarding sound transmission loss and sound absorptivities of building materials, and the properties of acoustical materials." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1616 N 15 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:43 Jl '47

REVELL, LOUISA. Bus station murders. 183p $2 Macmillan

47-3058

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:143 Mr 1 '47 60w

"Miss Louisa Revell is a find in her bracket, and we like the bracket on the principle that some of these old ladies have more to say than the average young twerp of either sex, drunk or sober." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 My 18 '47 320w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 1 '47 140w

"Even those allergic to spinster-narrators may well want more of Miss Julia." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '47 120w

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 50w

REVUELTAS, JOSE. The stone knife [tr. by H. R. Hays]. 183p $2.50 Reynal

47-4724

An allegorical novel about Mexico. A group of Mexican peons and their parish priest, holding a wake for a neighbor's child, are caught by flood waters. They flee taking the corpse with them. Out of this flight the author manages to create a symbolic picture of man's struggle to acquire dignity and to free himself from enslavement.

Reviewed by Gilbert Neiman

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47 270w

"In a generally monotonous, sometimes effective translation, this, for a single-faceted aspect, has a feeling of The Underdogs in its presentation of a truly Mexican picture. For specialists in the Latin-American scene."

Kirkus 15:243 My 1 '47 110w

"Some readers may find the narrative sluggish and overweighted with symbolism; but this novel is also an important meditation on the Mexican world." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:960 Je 15 '47 110w

"The Stone Knife' is an eminently Mexican novel, structurally weak, as most Mexican novels are, but unified by something more powerful and all-pervading than plot, by mood —by attitude toward its characters and their fate and man's fate in general. It is rather the work of a poet than a novelist, turgid and overwritten in spots, where it wrestles in vain to express the inexpressible, but on the whole deeply moving, deeply revealing and effective." B. D. Wolfe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 S 28 '47 800w

"Reading the book is an experience of intellectual nightmare. One pushes through the freighted prose as through a jungle, snatching at intimations of light which are immediately swallowed up by new densities of symbolism and cosmic rumination. Or it is like watching, through a numbing obscurity, a somnambulist procession, moving one knows not where nor why, and bearing aloft shadowy totems, revealed in fitful gusts and gleams, at whose meaning one grasps and loses hold." A. S. Morris

N Y Times p18 Je 29 '47 650w

"A symbolic narrative that so intensely attempts to be so many things that it ends in passionate confusion. What does emerge from the violent, almost sadistic story is a sense of the conflicting social and spiritual forces in Mexico and, by extension, in the world today. Señor Revueltas' talent is regrettably undisciplined, as well as uncompromisingly forceful." New Yorker 23:80 Je 28 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 31 '47 650w

"José Revueltas has written this allegory with profound philosophical insight in which he explores the meaning of life and death and of the bonds between them. He has, furthermore, presented it in passages of surpassing beauty." Betty Kirk

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ag 2 '47 500w

REY, GUIDO. The Matterhorn; tr. from the Italian by J. E. C. Eaton; rev. and two add. chapters by R. L. G. Irving. 278p pl $4.50 Transatlantic

914.94 Matterhorn [47-16995]

"A well-known book which has been out of print, reissued in an English edition with numerous photographs." (Booklist) "Guido Rey's Matterhorn gives us the story of the struggle for the Matterhorn from the Italian standpoint. It was a valuable contribution to Alpine history and also one of the most attractive interpretations in literature of the magic of the mountains. . . Mr. Irving brings the story of the Matterhorn up to date by two most interesting chapters in which he describes the German conquest of the North Face and the Italian conquest of the South Face and Furggen ridge." (New Statesman & Nation)

Booklist 44:36 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Arnold Lunn

New Statesman & Nation 33:56 Ja 18 '47 420w

REY, HANS AUGUSTO (UNCLE GUS, pseud). Curious George takes a job. [il. by the author]. 47p $2.50 Houghton

47-5527

Picture storybook about an ingratiating little monkey named George, who escaped from the Zoo and went in search of the man with the yellow hat who brought him from Africa. His adventures were complicated by his great curiosity which got him into several strange predicaments. For ages four to eight.

Reviewed by Jane Cobb

Atlantic 180:144 D '47 40w

Booklist 44:75 O 15 '47

"The children who liked Mr. Rey's first story about George will find this one just as much fun with gay and realistic pictures of city scenes and a story full of unexpected realistic happenings." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:34 Ja '48 60w

Kirkus 15:500 S 15 '47 70w

REY, H. A.—Continued

"Lively plot and spirited drawings make this a good book for kindergarten children and beginning readers. Recommended." M. M. Smith

Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 23 '47 150w

"All this is told in a few well chosen words and pictures which bear the author-artist's inimitable stamp. If you want to wean 4 to 8-year-olds away from the comics you might start with this." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p37 S 21 '47 130w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:142 D 6 '47 60w

Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 50w

Springf'd Republican p13B Ja 18 '48 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

REYHER, MRS REBECCA, ed. Babies keep coming; an anthology. (Whittlesey house publication) 538p il $3.75 McGraw

808.8 Children in literature and art. Infants 47-4306

Over a hundred and fifty prose and verse selections, all about babies and parenthood. Illustrated with line drawings.

Booklist 43:356 JI 15 '47

"In all the years I have been reading and collecting short story anthologies, this is one of the most original and readable I've come across. . . This anthology shows painstaking effort, excellent taste, and an unbridled sense of humor." Nelson Olmsted

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 29 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:209 Ap 1 '47 100w

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 17 '47 170w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47 90w

REYNARD THE FOX. Rogue Reynard . . . written by Andre Norton, [pseud]; and pictured by Laura Bannon. 96p il $2.50 Houghton

47-3707

"Being a tale of the fortunes and misfortunes and divers misdeeds of that great villain, Baron Reynard, the Fox, and how he was served with King Lion's justice." (Subtitle) This retelling of the old story of Reynard is for grades four to seven.

"The old-fashioned diction in this adaptation, in combination with the rather heavy black-and-white illustrations and the medieval-looking format, is quite suited to the old beast saga but is, nevertheless, rather tiresome for modern readers."

Booklist 43:335 Je 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

"Each section is short and uncomplicated enough to hold interest and the sorry experiences of the different animals, rather than the clever tricks of crafty Reynard, enlist the reader's sympathy. Laura Bannon's humorous line drawings enter fully into the spirit of the animal actors." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:263 JI '47 90w

Kirkus 15:283 Je 1 '47 120w

"I like very much indeed the retelling of these stories of Reynard the Fox, and the delightful pictures by Laura Bannon are so full of humor and of the spirit of the stories that this is a distinguished book. Excellent type and binding." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:894 Je 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11 Je 15 '47 360w

"The stories are artfully bound together, retold in a prose which has just enough of the archaic to give it the proper flavor, and Laura Bannon's drawings, though essentially modern, suggest the vigor, richness and humor of the Middle Ages." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p25 JI 13 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:149 D 6 '47 40w

"This new edition is illustrated by Laura Bannon. . . They are strong black and white drawings, well designed and full of humor. For the text André Norton keeps to the rather formalized, stately wording of the early French editions. . . Reading the famous trial scene from pages like these, with the expressive drawings to emphasize the good and the bad beasts, one gets a fresh sense of the charm and cleverness of the tale. Wicked as Reynard was, he possessed that quality which endears the sinner to us even as we condemn him. This is an important edition of a story that will never lose its fascination."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 230w

Wis Lib Bul 43:121 JI '47

REYNOLDS, JAMES. World of horses; a conversation piece devoted to all aspects of the subject, horse: the way a human regards a horse and the way a horse regards a human. 259p il $5 Creative age

636.1 Horses—Legends and stories. Horses Agr47-204

A book about horses which shows the horse in the ancient, medieval and modern worlds. It is composed mainly of anecdotes about horses and their owners. Illustrated with photographs and drawings by the author.

Reviewed by Virginia Marmaduke

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 24 '47 270w

"A wealth of information difficult to obtain elsewhere in one volume. Deals in the main with the thoroughbred. . . Illustrations increase value of the book." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:533 Ap 1 '47 70w

"Mr. Reynolds goes about his work elaborately and some will think, with unnecessary swank. However, if you like horses, you will probably be interested."

+ New Yorker 23:119 Ap 12 '47 60w

"The combined talents, literary and artistic, mixed with his great love for horses, makes Mr. Reynolds' book a beautiful and very informative one, sure to be treasured by anyone who is at all fond of horses." J. G. F.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 My 18 '47 110w

REYNOLDS, JOHN MURRAY. Private life of Henry Perkins. 181p $2 Crowell

47-1833

"Tale about one of London's numerous colorless and uncomplaining cockneys who suddenly finds escape from the dreary realities of life through dreams. . . The war is still on in England, and Henry, with a limp keeping him out of the army, has to be content with his porter's job in a large block of London flats; his shrew of a wife runs their home with a high hand and treats their lodgers better than her husband. It is after Henry finds a peculiar foreign coin that his strange dreams begin. In rather quick succession, he assumes a wide variety of roles. . . When he tries to tell people about his dreams, he gets in trouble with everyone except Annie, Mrs. P.'s maid-of-all-work. . . How Henry manages to get his head out of the clouds and his feet on the ground is finally resolved by Mrs. P. and Annie." N Y Times

Christian Century 64:742 Je 11 '47 30w

Kirkus 15:136 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Clean, amusing but popularity difficult to estimate." G. W. Hill

Library J 72:734 My 1 '47 70w

"A story by an American who must know and love the people of London well to be able to enter so closely into their life and language." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 4 '47 600w

"John Murray Reynolds, an American, got to know England and its people when he was stationed there during the war as a Navy intelligence officer. Mr. Reynolds doesn't add any piercingly fresh or illuminating observations to the English scene or to his characterizations. Yet he does manage to portray them both amusingly and in a manner recognizable to a great many Americans. His style is easy and light, and the whimsical tone is established without forcing." Andrea Parke
+ N Y Times p20 My 11 '47 360w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47
140w

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 J1 '47

RHINE, JOSEPH BANKS. Reach of the mind.
234p il $3.50 Sloane

133.8 Psychical research 47-30743

"The Duke University psychologist who has pioneered in research on extra-sensory perception reviews progress made by experimenters in this field and describes further researches on psychokinesis. Rhine believes that subjects have demonstrated the capacity in ESP experiments to perceive symbols on cards, without sensory cues or space and time limitations, at a rate better than chance guessing. . . Rhine speculates on the implications of these findings for philosophy, religion and practical human affairs." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:45 O 1 '47

"The obvious integrity of the volume, combined with the stimulus it gives to look at the whole matter imaginatively as well as scientifically, should prove a valuable aid in gaining recognition for a science whose possibilities have only dimly begun to be perceived. It is his tentative attitude in the face of evidence which could make for much greater claims that will win many skeptics to the side of Dr. Rhine and should further stimulate intelligent adventuring into this field."

J. W. Rogers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 14 '47
360w

Kirkus 15:325 Je 15 '47 330w

Reviewed by A. I. Bryan
Library J 72:1031 J1 '47 130w

Reviewed by J. R. Newman
New Repub 117:25 D 15 '47 2400w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
O 19 '47 500w

Reviewed by B. F. Skinner
N Y Times p34 N 2 '47 1150w
New Yorker 23:102 S 20 '47 130w

Reviewed by A. Poff
San Francisco Chronicle p17 N 16 '47
300w

"As usual, Rhine writes calmly, but again the evidence he presents is so startling it will be received by most people emotionally rather than rationally. . . Readers who have themselves had experiences hardly explicable in other than psychic terms will be credulous. Most others will be skeptical, particularly if they have been exposed to considerable conservative academic training." Lucien Warner

Sat R of Lit 30:27 N 8 '47 1350w

School & Society 66:367 N 8 '47 10w

Wis Lib Bul 43:147 N '47

RHOADES, KNIGHT. She died on the stairway. 256p $2 Arcadia

47-18225

Detective story.

N Y Times p21 Ag 17 '47 150w

"Lightweight, but ingenious and often amusing." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 23 '47
80w

"Gallimaufry of garish characters and fantastic goings-on. Killer identifiable early in yarn—but tale has kind of horrible fascination."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 29 '47 40w

RHODE, JOHN, pseud. See Street, C. J. C.

RHYNE, CHARLES S. Labor unions and municipal employe law. 583p $10 Nat. inst. of municipal law officers

352 Municipal government. Trade unions—U.S. Collective bargaining 46-5649

"The first part of this book is devoted to a discussion of the law concerning 'relations between municipalities and labor unions where such relations are concerned with union membership of municipal employees and problems growing out of relations between city officers and labor unions as a result of such membership.' Extensive quotation from the decisions, opinions, and laws selected as expository material, together with the author's explanatory text, comprises the information on union relationships with municipalities. . . The appendix, consisting of 427 pages, contains texts of court decisions, opinions and briefs on the subject of union-municipal relations, of agreements between unions and public bodies, and finally, texts of A. F. of L. and CIO General Councils' statements on collective bargaining by public government bodies." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"No aspect of this controversial field, which is one of the most significant in the whole range of municipal government, is ignored. It would have been extraordinarily helpful had the able and learned compiler of this volume included more of his own analysis of the problems in government-employee relations. The broad issue of the right of employees to organize unions of their own choosing is treated only in terms of legislative enactments and court decisions; the broader questions of public policy and administration—which are bound to become increasingly important in the years ahead—are hardly touched upon. Even in the absence of critical analysis, however, the volume fills a long-felt need—and a major gap in the literature." Phillips Bradley

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:154 F '47 300w

Reviewed by Harry Sacher

Columbia Law R 46:1046 N '46 800w

Reviewed by Nathan Witt

Harvard Law R 60:850 My '47 950w

"The whole work leaves an inflated impression of the extent of actual law governing the employer-employee relation in municipalities, and a deflated impression of the extent of discretion enjoyed by individual municipal officials in setting the tone of that relation. In other words, problems presented by public employee unions need more than an academic survey of existing 'law' even in the wide sense used in this study. Yet the book's value will be reflected in the fact that both sides to the controversy will put parts of it to use with considerable conviction." J. J. McGinley

Pol Sci Q 61:634 D '46 600w

"The usefulness of the book is, of course, limited by the fact that it covers experience in the field through April 1, 1946; subsequent developments in this changing field can be traced only through later decisions. The book should, however, be useful as a source of material for opinions and briefs by state and city attorneys, and as an aid in the solution of specific problems arising in connection with public employment."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:85 Mr '47 270w

RICCIOTTI, GIUSEPPE. Life of Christ; tr. by Alba I. Zizzamia. 703p il $7.50 Bruce pub.

232.9 Jesus Christ—Biography 47-4285

"Father Ricciotti, Professor of Oriental Christian History at the University of Rome, is a world authority on Oriental literature, languages and geography. As a Catholic priest, he intends his book for the Catholic reader primarily, but his handling of his subject is neither dogmatic nor controversial. He accepts—as is expected—the supernatural interpretation of the life of Christ, while paying respect to what he calls the 'rationalists' interpretation.' Perhaps the most valuable part of the book lies in the vivid description of the background against which Jesus' life was spent, enriched by his knowledge of Oriental life and customs and tongues." Kirkus

RICCIOTTI, GIUSEPPE—Continued

"Not since Fourard's 'Life of Christ' have I come upon a 'Life of Christ' that combined readability with scholarship to the extent found in this present work of Father Ricciotti. The author, professor of Oriental Christian history at the University of Rome, has brought to his task a rich background of study and writing in matters oriental and scriptural. The translation by Miss Zizzamia, associate professor of Italian at Trinity College, is not scintillating, but it is effective. The result is 675 close-packed pages which contain all that the average person needs to know of New Testament times, places and persons. And there is very little here that the educated Catholic of today does not need to know." L. J. Trese

+ Commonweal 46:579 S 26 '47 600w

"On the whole, it is a thoroughly readable and exceptionally well presented book, and despite its evidence of thorough Catholic scholarship, laymen of both Catholic and Protestant persuasion would find it a simple, graphic portrayal of a great life."

+ Kirkus 15:305 Je 15 '47 160w

"Actors hope one day to play Hamlet and, by a similar urge, authors yearn to write the life of Christ. To Father Ricciotti the idea came when he lay near death in a field hospital on the Alps, and in this ample volume with its many plans and pictures the idea is fulfilled... The narrative itself is strictly according to the New Testament, but, like that ancient Scripture, it is objective rather than emotional. Even the Crucifixion is allowed to leave its own impress on the mind, and on the 'rhetoric' of Renan, as he calls it, Father Ricciotti pours contempt." P. W. Wilson

N Y Times p14 Ag 10 '47 320w

RICE, CRAIG (MRS LAWRENCE LIPTON)
(DAPHNE SANDERS, MICHAEL VENNING, pseudos), ed. Los Angeles murders. (Regional murder ser) 249p $3 Duell

364 Murder 47-4720

Anthology composed of descriptions of seven murder cases, all committed in the Los Angeles region. Contents: Madalynne Obenchain, 1921, by Mary Collins; Clara Phillips, 1922, by G. W. Yates; William Desmond Taylor, 1922, by E. S. Gardner; The "Walburger" case, 1922, by Guy Endore; Winnie Ruth Judd, 1931, by Geoffrey Homes; The rattlesnake murder, 1936, by E. D. Williams; The strange case of Louise Peete, 1944, by C. G. Booth.

"This is regrettably less impressive than the Jackson volume, but it does have some notable strengths: Earle Stanley Gardner's highly capable recollection of the facts and some of the rumors in the murder of William Desmond Taylor, Mary Collins' quietly amused retrospect of the case of Madalynne Obenchain and Charles G. Booth's history of the late, refined Louise Peete, executed rather for incorrigible stupidity than for murder." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 15 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:255 My 1 '47 160w

New Repub 117:28 Jl 7 '47 160w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Wkly Bk R p10 Jl 6 '47 230w

Reviewed by Russel Crouse

N Y Times p6 Ag 3 '47 550w

"Not as satisfactory as 'San Francisco Murders,' the preceding entry in this regional series."

New Yorker 23:100 Je 14 '47 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 15 '47 150w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 5 '47 40w

RICE, HAROLD. Within the ropes; champions in action. 194p $2 Stephen-Paul publishers, 367 Fulton st, Brooklyn 1, N.Y.

796.83 Boxing

47-17444

Blow-by-blow accounts of notable heavy championship fighting bouts from the 18th century to the present. Partial contents: English ring champions; Tom Cribb v. Molyneux; Sullivan v. Corbett; Corbett v. Fitzsimmons; Fitzsimmons v. Jeffries; Burns-Johnson v. Jeffries-Willard; Jack Dempsey; Joe Louis; Fighting names; Ring rules; Famous referees and announcers.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

"Entirely factual and soundly historical, without fancy writing or lily-paintings, it is a reliable addition to any sports reference library. And it is interesting to read." Harry Keck

+ N Y Times p26 F 16 '47 380w

RICE, WILLIAM B. Control charts in factory management. 149p $2.50 Wiley

658.532 Factory management. Sampling (statistics) 47-2484

"Demonstrates the basic functions of statistical control in manufacturing plants, emphasizing how the control chart technique can build economical quality into a product." Library J

Booklist 43:285 My 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1628 N 15 '46 40w

"The discussion is addressed to executives who may lack a working knowledge of statistics or control chart techniques. At the same time the author treats the basic concepts of variability and control in clear, understandable language, supplemented by numerous examples of control charts in action." D. J. Bolanovich

+ Management R 36:298 My '47 440w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:11 Ja '47

"Despite a somewhat illogical organization of subject-matter, Rice's examples of 'how it was done' have a ring of authority and should be of direct use to factory supervisors confronted with related problems." J. M. Juran

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 11 '48 110w

Special Libraries 38:52 F '47

RICH, HELEN. Spring begins. 307p $3 Simon & Schuster

47-3827

A little mining town in a cut in the Rockies is the scene of this novel. Angie at seventeen had married old George Sweet who was nearly fifty. After a year of unhappiness for Angie, George died, and the young widow had to take in boarders to earn her living. Of the four men who boarded at Angie's she picked the wrong man to love, but when he departed for Arizona, a better man took his place.

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

"This first novel shows a lot of promise, particularly in dialogue and the creation of atmosphere. The dialogue is as nearly reportorial as it possibly could be and still satisfy the postal authorities. And the reader sees and sickens of the April snow in the mountains and thrills with the first warm wind when spring begins." Olive Carruthers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 6 '47 320w

"The story is told with delicacy of feeling, but with no mincing of Buckbrush idiom and codes. Noteworthy for poignancy and restraint is the passage that describes the coming of Angie's father and mother, to sit, with love and sorrow, in judgment upon her. The author does not let Angie off easily, but such is Angie's real cleanness and honesty that the ending seems just, with Toby, the faithful one, saying, 'It's going to be all right, Angie.'" W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 5 '47 430w

Kirkus 15:201 Ap 1 '47 150w

"With delicacy and with restrained humor that holds tenderness, Miss Rich unfolds the story of the emotional conflict which holds the three together, Angie, Pandey and Toby. Miss Rich tells a warmly human story of people that have the freshness and the charm of the slightly raffish world they live in." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 J1
13 '47 500w

"Miss Rich is an eminently comfortable kind of writer, free from confusion, and with a high quotient of warmth. Her dialogue is flavorful, probably because she refrains from an overuse of salt, and the descriptions of the meals at Angie's boardinghouse are on a level with Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings' portraits of table pleasures." H. B. Parker

+ N Y Times p17 Je 29 '47 280w

"Conventionally bland and quite readable love story. . . Miss Rich works some very convincing mining-town atmosphere into a plot we have all liked for years. The result is good front-porch entertainment."

+ New Yorker 23:80 Je 28 '47 70w

RICHARDS, IVOR ARMSTRONG, Nations and peace; pictures by Ramon Gordon. 160p $2 Simon & Schuster

172.4 Peace, Basic English—Texts 47-4334

Using a vocabulary of less than four hundred words, a well known critic and student of semantics, has attempted to state the case for world government. The book is illustrated with about a hundred and fifty line drawings.

Christian Science Monitor p12 J1 19 '47
700w

"Ramon Gordon's basic but bright line drawings which illustrate each page do something to lift the book from the slough of reiteration, but they are not sufficient in themselves. The book is boring. If Professor Richards really wants to drive home certain facts to the American people—as the direct message to them at the end of the book indicates—perhaps he should temporarily abandon his crusade for an 850-word language. To a Russian or a Chinese learning English by the Basic method, the book might be a boon. To anyone aware of the rich vocabulary the author might have called on, it is merely irritating." A. L. Goodman

— + New Repub 117:27 J1 21 '47 850w

"The novelty of the presentation and the effectiveness of the illustrations will probably give this book a wide appeal. But how far it will actually advance the cause of world government is another question. Mr. Richards confines himself to the argument that only a world government can prevent war. He does not deal with any of the difficulties involved in setting up such a government." H. B. Parkes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 J1
27 '47 250w

"So much humane good-will has been compressed into this book that it is tempting to approve it without reservation. In seeking a short-cut, however, it cannot abolish the mountains. Mr. Richards is not free of the common fallacy of 'semanticists': the belief that confusions of language are the cause of our troubles, and that linguistic clarity will therefore save us. The truth is closer to the reverse. It is we who confuse our language. It is too easy to make words our scapegoat." James Burnham

+ — N Y Times p7 J1 20 '47 800w

"His text is as brief, as sensible, as pointed, and as well integrated with its adroit illustrations as one of Munro Leaf's books on behavior for children. One can only pray (if somewhat skeptically) that adults, laying aside their preconceptions, will be as willing to listen to Mr. Richards as children are to learn from Mr. Leaf." A. P. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47
110w

RICHARDSON, HENRY MARTYN, and WILSON, JAMES WATSON, eds. Fundamentals of plastics. 483p il $5 McGraw

668.4 Plastics 47-507

"This text grew out of an ESMWT course in plastic technology sponsored by Yale University and the New Haven YMCA Junior College. The purpose is to give students a broad view of the industry; covers fundamental principles underlying synthetic organic resins, plastic materials, manufacturing of plastic products, and testing and control of quality standards." (Library J) Index.

"Adequately fills the long-standing need for an authoritative and comprehensive textbook on plastics. . . The outstanding feature of the book is that all sections are written by men thoroughly familiar with their fields who have had first-hand industrial experience with the particular phase of plastics they describe. As a result the material is up to date and authentic. The volume, therefore, should prove very valuable as a textbook for the student of plastics and, because of its scope, should prove to be a useful addition to the library of the specialist." R. G. Fordyce

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1147 Ap 21 '47 370w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:981 J1 '46 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:15 Ja '47

RICHARDSON, MAURICE LANE, comp. Novels of mystery from the Victorian age. 678p $3.95 Duell

A47-159

Contents: The Woman in white, by Wilkie Collins; The Notting hill mystery, by anon; Carmilla, by J. S. Le Fanu; Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, by R. L. Stevenson.

"Only 'The Notting Hill Mystery' by Charles Felix is seriously inaccessible and it will prove of less interest to the general reader than any of the other [novels]." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47
80w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:31 Ag 4 '47 400w

"The mystery story is undoubtedly indebted to all these works on one ground or another, but it doesn't make them any easier to reread. If you have one of those comprehensive mystery shelves, however, you'll probably want to add this volume to it."

New Yorker 23:108 Ap 5 '47 110w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 30 '47

100w

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 40w

Time 49:106 Ap 7 '47 700w

RICHART, MRS MARY, Murder in the town; Professor Dixon's first case. 234p $2.50 Farrar, Straus

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:294 Je 1 '47 30w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 J1
13 '47 130w

"The story is mildly interesting." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p15 J1 6 '47 140w

"Tolerable."

Sat R of Lit 30:34 J1 19 '47 50w

RICHMOND, BERNICE, pseud. See Robinson, B. N.

RICHMOND, SIR HERBERT WILLIAM, Statesmen and sea power. 369p $5 Oxford

942 Great Britain—History, Naval, Sea power [A47-1888]

"Starting with the Age of Elizabeth, Admiral Richmond shows how British statesmen, as distinguished from the professional sailors, provided for the growth and power of the British Navy through long-range planning and direction. This penetrating study is an expansion of the Ford Lectures delivered at Oxford in 1943 and was published shortly before the author's death." Foreign Affairs

RICHMOND, H. W.—Continued

"With all its inevitable limitations, Statesmen and Sea Power remains a great book, one that is not written every day and that will live for many years, perhaps for ever." Herbert Rosinski

+ — Am Hist R 53:99 O '47 1000w

+ Foreign Affairs 26:229 O '47 60w

"Having been both a seaman and a professor of naval and imperial history at Cambridge, Admiral Richmond brings to his task a profound knowledge and experience, and the result is a book of outstanding value. It is a brilliant study of a particular aspect of history."

G. P. Griggs

+ Spec 177:490 N 8 '46 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p45 Ja 25 '47 5200w

RICHTER, ANNE (JONES), ed. See Literary prizes and their winners

RICHTER, CONRAD. Always young and fair. 177p $2 Knopf

47-1679

Psychological study of a beautiful but self-willed woman, Lucy Markle, whose fiancé was killed during the Spanish-American war, dedicated herself to keeping his memory alive, and refused to marry the man who offered his love. Years later, when she was shocked into the realization that she was growing old, Lucy came out of her obsession to marry the man who no longer loved her. The marriage, too, became a dedication and a thing of horror.

"The lovers in this new story live too long within their own rigid reserve; in shutting out life they also shut out some of the reader's interest." Edward Weeks

Atlantic 179:144 Ap '47 600w

Booklist 43:224 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Henry Rago

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 30 '47 270w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 28 '47 180w

"A new type of story for Conrad Richter, but done with a sure touch, fine technique."

+ Kirkus 15:106 F 15 '47 300w

"A beautifully nostalgic story of small-town life in Pennsylvania. Recommended." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 70w

New Repub 116:33 Ap 21 '47 120w

"The story is told in a minor key that holds the dark quality of tragedy. But psychologically it is never wholly convincing. One is left wondering why Lucy's feeling for Tom should have turned to hatred, why her indifference to Will should have turned to love. If madness is the explanation, why should Will, who was wholly sane, have submitted to a marriage he hated? The facts are there and the truth probably lies in them, but for fictional purposes they need deeper probing of the human heart and mind." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Mr 30 '47 650w

"Mr. Richter's writing in this book exhibits the grave lucidity, the quiet and faithful distinction, which has generally marked his work in the past. In his rendering of characters and events, as in his forceful yet never emphatic insistence upon meaning and implication, there is fine craftsmanship. A pale, dim, fragrant air comes up from this prose; there is little push and little pressure. The gentler manners and attitudes of another day, not so far removed from us in time as in feeling, are here very responsibly rendered." Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p4 Mr 30 '47 550w

"As an exercise in evoking the spirit of a small town steeped in a tranquillity that has departed from us forever, the narrative is most felicitous; as a study of a gentle, consecrated woman who ruthlessly sacrifices herself and everybody else, the novel may please you less than the author's previous historical chronicles. There can, however, be no two opinions about Mr. Richter's lucid prose and his unerring feeling for form."

+ — New Yorker 23:104 Ap 5 '47 120w

Reviewed by Cassie Meredith

Sat R of Lit 30:25 Ap 12 '47 360w

Time 49:110 Ap 7 '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:83 My '47

RICHTER, WALTHER. Fundamentals of industrial electronic circuits. 569p $4.50 McGraw

621.38 Electronics 47-839

"The purpose of this text is to give a clear understanding of the performance of electron tubes in fundamental combinations with other circuit elements. No special examples or applications described but the most recent combinations of interest to industrial electronic engineers, resistance capacity tuned oscillators, phase shift oscillators and circuits for photoelectric cells are included. Mathematical requirements are held to a minimum. Bridges the gap between the popular type and extremely technical books on the subject." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:8 Ja '47

"Walther Richter's [book] is written so that a storehouse of previous knowledge is not necessary to permit an absorption of the information which it presents. . . The author's desire to supply the link between the basic considerations on one hand, and the academically theoretical on the other, is achieved quite adequately. The result is a welcome addition to a personal technical library." J. G. Skalnik

+ R of Scientific Instruments 18:235 Ap '47 300w

RICKS, PEIRSON. Hunter's horn. 361p $3 Scribner

47-11037

A novel portraying life in post-bellum North Carolina. The scene is an old plantation house where Uncle Benjamin holds forth with his hounds and what remains of Southern hospitality. His grand-nephew Conway falls in love with a poor-white girl whom he knows he can never marry, and touches off the spark which leads to the death of his beloved uncle.

Kirkus 15:348 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Competent, but short of inspired." R. E. Kingery

Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 80w

"Mr. Ricks knows his native North Carolina, but it is not knowledge alone but an act of creative imagination in reconstructing a past era and peopling it with characters motivated by credible passions which is the measure of the success of 'The Hunter's Horn.'" Coleman Rosenberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 O 26 '47 400w

"Something must be said for the style which is so unobtrusive that only afterward does the reader notice with what precision and effectiveness it has lent itself to everything from describing the weather or a sunrise to adding an amusing footnote to Southern hospitality—how to get rid of an unwelcome guest." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p10 S 28 '47 500w

RIDER, JOHN FRANCIS, and ROWE, GEORGE CLEMENS BAXTER. Radar; what it is. 72p il pa $1 Rider, J.F.

621.38 Radar 46-6659

"A non-technical explanation of radar with such details of radar installations as will help the layman to understand some of their applications is presented by this publication. There is a brief chapter on theory, followed by a discussion of the apparatus of radar, from the basic assembly capable of radio detecting, to the beam of radio energy sent out by the transmitting antenna. The latter part of the book is concerned with the military applications of radar in the ground forces, air forces, and at sea. Both of the authors served with the Army Signal Corps during World War II, and both were concerned with the preparation and editing of radar literature." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:45 J1 '46

RIEDMAN, SARAH REGAL. How man discovered his body; il. by Frances Wells. 128p $2.25 Int. pubs.

612 Physiology—Juvenile literature
Med47-2468

An account of the scientific discoveries and developments in physiology from the time of the early Greeks to the present. Stresses the contributions of Vesalius, Harvey, Newton, Pavlov, and others. Written for grades seven to nine. Chronology. Index.

Booklist 44:189 Ja 15 '48
Kirkus 15:603 N 1 '47 50w

"A very useful book in a field which has, so far, been inadequately covered for young people twelve to sixteen." Dorothea Dawson
+ Library J 72:1695 D 1 '47 70w

"A continuous lively narrative whose interest is sustained by continually finding out what each discovery contributed to the knowledge we now have of the human body." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 11 '48 220w

"Told in terms that children can easily understand."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 30w

RIESENBERG, FELIX, 1913- Galapagos bound! smuggling in the tuna fleet. 161p $2.25 Dodd

47-2148

Adventure story for older boys and girls in which murder, opium smuggling, tuna fishing and secret operators from the State department all have a part.

"A first-rate adventure story. . . There is excellent, authentic information on tuna fishing which in no way interferes with the story. Recommended for older boys and girls." C. W. Field
+ Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap 27 '47 290w

"If treason, deaths by violence and the eventual triumph of justice are not enough to recommend this tale, young readers will find an especially rich reward in the chapters which give a detailed and absorbing account of commercial tuna fishing as it is done by the fearless men of the fishing fleet, as well as the salty eye-witness report of a tuna clipper's heroic struggle against that most terrifying of storms, the Chubasco." H. B. Lent
+ N Y Times p27 Ap 6 '47 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:35 J1 12 '47 80w

RIETVELD, JANE. Nicky's bugle; il. by [the author]. 56p $2 Viking

47-24294

More than anything else in the world Nicky wanted a bugle, one that he could play on for the soldiers in a pioneer fort in Wisconsin. How Nicky finally made a deal with Louie, the sutler, is told in this story for eight to ten year olds.

Booklist 44:117 N 15 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
+ Cath World 166:239 D '47 120w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:443 N '47 80w
Kirkus 15:393 Ag 1 '47 120w

"The black-and-white stylized illustrations by the author create an excellent atmosphere of the times." N. L. Rathbun
Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 60w

"Here is an author-illustrator who seems well worth watching: She can tell a real story two-ways at once, with words and pictures." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 16 '47 290w

Reviewed by J. B. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 30 '47 100w

"A good story with many lovely lithographs that make its background very real."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 15 '47 70w
Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

RIGBY, DOUGLAS. Moustachio; pictures by Roger Duvoisin. [31p] $1.50 Harper

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-11530

Moustachio was a little dog, the smallest in the village, but nevertheless when all the village hunters went out with their dogs to kill a wild boar, Moustachio's master insisted that he and his little dog should go along. And in the end, tho Moustachio was interested only in mice and grasshoppers, he and his master were the heroes of the day.

Booklist 44:175 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p17a D 3 '47 60w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore
Horn Bk 24:25 Ja '48 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:34 Ja '48 90w

"A playful story with very suitable illustrations."

+ Kirkus 15:599 N 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Gertrude Andrus
Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 60w

"How did it happen that Moustachio alone cornered the red-eyed beast in his lair? M. Jambon never told all the story to his friends, but children, who have a fellow-feeling for all small creatures, will enjoy learning the secret of how Moustachio, in his single-minded fashion, unwittingly became a hero. They will like, too, the sense of loyalty which underlies this funny, unusual story and they will especially like the drollery of the very French pictures. For 5 to 8 year olds." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p61 N 9 '47 180w

"A very amusing story with spirited drawings. It is printed in black and red, and we wish that the red had been omitted."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 60w

RIGGS, ARTHUR STANLEY. Titian, the magnificent and the Venice of his day. 390p il $5 Bobbs

B or 92 Titian (Tiziano Vecellio) 46-8125

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"A leisurely, authoritative analysis of Titian's art and historic position, a sincere unbiased evaluation of Titian's strengths and weaknesses, failures and successes, a scholarly study that can never quite break away from the books and express unrestrained enthusiasm, this biography is a valuable contribution to our understanding of a master whose influence the greatest of his contemporaries and successors freely acknowledged." Henrietta Hardman
+ Atlantic 179:142 Mr '47 390w

Booklist 43:204 Mr 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p15 N 8 '47 100w

Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47

RIGGS, ARTHUR STANLEY. Velázquez, painter of truth and prisoner of the king. 325p pl $4 Bobbs

B or 92 Velázquez, Diego Rodríguez de Silva y 47-11792

"A student of Velázquez since 1906, the author of the book portrays the Spanish master against the historic background of Spain and the contemporary world. His Velázquez is impersonal, almost a mere introduction to his life, and his story a mere introduction to his work; but readers who prefer a scholarly treatment to fictionalized biographies will find the book highly instructive and interesting." (Commonweal) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. M. Gosta

+ Commonweal 47:330 Ja 9 '48 390w

Reviewed by A. S. Plaut

Library J 72:1689 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by G. P. du Bois

N Y Times 77 Ja 25 '48 470w

"An earnest, painstaking, but unfortunately pedestrian biography. . . The known facts of Velázquez's life are so meagre that Mr. Riggs has had to lean heavily on conjecture, but of a plausible and intelligent sort. He clearly knows a good deal about seventeenth-century Spain, and he is able to write entertainingly of the period, if not of his main character."

+ — New Yorker 23:138 N 22 '47 90w

RILKE, RAINER MARIA. Life of the Virgin Mary; tr. with an introd. and notes by C. F. MacIntyre. 55p $2.50 Univ. of Calif.

831 Mary, Virgin—Poetry 47-12479

Religious poems translated from the German, with the original text on facing pages.

"These are beautiful religious poems. . . Around them, in his usual contented fashion, Mr. MacIntyre arches, purrs, rubs against your knee to be stroked when you are trying to read. No translator of Rilke, so far as I know, can be as exasperating, as obtrusive as MacIntyre, and none is as good as he is at his best." Rolfe Humphries

+ — Nation 165:686 D 20 '47 230w

"These little poems of the 'Life' partake of some of the quality of the best poems—a conversational tone that is at the same time curiously hymnlike and revelatory. . . The translations seem to me to be of good quality; they avoid the literalness that Rilke has suffered from in English, and transmit an explosive and lyric sense of discovery that has come to be one of several of Rilke's unique signatures." Harvey Breit

+ N Y Times p26 D 14 '47 200w

RIMBAUD, JEAN NICOLAS ARTHUR. Prose poems from The illuminations; in a new tr. by Louise Varèse. 141p $1.50 New directions

841 46-20701

A new translation of the prose poems of the French poet who has been styled the "father of Symbolism." The French and English versions of the poems are on facing pages.

"Louise Varèse is expert with the dictionary, but because grammar at times bores her she succeeds in spoiling one of Rimbaud's best poems. . . If they had been the result of an attempt to convey some of Rimbaud's music and rhythms to the American reader, these mistakes would not matter in the least. But Mrs. Varèse is painstakingly uninspired. A single poem of Hart Crane's, for instance, though not at all derivative, can give you more of the essence of Rimbaud than all these translations together. They do, of course, keep one from having to turn too often to the dictionary." René Blanc-Roos

— Nation 164:49 Ja 11 '47 850w

Reviewed by Louise Bogan

New Yorker 22:121 N 9 '46 500w

"I am ready to congratulate any translator of Rimbaud's verse or prose on his temerity and should welcome an occasion for wholehearted praise. So far no such occasion has presented itself and I am sorry to report that Louise Varèse is only very slightly better than the rest. . . I don't believe in blue-penciling but, much as I like Mrs. Varèse's earlier work, I think that her latest effort does her little credit." F. C. Golfing

Poetry 69:286 F '47 750w

"This is a most useful treatment of the famous prose poems by the great French Symbolist." G. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 O 6 '46 90w

RIMINGTON, CRITCHELL, ed. Sea Chest; a yachtsman's reader. 355p $3.50 Norton

797.14 Yachts and yachting. Seafaring life 47-6743

An anthology of short stories and some articles about yachting, chosen from a yachting digest called The Sea Chest which Mr Rimington edited for several years before the last war.

Kirkus 15:498 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Edward Schriffgiesser

N Y Times p14 Ja 11 '48 180w

"Notable for the unusual quality of its writing. Some of the material is pretty technical, but the rest of it ought to interest anyone who takes even the most casual pleasure in small boats."

+ New Yorker 23:139 N 22 '47 90w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47 120w

RINDL, JOHANN, and GUMPERZ, JULIAN (YPSILON, pseud). Pattern for world revolution. 479p $3.50 Ziff-Davis

335.441 Communism 47-2221

"A vigorously anti-Soviet account of the tactics, events and personalities involved in the continuing campaign for communist world revolution from 1917 until now. The Comintern, dissolved in 1943, was succeeded by the 'Stalintern.' The two anonymous authors who are included under one pseudonym are said to have been on the inside of the communist movement for many years." Christian Century

"Although the value of the volume is lessened by the anonymity of the authors, a student of the international communist movement will find in this publication revealing comments, particularly on the various activities and developments which took place in the 1920's."

Am Hist R 52:791 Jl '47 40w

"This is a fascinating story of the men and women of the Communist International who, imbued with revolutionary ideas, fought for Comintern throughout the world." R. H. Lutz

+ Ann Am Acad 253:206 S '47 550w

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube

Canadian Forum 27:91 Jl '47 390w

Reviewed by F. S. Marquardt

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 22 '47 450w

Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 70w

"Ypsilon" envisages the story of the Comintern from its founding in 1919 to its dissolution in 1943 as a record of decline and frustration. . . This review scarcely does justice to the wealth of concrete incident and personality portrayal that this very readable volume contains. Very valuable are the sympathetic descriptions of Bukharin, Zinoviev, Radek, Chicherin, Lukacz, Savinkov, Rakovsky, Duclos, Mao-Tse-Dun, Nguyenai-Quoc, and others." S. B. Barnes

+ Christian Century 64:713 Je 4 '47 800w

"Publication of such a book as Pattern for World Revolution strikingly reflects the poor state of America's relations with the Soviet Union—not in what this book has to say on the 'West-East split'; but in the way it hurls its salvos of indiscriminate charges against the Moscow government and in the cloak-and-dagger style in which the case is presented. . . To hold Russia responsible for almost everything that has gone wrong since the Axis surrender means not only defeating the cause for which one fights; it also means that the authors must have a distorted opinion of American intelligence, sense of justice, and memory. Apart from biographical details, concerning a number of Communist key figures, the book contributes little new information on the Soviet Union. It abounds, however, in statements for which no satisfactory evidence is established—or any evidence, at all—and in snap judgments and insinuations." E. S. P.

— Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 22 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:582 Je '47 70w

Kirkus 15:147 Mr 1 '47 150w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

N Y Times p5 Ja 18 '48 850w

Social Studies 38:240 My '47 30w

Times [London] Lit Sup p303 Je 21 '47 750w

RINEHART, MARY (ROBERTS) (MRS S. M. RINEHART). Mystery book. 442p $3 Rinehart

47-31048

Three of the author's early mystery stories are reprinted in this volume. Contents: The Circular Staircase; The Man in Lower Ten; The Case of Jennie Brice.

Booklist 44:92 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:379 Jl 15 '47 70w

"Rereading them is like meeting old friends whom one has not seen in years and recalling scenes and incidents that have long lain dormant in the memory. . . If you have never read these stories, now is your chance. If you read them years ago, you will find that they have lost nothing of their power to thrill and entertain." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p42 O 26 '47 130w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 5 '47 50w

"Worth reading—again."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 40w

RING, ADAM, pseud. See Reed, B.

RIVES, FERN (MRS ROGER M. JONES). Too much to ask. 216p $2.50 Putnam

47-2144

Jane Evans, the "sensible" member of her family, in which her mother and sister are supposed to be the talented ones, attempts to straighten things out during her two weeks' vacation. But it was "too much to ask" and Jane did some successful experimenting on her own life. The scene is Hollywood.

Booklist 44:33 S 15 '47

Kirkus 15:135 Mr 1 '47 100w

"This is a pleasantly simple novel to recommend to women who want 'a good clean story,' or to young girls." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:639 Ap 15 '47 70w

"Miss Rives' eye is as quick as a camera lens for catching details, whether it's a boarding house dinner, or a party at the swanky studio of a bachelor-between-divorces. She knows how people talk and what they're thinking about. And not unmindful of the reader she knows that froth, with just the right amount of substance, can be the recipe for diverting reading." Anne Richards

+ N Y Times p31 My 4 '47 200w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47 60w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CAR-NAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseud.). Murderer's mistake. 286p $2 Arcadia

47-30646

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47 90w

Kirkus 15:377 Jl 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 31 '47 150w

"The narrative proceeds at a leisurely pace, thus permitting the reader to share Macdonald's enjoyment of the scenes and the folkways of the Lancashire countryside." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 31 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47 70w

"Good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 23 '47 40w

RIVETT, EDITH CAROLINE (CAROL CAR-NAC, E. C. R. LORAC, pseud.). Striped suitcase. 191p $2 Doubleday

47-5860

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 31 '47 180w

"A crime puzzle which is as absorbing as it is difficult."

+ N Y Times p36 S 7 '47 180w

"Pleasant reading, competently handled."

+ New Yorker 23:68 Ag 30 '47 100w

ROARK, ELTON. Just a mutt. (Whittlesey house publication) 204p il $2.50 McGraw

636.78 Dogs—Legends and stories

Ag47-158

Collection of true dog stories, some of them very short, collected by a newspaper columnist on the Memphis Press-Scimitar.

Booklist 43:275 My 1 '47

"No particular distinction in presentation, but distinctive dogs for an inveterate audience of dog lovers, of all ages."

Kirkus 15:90 F 1 '47 100w

"Style is journalistic, but the stories will appeal to dog-lovers of almost any age. Good make-up." M. A. Herr

Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. S. Lemmon

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29 My 4 '47 370w

ROBB, LOUIS ADAMS. Engineers' dictionary; Spanish-English and English-Spanish. 423p $6 Wiley

620.3 Engineering—Dictionaries. Spanish language—Dictionaries 44-3014

For descriptive note see Annual for 1944.

"The pages have two columns and the print is clear and legible. The quality of paper and the binding in flexible, maroon, leatherette cloth are excellent. This volume is comparable to Sell's English-Spanish Comprehensive Technical Dictionary. . . . Although much less expensive, it is limited to terms used in civil engineering and some closely related fields, while the Sell dictionary covers a wide range of technical subjects. The latter, however, does not have a Spanish-English vocabulary, translating only from English into Spanish. Both emphasize the variations in the Spanish terms used in different South American countries to express one English meaning. The Engineers' Dictionary is recommended for scientific or business libraries and for public libraries where there is demand for an authoritative dictionary in the field of engineering."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:16 Ap '46 500w

ROBBINS, MRS ANN BROKAW (ROE). How to cook well. 748p il $2.50 Crowell

641.5 Cookery

46-5493

"The distinguishing feature of this cook book is that it explains as it goes along. Not a book for the cook who must whip up something in a hurry but should be just right to recommend to the bride who takes her business seriously." Wis Lib Bul

ROBBINS, A. B.—Continued

"This is the kind of cookbook I have been hoping for, one that is not only original and informative in its inclusion of tempting dishes, but that supplies the know-how for the cook who would become a better cook. It is a miniature Cordon Bleu for the American housewife."

+ Kirkus 14:215 My 1 '46 170w

"I have no doubt that Ann Robbins' suggestions on methods and techniques in cooking will furnish new ideas to many a woman who has had the notion she knows a good deal about how to get the best out of her kitchen." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Jl 15 '47 150w
Wis Lib Bul 43:19 Ja '47

ROBBINS, ROLAND WELLS. Discovery at Walden. 60p il $2.50 The author, R.F.D. 1, Concord, Mass.

B or 92 Thoreau, Henry David 47-3073

"A convincingly documented account of the author's discovery of the site of Thoreau's hut at Walden Pond, with photographic recordings of the work by seven witnesses." Christian Science Monitor

Christian Science Monitor p17 My 24 '47 50w

"Robbins, who calls himself a 'Thoreau Yankee,' tells his story with shrewd, homespun, naively humorous quaintness. And with devotion, too. 'In my heart,' he writes, 'I lived with Henry for several months.' That is easy to believe. In summing up he adds, 'Maybe I did it the hard way. But then I did it my way. And by doing it my way I found a contentment suitable for my way of life.' One can agree with Walter Harding that the record of this achievement is 'scholarly in the best sense of the word.' Photographs of the chimney foundation and of other items unearthed contribute to the book's authority." Townsend Scudder

+ New Eng Q 20:274 Je '47 750w

"It was an exciting quest and discovery for Mr. Robbins, and he writes of it with highly personal ardor and a somewhat individual sense of humor."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Mr 16 '47 360w

ROBERT, DAPHNE. New trade-mark manual; a handbook on protection of trade-marks in interstate commerce. 375p $6.50 Bur. of nat. affairs

347.7 Trade marks 47-2325

"An analysis of the Lanham Trade-Mark Act, with case citations and excerpts from the legislative history of the Act which may be of assistance in interpreting and construing its provisions. Intended for use by trade-mark owners and lawyers alike. This manual sets forth the 'dos' and 'don'ts' which should be recognized if the full benefits of the law are to be realized by trademark owners." Management R

"As a prediction of the manner and direction in which the law will be construed, the manual constitutes the expression of a well-informed opinion substantiated in part by the legislative history of the Act, set out in the appendix."

+ Columbia Law R 47:705 My '47 130w
Management R 36:238 Ap '47 30w

ROBERTS, CECIL. And so to America. 535p il $5 Doubleday

917.3 U.S.—Description and travel 47-11071

Not long after the beginning of World War II the author came to the United States on a lecture tour, with the intention of influencing the Americans in favor of his country. His few months stretched out into six and a half years.

The book is an account of his lecture tours and his friends in the United States. Bibliography.

Booklist 44:132 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:454 Ag 15 '47 250w

"His impressions of America are, on the whole, agreeable, although he is somewhat dubious about our future, since he is under the impression that democracy produced both Hitler and Mussolini. That is, perhaps, an adequate measure of the depth of his penetration into the real life of this country." G. W. Johnson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 14 '47 550w

Reviewed by Russell Maloney

N Y Times p32 N 2 '47 850w

Reviewed by J. L. Winterich

— Sat R of Lit 30:18 D 13 '47 750w

ROBERTS, DOROTHY JAMES. Mountain journey. 279p $3 Appleton-Century

47-19428

The action takes place in a few hours of a hot August night in the oil country of West Virginia. Cace Marlowe who owns and drills wells on the mountain; his wife Laurel; and Payn, one of their workers, are the characters. A landslide has cut off the Marlowes from their route to the hospital, when Laurel realizes that her child is soon to be born. Altho there is a route by water, Laurel's terror of water keeps her from it. So husband and wife start to walk over the mountain, and their son is born in a church at the mountain's top.

Reviewed by E. B. Knight

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Jl 6 '47 420w

"[There is] sustained interest here, even if directed on an experience which only women (and not all women) will want to read about."

Kirkus 15:195 Ap 1 '47 160w

"By indirection, Miss Roberts gives a fresh and interesting picture of the West Virginia mines, first salt mines, then oil wells, and the various tides of migration that have ebbed and flowed around the mountains. In character as well as event the immediate story also is vivid and forceful. The contrast between Cace's and Laurel's outlook on the events of the night and the people about them—in part, the contrast between a man's and a woman's approach—seems to me especially interesting. 'The Mountain Journey' is an unusual and effective novel." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 27 '47 450w

"The whole action of the story takes place within a matter of hours, but suspense, fear, humor and tragedy stalk the minutes. . . It is in the superbly realistic account of the mountain trek that Miss Roberts strikes her high note of story telling. The pull of emotions between man and wife are completely human. . . Yet the emotional impact of the story proper is weakened by the long historical flashbacks about Cace's oil-pioneering forebears and by the lengthy discourses between Cace and the school teacher during their vigil with Laurel." Andrea Parke

+ — N Y Times p12 My 4 '47 440w

ROBERTS, HOWARD. Chicago Bears. 248p il $3 Putnam

796.33 Chicago football club (National football league) 47-31102

History of the professional football team called the Chicago Bears, from their origin in 1920, when they were known as the Staleys of Decatur, Illinois, to their game with the New York Giants in 1946. Contains many anecdotes of such players as Red Grange, Sid Luckman, Paddy Driscoll, and others.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Jack Clarke

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 24 '47 360w

"There have been several books, of varied quality, that have had pro sports teams for topics. Howard Roberts' job belongs in the better category. . . Mr. Roberts' treatment of his subject is, in the main, restrained and is done with a minimum of the 'rah rah' spirit." J. C. Nichols

+ N Y Times p10 O 5 '47 270w

ROBERTS, KATHARINE. And the bravest of these. 311p $2.75 Doubleday

940.53144 Reconstruction (1939-)—Belgium. Belgium—Description and travel 46-8088

"A report on Belgium today, written by an American who was the first woman correspondent in Belgium after the last war, and who returned in 1945. She saw a ravaged country and its people bravely picking up again and starting on a conscientious twenty year plan. She describes the bomb damage, retails the exploits of the underground, the White Brigade, the Armies of Liberation. She interviews prisoners of war, the prime minister, Van Acker, a spokesman for Prince Regent Charles, and others. She tours the Ardennes battlefield. A potpourri:—the question of the monarchy; the shortage of coal, malnutrition and lack of food; the American Army of Occupation; economic rehabilitation versus inflation, etc." Kirkus

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

Foreign Affairs 25:701 J1 '47 10w

Kirkus 14:512 O 1 '46 100w

"Good source material." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 73:42 Ja 1 '48 30w

"Belgium is a handy spot in which to make a study of what the Germans did to Europe. The country is small but diverse. The people are intelligent, industrious and articulate. Soon after the recent shooting had ceased, Katharine Roberts, who had known the land during and after the earlier world war, returned there to learn at first hand what had happened to familiar places and people. To read her rambling account is not unlike listening to an observant traveler, bubbling with impression, freighted with facts, sometimes unrelated, occasionally unimportant but interesting to those who care about the subject." Edward Angly

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 D 29 '46 900w

"Her book is lavishly stocked with information on Belgian politics, economics, finance, industry, labor, and social and educational problems. But what will perhaps be of particular interest to the average reader is the light she throws on what has become known in Belgium as 'that royal question.' She presents an objective report, with many heretofore unpublished details, on Belgium's thorniest problem—King Leopold." Andre Visson

+ N Y Times p32 D 15 '46 750w

Reviewed by A. F. Wolfe

Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ja 11 '47 650w

ROBERTS, KENNETH LEWIS. Lydia Bailey. 488p $3 Doubleday

46-11883

"A susceptible young Maine lawyer who has fallen in love with the portrait of a girl he believes to be in Haiti reaches the island just as Napoleon's attempt to take over the government sets off the bloody Negro uprising under Toussaint. The hero finds the girl, and from that point the extremely elaborate plot carries them through an encounter with Tobias Lear, the pig-headed evil genius of Jefferson's State Department; spirited engagements against the French; capture by Barbary pirates and slavery in Tripoli; and, finally, the Tripolitan War and its intrigues and political jealousies." New Yorker

"I wish Mr. Roberts had a clearer sense of what to eliminate from his first drafts. His novels, even the best of them, have a tendency to sprawl, and in this case, as in Northwest Passage, there are a beginning, a middle, and an end, and then without pause for breath, another beginning and middle and end. It adds up to too much, and in the protraction, in the constant shift from one background to the next, the main characters lose their orientation, they become flat rather than forceful, the victims of romance rather than of a reality. But in the heat and the fighting at Haiti . . . in his vignettes of rapine and slaughter, Mr. Roberts achieves verisimilitude. The compulsion here comes from the clash and color of the incidents, rather than from any character." Edward Weeks

+ — Atlantic 179:128 F '47 800w

Booklist 43:133 Ja 1 '47

Bookmark 8:15 Mr '47

"Lydia Bailey turns out to be a strangely cool young woman whom Hamlin dearly loves, but who, for all of Roberts' efforts, does not come through as a live and attractive personality. Even in the last quarter of the novel when, a prisoner of the Bashaw of Tripoli, she runs a one-man secret service for the aid of Hamlin and the American Navy, she is off-stage, a dim and distant figure who in a brief space has learned Arabic, won the confidence of her captain and become a mine of information. Roberts was apparently so deeply engrossed in the historical narrative, which is intriguing, that he did not incorporate her architecturally into his structure. Lydia is an excuse for a romance and nothing more. The travel descriptions are excellent." Louis Zara

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ja 5 '47 1050w

"Here is action almost without breathing-spell, here is history come to life, and it could not be this author's book if there were not also fierce partisanship, based in this case on six years of study. If anything, the action is more continuous, the clash and turmoil more spectacular, and in some respects more unusual, than in his previous novels. Probably the wise and beautiful Lydia for whom the book is named, is no more real than Mr. Roberts's other heroines; but this is a man's book, anyway, though as many women are sure to read it with delight for the extraordinary sweep of the narrative—some of them for the significance that Mr. Roberts imparts to this portrayal of the Federal period in American history." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 Ja 2 '47 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p4 Ja '47

"Mr. Roberts' reputation as America's foremost historical novelist is so firmly established by 'Rabble in Arms,' 'Northwest Passage' and 'Oliver Wiswell' that the imperfections of 'Lydia Bailey' are rather striking. It is not that this last book is uninteresting or unimportant. Far from it. . . The style is vivid and forceful throughout, with more blasphemy and vulgarity than the situations require. And in King Dick we have a gaudy, amoral survival of the tradition of the rogue novel." F. X. Connolly

+ — Commonweal 45:401 Ja 31 '47 1000w

Kirkus 14:553 N 1 '46 230w

Reviewed by H. G. Kelley

Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse

Manchester Guardian p3 S 26 '47 170w

"It is a capital tale, packed with action and adventure and with history. Mr. Roberts assures us that the history is based on years of careful search in obscure volumes and in manuscript collections. How thorough that search was, and how faithfully Mr. Roberts has reproduced his findings, or how far he has yielded to the necessities of the fictional form of his narrative, we cannot tell. We had not heretofore supposed that Toussaint was quite as admirable a character as he is here painted, that poor Bainbridge was as culpable, Barron as weak, Eaton as heroic, or Lear as despicable as they are here portrayed. But there is no room for subtlety in a story of this kind, nor is Albion Hamlin in a position to weigh evidence or reserve judgment." H. S. Com-mager

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ja 5 '47 2600w

"The strongest, most emotionally effective material in the novel is that concerned with Haiti. For his descriptions of the jungle war and the riots in the streets of Cap François, Mr. Roberts shales off all the wraps and the asterisks. By piling up details of action, often hideous, he presents huge and violent scenes crowded with the ferocity and cruelty of a numerous community caught in an absolute and almost mindless desperation. After this the final section of the book comes as an anticlimax, offering considerably more information on a neglected little known phase of our history than it does emotion. Through it all, however, and almost as though between the lines, there is that attitude toward the world, generous, responsive, alert, most of all, actively participating. Whatever the ups and downs of the writing, dialogue or plot, it is unfailingly good to share." Robert van Gelder

ROBERTS, K. L.—Continued
+ — N Y Times p1 Ja 5 '47 1450w

"Neither the hero nor the heroine is very interesting, but the scenes through which they pass are exceedingly so, and Mr. Roberts has made of them a very readable novel, animated with a lively sense of what was going on in the exciting first years of the nineteenth century."
+ — New Yorker 22:70 Ja 4 '47 160w

"The story avoids finely phrased philosophies, but identifies itself with the present through its declaration for the freedom of nations and individuals. Here is vigorous, effective writing coming nearer the narrative gusto of Dumas than anything we have had in a long time."
Jane Voiles
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 12 '47 900w

"The special qualities which have made Kenneth Roberts a master of historical fiction have never been better exhibited than in this crowded tale of adventure in the years of the Haitian rebellion and the Barbary pirates. Vigor, sincerity, reach of vision; ability to create breathless suspense; the imagination to see a thousand scenes as they actually occurred, and the pictorial power to place them before the reader; a courageous fidelity to his own unconventional interpretation of historical events and personages; a deep feeling for the fears, hates, and heroisms of men—these are his virtues." Allan Nevins
+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ja 4 '47 1300w

"As a narrative it lacks the fire and dramatic punch of Northwest Passage, the unity and cogency of Oliver Wiswell, but as history it is packed with enough facts to fill a college course lasting two semesters."
Time 49:92 Ja 6 '47 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p545 O 25 '47 390w

"In addition to telling a good story, this historical novel sharpens awareness of the importance of characters and episodes in United States history from 1800 to 1805. . . Hamlin and Lydia Bailey are full bodied characters whose stature grows as they overcome adversity. Equally well drawn are many historical personages like Judge Samuel Chase, Tobias Lear, Toussaint L'Ouverture, Commodore John Rodgers, and General William Eaton. Their leading traits accord with known facts, and their imagined conversation is based upon letters, diaries, and official records. Many social, political, and ethical comments give depth, at times universality, to characters and incidents. . . Beneath its seemingly artless surface the simple, direct style hides a wealth of detailed scholarly information, and every device of fiction to secure rapid pace and heightened effects."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:138 Je '47 360w
Wis Lib Bul 43:38 F '47

Reviewed by Orville Prescott
Yale R n s 36:573 spring '47 550w

ROBERTS, PENFIELD. Quest for security, 1715-1740. (Rise of modern Europe) 300p il $4; college ed $3 Harper 940.22 Europe—History 47-3219

"Like others in this series on European history, this volume is not an attempt to give only a factual, chronological record, but is primarily a study of political, social, and economic trends and developments of the period examined. For student and general reading. Annotated bibliography." (Booklist) Index.

Reviewed by A. M. Willson
Am Hist R 53:102 O '47 600w
Booklist 43:328 Je 15 '47
Kirkus 15:120 F 15 '47 190w

"Like all the other volumes in this excellent series, 'The Quest for Security' is analysis rather than narrative. It belongs to the history of civilization, so auspiciously inaugurated by Voltaire. . . The inevitable drawback of such a study is lack of unity. Very roughly speaking, there was a Europe at that time, with Russia and Turkey on the fringe. It had the one essential element of life: consciousness of its existence. But that consciousness was vague. Even 'France' and 'England,' even 'Paris' and 'London,' were not definite entities, but conglomerates of conflicting factors. Penfield Roberts, a particularly cautious historian, warns us repeatedly that you can not write a biography of Europe as though Europe were a person. . . The fifty-four illustrations and the twenty-seven-page bibliography greatly add to the usefulness of this excellent work." Albert Guerard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ag 3 '47 1100w
Social Studies 38:288 O '47 30w
Wis Lib Bul 43:116 Jl '47

ROBERTS, RICHARD EMERY. Gilded rooster. 249p $2.75 Putnam

47-3529

A historical novel of the American frontier. The time is 1863, the place an unfinished fort about a hundred and fifty miles west of Fort Laramie, Wyoming. The major in charge of the fort was a man of culture; his civilian scout, known as the Gilded Rooster, was a mountain man, a noted Indian fighter. A brutal, sadistic captain and his beautiful wife come to the fort, and the stage is set for tragedy.

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

"As a piece of historical fiction it can, perhaps, be given the faint praise of 'adequate.' A Hollywood scenario writer will probably read it with greater enthusiasm." E. S. Watson
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 15 '47 270w

"Well told, one feels that Roberts has cut well below the surface in a good story of a tiny segment of our frontier history."
+ Kirkus 15:172 Mr 15 '47 170w

"When a reviewer finds himself growing lyrical over a new book he is wise if he puts it aside in favor of a night's sleep. But even after a night's sleep 'The Gilded Rooster' seems something of a find in the field of current fiction. Though the period detail is strictly accurate, it is a historical novel only in the sense that the action occurs in the past. Essentially, it is a story of physical and spiritual conflict among four persons shut up by hostile Sioux in the confines of a small frontier fort. . . The author of 'The Gilded Rooster' a first novel, will bear careful watching." Jennings Rice

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 18 '47 700w

"The characters are brutal, determined and willful—but not quite real. Sometimes it almost seems that the author is writing a parable, so stock are his characters—one officer representing civilized brutality; Jed, primitive wisdom; a major, civilization with a touch of culture, and a beautiful Army-wife woman. But instead of rising to a significant climax, the story reaches a certain point and then is tied like a bag—with a blizzard, a rescue and a wedding for the tie-thong." Hal Borland
— N Y Times p16 Je 8 '47 230w

Springf'd Republican p8A S 21 '47 270w

ROBERTSON, OLIVIA. St Malachy's court; il. by the author. 170p $2 Odyssey

47-30859

The author supervised a playground belonging to a block of flats in a Dublin suburb.

This book, illustrated with her own sketches, is filled with anecdotes of slum life both grave and gay. In one story she follows a slum family into the country; in another she studies the family trees of some Dublin families.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 2 '47
150w

"Possibly Miss Olivia invents a little at times—one hopes she does, at any rate, in her ghoulish description of the hospital—but you get the genuine slum picture: rich primitive swarming life. The end of the book is a little scrappy. . . The book is illustrated by her own sketches—which, though unequal, show in the best, the same verve and humour as her writing."

+ Spec 177:464 N 1 '46 360w

"Like many other social workers who make copy of their experiences, Author Robertson sometimes commits to print anecdotes and adventures that probably sounded fine at the time but, in type, only seem strained and amateurish. . . The savor of the subject, however, often rises above her polite intentions."

+ Time 50:112 S 22 '47 460w

"The atmosphere of Miss Robertson's stories is cheerful and she makes no overt criticism of the conditions which produce and perpetuate the teeming life that she describes. She is at her best when directly reporting the games and adventures of her child friends; the reminiscences and ghost stories of the older inhabitants are less original."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p489 O 12 '47
390w

ROBINS, FREDERICK WILLIAM. Story of water supply. 207p il $5.50 Oxford 628.1 Water supply 47-30302

An account of how man has obtained and transported the water he needs, from paleolithic times down to the twentieth century. While the author ranges thruout the world, as thruout history, for his illustrative material a great deal of what he tells relates to England.

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by M. N. Baker
Eng N 139:135 Jl 10 '47 280w

"It is a work of painstaking if not too systematic research, exploring a surprising number of new and unexpected by-ways, and is well illustrated."

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 7 '47 110w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:59 Jl '47

ROBINSON, RICH BERNICE (NELKE)
(BERNICE RICHMOND, pseud). Our island lighthouse. 275p maps $2.50 Random house 917.4145 Maine—Description and travel
47-2855

The author of Right as Rain, and Winter Harbor writes here of her life on an island off the Maine coast during the summer months of 1942, 1943, and 1944.

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Helen Woodward
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 8 '47
320w

"The reader will learn a lot about 'lobstering,' and there are several cooking recipes which read as though they might produce some good eating. The absence of profanity and other objectionable dialogue is refreshing, and shows what can be done to make a book interesting without such features." J. L. Donovan
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 7 '47
420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

"For those who didn't read the earlier book, this stands on its own, with its subtle humor, its zest for a way of life, its sensitive appreciation."

+ Kirkus 15:151 Mr 1 '47 250w

"All who like the sea should enjoy [these] experiences. Recommended for all public libraries." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lincoln Colcord
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Jl
13 '47 550w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles
San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47
220w
Wis Lib Bul 43:116 Jl '47

ROBINSON, BRADLEY. Dark companion [intros. by Vilhjalmur Stefansson and Peter Freuchen; foreword by Donald B. MacMillan]. 266p $3.50 McBride

B or 92 Henson, Matthew Alexander
47-30360

The life story of Matthew Henson, the Negro who was assistant to Commodore Robert E. Peary during many of his explorations, and who was with Peary when he reached the North Pole.

Booklist 43:358 Jl 15 '47

"It retells the story of the North Pole adventure and gives much new information about the life and background of Henson. Very simply written." L. D. Reddick

Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 70w

"As an exploration account the book suffers first of all from the usual fault of over-playing adventure and physical hardships, and so tending to turn a serious profession into a kind of sport. Concerned primarily with Henson, it relegates Peary to a secondary position. . . One of the book's virtues, however, lies in the fact that it indirectly shows exploration's greatest hardships and frustrations to lie at home, in the constant heartbreaking struggle for recognition and support. Its greatest virtue, the thing that makes 'Dark Companion' a real human document, lies in its treatment of Matt Henson, the Negro. All the bitter and tragic humiliation of the American Negro is here brought out in the life story of one man. . . My own salute goes out with that of this book, to a great man of character and integrity." E. P. Hanson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Jl 6 '47 700w

Reviewed by Harold Littledale
N Y Times p18 Jl 20 '47 450w
Springf'd Union p19 Ag 14 '47 320w

ROBINSON, CHARLES ALEXANDER. Alexander the Great; the meeting of the East and West in world government and brotherhood. 252p $3.75 Dutton

B or 92 Alexander the Great 47-4203

Biography of Alexander of Macedon, based in large part on Arrian, who in turn used contemporary records of Alexander's reign. The author, an archaeologist and professor of classics at Brown university, stresses the fact that Alexander was the first European to urge the idea of the brotherhood of man. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

"Mr. Robinson has written a clear account of the Alexander story, in the reading of which the reader feels beneath his feet the firm foundation of exact scholarship. He has been less successful with the challenge Alexander's career makes to the imagination for its meaning and significance. For the imaginative value of Alexander's life of conquest, Mr. Lamb's more romantic biography of last year is, perhaps, the more perceptive account." Horace Reynolds

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 30 '47
650w

"Professor Robinson sheds tears that Alexander was so much absorbed by conquest that he had not enough time to develop his ideas of world government. We have read the same sentimental tirades about Napoleon; and I am afraid we will read them one day about Hitler. I am deeply convinced that such personal speculations do not aid an historical and psychological understanding of world conquerors, but lead only to a dangerous romanticism that adds to the glamor of the Caesars." Max Fischer

— Commonweal 46:459 Ag 22 '47 550w

ROBINSON, C. A.—Continued

"Biography in a learned, scholarly manner which is nonetheless readable."

+ Kirkus 15:212 Ap 1 '47 150w

"This is not a definitive biography but as accurate a characterization in general, human and readable terms as exact scholarship can make it. . . Excellent for general adult reading." Harold Lancour

+ Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 130w

"The author, who long ago established a solid reputation which has been enhanced with each new work from his pen, relies mainly upon Arrian, one of the most valuable of ancient writers. . . He does not, however, neglect less authentic historians such as Plutarch, though preserving an admirable balance not always found in biographers. The style is close to unique among current historians, for it is a happy blend of modernity and the antique. Without a trace of pedanticism or aping, Professor Robinson manages to instill a pleasing flavor of his sources. And he has succeeded with unusual skill in preparing a study which will attract both the scholar for its accuracy and the general reader for its glowing portrait of a genius." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 JI 6 '47 750w

"[Alexander's] latest biographer, a classical scholar who has devoted many years to the study of the sources, finds all his personal shortcomings overshadowed by his insistence on spiritual values and on the solidarity of the world. This well-written book confronts the men of today with the challenge of Alexander's message to the ages. In view of the present concern for world order, it has a special interest." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p16 JI 20 '47 780w

"A well-organized, forthright biography. . . It may seem strange to read of Alexander as a champion of the brotherhood of man, but the author comes close to proving that he was precisely that."

+ New Yorker 23:80 Je 28 '47 120w

Reviewed by Elmer Davis

Sat R of Lit 30:7 JI 12 '47 3750w

Reviewed by H. W. Bragdon

Social Studies 38:331 N '47 750w

Time 50:94 JI 14 '47 300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:263 S '47 260w

Wis Lib Bul 43:174 D '47

ROBINSON, CHARLES LEE, pseud. Thirst.

207p $2.75 Day

47-11232

Novel based upon life on a huge Chilean ranch. The plot concerns the struggle of a highbrow brother and sister who quarrel incessantly over the irrigation rights of their respective ranches. The battle ends in violence.

"Mr. Robinson's novel is the source of one major surprise, and that non-literary: how is it that the author, the possessor of what used to be called a 'social conscience,' remains in his Foreign Service post? . . . I wish I could say that Mr. Robinson's literary abilities matched his strong qualities of forthrightness and honesty. But the honesty of the reviewer, whose concern is necessarily a literary one, dictates otherwise. For a second surprise in 'Thirst' is its incredibly bad writing." R. G. Cohn

+ Commonweal 47:181 N 28 '47 290w

Kirkus 15:557 O 1 '47 160w

"Highly recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 110w

"Whoever he is, Mr. Robinson has a knowledge of South America and a love for its people that compensate for whatever storytelling skill he may lack. From the account he gives of the people and the land of Chile, one would guess that he is stationed in that country. . . Mr. Robinson lacks deftness in working out his plot, and the denouement, with an attempted rape, a homicide and an accidental death following in quick succession, is too much like that of a Western movie to be convincing." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 26 '47 230w

"'Thirst' is put together with a certain skill; the author has a dramatic sense. But the characters tend to be poster cut-outs of one kind or another; the austere aristocrat, the simple peasant, etc. We miss that shock of detail which pins down the particular to this time and this place. What detail we get is too familiar to seem real." Seymour Krim

N Y Times p41 N 30 '47 470w

ROBINSON, EDGAR EUGENE. They voted for Roosevelt; the presidential vote, 1932-1944. 207p $3 Stanford univ. press

324.73 Roosevelt, Franklin Delano. Presidents (U.S.)—Election 47-3965

A statistical study of the votes cast in the presidential elections of 1932, 1936, 1940 and 1944, preceded by several chapters of analysis and conclusions concerning the significance of the figures.

Reviewed by H. A. Bone

Am Pol Sci R 41:1018 O '47 550w

Review by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 JI 6 '47 100w

"Most of the data were assembled from official sources in the various states, but in some instances these are supplemented with data from manuscript sources, furnished by state officials. The nine tables alone should be of permanent reference value to laymen and scholars."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:288 S '47 260w

ROBINSON, EDWARD NORTH, and ROBINSON, CAROLYN. Have-more plan for a little land—a lot of living. 326p il $3.49 Macmillan

630.1 Farm life Agr47-23

Based on the author's own experience, this tells the new country dweller how to cope with all the problems to be met when starting life on a "self-subsistence" basis—from choosing a site and financing to how to plant, harvest and store vegetables and fruit. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:29 S 15 '47

Kirkus 15:268 My 15 '47 170w

"It all adds up to a handbook which, despite the guff and the chatter, might be read with profit by young city couples yearning to live the simple life. Such readers should know, however, that the Robinsons overemphasize the 'fun' of this good life. Nobody can tell an old hand that it is fun to clean out a chicken house. . . Country life is good, but not that good, and even the Robinsons' amazing stack of superlatives can't make it so." H. B.

+ N Y Times p16 O 12 '47 500w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 19 '47 100w

ROBINSON, EDWIN ARLINGTON. Untriangulated stars; letters to Harry de Forest Smith, 1890-1906; ed. by Denham Sutcliffe. 348p $5 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11410

"First printing of almost 200 letters written by one of America's distinguished poets to a friend and fellow townsman who was to become Professor of Greek at Amherst. They illuminate the period when Robinson as a lonesome, frustrated youth published his first poems. The Selected Letters (1940) included only a few letters of his youth and none to the sympathetic friend who dispelled, partially, Robinson's inherent reticence." Library J

"An interest in Robinson's development or in the books of the nineties which he writes of so fully, is a prerequisite to enjoyment." G. D. McDonald

Library J 72:1373 O 1 '47 80w

"Written for his friend's eyes only, sometimes with injunctions that they be burned, they are a faithful, often week-by-week report of the state of Robinson's mind and heart from the bewildered years between high school and college through a period of growth and frustration until Theodore Roosevelt directs national attention to his neglected verse." Emery Neff

+ Nation 165:506 N 8 '47 1100w

"What we have registered in these letters of a young poet in his twenties, not yet known to fame though in process of publishing his first book, is a quiet chronicle of heroism not exceeded in the literary records of our time. There has been nothing like it since Keats, and Keats was not privileged to know the prolonged purgation that Robinson underwent. He was a poet refined in fire." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 11 '48 900w

New Yorker 23:138 N 15 '47 120w

ROBINSON, HENRY MORTON. Great snow. 277p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-1996

At a time designated as in the Age of Foreboding, a great snowfall buried the northeastern part of the United States, and lasted nearly three weeks. During that time eight hundred thousand people died of cold, starvation, and disease. The story describes that time in the lives of a New York patent lawyer, and his family and guests at his country home on the Hudson. During that time Ruston Cobb proved himself every inch a man in his ability to meet and conquer difficulties. There is considerable Freudian symbolism used in the novel.

Booklist 43:242 Ap 1 '47

Kirkus 15:42 Ja 15 '47 90w

"A mature and estimable novel." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 165:23 Jl 5 '47 650w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:34 Ap 14 '47 260w

"There are so many excellent things in 'The Great Snow' that its faults are startling, as if a fine portrait painter had left out a hand or an ear. The internal life of Ruston Cobb is developed with skill and understanding; the countenance of his subconscious comes gradually clear. But some of the appurtenances to his portrait are sadly neglected, and portions of the background against which it is painted are left out. . . . Too much of the action is implied, and what has been painted is not sufficiently integrated. But the portrait of Cobb is so good that it almost overcomes these handicaps." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 13 '47 900w

"The pattern is a familiar one, but Mr. Robinson handles his people with such gusto, with such genuine interest in their warped psyches, that the reader soon forgives him his stencils, and even enjoys them for their own sake. . . . Despite the catch-as-catch-can sex, and some purple-to-orchid pages, 'The Great Snow' is a captivating performance. It may be recommended to the coming hammock trade with very few reservations." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '47 600w

"Mr. Robinson is pleasantly lightheaded about all this, and his treatment of the manners and morals of people living under stress has wit as well as a most human understanding. An absorbing tale, whether read as an allegory or as a tense chronicle of a man's battle against almost overwhelming natural forces."

+ New Yorker 23:116 Ap 12 '47 170w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p19 My 25 '47 120w

"This is not a novel that strains at abstractions. It is quiet, firm, deliberate, and controlled. But it is earnest as a winter twilight, and while you are reading it you carry a burdened sense of our plight and our peril." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ap 12 '47 800w

ROBINSON, HENRY WHEELER. Inspiration and revelation in the Old Testament [rev. by L. H. Brockington and E. A. Payne]. 298p $5 Oxford

221.6 Bible. Old Testament [47-172]

"Twenty of the twenty-two chapters began as lectures delivered in the University of Oxford during [Dr Robinson's] tenure of the office of Speaker's Lecturer (1942-45). . . . As the title indicates, the work is concerned with what may be called the form of Old Testament theology as distinct from its content. . . . The book deals first with the three fields of experience in which the Hebrews found the revelation of God: physical nature, human nature and history. . . . From the fields of revelation we pass to the media. Here the author deals with the phenomena of prophetic inspiration and priestly guidance as well as the sanctified common sense of the sages, and the precipitation of all these in the law, the prophetic books and the Wisdom literature. . . . There is a chapter on the Psalter, considered as man's response to the divine revelation and as bringing to light, in man's very act of responding, new meanings in the revelation itself." Times [London] Lit Sup

"The apparatus of careful scholarship is present throughout the book: various meanings of crucial words are set forth with painstaking effort; footnotes are plentiful and exceedingly useful; differences of opinion among scholars are noted in a dispassionate manner; the book closes with a 'Scripture Index' which is a most inclusive guide to references to inspiration and revelation in the Old Testament. This is scholarship in the grand manner, the kind of reliable, critical exposition and interpretation which has been and is one of the glories of the liberal Protestant tradition." Harold Bosley

+ Christian Century 64:590 My 7 '47 800w

"A concluding chapter sums up the results of the discussion and leaves us with the deeper regret that Dr. Wheeler Robinson did not live to bring to completion what had been so capably begun."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p497 O 12 '47 750w

ROBINSON, MRS IRENE BOWEN, and ROBINSON, WILLIAM WILCOX. Picture book of animal babies; il. by Irene Robinson. [40p] $2 Macmillan

47-3617

Pictures of the animal babies and their mothers, showing how baby colts, lambs, squirrels, rabbits, goats, elephants, etc. are cared for by the mothers. For ages two to five.

Booklist 44:39 S 15 '47

Commonweal 47:150 N 21 '47 40w

"These collaborators are well known for the accuracy of their knowledge of animals." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:355 S '47 40w

Kirkus 15:364 Jl 15 '47 110w

"The kind of book to be enjoyed by parent and child looking at the pictures together. Good addition to a preschool collection." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 60w

"This book is intended for the 2-to 3 audience, whose first excursion is invariably made to the zoo. Tots, fascinated and awed by four-legged creatures, will respond to these clear and vivid water-colors and black and white sketches, although the book, which has a simple, scanty text, makes no attempt to satisfy a child's curiosity." Lillian Gerard

+ N Y Times p33 S 14 '47 150w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:140 D 6 '47 60w

Reviewed by Eileen Maughan
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '47 80w

Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 70w

ROBINSON, MABEL LOUISE. Bitter forfeit.
256p $2.75 Bobbs 47-3875

Novel of marriage and motherhood. It traces the character growth of Lyssie Taunton, a wealthy college girl, whose love for a poor fellow student does not include marriage. She bears her illegitimate daughter in secret, and gives her up at birth. Years later, happily married, and with an adored young son, her earlier problem has to be settled once more.

"Intellectually, Lyssie's solution is convincing, and it seems hard to see how any one fortunately able to carry through her plan could have chosen to do otherwise. Emotionally, the book does not cut very deep. It is most real in the picture of first love." Mary Ross
+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 JI
27 '47 420w

"Miss Robinson does an honest job of presenting the mother's decision on what is best for her lost child and for her cherished husband and son. Here is a sincere and strictly single-track novel." Beatrice Sherman
+ N Y Times p16 Je 15 '47 190w

ROBINSON, VICTOR. White caps; the story of nursing. 425p il $3.75 Lippincott 610.7309 Nurses and nursing—History
Med46-206

History of nursing from its earliest beginnings to the present by an American physician who is also a student of medical history, and professor of the history of medicine at Temple university school of medicine. Bibliographical notes. Index.

Bookmark 8:6 Mr '47

Kirkus 14:340 JI 15 '46 170w

"An invaluable reference book for the nurse who honors her tradition. The general reader will find it equally rewarding." Frances Wither-spoon

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 F
2 '47 750w

"This record of 4,000 years is something of a miscellany, the nursing elements of which are difficult to identify and follow in story-wise fashion. There are too many thoroughly interesting by-paths explored by Dr. Robinson. . . The collation of facts alone must have been a tremendous undertaking, but it is difficult to imagine that more than a fraction of them will have an interest for, or usefulness to, even the professional reader. The finished text suggests little more than a research manuscript with marginal notes still showing. It has the reading quality of a compendium." Joseph Hirsh
N Y Times p23 D 15 '46 300w

ROBSJOHN-GIBBINGS, TERENCE HAROLD. Mona Lisa's mustache; a dissection of modern art. 265p il $3 Knopf

709.04 Art, Modern 47-11114

An attack on modern art and its perpetrators by the author of Good-bye, Mr. Chippendale (Book Review Digest 1944). He "maintains that abstractionism, surrealism, and other advanced forms of art are closely related to witchcraft, that the cultivation of the special and the mystic has implications of Fascism, and that the whole business is a fake anyway." (New Yorker)

Booklist 44:169 Ja 1 '48

Kirkus 15:596 O 15 '47 130w

Library J 72:1542 N 1 '47 130w

"Very obviously, this book was written to make money. The vulgarity of its learning and thinking, the misinformation it contains, and the violent and banal simple-mindedness with which it mauls its material to fit its thesis—all these disqualify it from serious discussion. But, as sometimes happens with very, very stupid people, its author does have hold of the truth by a hair on its tail, a hair that many infinitely more intelligent writers on modern art have not even brushed." Clement Greenberg
— + Nation 166:78 Ja 17 '48 750w

"Stripped of the drama of conspiracy, the ideas in this book are few, simple and interesting. . . But the artist and the people will not be brought together by exaggerating the follies of a few painters, by using any dogma to beat dada and by transforming the natural development of a century's art into a melodrama of conspiracy. This is what Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings has studiously accomplished, as if we need a shock against art to counteract the shock that art has given us." Gilbert Seides
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
N 9 '47 1050w

"Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings is literate, but not always too plausible, even to the present reviewer, who would like to join with him in seeing the mountebanks and imposters turned out of the field. The author has several obsessions, he searches for quotations to prove his immediate point rather than the ultimate trend, he can find the occult and the magic under anyone's bedstead. And he perpetrates a minor deception by giving his serious, closely reasoned book a bizarre, misleading title. Nevertheless, it is the most intelligent, witty and scholarly attack thus far on modern art—though that may seem faint praise for a worthy effort." W. G. Dooley
+ — N Y Times p7 O 26 '47 850w

"An urbane and frequently humorous frontal attack on modern art."

+ New Yorker 23:134 O 25 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 13 '47
850w

"Viewing the overall history of modern art as a conspiracy brewed in a witches' cauldron, and modern artists as charlatans, witch doctors, and Hitlers, Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings reveals, that this time he has taken on too big an assignment. . . Mr. Robsjohn-Gibbings displays neither a deep nor a fine appreciation of painting; not, anyway, in the sense Leo Stein spoke of appreciation." Richard McLaughlin
Sat R of Lit 30:19 N 22 '47 750w

ROCHOW, EUGENE GEORGE. Introduction to the chemistry of the silicones. 137p $2.75 Wiley

546.28 Silicon organic compounds 46-7641

"This book is a general introductory survey of the chemistry and the uses of the organic compounds of silicon. It is intended for chemists, engineers and other persons with technical backgrounds, rather than for specialists in organic chemistry. Chapters one and two deal with the covalent compounds of silicon and the organosilicon monomers. The other five chapters discuss the methods of preparation, chemical and physical properties and possible uses of the silicon polymers. Various processes for large-scale production, such as the Grignard method and the direct method, are treated. The literature, including patents, is cited, and a glossary of terms is included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"The book is nearly free from typographical errors, is interestingly written and logically presented, and may be heartily endorsed as the first comprehensive survey of the subject, and as such it will prove to be indispensable to any reader desirous of acquiring a working knowledge of silicone chemistry." W. C. Schumb

+ Am Chem Soc J 69:729 Mr '47 230w

"[This volume] is recommended highly as an introduction to this interesting and rapidly expanding sector of organic chemistry, and even those who may feel themselves at home in the field will find it worth reading for a quick review of the entire subject and will want to retain it for ready reference. . . The only general criticism of the book is that in the discussions of uses almost all the emphasis is on polymeric compounds, while relatively little attention is devoted to simple organosilicon compounds, many of which have found or appear capable of finding useful technical applications. . . On the other hand, more detailed information on the properties and applications of the polymeric silicones would have been welcome and would have rendered the work more valuable to those who are interested primarily in uses and only incidentally in the chemistry and preparation of the materials. The inclusion of source references for the data tabulated at the ends of the first three chapters would have increased the usefulness of these, and would have shown the obvious reason for such few inconsistencies as are present." H. K. Nason

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:1077 Ap 14 '47 650w

"Dr. Rochow is an authority, he is concise, and he is understandable. He can keep the Ph.D.'s interested without going over the sophomores' heads."

+ Chem Eng 54:273 Ag '47 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Library J 71:1053 Ag '46 90w

Reviewed by James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
My 4 '47 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:67 O '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:209 Je '47 180w

ROCKOW, HAZEL MARCIA (KORY), and ROCKOW, JULIUS. Creative home decorating; ill. by Robert J. Curry. 319p $3.50 H. S. Stutman co, 30 Church st, N.Y. 7

747 House decoration 46-8294

The authors' view is that home decoration is a creative activity. As such, it is guided by principles and esthetic values common to all the creative arts... They have emphasized principles throughout the book, as well as their practical application. (Adapted from Intro) Copious illustrations. Index.

Booklist 43:355 Jl 15 '47

"Traditional and modern classic settings are emphasized. Since the need is great for meeting future problems with contemporary techniques, this reviewer would have welcomed some regard for and a searching analysis of the contemporary. Nevertheless this is a good handbook. Coverage of problems is unique." Agnes Leindorff

+ — J Home Econ 39:594 N '47 210w

ROCKWELL, NORMAN. Norman Rockwell, illustrator; by Arthur L. Guptill; pref. by Dorothy Canfield Fisher; biographical introd. by Jack Alexander. 208p il $10 Watson-Guptill 759.13 46-8380

A description of the working methods of this well-known American artist, combined with anecdotes about his life, home, and family. Includes miniature reproductions of the 240 covers which the artist has made for the Saturday Evening Post over the years 1916 to 1946, and many photographs of his Vermont home and his family.

Booklist 43:165 F 1 '47

"Mr. Rockwell's success within his field is phenomenal, and the quotations from him interspersed throughout the book are candid, sympathetic, unconceited, genial. But one may nevertheless question whether it is a true service to picture him as a great artist instead of a truly remarkable purveyor of that good sound 'corn' which appeals to the general public from the human interest and story-telling angles. And one suspects that Rockwell, being a modest soul, may find it just a bit embarrassing. But the countless admirers of his work will be satisfied, I am sure, with the 500 illustrations of his work." Howard Devree

+ N Y Times p41 Mr 16 '47 360w

RODDA, CHARLES (GAVIN HOLT, pseud). Send no flowers. 297p $2.50 Howell, Soskin 47-21043

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:141 Mr 1 '47 90w

"Mr. Holt turns in a fine job, entertaining in every direction, what with smooth composition, material you may take with a smile if you choose and tension that causes one of the characters to exclaim, 'I can't stand it!' as Detective Saber ruthlessly narrows the field of suspects." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28
My 4 '47 200w

"The story is so baffling and so suspenseful that one is inclined to forgive the author for working his red herrings overtime." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p40 My 4 '47 160w

"High grade."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 24 '47 50w

RODGERS, CLEVELAND. American planning, past-present-future. 290p $3 Harper 338.973 U.S.—Economic policy. Regional planning 47-30191

The author, who has been a member of the Planning commission of New York city, reviews American economic planning in the past, and states the case for a planned economy in the future. He maintains that centralized authority could be dangerous, but could be controlled by a system of checks and balances. Index.

Reviewed by Harold Zink

Am Pol Sci R 41:570 Je '47 550w

"A reader's reaction to this book will be governed in large part by his attitude with regard to the necessity of national planning by government for the development of the economy. Followers of Hayek will not like it. Others, like this reviewer, who agree with the author's general viewpoint, will feel that it makes a useful popular presentation of the case for planning. The book is not searching or profound and is of no great help to the student of planning." W. H. Stead

+ — Ann Am Acad 253:229 S '47 360w

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

Eng N 139:95 Ag 7 '47 130w

"From his vantage point as a member of New York City's Planning Commission Mr. Rodgers is in an excellent position to translate technical problems and trends of planning into terms understandable to the reading public." F. S. Chapin

+ Social Forces 26:113 O '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

RODMAN, OLIVER HAZARD PERRY. Striped bass; where, when and how to catch them. rev ed 96p il $1.50 Barnes, A.S.

799.16 Bass fishing

"This new revised edition of a salt-water fishing book contains a completely new chapter on Plug Casting Comments. There are other chapters on Meeting the Stripper; Surf Casting; Trolling; Stripper Fly Fishing; Stripper Conservation; and a list of 'kinks' and tips that have taken strippers by actual test." (Publisher's note) No index.

Booklist 44:153 D 15 '47

Reviewed by L. E. Cooper

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 10 '47 170w

Springf'd Union p11 My 3 '47 60w

RODMAN, SELDEN. Amazing year, May 1, 1945-April 30, 1946; a diary in verse. 113p il $2.50 Scribner

811

47-11036

"A good try at putting together a variety of poetic forms that enable Mr. Rodman to deal with public events as well as private affairs. In his diary, a record running from May 1, 1945, through April 30, 1946, while the scene shifts from New York to Washington to Haiti, the more personal verse is the more interesting." New Yorker

Kirkus 15:361 Jl 1 '47 170w

"As a writer, Selden Rodman has always gone his own way. Belonging to no clique, he has never had a clique. The books he himself has written are little known, in contrast with the books he has edited. With sublime neutrality, the limbo of public indifference has swallowed up equally his 'Lawrence: The Last Crusade,' a disturbingly bad book, and his 'Airmen,' an excitingly good book, legitimately modern in its assimilation of machinery into esthetics. His latest book is his finest and fully deserves to garner all the acclaim so long denied him." Peter Viereck

RODMAN, SELDEN—Continued

+ N Y Times p30 O 12 '47 700w

New Yorker 23:111 O 4 '47 70w

"The achievement which this book represents is altogether remarkable. Set in the form of a diary in verse covering a year of the poet's life, it records and explores the inner and the outer event, the personal and the topical, in a series of poems whose excitement is sustained and whose quality, at its best, is of an unmistakably high order." Fleming MacLiesh

+ Sat R of Lit 30:58 D 6 '47 850w

ROEBURT, JOHN. Seneca, U.S.A. 255p $2.50
Curl

47-30334

A novel which uses anti-Semitism as its motivating force. The hero is a newspaperman, Shep Ward, who spent eleven years under Spence Andrews, a crooked publisher. As a young reporter Shep had been a crusader; but working for Andrews made him a party to small town racketeering in all its facets. When Andrews was murdered Shep once more took up the fight for decency.

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

"The intentions here are worthier than the actuality, which is only mediocre."

Kirkus 15:242 My 1 '47 90w

"At first glance, there seems to be nothing wrong with this as another crusade against anti-Semitism. But that is just the point: it is just a first glance, a convenient substitution of anti-Semitism for 'Complication' in the plot structure. A cursory treatment of a vital world problem, introduced to flavor the writing with a pinch of social significance, is, in this reviewer's opinion, an usurpation of literary license. 'Seneca, U. S. A.' exploits anti-Semitism as popular plot material. Let's hope that in the future writers will spare their readers the shame of literary prostitution." A. C. Fields

Sat R of Lit 30:33 Ag 2 '47 470w

ROEDER, RALPH. Juarez and his Mexico; a biographical history. 2v il $10 Viking

B or 92 Juárez, Benito Pablo. Mexico—History 47-11342

Scholarly biography of the Indian emancipator of Mexico. The book covers the whole story of the Mexican struggle for independence, from the break with Spain, and the war with United States, and the accession of Maximilian and Carlota, to and thru the rise of Juarez. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:106 N 15 '47

"This book is most exhaustive and thus bears the mark of the researcher rather than the dramatist. In his attempt to give all the side-lights, the author has produced a volume that may be confusing to the general reader but which presents, and presents well, a kaleidoscopic picture of the opposing forces of the period." Alfred MacArthur

+ Chicago Sun Book Week O 27 '47 450w

Current Hist 13:355 D '47 90w

"Roeder is a profound scholar. At times, the reader bogs down in his careful and meticulous weighing of evidence, use of sources. This is not a book for hasty skimming, but a book for careful and thoughtful study.

+ Kirkus 15:522 S 15 '47 280w

"Surpasses anything yet written in English on any Latin American hero-statesman... Without doubt the high water mark in Latin American biography." Joseph Borome

+ Library J 72:1467 O 15 '47 110w

"Juarez and His Mexico is sometimes inclined to be heavy and overelaborate in its style and narrative, but it is a work of insight and importance." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:27 N 10 '47 1700w

"Mr. Roeder admires his protagonist and is partial to him in all debatable questions as well he may be. But he has not concealed the issues in debate, nor deprived the reader of an opportunity to make independent judgments according to his own criteria. Thus the whole man is here at last, in his few weaknesses and errors and many virtues and achievements. Mr. Roeder's style, too, is worthy of the subject, for the sense of life as well as of history is in its pages." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
N 9 '47 600w

"Mr. Roeder, for all his superb scholarship, has not specialized in either Spain or Indians... The old problem of what to do about footnotes in a work of this nature, Mr. Roeder has met by not having any. In this, he assumes more knowledge of many specialized matters than is possessed by the run of readers, I am sure... These are minor objections, however, to a good book, for which we need to be thankful. It supplies a real and permanent contribution to the better understanding of the whole rich story of the rise of democracy in the New World and the forward movement of the race the world over." Herschel Brickell

+ N Y Times p3 O 26 '47 1300w

"The author does not pile on detail too heavily and never loses sight of his central figure, and his agreeable and scholarly style is punctuated by sly, epigrammatic asides. Illustrated, but indifferently."

+ New Yorker 23:112 N 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by George Creel

San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 30 '47
900w

"Ever since his 'Savonarola,' Mr. Roeder has matured steadily as an historian. Now he avoids easily the traps of sentimentalism, false perspective, and false glamor into which most Americans writing recently about Mexico have insisted on stumbling, and moves surely past the temptations to over-simplification and dramatic subjective interpretation to which he himself might once have succumbed. His prose is as readable and vivid as ever, but richer, subtler, more flexible, without specious glitter or histrionic rhetoric. His judgment of character and analysis of events is shrewder and surer, and therefore more nuanced and temperate and reserved." Garrett Mattingly

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 N 15 '47 1400w

ROEPKE, WILHELM. See Ropke, W.

ROGERS, AGNES (MRS FREDERICK LEWIS ALLEN), comp. I remember distinctly; a family album of the American people, 1918-1941; assembled by Agnes Rogers; with running comment by Frederick Lewis Allen, 251p il $5 Harper

973.91 U.S.—History—20th century—Pictorial work 47-30605

A pictorial record of life in America between the two world wars. Photographs, advertisements, cartoons, and fashion drawings, are used, each with a brief paragraph of explanation. Index.

"My favorite vintage book of this year. Mr. Allen, author of Only Yesterday and the able editor of Harper's, has the memory of an elephant, a social conscience that smiles as it recalls, and a talent for terse and telling résumé which is the envy of any historian." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:124 O '47 240w

Booklist 44:48 O 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ag 31 '47

140w

Christian Science Monitor p10 O 4 '47

210w

Reviewed by Leander Danley

Churchman 161:17 D 15 '47 180w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

Reviewed by David Marshall

Commonweal 47:18 O 17 '47 1400wKirkus 15:499 S 1 '47 80w

"'Embarrassment of riches' is the phrase that races to mind when you contemplate the task faced by Agnes Rogers and Frederick Lewis Allen. . . As might be expected, they have produced a fascinating book which will delight everybody and satisfy nobody. This is no criticism of the album's editors, who have managed their herculean task valiantly; it arises from the very nature of the work. With such an overwhelming accumulation of material at their disposal, their book could hardly escape being fascinating, but it is also inevitable that each reader, finding his own memories violently aroused, will recall a hundred of his favorite scenes that have been overlooked." Richard Watts

+ — New Repub 117:26 S 1 '47 1800w

"The Allens, those ardent collectors of pictorial days before yesterday, have done it again. . . The net result of the pictures Mrs. Allen has so brilliantly collected and Mr. Allen has commented on with such well tempered vivacity is that two things alone have not changed—the general appearance of men's clothes and the follies of human nature." Richardson Wright

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R pl S 7 '47 650w

"There are 500 pictures in this book and 37,000 words of text; the words are light and neatly put together; it is a pleasure to read them. But in the end, if there isn't a picture, you feel that the subject has been omitted. For instance, Mae West. She is mentioned, appropriately; but because there is no picture, no still from a movie, the small revolution she effected in movie-morals is not sufficiently registered. Nor are there pictures to illustrate the degradation of public morals in the scandals of the Harding Administration. In spite of Mr. Allen's judicious words, one gets the impression that the scandals didn't matter; they mattered, and the apathy of the public mattered more. But it isn't easy to get pictures illustrating public apathy." Gilbert Seldes

+ — N Y Times p7 S 7 '47 1100w*New Yorker 23:115 S 27 '47 80w*San Francisco Chronicle p20 S 7 '47 220w

Reviewed by J. T. Winterich

Sat R of Lit 30:16 O 4 '47 650w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:550 O '47 850wWis Lib Bul 43:140 O '47

ROGERS, FRANCES, and BEARD, ALICE. Jeremy Pepper; il. by Frances Rogers. 271p $2.25 Lippincott

46-7934

In 1773, Jeremy Pepper, a thirteen-year-old boy, returns to America from England, where he had lived since the death of his parents. He was apprenticed to Baron Stiegel, the famous glassmaker, and learned the trade while carrying on a secret search for his sister. His efforts to solve the mystery of a theft at the glasshouse makes a good story for grades five to nine.

Booklist 43:158 Ja 15 '47

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p13 Ap 24 '47 310wCleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47*Horn Bk 23:115 Mr '47 120w

"Junior high school readers will enjoy the difficulties, plots against Peter Van Kleeck and the mystery of Jeremy's sister. Also, will supplement available material on American colonial life." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 70w

"Though this is an entertaining adventure story taking place just before the American Revolution and involving a sharp mystery interest, its course is so concerned with one of early America's most romantic crafts that a school library will do well to keep it on hand." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 29 '46 200w*Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 50w*Wis Lib Bul 43:25 Ja '47

ROGERS, REBECCA PEGUES. They ask for bread. 192p $2.75 Rockport press

47-297

"A southern industrial town during the post-war unrest is a tough assignment for a young preacher who is human enough to find understanding difficult for himself and yet must, somehow, lead the blind however dim his own eyesight. To John Blake the job is a challenge which must be met and an enemy that has to be conquered, and is a double-dare to his own ability and faith. The conflict is between the mill owner—the traditional Southern senator—and the stupid violence whipped up by a couple of phony labor organizers." Chicago Sun Book Week

"The character of the man and the message of the book offer a ray of hope to confused humanity." O. C.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 F 23 '47 160w

"A religious novel, but not pietistic. The loss and finding of faith is a major theme, but the tensions are personal and social rather than theological, and the human interest element is strong and authentic."

+ Christian Century 64:81 Ja 15 '47 40w*Springf'd Union p11 My 16 '47 120w

ROLLAND, ROMAIN. Journey within; tr. by Elsie Pell. 171p $3 Philosophical lib.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-31221

"These autobiographical sketches, which do not constitute an autobiography in any usual sense, were written in 1924, nine years after the author had received the Nobel prize for literature. During the intervening years his popularity had suffered because of his pacifist attitude in World War I, but there was never any doubt then, and there is still less now, as to his importance as a writer. With a minimum of objective details, but with meticulous analysis of those that are included, he records his most significant inner experiences and the philosophy which grew out of them. . . Almost half of the book is devoted to 'the family tree'—grandfathers and others, and his mother. The long concluding section deals with the author's friendship with Malwida von Meysenbug, a German woman exactly fifty years his senior." Christian Century

Reviewed by J. G. Garrett

Canadian Forum 27:213 D '47 290w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:1271 O 22 '47 800w

"Recommended." J. E. Cross

+ Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 110w

"'Journey Within,' brilliantly translated, is in no sense a formal record. It belongs to the distinguished manner of spiritual autobiography which British reticence rarely permits itself, or only under the modest coverings of verse—the destructive plunge into the secret self, to discover its obscure workings." Albert Guerard

+ N Y Times p5 O 19 '47 1100w

"This fragment of an autobiography is for readers who are already interested in Romain Rolland, and familiar at least with his principal works; not for those who wish to make his acquaintance. 'Journey Within' is not merely a fragment. It is an impressionistic, sometimes mystical, fragment, the inclusions and omissions of which must be called capricious, written in a prose that frequently spills over into poetry, with rhetorical flights and flourishes that are less alien to French than to English." B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:26 N 8 '47 1000wSchool & Society 66:464 D 13 '47 10w

ROLLINS, ALICE ROBERTS. Antiques for the home. 232p il $3 Harper

745 Antiques 46-11987

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Bookmark 8:8 Mr '47

"For those who are starting from the beginning to learn about antiques, the book may have some value as a primer."

Christian Science Monitor p12 F 1 '47
130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
Jl 13 '47 180w

"This rewrite assembly is poorly illustrated. Strong in ceramics, it is very weak in special fields such as blockfront furniture (the author forgot that much of it was made in Boston). Egyptians could draw better than she thinks, and she overrates Paul Revere silver and so-called 'Oriental Lowestoft' and a few other items, like cameo glass. These are minor objections, for the main stream of her writing is a level-headed, understanding approach to a complicated subject on which most of us are deeply uninformed." W. G. Dooley

+ — N Y Times p28 Mr 2 '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:51 Mr '47

ROLLINS, WILLIAM. Ring and the lamp. 311p $2.50 Simon & Schuster

47-30447

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47
50w

"An atmospheric action tale with considerable impetus."

+ Kirkus 15:295 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 17 '47 70w

"The story is well told, but somewhat over-ambitious in scope for a whodunit." J. G.

N Y Times p23 Ag 10 '47 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47
90w

"Good thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 23 '47 50w

ROLSTON, BROWN. If you're thinking of building; with sketches by the author and decorative spots by Tom Darling. 136p $2.50 Scribner

690 Building. Dwellings 47-4229

Information for prospective home owners, offering advice on choosing the site, architects and contractors, building pitfalls to avoid, short cuts, keeping down the cost, etc. Includes diagrams.

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 6 '47
70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:813 My 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Lee Cooper

N Y Times p15 Je 1 '47 250w

"If you've got the money, the lot and the men to build the house there is some practical and well-stated advice in Mr. Rolston's book." P. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47
80w

ROMBAUER, MRS IRMA (VON STARKLOFF). Cookbook for girls and boys; il. by Marion Rombauer Becker. 243p $2.50 Bobbs

641.5 Cookery—Juvenile literature 46-8069

Several hundred recipes, with simple, clearly written directions, with further material on steps involved in cooking a meal, measurements, definitions of cooking terms and processes, outdoor cooking, and a few sample menus. For grades six to nine. Index.

Booklist 43:139 Ja 1 '47

"The interesting way she lists ingredients assures success. This cookbook, modern today, has an air of destiny. It probably will become a well-thumbed and much-loved heirloom."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 5 '47
50w

"Here is a really satisfactory cook book for any beginner but one especially suited to boys and girls, for whom the author of 'The Joy of Cooking' has written it. From the first table of measurements to the last well-arranged index she has stressed readability and simplicity." Virginia Mathews

+ N Y Times p22 D 8 '46 150w

"This attractive book begins with a table of measurements, a pictured analysis of the necessary utensils, and a list of terms used by experienced cooks. It gives a series of enticing recipes for everything from cooking cereals and vegetables to candy and sweet sauces."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 70w

RONNS, EDWARD, pseud. See Aarons, E. S.

ROOS, KELLEY, pseud. of AUDREY (KELLEY) ROOS and WILLIAM ROOS. Ghost of a chance. 190p $2 Wyn

47-3150

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:141 Mr 1 '47 60w

"Here we have amateur detection by Haila and Jeffrey Troy, a little wackier than usual and none the worse for that." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25
Ap 27 '47 180w

"Altogether, this is a helter-skelter story, even more so than is usually the case in the adventures of these two rapid-fire sleuths." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p34 Ap 20 '47 170w

"Accepting the opening for sake of game, tale has good values as chase yarn, spine-tingler and adequate deductive item."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 My 17 '47 40w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. F. D. R., columnist; the uncollected columns of Franklin D. Roosevelt; foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt; ed. by Donald Scott Carmichael. 180p $3 Pellegrini & Cudahy

B or 92 47-3005

"Twice in his career Franklin D. Roosevelt wrote a series of newspaper columns. In the spring of 1925, while at Warm Springs, Georgia, he wrote nine for the Macon Daily Telegraph, as a substitute for Tom Loyless, a personal friend. In the summer of 1928 he wrote ten for the Standard, of Beacon, N.Y., a Democratic weekly published in his home county. In this volume, these writings are republished as a whole for the first time." Sat R of Lit

Booklist 43:346 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by W. F. Morse

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 22 '47
470w

"In both series there is brightness and humor and fire—intimations of the style that was to make his speeches and Fireside Chats such magnificent creations in the years that were to come." Karl Schriftgiesser

+ N Y Times p28 Ap 13 '47 900w

"Mr. Roosevelt said on several occasions and wrote at least once, that his own experience had proved to him that no one could write a good column every day or even once a week. Several in his series for the Beacon Standard are stodgy and cloudy. I should say, though, that most of the three a week he wrote for the Macon Telegraph are good examples of the columnist's art. They are simple and clear, with a touch of Roosevelt banter here and there. Mr. Carmichael has filled, revealingly and thoroughly, some gaps in the late President's biography." E. K. Lindley

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ap 19 '47 1100w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. F. D. R.: his personal letters; early years; foreword by Eleanor Roosevelt; ed. by Elliott Roosevelt. 543p il $5 Duell

B or 92 Statesmen—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (47-11935)

Volume one of a projected three volume set which is to cover all the late President's correspondence. These letters begin with 1887, when he was five years old, and close with his engagement to Eleanor Roosevelt in 1904. Illustrated with photographs and facsimiles of some of the letters. Index.

Booklist 44:133 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Ernest Von Hartz
Chicago Sun Book Week p6X D 14 '47 360w

Reviewed by Mary Hornaday
Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 19 '48 650w

Reviewed by James Van Zandt
Churchman 162:17 Ja 1 '48 180w
Kirkus 15:561 O 1 '47 340w

"While there is much repetition, the letters are intensely interesting in showing the development of this great man. . . Highly recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1467 O 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 117:26 D 1 '47 140w

"It is strange and wonderful to have a book about F. D. R. which is almost entirely free of controversial elements, except for those readers who happen to be graduates of St. Mark's School as opposed to Groton. . . The opponents of the late President can join with his friends in enjoying this book if only as a remarkable piece of Americana." R. E. Sherwood
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 D 7 '47 1250w

"A sense of humor shines out of these letters. . . Elliott Roosevelt supplies full, clarifying notes about the family genealogy, friends and interrelationships. On the whole he is a good commentator, but he makes a few mistakes. . . But this does not detract from the great interest of these letters, so human, so personal, so warm and so revealing of the background of Hudson River, Boston, New York and Groton society." Karl Schriftgiesser
+ N Y Times p3 N 23 '47 1700w

"It is an engaging book, for the young Roosevelt had the knack of putting his personality into his letters."
+ New Yorker 23:139 N 22 '47 60w

"Many a doting mother has kept her child's letters with loving care, but few with such ultimate purpose as Sara Delano Roosevelt. Admirers of the late President and students alike must be grateful to her for the affectionate collection, carefully preserved, dated, and in some instances corrected, which is now published as the first volume of President Roosevelt's personal correspondence, and which must be accepted in lieu of the autobiography which he might well have written had he lived longer." Pamela Taylor

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 D 20 '47 850w

ROOSEVELT, FRANKLIN DELANO. Wartime correspondence between President Roosevelt and Pope Pius XII; with an introduction and explanatory notes by Myron C. Taylor, personal representative of the President of the United States of America to His Holiness Pope Pius XII. 127p $2.50 Macmillan

B or 92 U.S.—Foreign relations. Roman Catholic church—Relations (diplomatic) with the U.S. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 47-2426

"In 1939, at the outbreak of the European war, President Roosevelt entered relations with leaders of the Protestant, Jewish and Catholic faiths with the declared purpose of making possible joint action between political and religious authorities for the alleviation of suffering during the war and the eventual re-establishment of peace. To facilitate the exchange of views between the Vatican and the United States Government, he appointed Myron C. Taylor as his personal representative to the Pope. Mr. Taylor has now brought together in this small volume the letters exchanged between the President and Pope Pius XII between 1940 and 1945." N Y Times

Reviewed by L. F. Stock
Am Hist R 53:143 O '47 260w

Reviewed by W. N. Hadsel
Am Pol Sci R 41:182 Ag '47 450w
Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Joseph McSorley
Cath World 165:377 Jl '47 320w
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 8 '47 100w

"As documentary support for the thesis that the Vatican mission was either necessary or useful, this published correspondence is a complete washout. Mr. Taylor's introductions, to the whole and to each section, are much more informative than the letters, but even they give only unsupported assertions when they escape from the cloud of vague generalities which envelops the whole." W. E. Garrison

— Christian Century 64:972 Ag 13 '47 1300w

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins
Commonweal 46:532 S 12 '47 330w
Foreign Affairs 26:223 O '47 30w

"There seems little of general interest in so bald a presentation. Its value is largely reference."

Kirkus 15:148 Mr 1 '47 110w

"Mr. Taylor's explanatory notes to this correspondence are well done and generally interesting, but it is regrettable that the documents themselves give us only the lofty expression of common aims and purposes without much indication of how they were implemented."

W. L. Langer
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ap 27 '47 450w

Reviewed by G. A. Craig
N Y Times p12 Ap 27 '47 600w

ROOT, EDWARD MERRILL. Before the swallow dares. 109p $2.75 Packard & co. 47-4457

"The volume [of poems] is an amazing unit out of rich multiplicity. Here are nature, history (there are poems of Columbus, Israel Putnam, the Civil War, MacArthur on Luzon), philosophy, humor, love, all the life of heart and senses and mind and spirit. Here the American continent comes to life. Here the true dynamic of evolution—not the mud behind, but the star before—is given." Christian Century

"The title of this book is a triumph. This side idolatry, I wish I had thought of it for one of my own books. Here is the beauty of Shakespeare's great phrase, appropriated to modern meaning. Here the singer brings to us his poems 'like daffodils that come before the swallow dares'—that, even in this harsh day, bring us the poetry of a world which, beyond the winter of our discontent, will yet be born. The book sings with a soaring, unabashed loveliness that makes all the tough, bright, brittle neuroses of our smart-aleck boys seem wondrously impermanent and unimportant." Joseph Auslander

+ Christian Century 64:1047 S 3 '47 700w

"Mr. Root should whip his muse into shape, as she is slouching badly. He appears to have convictions about which he is both earnest and sincere. It does them no justice to celebrate them in verse which contains far too many well-worn images and obvious phrases and which should be subjected, at the least, to a much stricter discipline." Fleming MacLiesh

Sat R of Lit 30:39 N 1 '47 360w

ROOT, EDWARD MERRILL. Frank Harris [a biography]. 324p $3.50 Odyssey

B or 92 Harris, Frank 47-4416

A biography, sympathetic in tone, of this editor, critic, author and adventurer, the friend of Wilde, George Bernard Shaw, and Arnold Bennett.

"Professor Root writes as an acknowledged partisan, undertaking an aggressive defense against Harris's former detractors; the tone of his book is therefore more controversial than critical. He accepts Harris's valuation of himself, an appraisal certainly not distorted by excessive modesty." Lloyd Morris

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
My 25 '47 1250w

"Frank Harris seems a strange hero for the Quaker poet Merrill Root. Mr. Root inherited Einar Lyngklip's great collection of Frank Harris materials; this he has supplemented 'by varied and wide research.' No point is too small for him to investigate; there are even detailed synopses of Harris' short stories. He calls his book a psychograph. It is not; it is an orthodox biography, chronological in its method, often strained and highly colored in its style." Edward Wagenknecht

N Y Times p4 My 25 '47 600w

"Mr. Root has unfortunately spoiled what might have been a good book by his rapturous admiration. . . His book is one long panegyric." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:118 Je 7 '47 700w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p21 Jl 13 '47
180w

"Mr. Root's valuable book suffers from an over-elaborate style. But he is a poet as well as an essayist and may be excused for calling his idolized subject 'God's Spy.' . . Poor Harris; his faults rather than his virtues have given him whatever earthy immortality he is to have. For long after his 'Shakespeare, the Man' is forgotten, he will be remembered for a bad biography of Bernard Shaw and for three volumes about himself which will remain forever classified as pornography." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:18 Je 21 '47 1100w

ROPKE, WILHELM. Solution of the German problem; tr. by E. W. Dicks. 282p $3 Putnam

914.3 National characteristics, German, Reconstruction (1939-)—Germany 47-5323

"More advice to the non-Soviet victors on how to create a reliable German state out of the economic and political clutter that the Nazis left behind them. The author, a German scholar whose departure from his homeland in 1933 was prompted by the best of reasons, thinks that it is about time for England, France, and the United States to go ahead on their own in Germany, a conclusion that brings him to a plan for the establishment of a federation of free-trading cantons in the territory west of the Elbe." (New Yorker) Index

"This is a balanced book, in which neither the sentimentality of the member of the German nation nor the prejudice of so many shortsighted exiles is allowed to interfere with a proper examination of the background of what happened in Germany from 1933 onward." J. E. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 15 '47 410w

Current Hist 13:227 O '47 110w

Kirkus 15:326 Je 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by Therese Pol

New Repub 117:26 O 13 '47 850w

Reviewed by John Midgley

New Statesman & Nation 33:76 Ja 25 '47 480w

"Wilhelm Röpke was a distinguished German professor of economics, sociology and international affairs who had the courage to stand up to the Nazis from the beginning. This cost him his chair at Marburg University and forced him to flee to Switzerland, where he is currently professor at the Institut Universitaire de Hautes Etudes Internationales at Geneva. He is therefore the type of German intellectual one eagerly looks to for light on the German problem. This reviewer, at least, has not found much help in this strange book." W. L. Shirer

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ag 31 '47 1750w

"Not everybody will share Professor Röpke's fundamentalist faith in his panacea. But he will, let us hope, be widely read." Franz Schoenberger

N Y Times p4 Ag 24 '47 650w

New Yorker 23:86 S 6 '47 140w

"Röpke, out of a vast fund of knowledge and experience, has written one of the most searching books yet to appear on Germany's political and social problems." A. W. Dulles
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 S 6 '47 950w

"For an eminently readable (well translated, also) and high-minded blueprint for a new Germany fit to be re-integrated into a free Europe this book is to be highly recommended. But unfortunately practical doubts must continually be breaking in." John Stapleton
+ — Spec 178:184 F 7 '47 550w

RORTY, JAMES, and NORMAN, NOAH PHILIP. Tomorrow's food; the coming revolution in nutrition; foreword by Stuart Chase. 258p $3.50 Prentice-Hall

613.2 Food, Diet 47-3148

"Study of nutritional errors, which authors believe due to overprocessing of foods. They stress better food standards on dehydrates and frozen food lockers, cheaper methods of getting fresh market products into American homes. A brief chapter on relation of refining white sugar to dental caries is significant. Chapter on eating sensibly is included." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47
230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p15 Jl '47

"Much of what they say has been said elsewhere. Nevertheless, compilations of this kind are worth doing; they stimulate thought and may even provoke action." Donald Powell

Commonweal 46:198 Je 6 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:94 F 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:892 Je 1 '47 60w

Reviewed by Benjamin Harrow

Nation 165:108 Jl 26 '47 400w

"The nature-cultist fixation runs strong in much of the book. . . It is a far better book than this aspect of it suggests. It contains a large number of persuasive, accurate and pertinent facts and analyses. It is a good book to have been published at this time, and everybody in the food trade, every doctor, every teacher of nutrition, and every food scientist, should read it. Any errors it contains are outweighed five to one by its truths." J. D. Black

+ N Y Times p14 Jl 20 '47 300w

"It is a book worth the attention of everyone who is interested in maintaining his or her own health, the health of children, or just generally, on the larger scale, the health of Americans." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 29 '47
650w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
170w

ROSE, ALVIN EMANUEL (ALAN PRUITT, pseud). Restless corpse. 247p $2.50 Ziff-Davis

47-3656

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Je 22 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Je 14 '47 50w

ROSE, HAROLD WICKLIFFE. Rayon and synthetic fiber industry of Japan; suppl. material gathered for the U.S. dept. of state and War dept. textile mission to Japan, Jan-Mar, 1946. 346p il $6 Textile research inst, inc, 10 E. 40th st, N.Y. 16

338.4767746 Silk, Artificial 47-5669

"This report is based on material gathered during a three-month government textile mission to Japan in early 1946. The author is former coordinator of research of the American Viscose Corp. Plans to promote Japan's non-war potential industries have focused attention on the textile industries. This report will provide much of the information needed for an appraisal of the problem as regards rayon." Chem & Eng N

Reviewed by Rene Lutz

Chem & Eng N 25:1541 My 26 '47 350w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:17 Ja '47

ROSE, OSCAR, ed. Radio broadcasting and television; an annotated bibliography. 120p $1.50 Wilson, H.W.

016.7914 Radio broadcasting—Bibliography. Television—Bibliography 47-3360

"Listing the nontechnical books and pamphlets which have been published in the United States in the English language concerning American radio broadcasting and television, this is a comprehensive bibliography. Most of the book is devoted to radio broadcasting, the various aspects of which are broken down into a series of subject headings. . . . The individual references are accurately presented in short catalog form, their imprint dates ranging from 1924 to 1946 for radio, and from 1932 to 1946 for television." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

Booklist 43:324 Je 15 '47

"A handy bibliography. . . Its compiler, suffers from the limitations, of many reviewers of television books, and he is guilty of many omissions, while other volumes of questionable merit are praised. Nevertheless the book will be useful where a quick reference is needed, both for television books and those covering all phases of blind radio."

Theatre Arts 31:80 N '47 70w

"From the adequate and facile annotations, the reader will be able to determine at a glance whether a given book or pamphlet is suited to his need. Librarians, vocational consultants, and laymen should welcome this book."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:323 S '47 280w

ROSENQUIST, FINGAL (FINGAL VON SUDORF, pseud). Three white horses; il. by Ernst Halberstadt. (Atlantic monthly press bk) 216p $2.50 Little

818 47-1304

Gay recollections of a Swedish-American family, living part of the time in Sweden, part of the time in the United States. The center of the family is the beloved mother, who went to college at the age of sixty; the narrator is her sculptress-daughter.

Reviewed by Alice Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 30 '47 270w

Kirkus 14:586 N 15 '46 250w

"Author's humor and skill give reality to her characters and make the book refreshing reading." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:160 Ja 15 '47 70w

"It is agreeable to read about so much vitality and to realize that the institution family, even if the father is a thousand miles away preaching the gospel in the north and not the constant provider, has enduring worth and warmth; that houses can be called Caprice and be very stately homes, and in an age of regimentation and packaged sentiment variety is still the spice of life and that the U. S. A.

with its mixtures of nationalities and classes churns up an amazing amount of it." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Ja 26 '47 700w

"The book as a whole has a certain amount of haphazard pleasantness and some of the naïveté of a Grandma Moses canvas, but it is lacking in real wit or cohesive sympathy. It is light reading, so light, in fact, that you can brush it off with a feather duster and never miss a paragraph." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p14 F 2 '47 600w

"An innocent and very charming chronicle for your lighter moments."

+ New Yorker 22:86 Ja 25 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 Jl '47

ROSENTHAL, HELEN, and others. Diabetic care in pictures; simplified statements with il. prepared for the use of the patient; 137 original il. (incl. 4 in color) prepared under the direction of the authors. 150p $2 Lippincott

616.63 Diabetes SG46-266

Explicit directions in text and picture for the use of diabetics. Contains dietetic instructions; use of insulin; care in acidosis and diabetic coma; blood and urine tests; care of skin injuries and infections from skin injuries; special care of the body; and personal and social factors.

"If every diabetic could own this book, the time normally spent by physicians, nurses, and dieticians in teaching diabetics how to take care of themselves would be greatly reduced. The patients would have constant access to simple but accurate information to guide them in everyday living with others and with their disease. . . . The reviewer regrets that, in the table showing suggested food allowances, niacin allowance is given in milligrams needed per day, while in the pages showing relative values of foods as sources of niacin, the standard of comparison is expressed in micrograms." Martha Koehne

+ Am J Pub Health 37:100 Ja '47 180w

Booklist 43:50 O 15 '46

ROSNER, JAKOB. Palestine picture book; photographs. 141p $5 Schocken

915.69 Palestine—Views. Jews in Palestine —Pictorial works 47-4326

Photographs and brief explanatory text giving a picture of the achievements of the Jewish settlements in Palestine during the last forty years.

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ag 24 '47 90w

"Past and present have seldom been so well presented as a single entity as they are in this pictorial journey."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 31 '47 240w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

N Y Times p7 Ag 10 '47 550w

ROSS, DIANA, pseud. See Denney, D.

ROSS, FRANCES AILEEN. Land and people of Canada; foreword by A. R. M. Lower. (Portraits of the nations ser) 128p il $2.50 Lippincott

917.1 Canada 47-30847

Introduction to the country and a brief history of Canada. The author is a Canadian. Illustrated with photographs. For upper grades and junior high schools. Index.

Booklist 44:54 O 1 '47

ROSS, F. A.—Continued

"Slight but attractive. Its description of the vast and varied Canadian expanse is of the very sketchiest. . . The text of this little volume is hardly up to the clear halftones, most of which were furnished by the two Canadian railways."

+ — Commonweal 46:581 S 26 '47 90w

"An excellent basic history."

+ Kirkus 15:506 S 15 '47 90w

"The material is intelligently organized and very readable, and, though the index is brief, children doing 'research' will have no difficulty in finding the information they seek. Not the least among its virtues is a section of excellent photographs." Mary Strang

+ Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 70w

"An index adds to the value of the book for answering school questions, but it is to be hoped that young and old will read it for fun and for surer knowledge of our closest friends." M. C. Scoggin

+ N Y Times p37 S 21 '47 200w

Sat R of Lit 30:61 N 15 '47 50w

School & Society 66:208 S 13 '47 10w

Wis Lib Bul 43:136 O '47

ROSS, NANCY (WILSON) (MRS STANLEY YOUNG). Left hand is the dreamer. 390p $3.50 Sloane

47-30131

Novel of family relationships brought to a climax by the war. Aunt Palm was a charming, enigmatic woman, and both aunt and mother-in-law to Fredericka. It was to Christopher and Fredericka that the war brought realization of the dull, safe life they had lived, and it was Fredericka's love affair with an Austrian refugee doctor which brought about the denouement. The scene is a small town in upstate New York.

Booklist 43:206 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by Olive Carruthers

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 23 '47 370w

"This is a thoughtful book, done with a light, sure touch, with many facets of interest." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 F 20 '47 600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"'The Left Hand Is the Dreamer' is another fictional quest for peace of mind, another literary document testifying to the sad uncertain yearning for spiritual security." F. X. Connolly

Commonweal 45:549 Mr 14 '47 260w

"Increasingly difficult to find, these last years, are novels such as this—a civilized, contemporary story in the class of quality feminine fiction of, let's say, Helen Hull at her best. Here is an attractively, intelligently contoured story of family relationships."

+ Kirkus 15:36 Ja 15 '47 210w

"A rarely literate, intelligent novel—imaginative, stimulating, beautifully written. . . It creates memorable characters, and the book is full of observations you suddenly realize are true, facts you discover interestedly and want to go on thinking about, calm assumptions you argue. It is completely adult, thoroughly absorbing, very good indeed. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:224 F 1 '47 100w

"A sophisticated novel, in the best sense of the word, intelligent, sensitive, searching." H. F. A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 14 '47 130w

"Despite the rich variety of its materials, its integrity of purpose and the flexibility of its style, 'The Left Hand Is the Dreamer' is somewhat less—and also somewhat more—than a good novel. Nothing in it seems false or unreal: it is at all times persuasively true to life. But Miss Ross has made her novel, I suspect, the too-submissive vehicle for her ideas. She has run away with it, not it with her. Yet 'The Left Hand Is the Dreamer' is definitely a book that forward-looking folk, wanting to understand themselves better, and hoping against hope for a better future for mankind, can read with pleasure, profit and appropriate feelings of gratitude." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 F 16 '47 1200w

"This is a lyric study of a woman's awakening to integrity. It is also, by implication, a brief for the relevance of love in an age seemingly dedicated to destruction and a lesson in the interdependence of the Old World and the New. The ordinary novel would doubtless stagger and fall beneath such a burden of message and symbolism. Happily, 'The Left Hand Is the Dreamer' is no ordinary novel, but a literate, mature and graceful narrative whose subtle intellectual excitement is sustained by a rarely beautiful prose." Mary McGrory

+ N Y Times p3 F 16 '47 700w

"A well-enough constructed, articulate, even glib novel."

New Yorker 22:101 F 15 '47 110w

"'The Left Hand Is the Dreamer' is an exceptionally well done exploration of truths worth exploring, and it sums up to a very good novel, indeed." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 18 '47 700w

"Aunt Palm has my heart. . . She is aged brandy, filling the book with her bouquet. . . The other characterizations, with one disturbing exception, are excellent and sure, boldly painted with the author's right hand. . . It is Franz Allers who disturbs me. Because he is both character and symbol, catalyst, Cassandra, thought against thoughtlessness, lover, and man, he has been given almost too much courage and wisdom for one man to carry. But there is so much here that is real, lasting, and true that, to paraphrase Aunt Palm, the perfection of Franz Allers may be taken as the one strange thing." John Woodburn

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:9 F 8 '47 1000w

"Miss Ross, who may do better than this, has sensibility and a sense of aspiration; certain passages in the novel do indeed exhibit a pronounced feeling for the egocentric higher things. But her discovery of the fundamental truth, as the wrapper surprisingly puts it, that 'emotions and values change, develop, grow, die and are re-born' does not by itself take her far."

Times [London] Lit Sup p137 Mr 29 '47 310

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

"With considerable beauty of style and with much good talk about the issues of our time, [Miss Ross's] story unrolls—a clever, interesting story which never quite lives up to its high promise. Emotionally, as narration, it is handicapped by the nature of its heroine—an immature, self-absorbed woman who cannot inspire sympathy. Intellectually, as an earnest effort to find a spark of truth, a morsel of wisdom, which will be valuable right now, it is more impressive for its sincerity of purpose than for its results. . . The Left Hand Is the Dreamer is not the kind of book which arouses much enthusiasm; it does command respectful attention." Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:573 spring '47 280w

ROSS, MRS PATRICIA (FENT). Hungry moon; Mexican nursery tales; il. by Carlos Mérida. 72p $3 Knopf

46-7681

"Thirteen original nursery tales, based on old Mexican nursery rhymes, moralistic in tone and illustrated with pictures distinctive in color and design. The rhymes are printed in their original form at the beginning of each story, together with English versions by the author. Ages 5-8." Booklist

Booklist 43:139 Ja 1 '47

"The illustrations by a distinguished artist are decorative and striking, abounding with humor, skilful in design. But we cannot help wondering whether a child listening to the story, hearing repeatedly that a certain little bug is gray and a rooster red, will be satisfied to find in the pictures that the bug is bright orange and the rooster blue." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:32 Ja '47 80w

"A good book for family reading aloud, and adults will appreciate it for the pictures, unusual, distinctive in color and design, and for the humor of the stories, and the easily digested morals in fable fashion. Four to eight year olds will like them—and second graders could read them alone."

+ Kirkus 14:492 O 1 '46 90w

"Illustrations are exceedingly good and are by Carlos Merida, an outstanding Mexican artist. Very fine addition to our collection of Mexican stories. Recommended." M. A. Webb

+ Library J 71:1810 D 15 '46 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:57 Mr '47

ROSS, SAM. He ran all the way. 293p $2.75
Farrar, Straus 47-883

"Stark and startling tale of a hold-up man-killer's frenetic fear and crafty cunning which motivates his activities in futile attempt to escape the police. Utterly at bay, Nick Robey forces himself on the Dobbs family for three nerve-shattering days." Library J

"What Ross has caught, and soundly, is the agonizing uncertainty, the whimsical, homicidal volatility of the terrified murderer, boasting frantically while he fears most, and most tightly trapped when he is most desperately masterful." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Ja 26 '47 200w

Kirkus 14:582 N 15 '46 130w

"Excellent picture of psychological chain reactions and development of ascending alarm caused by presence of a killer in the house. Good characterizations but limited by crude, tough talk." Jayne Doughman

+ — Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Ross has written an exciting and interesting story in 'He Ran All the Way.' But he has also revealed two shortcomings. While he shows great richness in the emotional impact, he fails to balance it with an equal amount of inventiveness in the action. Also he is exceedingly stingy with his vocabulary, relying mainly on lavatory lingo to convey impressions of hardness and evil. With the help of Roget, his next book should be fine indeed." Florence Crowther

+ — N Y Times p5 F 9 '47 550w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 F 9 '47 30w

ROSS, ZOLA HELEN. Overdue for death. 252p
$2.50 Bobbs 47-1271
Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47 90w

"Murder which is light, feminine and not too mental."

Kirkus 14:629 D 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 2 '47 90w

"This is just a run-of-the-mill detective story with motives and suspects a dime a dozen." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p43 Mr 16 '47 140w

"Somewhat more readable than the last Ross, but marred by unlikely business maneuvers, nonsensical cryptography and a solution that explains nothing." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 16 '47 50w

"Wordy, but good fun."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 Mr 8 '47 50w

ROSSER, JOHN BARKLEY, and others. Mathematical theory of rocket flight [under the supervision of] Office of scientific research and development, National defense research committee. 276p $4.50 McGraw

623.54 Rockets (aeronautics). Ballistics 47-5603

"Official report to the Office of Scientific Research and Development on the rocket development work done during the war at the Allegheny Ballistics laboratory of George Washington University. Designed as a handbook for the scientist not familiar with rockets and also as a self-instruction text for the layman. While calculus is required for complete understanding, authors have included enough explanations so that the lay reader may follow the continuity without comprehension of mathematics involved. Not intended for classroom instruction. Glossary of symbols, key formulae, tables and graphs." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1275 S 15 '47 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:57 J1 '47

ROTH, CECIL. History of the Jews of Italy. 575p il maps $3 Jewish pub.

296 Jews in Italy

46-6577

"This comprehensive study begins with the Roman imperial period and comes down through the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, the breakup of the empire, the age of revolution, united Italy, the Fascist regime and World War II. The author is an eminent British Jewish historian who has previously published a dozen volumes on special phases of Jewish history." (Christian Century) Index.

"The one regrettable and disappointing fact about this otherwise solid and valuable study is the lack of a full bibliography and bibliographical annotations. . . This, however, in no way detracts from the fact that much painstaking research has gone into the preparation of the work." Murray Frank

Am Hist R 52:736 J1 '47 650w

Christian Century 63:1345 N 6 '46 70w

"A 553-page book of narrative to be worthy of review should prove itself interesting, comprehensive, and definite. It is. One cannot conceive of anything of significance that has been neglected by the author. Yet the reader has no sense of undue or irrelevant fact finding. The free and simple style belies the extensiveness of his research in the centuries explored. . . With brilliant, swift, clear strokes, unobscured to the eye and mind by extraneous touches, Cecil Roth tells his story." R. E. E. Harkness

+ Crozer Q 24:175 Ap '47 1500w

"A solid history covering the whole period from the Roman Republic to the present."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:526 Ap '47 20w

"It is with a sense of personal gratification that the reviewer hails as a most noteworthy contribution Cecil Roth's newest work on Jewish history, for Dr. Roth was one of his teachers in that field a decade ago. With each new contribution to Jewish history Dr. Roth has made more secure his position as one of the foremost Jewish historians of all time." M. M. Berman

+ J Religion 27:307 O '47 250w

ROTH, JULIAN, ed. Home of your own: how to buy or build it; ed. in collaboration with 18 experts in the fields of financing, mortgaging, real estate, building, insurance, designing, landscaping, planning, and 48 architects representing all sections of the United States of America. (Greystone Press bk) 274p il $2.98 World pub.

728 Dwellings. Building. Architecture, Domestic 47-2190

Covers the subject of home building from financing and location to construction methods, materials, remodeling, and landscaping. There are floor plans of sixty-four houses. Illustrated dictionary of building terms.

Booklist 44:113 N 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 28 '47 70w

ROTHERY, AGNES EDWARDS (MRS H. R. PRATT). Maryland and Virginia roundabout; ill. by George Gray. 203p $2.75 Dodd 917.52 Maryland—Juvenile literature. Virginia—Juvenile literature 47-11823

Information about the states of Maryland and Virginia, with emphasis on history, places of historical interest, legend, and people of the past, industries, characteristic foods, and customs. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 44:175 Ja 1 '48

"Author combines history and geography in a delightful way and gives the reader not only many of the well-known facts in a fascinating way but also adds many new legends which she has collected from original sources about these two delightful old states. Especially good for both informational and recreational reading. . . Recommended for ages 10-16." S. J. Robinson
+ Library J 72:1786 D 15 '47 70w

"A Virginian by adoption and a frequent visitor in Maryland, Agnes Rothery knows her material and handles it competently. However, her style in this book suffers from oversimplification and lacks the charm which characterizes her writing for adults." Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p13 D 28 '47 150w

ROTHMAN, NATHAN. Virgie, goodbye. 248p $2.75 Crown 47-30914

Pictures the life of a pretty, brainless girl of easy virtue, who lives in New York. She goes on her way until someone sets the Vice squad on her trail, and Virgie seeks the best way out.

"A portrait of a prostitute, which if by no means sordid or salacious, still does not neglect a practically golden opportunity for sensual sensationalism. . . By a city school teacher and a steady contributor to the Saturday Review, this is not necessarily cheap, but is certainly an explicit exploration of the good time girl."

Kirkus 15:402 Ag 1 '47 160w

"There are a number of traps for a writer in this theme, and the only one the author altogether avoids is the salacious. The one into which he falls deepest is an exaggerated detachment. . . The truth is that Virgie just isn't quite bright, but it is more euphemistically implied that she's too spontaneous and generous for her own good. Consequently, we are treated to the intimate history of a moron on the premise that an undersized head is an oversized heart." John Farrelly
— New Repub 117:30 S 8 '47 240w

"It is a realistic, brutal and lacerating tale that Mr. Rothman tells, but it has its moments of gayety, of simplicity and of tenderness. Virgie is never an evil creature; she is a good-hearted, good-looking brainless little fool who follows her instincts and her heart. . . To the portrait of Virgie Mr. Rothman brings a mature sympathy and understanding. Neither sentimental nor romantic, he writes of her in accents that bring out the colors and the contours of her speech, her thoughts, her actions, her life, sometimes confused, sometimes clear, sometimes childlike, sometimes savage." Rose Feld
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 S 7 '47 450w

"Mr. Rothman's book is cooked up from start to finish. The writing is watered-down Joyce and Faulkner. The book opens with a device borrowed from the latter and closes with the ghost-voice of Molly Bloom. Mr. Rothman tries to give his book some reality by using lots of little details about city life but it's no soap." Seymour Krim
— N Y Times p22 S 7 '47 290w

"To my mind, Mr. Rothman's fine story is as much the tragedy of the inability of a telephone-and-radio-trained generation to stand loneliness as it is the drama of a pretty and not very bright small-town girl drifting into promiscuity and prostitution. . . The structure this author has given to his tale is both original and effective." Robert Pick
+ Sat R of Lit 30:21 O 18 '47 550w

ROUBICZEK, PAUL. Misinterpretation of man; studies in European thought of the nineteenth century. 306p $2.75 Scribner

190 Philosophy, Modern. Nineteenth century. Man 47-11738

"Present world chaos traced to philosophy of 19th century which is exemplified in separate chapters by Kant, Goethe, Napoleon, Nietzsche, Hegel, Marx, Tolstoy and Dostoevsky with traces of Romantic Movement and Darwinism. Examines failure of experiment in rejecting Christianity and advocates return to belief in supernatural reality. Replete with references to subjects' writings. Supplements DuNoüy's Human Destiny which traces failure of scientific materialism." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Kirkus 15:360 Jl 1 '47 120w

"Needs global audience but style will limit book to more mature reader. However, highly recommended for larger public, college, university and similar libraries." R. J. Hurley
+ Library J 72:1373 O 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Asher Brynes

Sat R of Lit 30:84 D 6 '47 850w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 10w

ROUCEK, JOSEPH SLABEY, and others, eds. Governments and politics abroad. 585p $5 Funk

342.4 Political science 47-3848

"A college textbook that should be useful also as a reference book, since it gives in short chapters descriptions of the governments in individual European countries, Turkey, and Latin America. Most of the text is written by the editor and Floyd A. Cave. Bibliographies and numerous references to literature." (Booklist) Index.

"The usefulness of the book will depend upon the instructor and the course. It will depend upon the instructor because some—lacking what Beard calls the 'omniscience necessary to understand the omnibus' in the amplitude of coverage—will find it necessary to have one book and cling to it both for assignments and lectures. It will depend upon the type of course, that is, whether the motif is recent politics in many states or government in a few." J. G. Heinberg
Am Pol Sci R 41:1020 O '47 700w

"In the hands of a very competent teacher and an interested class of students, this book, with its limited treatment of a rather limitless field, should be a useful tool." Robert Rockafellow

Ann Am Acad 254:186 N '47 350w

Booklist 43:354 Jl 15 '47

School & Society 67:48 Ja 17 '48 20w

"Governments and Politics Abroad is well worth reading by the layman as well as by the student of comparative government." W. T. Grenfell

+ Social Studies 39:43 Ja '48 600w

"Joseph S. Roucek and his four collaborators have . . . not been satisfied with the descriptive analysis of documents and texts; they have added a penetrating discussion of historical background and of social forces and intellectual trends at work in each of the various countries. . . The book is intended primarily as a text book for college classes. But also it will render excellent service to the general reader and to the adult student of the international scene." Hans Kohn
+ Survey G 36:551 O '47 400w

ROUGEMONT, DENIS DE. Last trump, tr. by Parmenia Migel. 151p $2 Doubleday

623.45 Atomic bomb. International relations 47-3492

"A book about the atomic bomb, consisting of a series of letters that the author started writing, to a person unspecified, two days after the news of Hiroshima and completed a year later, M. de Rougemont . . . is a native of Switzerland who has been living in the United States for some years. . . He does not go into the power politics or economics of the atomic age; instead, he stresses the philosophical implications of the bomb, concluding, as have others, that the crucial necessity is control of man." New Yorker

Reviewed by John Broderick
Commonweal 46:316 J1 11 '47 450w
Kirkus 15:120 F 15 '47 90w

"The urbane and charmingly-written reflections of a gifted Swiss writer on the deeper meaning to civilization of the atom bomb. . . Too slight a contribution to be of much importance or to receive much attention, but decidedly worth reading for those who enjoy mellow wisdom couched in delightful prose. Highly recommended for those happy few." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by C. G. Paulding
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p4 Je 29 '47 1050w

"Orderly, ironic, and outwardly untroubled, this slight volume makes as pleasant reading as a man could hope for while waiting to be destroyed." Russell Maloney

N Y Times p23 My 18 '47 600w

New Yorker 23:119 My 3 '47 160w

ROUGHLEY, THEODORE CLEVELAND. Wonders of the Great Barrier reef; with 52 natural-color phot. by the author. 282p $5 Scribner

574 Great Barrier reef, Australia. Natural history—Great Barrier reef 47-30373

The Great Barrier reef of Australia stretches for 1,250 miles and encloses an area of 80,000 square miles. In this volume a former president of the Royal Zoological society of New South Wales describes the marine life of the great reef, and illustrates his text with many photographs; fifty-two of them in natural color. Glossary of scientific nomenclature. Index.

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 J1 27 '47 80w

"Valuable addition to small library collections." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 72:1032 J1 '47 120w

"The former president of the Royal Zoological Society of New South Wales has given us an excellent book on this greatest of all coral reefs. The volume is notable for two things, an unusual wealth of illustration in natural colors and a pleasing popular style in the text. . . Besides the brief accounts of many interesting creatures the author has added satisfactory descriptions of the above-water picture of this great no-man's-land, the climate, contours, trees and palms of the reef-fringed islands forming the esthetic setting of this far-off Pacific region." William Beebe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ag 24 '47 380w

"Mr. Roughley writes with enthusiasm and in language that the layman can comprehend. . . A word about Mr. Roughley's fifty-two color photographs. They reveal the glories of the reef and are a most important feature of his alluring book." W. B. Hayward

+ N Y Times p16 Ag 10 '47 600w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:97 S 20 '47 160w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 100w

ROULIN, EUGENE AUGUSTIN. Modern church architecture; tr. by C. Cornelia Craigie and John A. Southwell [pseud]. 902p il $10 Herder

726.5 Church architecture. Church furniture. Church decoration and ornament 47-2501

"Study of everything connected with the construction and furnishing of churches, with special emphasis on contemporary building and profusely illustrated." Commonweal

"Constructively he has fine things to say on such matters as the adequate design and proper equipment of the sanctuary. Yet in spite of its many fine qualities, Dom Roulin's book is disfigured by unaccountable errors in the judgment of aesthetic values, the fundamental canons of which remain unaltered regardless of changing tastes. How a Bougureau and a Raphael Madonna, for example, can be juxtaposed and the former preferred, either on aesthetic or spiritual grounds, is not easy to comprehend. . . Perhaps the most important fact about Dom Roulin's book is that it exists, and that it has been made available in English by translators well equipped for an extremely difficult task." Frank Bourne

+ Cath World 165:379 J1 '47 500w

Commonweal 46:72 My 2 '47 30w

ROUMAIN, JACQUES. Masters of the dew; tr. by Langston Hughes and Mercer Cook. 180p $2.50 Reynal

47-4697

A short novel about the life of the black peasants of Haiti. Manuel, who returns to his people, after years as a sugar-cane worker in Cuba, preaches the idea of union to the bitterly poor people of his community. He discovers a distant spring and sets about getting the water channeled into irrigation ditches to save the village crops, and while his scheme is successful, he himself loses his life.

Kirkus 15:224 Ap 15 '47 120w

"Strong, earthy stuff, that seems to lose much in translation." R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:961 Je 15 '47 110w

"Clichés apart—and their number is few—the novel is a beautiful, exact and tender rendering of Haitian life, of the African heritage, of the simple, impulsive, gravely formal folk, of the poetry and homely bite of their speech, of Congo dances, tropical luxuriance, the love of a land and its people." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p3 Ag 3 '47 550w

"In theme and outline 'Masters of the Dew' is a fairly conventional proletarian novel; in style, imagination, observed detail it is a work of unusual freshness and beauty. . . Langston Hughes and Mercer Cook have translated 'Masters of the Dew' into a vivid, simple, lyric English that seems right for the peculiar excellences of Roumain's work." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p5 Je 15 '47 700w

"A routine, almost commonplace story, laid in Haiti, but one that is so freshly told and has so highly colored a background that it achieves the glowing effect of a tropical blossom. . . In treatment, it is charming, vivid, and original."

+ New Yorker 23:79 Je 28 '47 130w

"A violently but beautifully written novel. . . If the careful and almost literal translation from the Haitian-French makes the English, especially the dialogue, appear stilted and flowery, Roumain's story of the age-old struggle of primitive man against Nature and bad government is, nevertheless, so absorbing as to hold one's interest throughout its 176 pages and arouse sympathy for its characters." Linton Wells

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 J1 5 '47 700w

ROUSSET, DAVID. Other kingdom; tr. and with an introd. by Ramon Guthrie. 173p $2.75 Reynal

940.547243 Concentration camps. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German 47-30831

Personal record of the author's sixteen months spent in Buchenwald, Neuengamme, and other Nazi concentration camps. He was a Frenchman who was arrested for trying to organize anti-Hitler groups in the German army. His approach is abstract; he is not so much concerned with specific incidents in camp life, altho some are included; he is more interested in an attempt to analyze the pathology of national socialism.

Booklist 44:12 S 1 '47

ROUSSET, DAVID—Continued

Kirkus 15:299 Je 1 '47 180w

"Recommended, not necessarily for first purchase." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 72:1032 Jl '47 110w

"All I wish to say here is that this is a terrible and tragic report of the time we live in and the life man lives; that it is the most terrifying of all the reports on the concentration camps, even though it recounts the fewest atrocities; and that it is written by a man of fine feeling and genuine talent who has the capacity to shape his emotion and increase its power by restraint. . . . Other than that, all one can say of this book is read it, for it is part of the essential experience of our time." Irving Howe

Nation 165:316 S 27 '47 1100w

"'The Other Kingdom' is an amazingly honest, penetrating and skillfully written book that examines life in a concentration camp as have few other books to date. It is an indispensable source book—far more so than the official compendiums of the number of dead—for those who would understand our times and degradations. The translation and introduction by Ramon Guthrie is splendid. If I may enter one slight quibble, it is that the coined word 'Concentrationee' rings flatly in English." David Davidson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Jl 27 '47 1200w

"We all ought to study this small but important book to realize that these camps were not an incomprehensible aberration but a logical, if horrible, development of our social evolution—a social phenomenon produced by certain economic and political trends that are still at work all over the globe. Rousset warns the reader against adopting the racial metaphysics of the SS by thinking that these horrors came into being through the decomposition of German society only." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p7 Jl 27 '47 850w

"In many ways, this is the most terrifying and significant account yet printed of Nazi inhumanity, because it makes the most sense. The author understood exactly what was going on around him—the mystic need of the S.S. to satisfy an inborn contempt for mankind, and the master's delight in setting up little bureaucracies among prisoners and then watching them beat and kill each other until human dignity no longer existed. 'Normal men do not know that everything is possible,' M. Rousset says in summation. 'The concentrationees do know.'"

+ New Yorker 23:67 Jl 26 '47 180w

Reviewed by S. D. Padover

Sat R of Lit 30:10 Ag 2 '47 800w

ROVERE, RICHARD HALWORTH. Howe and Hummel, their true and scandalous history; il. by Reginald Marsh; with an introd. by James Garrett Wallace. 190p $2.75 Farrar, Straus

343 Howe and Hummel, firm, lawyers
47-30578

Study of the lives and times of two of the most notorious lawyers ever to practice in New York city. The firm of Howe and Hummel was an early exponent of the "shyster" brand of legal practice. Blackmail, corruption of public officials, fabrication of evidence were everyday occurrences to them. The book is an expansion of articles which first appeared in The New Yorker.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

"Rovere tells their story in smooth style and with gently cynical humor. The illustrations by Reginald Marsh are engaging." V. A. Bradley
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 17 '47 270w

Kirkus 15:325 Je 15 '47 130w

"A grimly fascinating, unsavory chapter in New York legal history, written in the best New Yorker style. Will appeal to crime fans." R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 140w

"Makes lively and entertaining reading." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 117:27 Ag 25 '47 1700w

Reviewed by Stanley Walker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 31 '47 500w

"Richard H. Rovere of The New Yorker staff has re-created fully and entertainingly the roisterous history of the most colorful law firm in New York annals—and one of the most important, too. . . . Written with discernment and wit, it also contains much valuable information on the politics and the law in one of the most raucous periods in the history of the main chance in America. The illustrations by Reginald Marsh are appropriately imaginative." M. R. Werner

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 24 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Paul Speegle

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 17 '47 650w

Reviewed by H. A. Bull

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 30 '47 450w

ROWE, FYNETTE. Burning spring. 245p $3 Wyn

47-11418

A pastoral novel, set in the Finger Lakes district in western New York state at the time of World war I. It is the story of the struggle of Jud Palmer and his two sons to make a living on their hilly land, and to live down the reputation left to them by a none-too-good ancestor.

"A harsh portrait of inbred people, caught by poverty, shame, persecution, this communicates sympathy, but will be distasteful to most." Kirkus 15:479 S 1 '47 170w

"Mrs. Rowe shows how a family, once outcast, was the scapegoat for unrest in a seemingly peaceful countryside. . . . The story has freshness and originality, and in many of its characterizations, notably those of the boys and the girls they married and of the neighboring Ritt family, unusual effectiveness." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 23 '47 470w

"Unfortunately the author includes all the standard scenes involving women. These war horses of popular fiction are well presented, for Mrs. Rowe writes with clarity and a fine talent for dialogue, but they seem out of key with the fresh and honest story of Jud and his sons on their lonely farm. The isolated, cool, slightly strange beauty of this lake country farm is very successfully suggested." Mary Hurst

+ N Y Times p24 N 9 '47 470w

"An uncommonly well-written novel. . . . Fynette Rowe won an Avery Hopwood award with her first novel, 'The Chapin Sisters,' and with 'The Burning Spring,' her second, she shows clear signs of becoming an American writer of rank." Hollis Alpert

+ Sat R of Lit 30:43 N 8 '47 500w

ROWLETT, MARGARET. D is for daddy [il. by the author]. [32p] $2 Knopf 47-25010

"Here is an alphabet with pictures in bright colors, such as a child might draw if he could draw a little better than he does; in other words, in his own idiom as used by an artist. The text, too, is such as an intelligent child recognizes for his own." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"There is a vivid quality to this that will keep it from being just another ABC."

+ Kirkus 15:426 Ag 15 '47 70w

"The book is rather expensive for the nursery school child for whom it is intended." M. B. Snow

Library J 72:1278 S 15 '47 70w

"Some one who knows little children from the inside made this book for them." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 26 '47 150w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:140 D 6 '47 60w

ROWLEY, GEORGE. Principles of Chinese painting; with il. from the Du Bois Schanck Morris collection. 111p il 48pl $15 Princeton univ. press

759.951 Paintings, Chinese. Painting, Chinese 47-3135

"To an extent not revealed by the title, this volume is two books in one: a general discussion of the principles underlying Chinese pictorial art, and a supplement which presents a group of Chinese paintings not hitherto published, from the Du Bois Morris collection, recently given to Princeton University. This latter half provides some fifty full-page illustrations, two expertly reproduced in color, and a brief catalog of the items shown. The choice includes a number of works of considerable interest, and two or three of remarkable quality." U S Quarterly Bkl

"Written by an authority on Eastern art, this fifteen-dollar book's explanation of the infinitely precise, highly traditionalized rules that govern Chinese painting is at once profound, erudite, and possibly more exhaustive than most readers would demand."

New Yorker 23:120 My 3 '47 80w

"The general reader will frequently tangle with unexplained allusions, while the specialist will be annoyed by a lack of the conventional apparatus of scholarship. Statements are sometimes implausibly dogmatic; quotations from Chinese texts, which form a major factor in the reasoning, are given with little or no means of tracing the originals, and in translations which vary from the highly interpretative to a bald pidgin English. The book will doubtless not meet with general agreement but will be of value if it only stimulates thinking and controversy in a field where feeling has usually substituted for rational criticism."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:229 S '47 280w

ROWLEY, HAROLD HENRY. Re-discovery of the Old Testament. 314p $3 Presbyterian bd. [10s 6d Clarke, J]

221 Bible. Old Testament—Criticism, interpretation, etc. 46-6289

"A study of the religion of the Old Testament. . . What is brought out is the essential character of the religion of Israel, its intimate connection with the history of the Hebrew people, and the way in which the faith of Israel, in its deepest convictions and its highest hopes, was fashioned in the long and arduous discipline of the nation's history. Moreover the religion of Israel is studied in all its main aspects. There is more to it than a presentation of the prophets as teachers of ethical monotheism. Due attention is given to the institutions of Israelite worship and their meaning for the faith and life of the community. There is a serious attempt to assess the permanent value of Messianic prophecy and of apocalyptic. Above all, the organic connection between the Old Testament and the New is stressed." (Manchester Guardian) Index.

"It is a valid method by which the messages of the Old Testament are unified and then interpreted as fulfilled in the New, or is it subjective parochialism? If revelation was progressive, was its goal limited to the first or second century of our era, as seems to be implied? However, it is a good and informing book, and worthy of reflection." I. G. Matthews

+ — Christian Century 64:15 Ja 1 '47 420w

Reviewed by J. B. Pritchard
Crozer Q 24:73 Ja '47 800w

"Solidly based on the best critical scholarship, but not written to display the scholarship." T. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 7 '46 280w

ROWSE, ALFRED LESLIE. A Cornish childhood; autobiography of a Cornishman. 282p $4 Macmillan

B or 92 Historians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-5617

"The record of how the son of a china worker in Cornwall fought his way up until he could enter Oxford. His handicaps were severe. His father was a workman, his associates were peasants, the atmosphere of the village in which he lived was definitely hostile to anything intellectual. In addition to all that Mr. Rowse was never physically vigorous; yet in spite of everything he not only entered Oxford, he made a brilliant record there and has since become a historian and poet of considerable eminence. This book ends with his triumphant acquisition of the last of the three scholarships he had to win to make a university education financially possible. It is the story of an intelligent and sensitive boy contending with an unfavorable environment and eventually battling his way to success." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

Booklist 44:107 N 15 '47

"If there is more of Mr. Rowse than there is of Cornwall in the book, it is a disappointment only to the reader who is hungry for a whiff of English country. The author is a brilliant historian, and his early childhood makes excellent reading. The taint of the Cornish paint-brush adds the color the book well deserves, and shows with deep sincerity how dear the land is to its native son." R. B.

+ Christian Science Monitor p20 D 8 '47 480w

Reviewed by E. V. R. Wyatt
Commonweal 47:380 Ja 23 '48 650w

"Its conspicuous merit is its picture of a Cornish village during and immediately after the first world war. It is a sort of literary dry point—done with a hard brilliance that is yet consistent with a very considerable emotional content, including humor, affection and rage in about equal proportions. The book is slightly precious, mildly snobbish and intensely British." G. W. Johnson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 N 23 '47 550w

"One forgives Mr. Rowse his crotchets, and his perhaps inverted snobbery, because in most matters the rectitude of the man stands forth. . . While 'A Cornish Childhood' is repetitious, discursive and, for the most part, rather mild, it is evidence that the spirit of British individuality, as opposed to our standardized 'individualism,' still persists. It is a reminder, too, that in the long run we may have more need of that spirit than England currently has of our dollars." Herbert Lyons

+ — N Y Times p4 O 5 '47 650w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 20w

ROY, GABRIELLE. Tin flute [tr. by Hannah Josephson]. 315p $3 Reynal

47-30245

The story of a large Canadian-French family, living in the poverty-stricken Saint-Henri quarter of Montreal. It is especially the love story of Florentine, the oldest child of the Lacasse family, who starts out as a waitress at Woolworth's, and after a brief affair with Jean, marries Emmanuel who offered more security.

Booklist 43:272 My 1 '47

"The Tin Flute is one of the most satisfying and adult novels yet to appear in Canada. Although it was written in French and its characters are all French-Canadians, it is not a French-Canadian novel nor even a Canadian novel in any local sense. Its greatness comes from the reality of its characters and their struggle with their environment." Edith Fowke

+ Canadian Forum 27:93 Jl '47 500w

Cath World 165:572 S '47 250w

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 11 '47 430w

ROY, GABRIELLE—Continued

"The interest of the novel lies not so much in the subject itself as in the rather awkward tenderness with which it is treated, in the quiet, almost intuitive understanding of a commonplace tragedy, in the heartfelt, sometimes even poetic approach to realism. . . . 'The Tin Flute' is an uneven book, a book of contrasts. It has dull passages and gauche repetitions and its dialogue is unconvincing at times. But with all its shortcomings, a great talent shines through. Some of Gabrielle Roy's characters are quite unforgettable, many of her scenes superbly written." Silvia Brull

+ — Commonweal 46:147 My 23 '47 330w

"The writing is perceptive, vivid—the story marches—most of the characters live."

+ Kirkus 15:104 F 15 '47 250w

"Without being sordid author portrays the problems of these people who were victims of the depression. Recommended." M. P. McKay

+ Library J 72:639 Ap 15 '47 80w

"Miss Roy writes vividly, though her style is somewhat cliché-ridden (perhaps in part the fault of the translation), and her phrases are not always exact. But despite such blemishes, 'The Tin Flute' is both readable and recommendable. It does not break any fresh ground psychologically, but to the Canada already known to readers of Louis Hémon and Mazo de la Roche Miss Roy has added much that seems both new and true." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 20 '47 800w

"It's selection by the Literary Guild insures 'The Tin Flute' of the widest readership in this country of any French-Canadian novel since 'Maria Chapdelaine.' American readers, while they must admire the author's vivid characterization, unflinching honesty and dry-eyed compassion, may find the book heavy going: they are sure to rebel at its total lack of humor." Mary McGrory

+ — N Y Times p5 Ap 20 '47 650w

"'Clear and sensible' is how the publishers, with a restraint almost unheard of in dust-jacket prose, describe this chronicle of poor French-Canadians, and clear and sensible it is. Except that it has a tougher fibre and an almost complete lack of humor, the book may remind you of 'A Tree Grows in Brooklyn' as it tells its story of an affectionate, not at all grim, family's life in a Montreal slum."

+ New Yorker 23:93 Ap 26 '47 180w

"'The Tin Flute' is a story unsalted by tears or laughter, a story without blitheness, yet you will be glad you read it. Miss Roy offers no solution to the problems she sets forth. She is no reformer. She is an artist with a point of view." Jane Voiles

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 20 '47 800w

Reviewed by C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 30:12 My 24 '47 500w

Spring'd Union p13 Jl 3 '47 120w

RUARK, ROBERT C. Grenadine Etching, her life and loves. 270p $2.75 Doubleday

47-31236

A burlesque on the pseudo-historical novel which follows a beautiful woman thru a variety of loves and adventures.

"Prescribed for those with low risibilities, but not necessary for anyone interested in brilliant satire."

Kirkus 15:403 Ag 1 '47 120w

"This report on what Ruark hath wrought is somewhat fragmentary, but his is not a narrative that lends itself to summary. It is heady stuff. Before taking off, better make certain that you are strapped in your seat." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 9 '47 320w

"Mr. Ruark's book is diverting for most of its length. At the start he plays steadily at his game. Later, though, he makes asides to the reader—a serious danger in the parody." B. V. Winebaum

+ — N Y Times p29 S 28 '47 180w

New Yorker 23:106 O 4 '47 70w

"When Ruark is good, he's very, very good. But when he's bad—well, literary parody is hard to do and harder to sustain." Lee Rogow

Sat R of Lit 30:21 O 18 '47 700w

"Merely exaggerating the absurd is no sure way to hilarity; satire must make its own kind of sense and this makes little or none. Readers will admire Ruark's choice of target but deplore his aim."

— + Time 50:112 S 29 '47 170w

RUBENS, DORIS (MRS W. W. JOHNSTON).

Bread and rice; foreword by Carlos P. Romulo, 235p $3 Thurston Macauley associates, 103 Waverly pl, N.Y. 11; for sale by Arco

940.548 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—Philippine islands

At the beginning of the war with Japan the author, a New York city girl, was teaching at the University of the Philippines and doing a news broadcast on the side. When the Japanese approached Manila she and her husband went to the Montalban Hills, where they lived for a year and a half among the mountain people, fleeing into the forests whenever the Japanese approached. When the friendly Filipinos who had befriended them were threatened, the Johnstons gave themselves up and there followed imprisonment in Santo Tomas and Los Banos, until the Americans returned. This is the story of their experiences.

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 15 '47 250w

"It is discouraging to report that despite strenuous efforts by the author, the narrative fails to hold the attention. The book is badly written, and attempts at impressionism verge on the grotesque. There is much sentimentality, and some bad taste. Attempts to recreate the emotional atmosphere of her experiences are overdone." J. N. Moody

— Commonweal 46:339 Jl 18 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:205 Ap 1 '47 90w

"As a straight narrative of adventure and suffering and a chronicle of our melodramatic era it has its value, but it is the evidence it supplies concerning Filipino loyalty and friendship in a time of anguish and defeat which provides its chief importance. . . . It is only when Miss Rubens is trying to investigate the inner significance of her experiences that her narrative tends to get just a trifle out of hand." Richard Watts

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 27 '47 1350w

"There have been slicker accounts of how Americans lived in the Philippines under the Japanese, but this reviewer knows of none more honest or convincing than 'Bread and Rice.'" F. S. Marquardt

+ N Y Times p6 My 11 '47 700w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 17 '47 600w

RUDOLFSKY, BERNARD. Are clothes modern? an essay on contemporary apparel. 241p il $8.75 Theobald

391 Costume

47-4604

"A satiric and philosophical examination of modern dress as a reflection of our civilization, by the architect and designer who put on a similarly titled exhibition at the Museum of Modern Art a couple of years ago. To the author, modern clothes are the product of fetishism, eroticism, commercial greed, and what he calls 'sartoriosis'—the enjoyment of discomfort. With the support of a great many drawings and photographs, both old and contemporary, he has an easy time making a fool of anyone who wears a tie or wrestles with a girdle." New Yorker

Booklist 44:5 S 1 '47

"The book is not just a stunt; it might almost be called a psychoanalysis of dress." New Yorker 23:68 Jl 12 '47 120w

RUMSEY, ADELINE (MRS JOSEPH MARX). The other children; a novel. 274p $2.75 Simon & Schuster

47-2903

"When the only school of a small town explodes killing all the teachers and children, the mental, moral and physical shock to the remaining inhabitants take various forms. Five children who survive because they had not gone to school on that fatal day find escape in tortuous ways ranging from blackmail to attempted murder." Library J

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 18 '47 320w

"A convincing cross section of calamity, this has its quotient of compassion as well as curiosity, and women may very well like it."

+ Kirkus 15:173 Mr 15 '47 170w

"Author shows a sensitive perception of adolescent psychology and reaction to horror. Recommended as a character study." R. F. Tubby

Library J 72:809 My 15 '47 60w

"Miss Rumsey is a first-class storyteller. Starting with a bizarre catastrophe, she has projected convincingly the course of life in half a dozen small-town families and the dramatic and unexpected twists it took under the force of the disaster. Once started, 'The Other Children' is not easily laid down." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 18 '47 800w

"Mrs. Rumsey has fashioned a deeply moving novel, inquiring, sensitive and mature." Thelma Purtell

+ N Y Times p18 My 18 '47 500w

"It's a fascinating novelistic problem that Miss Rumsey has set herself; and if the result is a little too tricky, a little too methodically (and sometimes inconsistently), diagrammed, it is still written with the high technical skill, the odd combination of warmth and irony, the adroit characterization and the general satisfyingness of her earlier novels." A. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Jl 20 '47 140w

RUNBECK, MARGARET LEE. Hope of earth. 559p $3 Houghton

47-30361

The financial panic of 1837 left Stephen Phelps and his adored young wife Amoret with only a Bible, and his father's journal expressing implicit faith in America. In the prairie lands of Illinois Stephen attempted to build a new Phelps fortune, but to Amoret, the spiritual wealth she drew from her beloved father-in-law's faith brought her bigger dividends.

"The two themes of religious faith and patriotism run through the long story, but there is unfortunately a wealth of amorous detail and a lack of reticence about marital relations that will make the book a problem for libraries."

Booklist 43:360 Jl 15 '47

"Seldom does a modern novel provide a theme based on man's need of spiritual truths as they may be gained through loving the Bible. Now, Miss Runbeck has written a story of pioneer America that holds the reader's interest, while it never ceases to stress this truth... Parts of the book may seem too heavily weighted with background; some loose ends in the plot are not too skillfully tied up; and there is a certain amount of over-simplification of both characterization and setting. But those who come only for a story should take away a thought-provoking message; while those who find in the construction some of the faults of a comparatively new writer of full-length fictions may gladly forgive them for the sake of a clean novel with a high purpose." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 O 7 '47 600w

Kirkus 15:287 Je 1 '47 230w

"Religious and patriotic themes are relentlessly emphasized. Book is too long, but it will undoubtedly be popular for a season." J. L. Ross

Library J 72:1194 S 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 2 '47 340w

"Mrs. Runbeck gives a faithful, interesting picture of the pioneer way of life from its hearty house-raising to its backwoods suspicion of people who were 'different.' She introduces a rather fabulous preacher, who could turn his hand expertly to any task and still keep his simple faith in God and share it with his neighbors... The character of Amoret is an achievement as the portrayal of gradual growth, though she is a shade too glowingly self-righteous to be completely sympathetic."

Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p23 Ag 10 '47 320w

"Highly idealistic, with a background of pioneer reality. Somewhat long-drawn out and devious toward the end, with scenes to which conservative readers will object."

Wis Lib Bul 43:119 Jl '47

RUNCIMAN, STEVEN. Medieval Manichee; a study of the Christian dualist heresy. 212p $4.50 Macmillan

273.2 Manichaeism. Dualism [47-30740]

"A study of a pattern of thought and a history of a religious movement. In 200 closely packed pages [this book] describes the growth and decline of the Dualist Tradition, from the Gnostics to the Cathars and from Mesopotamia to the Pyrenees. This formidable task requires historical and linguistic knowledge possessed by few, and it is scarcely surprising that 'there are hardly any books that treat the history of the Tradition as a whole.'" Times [London] Lit Sup

"Mr. Runciman's scholarly work is the best and latest word on [the Albigensians] origin and doctrines. (Heresy and Inquisition in Narbonne, by R. W. Emery, 1931, is good collateral reading). But the story of their extermination, though briefly told here, is even more instructive." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:1080 S 10 '47 1250w

"His erudition is enormous: his sources include works in Byzantine Greek, Russian, Bulgarian, Serbian and Armenian. Even more unusual in a modern historian, his diction and point of view are finely urbane. This work therefore offers a delight to the serious reader as well as a formidable contribution to knowledge." Raymond Mortimer

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:13 Jl 5 '47 1900w

"Perhaps the most valuable part of Mr. Runciman's book is his chapter on the Paulicians. His knowledge of Armenian enables him to shed new light on the difficult question of the origins of Paulicianism, and to unravel several confusing problems in the history of the various Armenian sects between the fifth and the ninth centuries. His criticism of Conybeare's views regarding the pseudo-Paulician Key of Truth is convincing and timely. Byzantinists will be grateful to him for his excellent summary of the history of the Armenian Paulicians."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p634 D 6 '47 1450w

RUNYON, DAMON. Poems for men. 245p $2.50 Duell

811

47-11727

"Verses on horseracing, gambling, baseball, etc., collected from newspapers, magazines and two early books printed in 1911 and 1912." Library J

Reviewed by Leo Kennedy

Chicago Sun Book Week p33 D 15 '47

600w

Kirkus 15:415 Ag 1 '47 80w

RUNYON, DAMON—Continued

"A lively collection which will enjoy peculiar popularity, I believe, for years to come."
Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 72:1196 S 1 '47 130w

RUSH, BENJAMIN, 1745-1813. Selected writings; ed. by Dagobert D. Runes. 433p $5

Philosophical lib.

818

47-11568

"Most famous physician of his time; member of the Continental Congress; Signer of the Declaration of Independence; advanced humanitarian thinker and prolific writer; inspirer of Thomas Paine's Common Sense; ardent self-advertiser; the study of this bundle of contradictions has had little printed material to support. Some of his essays were collected in his lifetime, 1798, his Memoria was published in 1905, the only full-length biography in 1934. This 'selection' now makes accessible a generous representation of his essays, medical lectures and letters." (Library J) Bibliographies. Index.

"Opinionated and contentious and often not in the key of modern taste, the publication [of these papers] will be welcome to the students of American social and medical history." J. E. Cross

Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 130w

"Mr. Runes has rendered a real service by editing selections from Rush's writings on government, education, natural and medical sciences and such particular matters as the effects of ardent spirits on human physiology, manners, exercise, how to run a newspaper, the benefits of charity, war in general and the American Revolution in particular." Irving Voorhees

+ N Y Times p50 N 16 '47 320w

Special Libraries 38:331 D '47

Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47 300w

RUSH, EARL MARVIN. Nothing but dogs; pictures by Diana Thorne. 56p 50c Grosset

Dogs—Legends and stories

Mr Clutter didn't like his five hounds, but when they frightened away three neighbor women who were trying to clean his house, the old fellow hoped someone would give him more dogs.

Kirkus 15:578 O 15 '47 50w

"Amusing antics, for young readers of 7-9. . . Illustrations by Diana Thorne assure all dog-lovers some entertaining moments." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 50w

"One of the most humorous animal stories of the year." Dorothy Martinovich

+ San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '47 150w

RUSH, WILLIAM MARSHALL (MARK LAYTON, pseud). Silver spurs; the story of a Montana cattle ranch. 216p $2 Mill

47-18108

Western story for older boys. Jeff Radway's father had left him shares in a Montana ranch, so Jeff, a college athlete with little knowledge of the West, went out to investigate. It was lonely going at first, but Jed stuck to his work, foiled his enemies, and found his life work.

Kirkus 15:31 Ja 15 '47 90w

"A readable story but not a necessity." Margaret Miller

Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
My 18 '47 330w

RUSSELL, BERTRAND ARTHUR WILLIAM

RUSSELL, 3d earl. Philosophy and politics. 29p 75c Macmillan

320.1 Political science

47-30729

"Once again Bertrand Russell puts forward his thesis that a liberal and tolerant social order presupposes a tentative and undogmatic philosophy." (Times [London] Lit Sup) The essay was originally delivered as a lecture to the National book league of England.

"As usual, Russell is delightful reading. But I have a feeling that he over-states, and hence weakens, the case against his philosophical opponents. Likewise, he can legitimately be charged with a somewhat uncritical attitude toward an English empiricism which, after all, is not without flaws." M. Q. Sibley

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1258 D '47 300w

Reviewed by Robert Hamilton

Hibbert J 46:81 O '47 2500w

"Essay written with that brilliant lucidity that has in our period no parallel." Kingsley Martin

+ New Statesman & Nation 34:214 S 13 '47 300w

"If this short essay had only its wit and excellent style to recommend it, it would still be very well worth reading. But it is the product of one of the most brilliant and sincere minds of our time, and so, of course, it has a good deal more in its favor." Arthur Foff

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '47 700w

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p406 Ag 9 '47 450w

RUSSELL, CARL PARCHER. One hundred years in Yosemite; the story of a great park and its friends; with a foreword by Newton B. Drury. new ed 226p il $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

979.447 Yosemite valley. Yosemite national park 47-30335

"The story of Yosemite, first published in 1931 [Book Review Digest 1932] and now expanded with source material and recent history. Photographs, chronology, bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 43:333 Je 15 '47

"Although the author disclaims any plan of writing a guide book, his volume will serve very well in that capacity and it is also the standard historical work on the subject. Hotels and their keepers—often curious men—tourists, old and new, stagecoach days, mining excitements and a chapter on the men who have guarded the park against encroachments and fires—they add up to making a biography of the region. There are a folding map, many fine photographs, several quaint old prints, an exhaustive bibliography and a right good and workable index." Stewart Holbrook

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
My 25 '47 400w

Reviewed by D. L. Morgan

Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 20 '47 200w

RUSSELL, MRS CHARLOTTE (MURRAY).

Lament for William. 224p $2 Doubleday

47-4996

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ag 3 '47 100w

"Homer Fitzgerald is even more amusing than Charlotte Murray Russell's famous spinster sleuth, Jane Amanda Edwards." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p20 J1 20 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 J1 13 '47 60w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 26 '47 50w

RUSSELL, FRANK ALDEN (TED MALONE, pseud), ed. Adventures in poetry. 329p $3

Morrow

811.08 American poetry—Collections 47-562

Collection of poems, some by unknown writers, others by such favorites as Margaret Fishback and Robert Coffin. Selected and briefly annotated by "Ted Malone" the radio reciter.

Chicago Sun Book Week p46 D 1 '46
80w

"Good corn."

Kirkus 14:451 S 1 '46 80w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ja 5 '47 200w

RUSSELL, PAUL FARR, and others. Practical malariology; prepared under the auspices of the Division of medical sciences of the Nat. research council; foreword by Raymond E. Fosdick. 684p 238il maps $8 Saunders

616.936 Malaria SG46-314

"This book was originally designed as a military medical manual, but it is written primarily from the standpoint of civilian needs. A single chapter deals with Malaria Control under Military Conditions, and the material in it applies largely to civilian conditions as well. Following an Historical Introduction, the remaining twenty-eight chapters are grouped under six sections: The Parasite, The Mosquito, The Man, The Community, Prophylaxis and Control, and Therapeutic Malaria. The subject matter is presented in a practical manner, is gathered largely from the authors' civilian experience, and is considered in the light of important contributions in the literature on malaria. Each chapter is well documented, and provides a long list of valuable references." U S Quarterly Bkl

"This book is a well balanced presentation of its subject, and will be an indispensable tool for all who work in its special field and related subjects. The medical, entomological, and engineering phases of the disease and its control are admirably handled within the limits of a single text." H. F. Gray

+ Am J Pub Health 37:223 F '47 360w

"Photographs include such items as photographs of parasites, the rearing of mosquitoes, and survey and control procedures. In general, Practical Malariology fills the need for a handbook of global malariology, and should prove of value to students and workers in the field as an adequate and ready reference."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:199 Je '47 360w

RUTENBER, CULBERT GEROW. Doctrine of the imitation of God in Plato. 115p pa $1.50 King's crown press

184.1 Plato. God 47-2299

"It is the purpose of this study to analyze the meaning and significance of the doctrine of the imitation of God in the Platonic dialogues." (Introd) Bibliography. Index.

"This is a thoughtful and sensible little book, with a somewhat formidable title on a subject well worth consideration even for those not specially students of Plato. . . Sometimes this author's language is not very clear or precise. . . There are a few typographical errors, and the punctuation sometimes obscures the sense. But this book will make Plato more interesting and valuable to any thoughtful person, and will contribute to an understanding of some of the more philosophic problems of Christian theologians." W. K. Prentice

+ Crozer Q 24:271 J1 '47 1150w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:254 S '47 240w

RUTLEDGE, ARCHIBALD HAMILTON. God's children; il. with phot. by Noble Bretzman. 159p $3 Bobbs

917.5791 Plantation life. Negroes—South Carolina 47-1935

These anecdotes of life on a southern plantation deal chiefly with the accomplishments—in manual labor, in the skills of artisan and craftsman, in social relations—of the Negroes who live on the place.

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 14 '47
70w

Kirkus 15:123 F 15 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:66 Ap '47

RUTLEDGE, NANCY. Preying mantis. 217p $2 Doubleday

47-4015

Mystery story.

"Nancy Rutledge displays an alarming preoccupation with motion to the absolute exclusion of sense or probability. Her plot, for instance, hangs on the idiotic premise that the leader of an international Fascist gang cannot assume power without his fraternity pin."

James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p11 J1 20 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:178 Mr 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9
Je 1 '47 110w

"The story moves rapidly to a smashing finish, and it holds the interest even if one does guess where the Preying Mantis has been hidden." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 My 25 '47 200w

New Yorker 23:108 My 24 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47
70w

"Shocker."

Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 40w

RYAN, JESSICA. Exit harlequin. 256p $2 Doubleday

47-627

Detective story.

"Begins ingratiatingly and her Slavic professor-detective has a very distinct charm; but the tale is long and suffers from a want of action, for all that the characters are as busy as if they were acting in a French farce. The characters themselves, even those not professionally theatrical, all have grease paint flowing in their veins, a fact which induces attitudinizing and quantities of monologue."

James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 12 '47
70w

Kirkus 14:561 N 1 '46 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
F 2 '47 180w

"The motive is an odd one, made plausible only because of the author's vivid characterization." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p33 Ja 19 '47 120w

"Stage-struck readers will probably admire the background, if not the detection, which relies more on intuition than on logic."

New Yorker 22:88 Ja 11 '47 100w

RYCROFT, WILLIAM STANLEY, ed. Indians of the high Andes. 330p $3; pa $2 Committee on cooperation in Latin America, 156 5th av, N.Y. 10

980.4 Indians of South America 46-6237

"The report of a commission appointed to study the Indians of the Andean highland with a view to establishing a cooperative Christian enterprise. Apart from that specific purpose, the volume gives an excellent and well studied survey of the economics, social customs, ethnological features and health conditions of the area." Christian Century

+ Christian Century 63:1016 Ag 21 '46 70w

Reviewed by S. G. Inman

Churchman 161:18 F 1 '47 300w

RYLEE, ROBERT. The ring and the cross. 308p $3 Knopf

47-5698

"A story of a struggle for political power in Texas, during the early years of this decade,

S

RYLEE, ROBERT—Continued

between a United States senator, an incipient Fascist, and a shipbuilder whose opinions are far Left. The shipbuilder is dramatically eliminated from the competition, and the senator sells himself into bondage to the Fascist in exchange for a life of pomp, good bourbon, and cigars. The author has filled in his story with an acid description of conditions in a shipyard during the war and a credible account of the disintegration of a patriarchal Southern family." New Yorker

Booklist 44:51 O 1 '47

"An astonishing proportion—I should estimate nearly one-third—is generalized narrative. Perhaps this was thought necessary to introduce the extremely variegated populace present in a war manufacturing center. But generalized narrative, however indispensable at certain points in a novel, is not the kind of storytelling that makes us see things. There is too much synoptic presentation, and I fear that in description, Mr. Rylee has not educated himself far past the cliché. Finally, because the characters tend to be embodiments of points of view rather than divided men, their struggle fails to touch us with poignance. The background is tense, but the reader who takes his delight in craftsmanship will not find much satisfaction here." R. M. Weaver

— + Commonweal 47:46 O 24 '47 450w

"A thought-provoking and vitally written novel."

+ Kirkus 15:440 Ag 15 '47 110w

"On the whole an intelligent and thoughtful novel with some striking characters; recommended to serious-minded readers." E. P. Walbridge

Library J 72:1375 O 1 '47 80w

"The Ring and the Cross," with all its sensitiveness, does not touch the heartstrings. Even the tragic ending, inevitable in the Greek sense and contrived with admirable restraint, fails to stir one emotionally. But the entire book is a stirring of the author's subtle mind to provoke the reader's, and as such it is a performance of considerable merit." James Hilton

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 O 5 '47 800w

"Robert Rylee, whose 'Deep Dark River' was a best seller a while back, may very well have another in 'The Ring and the Cross.' Certainly he has packed more fireworks of one sort or another into this new novel than many writers do in twice as many pages. The narrative makes very real the personalities and interrelations of a number of unusual characters, some taken right out of newspaper headlines and some from behind the headlines. The narrative also effectively presents the hectic life and work of a host of people not so unusual—those everyday folks who swarmed into the shipyards of America from farms, small towns, the cities and piney woods, to build, in the shortest possible time, the greatest fleet of ships the world has ever seen. . . This reader found none of Mr. Rylee's three main characters wholly satisfying." N. K. Burger

+ — N Y Times p5 O 5 '47 950w

"With the help of a supple, precise style, [the author] has gathered all these matters into a very satisfactory novel."

+ New Yorker 23:122 O 11 '47 120w

"As melodrama—and often violently and vividly written melodrama—the book has everything. As convincing fiction, however, the story seems lost in its own furies and rhetoric. . . The novel is as overdecorated with romantic ideas as it is with old houses, old families, music, and art. As a result it has little to say clearly to such hopeful Texans as may need such leadership as its hero seems to offer. But it is certainly a book which Ann Radcliffe and her readers would have approved." Jonathan Daniels

— + Sat R of Lit 30:22 O 25 '47 650w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

SAARINEN, MRS LILIAN SWANN. Who am I? [31p] il $1.50 Reynal

46-8127

"A beginning science book for third and fourth grades which deals with the subject of coloration and size of animals as protection. The why of the zebra's stripes, the polar bear's white coat, the bigness of the elephant and the hippopotamus are briefly explained. Picture-book format." Library J

"It is enhanced pleasure to find beautifully designed pictures (by the author), though for readability the long type lines are difficult. Adults will claim this for their own shelves for aesthetic delight. Don't miss it."

+ Kirkus 14:384 Ag 15 '46 120w

Reviewed by Isabel McLaughlin

Library J 72:84 Ja 1 '47 70w

"The little shaver who gets this book may feel proud of himself, which is a good thing, but he is likely also to feel a certain community of interest in a good many other animals."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p42 N 10 '46 290w

SACHS, CARROL C., and SNYDER, EUGENE H. Plastics mold design. (Murray Hill bks) 77p il spir pa $4.50 Rinehart

668.4 Molds (for plastics) 47-6390

"Text and working drawings that will improve and facilitate the production of molds and extrusion dies for plastics. Devoted mainly to discussing the differences in design requirements for compression, transfer, and injection molds and extrusion dies. Drafting room practice and materials for mold construction are also discussed. Graphically illustrated with full-sized working drawings discussed in the text." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1113 Ag '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:36 Ap '47

SACHS, CURT. Commonwealth of art; style in the fine arts, music and the dance. 404p il $5 Norton

709 Art—History. Music—History and criticism. Dancing—History 46-8437

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by A. L. Kroeber

Am Anthropol 49:485 Jl '47 1350w

Reviewed by MacKinley Helm

Atlantic 179:156 Ap '47 480w

Reviewed by Wylie Sypher

Nation 164:216 F 22 '47 1400w

"The Commonwealth of Art' seems all out of hand. The plan of chapters for encompassing such a complex subject should be basically simple. It is bewilderingly complicated. . . The entire approach is pedantic and pedagogic. For whom is all the effort of this book intended? Artists and musicians in discussing their problems use the simplest and most direct terms. The general public will find difficulty in absorbing such a complex of esthetics so peppered with invented phrases and encyclopedic references from the entire realm of the arts. And for the student of the history of the arts, the study of an abstract science should seem far more attractive and rewarding than 'The Commonwealth of Art' itself." Donald Oenslager

Sat R of Lit 30:22 Ap 19 '47 750w

"Dr. Curt Sachs is one of Europe's finest gifts to America. The breadth and depth of his learning, his clarity of expression, his infectious enthusiasm for the arts have already been amply displayed in two earlier books, The World History of the Dance and The Rise of Music in the Ancient World. His latest work,

The Commonwealth of Art, is even more profound and more challenging than either of these." E. J. R. 1.

+ Theatre Arts 31:73 Ap '47 480w
U S Quarterly Bk1 3:12 Mr '47 240w

SACHS, WULF. Black anger. 324p $3 Little 916.8 South Africa—Social life and customs.

Negroes in South Africa. Psychoanalysis
47-1587

"Dr. Sachs is a practicing psychoanalyst in the Union of South Africa. Over a number of years he made a careful psychoanalytic study of a native African medicine man named John Chavafambira with the purpose of discovering how the African native's inner thoughts and feelings compared with those of white men." (Library J) This is the story of John Chavafambira.

"'Black Anger' is a remarkable book; a significant anthropological study, told in the form of a story so engrossing that any reader who gets as far as the second paragraph will not put it down save for some very urgent reason." Wendell Johnson

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 F 23 '47
360w

"This began as a psychoanalytic study of a native and is the story of John, an African witch doctor. It however has less specialized implications and value in that it is the story of a whole people, in conflict between black and white cultures, Christianity and the primitive superstition of the kraal, subordination and enlightenment. . . Professionals in this field will find an interest in this clinical case report which shows how close primitive symbolism is to Freudian dream symbolism. There is a further ethnological value, but one questions a general market beyond the scientific."

+ Kirkus 14:584 N 15 '46 190w

"A most interesting and colorful story of a remarkable individual who, within the limitations of his environment and background, was exactly as complex as the most civilized white man. Of interest to anthropologists, sociologists, students of race and racial relations and even the general reader." George Wakefield

+ Library J 72:75 Ja 1 '47 160w

"This book is less a psychoanalytic document than a political one, and is closer to such books as Kravchenko's 'I Found Freedom' than to scientific life-histories of persons of non-Western cultures. Unfortunately, a peculiarly poignant aspect of John Chavafambira's tragedy, one unrelated to politics, is thereby slighted—that is, the effect of his falling between two cultures, the African and the European, neither of which he can fully accept or reject." Nathan Glazer

Nation 164:222 F 22 '47 1300w

New Repub 116:32 My 12 '47 230w

"An extraordinary book, and a fascinating one." Lorine Pruette

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ja 12 '47 1000w

"'Black Anger' will appeal to anyone interested in what is so euphemistically described as 'the color question.' It will interest doctors and psychologists whether they deal with Negroes or not." Stuart Cloete

+ N Y Times p26 Ja 26 '47 400w

"As a case history of racial intolerance and oppression, 'Black Anger' is a tragedy of considerable dimensions, but I suspect that it is more important both as an example of a new kind of anthropology, in which ritual and superstition are considered in relation to the daily life of human beings, and as a study of psychoanalysis that shows that the principles of the science hold no less true for oppressed and backward people than for those who take taxis to their analysts' Regency offices. The author is a skillful and scholarly writer, and I think you may find his book worth looking into." Albert Hubbell

+ New Yorker 23:114 S 13 '47 1350w

"There is no apparent effort to weld events into an artistic whole. The story unfolds quietly, fitfully, much as stories do unfold in a psychiatrist's office. The writing is clear, simple and emotionally tidy. The background is colorful, though the author strips so-called 'witch doctors' of any mysterious 'witchery.' . . Dr. Sachs' insistence upon laying unqualified blame for the ills of Africa's Negro at the feet of its whites leads him to express as fact a number of opinions which are, at least, detestable. Artistically, the author's intrusion is lamentable. John emerges as an individual of poignant dignity, and his bewildered groping toward maturity and understanding, if reported without editorializing, would have presented a moving plea for tolerance." Phyllis Liapes

San Francisco Chronicle p23 Ap 20 '47
420w

Reviewed by Robert Pitkin

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ja 18 '47 750w

"The psychoanalytical interpretation of John's dreams are, indeed, the only tedious parts of this book. What holds the reader is the succession of glimpses into the life of a native African: the points at which conflict arises with white authorities, the difficulties of living a decent and moral family life in a pestilential slum, the firm belief in ancestral spirits and in witchcraft. . . It is a book for scientists, but it is also a book for those impressed by man's unconquerable mind." J. G. Leyburn

+ Yale R n s 37:180 autumn '47 700w

SACKETT, MRS ROSE MCLAUGHLIN. Penny Lavender; il. by Kathleen Voute. 249p $2.50 Macmillan

47-5873

The story of three eventful years in the life of Penny Lavender who is not quite fourteen when the story opens. It transports Penny from her plantation home near St Louis to Fort Snelling in the days when St Paul was only a collection of log cabins. The yearly arrival of a box of dresses and dress goods from Paris was a high spot in the lives of the women of the settlement. For ages ten to fourteen.

Booklist 44:95 N 1 '47

"Miss Sackett has written an excellent story and effectively vitalized one phase of American social history." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:443 N '47 120w

Kirkus 15:394 Ag 1 '47 150w

"The plot is adequately handled, the characters are diversified and developed sufficiently to make them stand out as individuals. A refreshingly different picture of frontier life in the Middle West. Recommended where more pioneer stories are needed." Claire Nolte

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 70w

"I must say that I began to wonder, as that box from Paris continued to disgorge whatever was needed, whether it had not been originally packed for the Swiss Family Robinson, but in a story for this age exuberance is never unwelcome." M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 2 '47 450w

"Girls of 10 to 14 will find this a warm, full-bodied story of personal relationships in a picturesque setting." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p37 N 2 '47 150w

"There is an excellent picture of St. Louis as it was in those days, of its rapid growth from a few log cabins to a prosperous town. . . It is a good looking book, with chapter headings and a clear, well spaced page."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:50 N 15 '47 170w

Wis Lib Bul 43:179 D '47

SACKVILLE-WEST, VICTORIA MARY (MRS HAROLD GEORGE NICOLSON). Devil at Westease. 219p $2.50 Doubleday

47-30303

Detective story.

Booklist 43:310 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47
110w

"The denouement provides an original twist, and a surprise decision, which the author saves (thereby hurting her story) with an artificial anticlimax. But while she is telling her tale, she provides good reading, good atmosphere."

SACKVILLE-WEST, V. M.—Continued
+ — Kirkus 15:172 Mr 15 '47 170w

New Repub 116:29 My 26 '47 40w

"There is a double twist in the story which, despite appearance, is really of a highly fanciful nature. It certainly does not play fair, as what murder mystery does, but in a sort of mild way it is moderately entertaining and ingenious." Iris Barry

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 18 '47 500w

"It is, as might be expected, very well-bred, with sustained suspense, a subtle and original turn of plot, and a fine literary flavor, qualities with which mysteries are not too often blessed. . . The solution is fantastic but perfectly fair to the reader; a satisfactory ending to a puzzler of exceptional charm and finish." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p31 My 11 '47 320w

"The book might charitably be called a Grade B mystery; by comparison with the author's 'All Passion Spent,' however, it is no more than Grade D Sackville-West."

— New Yorker 23:119 My 17 '47 130w

"Miss Sackville-West's narrative of murder and disappearance in one of those hidden-away villages is a joy and a delight. The experienced fan should have no trouble figuring the answer (though he'll hardly anticipate the beautiful twist it receives), but the leisurely charm and ease of the telling provide an excellent evening's diversion." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '47 100w

"Like many authors who have made reputations in other fields, Miss Sackville-West has been tempted by possibilities of the novel of mystery and suspense," to quote the jacket; and like many other writers today, she is trying to enlarge the field of the detective story. Unfortunately, those who have admired her exquisite style and serene reflectiveness in other books will feel that she has not succeeded well in either venture. She has tried to produce the Perfect Crime; and she has set forth the truly shocking idea that a man whose work is of sufficient importance to humanity ought to be allowed one murder just for amusement." Basil Davenport

Sat R of Lit 30:31 Je 21 '47 650w

SADLEIR, MICHAEL. Strange life of Lady Blessington. rev Am ed 335p $4 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Blessington, Marguerite (Power)
Farmer Gardiner, countess of 47-11251

"In 1933, Sir Michael published Blessington-D'Orsay: a Masquerade [Book Review Digest 1933]. This new edition is not completely rewritten but offers some new material in the book itself and in the appendices. Title of the first biographical sketch was singularly apt—'masquerade' and the adjective in this title 'strange' is just as fitting to describe the curious life of Lady Blessington, born Irish Sally Power." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:187 Ja 15 '48

"The period, 1820-1845, is skilfully pictured and libraries that do not have the first edition will find this a brilliant addition to the literature of that gay, also sad time." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1268 S 15 '47 90w

"Charming and distinguished book." George Dangerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 30:89 D 6 '47 1100w

SADLEIR, MICHAEL. Trollope; a commentary. rev ed 435p $4 Farrar, Straus

B or 92 Trollope, Anthony 47-1170

Reissue of a book long out of print first published twenty years ago (Book Review Digest 1927). "It contains little fresh material, but in its present form seems to be better suited to its subject than when it carried its original load of ornament." (Foreword) Bibliography. Index.

"Rereading Sadleir's book one admires its durability. Here, one notes, is criticism which does not date, but is written from the discriminating long view. Here, one adds, is biography based on such sound and original research that even its recent competitor (written by the Stebbins) with its more ample consideration of historical surroundings, does not replace it." Howard Vincent

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 F 23 '47 380w

"This book will at once delight the hardened Trollopean and excite the interest of the novice. . . The book contains a good deal more than its laconic title and modest subtitle indicate. There is an introductory study of the epoch of which Trollope is perhaps the best voice. This brief study of the mid-Victorian (1861-79) period is penetrating and richly suggestive. . . Then a nearly full-scale study of Mrs. Trollope precedes the central biographical and critical account of her son Anthony which is the core of the book. This in turn is followed by a careful study of his work. Appendices include chronologies and bibliographies of both Frances and Anthony Trollope, as well as a 'classification of Trollope's Fiction' very helpful to the tyro appalled by the bulk of Anthony's work. . . There is a brief index of proper names and titles, whose amplification would make a most useful book still more useful." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 46:77 My 2 '47 650w

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 33:277 Ap 19 '47 550w

"Sadleir devotes himself mainly to establishing Trollope's rightful place in the tradition of the English novel. We can hardly expect a better estimate, dual biography and guide book than one which has withstood so well the test of twenty years." W. B. C. Watkins

+ N Y Times p6 F 16 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 F 9 '47 110w

"A good book, accurate, full, and pleasantly urbane." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:20 Ap 26 '47 750w

Reviewed by E. K. Brown

Yale R n s 36:753 summer '47 800w

SAGENDORPH, KENT. Stevens Thomson Mason, misunderstood patriot. 447p $4.75 Dutton

B or 92 Mason, Stevens Thomson. Michigan—History 47-30629

Biography of the first governor of Michigan. The Mason family were originally from Virginia, went to Kentucky, and finally to Michigan Territory. Stevens Thomson Mason's father was appointed secretary of Michigan Territory by Andrew Jackson in 1830. When his father tired of office, Stevens, aged nineteen, took his place. The young secretary became very popular, fought for the admission of Michigan to the union, and became its first governor. Later he became the victim of a conspiracy, left the state for New York, where he died in 1843, aged 31. Bibliography. Index.

"A book that it is a continuing joy to read—rich in the atmosphere of its period, incisive in characterization, lively and vigorous in style; and it is marked on every page by evidence of thorough research and scholarly integrity." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 7 '47 370w

"Although this is an exceptionally readable and interesting biography, it is very evident that a tremendous amount of research preceded the actual writing of the book. It is a real contribution to the growing history of the middle west." Paul Kinery

+ Commonweal 46:531 S 12 '47 330w

Kirkus 15:326 Je 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by C. W. Roth

Library J 72:1191 S 1 '47 70w

"Interesting biography of the man as well as a vivid picture of pioneer life in the upper Northwest Territory in the Eighteen Thirties. . . Kent Sagendorph deserves commendation for rescuing Stevens Thomson Mason from oblivion. In a lively and attractive style he reflects his own enthusiasm and sympathy for his hero. In spots, however, an otherwise smooth narrative is interrupted by excessive background material, which might profitably have been condensed. A shorter book would have been an even better one. In a few places the author's interpretations lean toward the imaginative. Mr. Sagendorph unquestionably possesses the touch of the novelist, and here and there he applies the technique of fiction to his study. This practice is at best strewn with pitfalls." N. G. Goodman

+ — N Y Times p31 S 14 '47 800w

"Mr. Sagendorph's biography of one of the most remarkable and least known members of the clan is exceptionally well done, and though it is rather on the long side, we don't see how a single word could have been omitted." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 28 '47 100w

SAHER, LILLA VAN. Echo. 255p $2.75 Dutton

47-2027

"This story is more of a psychiatric case history than it is a novel. In the early part of the book there is a psychiatrist's formal report, in tiny print, and the volume ends with a second report. The disturbed love life of Louise de Faivres, Parisian aristocrat, is the subject." N Y Times

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 My 11 '47 80w

"It all seems somewhat spurious."

Kirkus 15:74 F 1 '47 110w

"As a novel, 'The Echo,' despite dramatic incidents and conflicts, has little moving power, whether because Louise is so abnormally closed against the world around her or because the aspects of any labyrinthine soul become niggardly under a microscopic lens. But as a relatively clear and simple exposé of a process so often denounced as a rite or described as a racket, this book serves a useful purpose." Virgilia Peterson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Mr 9 '47 800w

"Louise's case history is perhaps sound enough psychiatrically, but even so it fails to be convincing as a novel. Louise herself is not presented in a way to attract our interest one way or another. The story is told in a Continental style and reads as though it were a translation, though presumably it was written in English by the author, a Hungarian medical student, Paris model and French movie actress now in Hollywood. Her tale may interest disciples of Jung's, but for the general public the few sidelights on Dutch life and the preparations for the Resistance during the expected war will be by far the most interesting things in the book." T. P.

N Y Times p32 Mr 23 '47 270w

SAINTSBURY, GEORGE EDWARD BATEMAN. Saintsbury miscellany; selections from his essays and scrap books [by John W. Oliver and Augustus Muir] with personal portraits by Sir Herbert Grierson and others; and a biographical memoir by A. Blyth Webster [Eng title: George Saintsbury]. 246p $3.50 Oxford

824 English literature—History and criticism 47-1105

"George Saintsbury, the distinguished English literary critic and historian, requested that no formal biography of him ever be written. He said, however, that if a collection of his writings were to be made the advice and guidance of his old friend, Professor Oliver Elton, should be sought. Professor Elton was able to take part in the preparation of 'A Saintsbury Miscellany' before his death. . . Among the varied selections from Saintsbury's writings included are 'John Dryden the Dramatist,' 'The Qualities of Wine,' 'Irony,' 'On the Teaching of English' and 'Robert Browning.' Oliver Elton, John Purves and Sir Herbert Grierson, among others, have contributed biographical materials and appreciations." San Francisco Chronicle

"A welcome composite portrait of a very great man." David McCord

+ Atlantic 180:125 S '47 500w

"Saintsbury is ubiquitous in encyclopedias, essay anthologies and literary histories, and there are few modern readers who have yet to make his acquaintance. For neophytes, however, this is an unsurpassed sampling of the conversational style which he is credited with introducing to modern criticism." Jex Martin

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 19 '47 250w

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 25 '46 200w

"A lively and various (and staggering) work of selection from the writings of a man who confessed to 'hundreds of signed articles' and 'thousands of unsigned.' . . [Saintsbury] explicitly desired that no biography of him be written, and the present reminiscences are more respectful of that reticence than of a reader's curiosity." John Farrelly

New Repub 117:30 Ag 18 '47 280w

Reviewed by R. Jennings

New Statesman & Nation 30:342 N 17 '45 700w

Reviewed by Huntington Cairns

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ap 6 '47 800w

Reviewed by D. S. Norton

N Y Times p4 F 9 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:113 My 17 '47 800w

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 2 '47 140w

Times [London] Lit Sup p505 O 27 '45 2800w

SALOMON, HERBERT J. (DAVID PART-RIDGE, pseud), ed. Crimes of passion; with an introduction. de luxe ed 337p $2.49 Garden City pub. co.

Short stories—Collections 47-3265

An anthology of twenty-one tales of murder committed under the stress of passion. Partial contents: The woman at the store, by Katherine Mansfield; Sicilian honour, by Luigi Pirandello; That evenin' sun go down, by William Faulkner; One of Cleopatra's nights, by Théophile Gautier; The guilty party, by O. Henry; Heart's desire, by Nathan Asch; The fate of the baron, by Arthur Schnitzler; The Chink and the child, by Thomas Burke; The Kreutzer sonata, by Leo Tolstoy.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47 60w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 27 '47 150w

SAMPSON, GEORGE. Seven essays. 232p $3 Macmillan

824 [47-26648]

"Mr. Sampson begins with a 20,000-word chapter of autobiography called 'A Boy and His Books'—in effect a recital of what reading meant to him from the beginning. . . The other six of these seven pieces [include] two searching ones on the meaning of style broadly defined, two on the history of music (which is the field outside of English poetry where Mr. Sampson is the most at home), one on Henry Irving and the eternal verities of acting, and one on eighteenth-century English hymnody." N Y Times

"Here are essays on a variety of matters by an author to whom many on both sides of the Atlantic owe something for 'The Concise

SAMPSON, GEORGE—Continued

Cambridge History of English Literature.' . . . This essayist is no mere thick-and-thin lover of the past; but he does have the sense of history, which is the sense of balance. Neither is he ever merely contentious, though he does not hesitate to diagram his aversions by way of the indirect approach to his deeper affections." Wilson Follett

+ N Y Times p4 Ag 31 '47 1200w

"Mr. Sampson is a detached critic; old enough to have missed that flirtation of ideologies with literary judgments which characterized the between-wars period. His prevailing tone is quiet; at times it is dry. His childhood memories lack the vivid sensuous quality which some hunters (particularly women) after infantile impressions have recapitulated. On the other hand, his description of his reaction to poetry is interesting because it is first-hand evidence and also, one would say, typical of an intelligent child." Gwen-dolen Freeman

Spec 179:152 Ag 1 '47 500w

SAMUEL, MAURICE, Web of Lucifer; a novel of the Borgia fury. 487p $3 Knopf

Borgia, Cesare—Fiction 47-262

A tale of Renaissance Italy. Giacomo Orso, a young peasant lad, vows vengeance on the unknown murderers of his young brother. Thru the years, following the trail, he serves under Duke Cesare hoping to find justice and peace in a united Italy but in the end he learns the truth and sees Cesare for what he is.

"Mr. Samuel does not bring all his characters to life. He fails, I think, to make Machiavelli, for instance, more than a lay figure. Most of the time the reader is out of sympathy with Giacomo, but one does follow his downward rush with horror and pity. It is in the bulk and depth of the picture in the careful reconstruction and presentation of an amazingly rich and varied scene, that this book is outstanding. The wholeness of Web of Lucifer is solid and foursquare. This is not merely an historical novel of obvious virtue and readability. It is a work of art done with entire integrity." R. E. Danielson

+ Atlantic 179:156 My '47 480w

Booklist 43:242 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by S. K. Workman

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 23 '47 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"Of the book as a whole one might say that it is intelligent—an adjective that may seem curious but is somehow apt. Competent, cool, honest—and intelligent." Ann Hunter

+ Commonweal 45:568 Mr 21 '47 360w

"All the splendor and squalor of Italy in the late 15th century combine to make a colorful though often intensely cruel and vengeful tale. Recommended." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:35 Mr 24 '47 110w

"Web of Lucifer' is swashbuckling, cloak-and-dagger melodrama at its best, compounded of battle, duels, sieges, assassinations and debauchery. But it is far more than that. The author, whose knowledge of the times seems prodigious, has woven a tapestry of history, complete and accurate in detail, a tapestry of men and women, shameful, debased, saintly, courageous, scintillating, unprincipled characters. . . . It is a tale of warfare and intrigue, court balls and plague, written with insight into the deep recesses of human minds." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 2 '47 900w

"This is a psychological novel as much as one of swords and intrigue—and, if you can accept the premise that a Giacomo Orso was possible, its psychology is most convincing. Through a series of ingenious invented episodes and of ingeniously used historical events, Giacomo's transformation is so set down that it seems inevitable. . . . In the end Giacomo sees that he has been duped by Cesare, who is in fact the very man that his revenge has long been seeking. He is redeemed and wins his lady. So we have a happy ending after all. This, I think, is the least satisfactory part of the book." T. C. Chubb

+ N Y Times p5 F 23 '47 550w

"A brilliant closeup of life in the service of the Borgias during the reign of Alexander VI in Rome provides the real interest of the book; the disintegration of the young man's character and his struggles back to decency in the end need not bother you too much. If you like the genre at all, this is, perhaps, your historical novel of the year."

+ New Yorker 23:93 Mr 1 '47 130w

"A great many people could be satisfied by this book. There is enough adventure and blood, passionate and divine love to satiate followers of Jeffrey Farnol and Rafael Sabatini. The political tactics of the Borgias are rationalized and exposed in a manner to delight ideologues. And literary technicians will be pleased with the masterly web Mr. Samuel has woven out of strands of historical facts and his own politically-conscious 'morality-play.'" W. E. Parker

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '47 310w

"This book needed to be shaped more adroitly, but 'Web of Lucifer,' despite its inadequacies, is a novel of unique scholarship. It is also that unusual achievement—a readable didactic historical novel creatively concerned with humanity's spiritual and political problems." Leo Lerman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Mr 8 '47 420w

"Although the book is far from a work of art, it is excellent reading and sound history." Orville Prescott

+ Yale R ns 36:768 summer '47 320w

SANCEAU, ELAINE, Henry, the Navigator; the story of a great prince and his times. 318p $3.50 Norton

B or 92 Henry, the Navigator, prince of Portugal 47-2706

Biography of the fourteenth century Portuguese prince, fourth son of John of Portugal and his queen, Philippa, daughter of John of Gaunt. Henry was distinguished for his encouragement of science and discovery, and contributed much to the early knowledge of the eastern coast of Africa and the nearby islands. Chronology. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by W. K. Ferguson

Am Hist R 53:139 O '47 200w

Booklist 43:289 My 15 '47

"Miss Sanceau's study, besides being a fascinating account of early voyages, is an interesting character study of a restless and indefatigably inquiring nature. . . . Miss Sanceau writes with charm and authority. Incidental to her main narrative, but nonetheless important, is the story of Portugal, the most neglected historically of the Renaissance states. Her book is a substantial historical study as well as an interesting and readable biography." R. B. Nye

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 1 '47 290w

Reviewed by J. L. Donovan

Christian Science Monitor p16 Je 4 '47 340w

"While this might have been only a footnote to the history of the times, the author's flair for embellishing chronological and personal history with color and excitement makes this decidedly readable."

+ Kirkus 15:148 Mr 1 '47 160w

"Miss Sanceau has mixed popularization and scholarship in acceptable proportions. But she should beware of a tendency to archness." K. H.

Nation 165:109 Jl 26 '47 140w

"Though English historians have not exactly ignored Henry of Portugal . . . another biography is welcome, and especially one which is so anecdotal, so full of life and vigor, so filled with the ingenuousness of medieval chroniclers. Not that Miss Sanceau is lacking in historical accuracy . . . she knows the subject thoroughly but prefers to put it into sprightly words that will engage the reader from start to finish." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 20 '47 700w

"Miss Sanceau has written a significant as well as an entertaining book. However it is because she has not carried it quite far enough that the book fails to be the great biography a life of Henry the Navigator could be. Miss Sanceau, author of several books on this period, has explored thoroughly the Portuguese archives, but she has neglected the charts and the 'pilots.' She might have quoted more fully from the actual explorers. She might have probed more deeply into ships and shipping. On the strictly biographical side, she could also be less partisan. Henry and his brothers—if you can believe her—were a family of paragons. But they would be more human and more credible if she showed that they were also fallible. But most of all you miss the sweep and surge and space of epic. . . Even if in prose and strictly factual, an epic could be written of Henry too." T. C. Chubb

+ — N Y Times p16 J1 20 '47 600w

"Miss Sanceau has produced a vivid and enjoyable account of the times. Using an informal style and conversations taken exactly from records of the age, she has made human beings out of her historical characters. The book, however, suffers from the amount of ground she tries to cover. You just get your teeth into one topic when you are rushed on to another. If her attention had centered on the work of Henry she could have done a more interesting and scholarly job. The fascinating adventure of the first explorers of the unknown Atlantic deserve a far more detailed treatment." D. C. Parmenter

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p25 My 25 '47 200w

"Henry's career is excellently documented, so far as narrative sources go, and there is not much room for any original interpretation of his life. The detail of it all, however, is mainly accessible in Portuguese; and Miss Elaine Sanceau, who has made good use of her authorities, offers English readers a striking and vividly coloured picture. Sometimes the vividness, in her effort to dramatize her characters, is overdone."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p388 Ag 17 '46 450w

SANDARS, EDMUND. Insect book for the pocket. 349p il $3.75 Oxford

595.7 Insects

[47-26423]

"No one knew better than Sandars that the whole field of British insect life could not be covered in an undertaking of this sort. If that were to be done, he said, 'several hundred volumes would be needed. . .'. He therefore selected 130 families containing insects of half-an-inch or more in length, with some reference to smaller insects when they are of special interest to man or where they comprise a whole order. In this way the author compiled a book which should enable the ordinary inquirer to identify, at least approximately, any large insect he may come across." (Times [London] Lit Sup) Bibliography. Index.

"To have condensed so much information within the compass of a small book is a remarkable feat, and for good measure, in addition to the insects proper, the families of spiders and other orders of the Arachnida are included. The excellent life-size coloured plates, in which examples of each family are shown, will be of the greatest help in the field." A. W. B.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 17 '47 240w

"One thing that might make you hesitate about buying this book (one of an Oxford pocket-book nature series) is that it deals with British insects. A glance, however, at the pretty color plates will convince you that, just as we share many other things, so we and the British share insects, even the flea.

The text is thorough enough to be interesting, but not so thorough as to be professional."

R. O. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 O 5 '47 110w

"Edmund Sandars, who died in 1942, was a highly original writer on natural history. . . The book is admirably suited to giving the non-scientific reader a general notion of the insect world as it is represented in Britain."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p333 J1 5 '47 280w

SANDBY, PAUL, and SANDBY, THOMAS. Drawings of Paul and Thomas Sandby in the collection of his majesty the king at Windsor castle [ed] by A. P. Oppé. (Phaidon press bk) 85p pl $7.50 Oxford

741.91 Drawings

47-30480

"The two Sandby brothers, Paul and Thomas, who lived in the latter half of the eighteenth century, made Windsor Castle their special artistic province, and between them they must have done two or three hundred drawings and water colors of the place. About fifty of these are reproduced in this volume, in addition to nearly a hundred figure studies, drawings of contemporary London, and so on." New Yorker

New Yorker 23:123 S 13 '47 120w

"The hundred and seventy and more illustrations (seven of them in colour) make this volume a very lively and delightful picture book, though the colour-reproduction is not always satisfying; and Mr. Oppé's learning, care, and strong critical sense make his introduction and catalogue entries a valuable contribution to the scholarship of English art. The new series of Windsor Catalogues has therefore made a happy start."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p305 Je 21, '47 1350w

SANDOZ, EDOUARD MARCEL. Twice besieged; with il. by the author. 224p $2.50 Oxford

47-30915

"The story of the siege of Antioch by the Crusaders in the eleventh century. The hero is a sixteen-year-old boy who fights with the Crusaders against the Turks." (Sat R of Lit) Bibliography.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:445 N '47 90w

Kirkus 15:505 S 15 '47 170w

"A story of high courage and hardships, of religious fervor, loyalty and deceit that will make this fateful battle of the Crusades come alive to junior high school readers. Recommended." Elizabeth Burr

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Sandoz, who obviously knows his period, is at his best in reporting actual happenings with skill and clarity. Philip's fictional adventures are less convincing, his rise a little too rapid and easy. However, teen-age boy readers are not likely to quarrel with an invincible hero. For those among them who revel in hairbreadth escapes, in violence and bloodshed on every page, this book will provide exciting reading." N. B. Baker

+ — N Y Times p43 O 26 '47 140w

"Excellent background."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:62 N 15 '47 40w

SANDOZ, MARI. The tom-walker. 372p $3 Dial press

47-30409

A family chronicle of three generations of mid-Western American life. The titular hero, Old Milt Stone, is called tom-walker because he has lost one leg fighting for Grant. Milt's son and grandson are respectively veterans of World war I and World war II, and conditions in post-war America in three periods are shown thru their experiences. The last part of the story is projected into the future when a dictator comes to power in Washington.

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

SANDOZ, MARI—Continued

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 21 '47
400w

"Crowded with struggling, coarse-spoken, embittered characters, story verges often on the non-fiction tract." B. B. Libaire

Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 80w

"What Miss Sandoz has written is a robust, vigorous, folk-American fictional protest against the irresponsibility, the inability to learn, the gigantism which have brought America, she believes, to the point where, like the circus man on stilts (or like Fascism, if you wish), her dynamics compel her to go on in ever greater strides. The conclusion may be argued, but the author's sense of the past cannot; she has the right feel for it, rich and warm and extravagant and deeply rooted in what her America has been and is." J. H. Jackson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 7
'47 700w

"A vigorous and thoughtful novel." H. G. Merriam

+ N Y Times p3 S 7 '47 500w

"There is a good deal of America in the book, and the narrative teems with violent energy, if not with life. For all the author's undoubted talent, she never quite makes you believe in the tom-walker as the whooping, riotous gaudy old reprobate she tries so hard to create. It's all very well to be told that the one-legged hero is colossal, but he remains just a greatly enlarged snapshot of a mean old man."

+ — New Yorker 23:66 Ag 30 '47 220w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p22 S 7 '47
550w

"This is indeed a troubled novel, a statement of pessimism so unrelieved as to be startling even in these troubled times. Of dire warnings and threats of doom we have had many, but they have generally been strung upon a thread of hope. There was a way out, if we would only think thus, or do this. Not so Miss Sandoz. She says good-bye to the old democratic America." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 30:18 Ag 30 '47 800w

"Small shakes as a novel, it is long on period history, melodrama, local color and wondrously rowdy soldier, sod-hut and ranch-house talk."

Time 50:112 S 8 '47 220w

SANFORD, TRENT ELWOOD. Story of architecture in Mexico. 363p il $6 Norton720.972 Architecture—Mexico. Indians of Mexico—Architecture 47-2819

"Including the work of the ancient Indian civilizations and that of the Spanish colonial empire which succeeded them, together with an account of the background in Spain and a glimpse at the modern trend." (Subtitle) The architectural history, mainly ecclesiastical, is written both for the architect and the serious tourist. The book contains a list of the cathedral cities of Mexico, a glossary, a bibliography, and an index.

Reviewed by MacKinley Helm

Atlantic 180:128 Ag '47 450w

Booklist 43:286 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Elizabeth Wilder

Nation 165:263 S 13 '47 110w

Reviewed by Hubert Herring

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O
5 '47 800w

"Mr. Sanford, practicing architect, meditative student of the history of his art, and long-time lover of Mexico, has put this whole story into a single book and has, thereby, produced a volume which meets a long-felt need. 'The Story of Architecture in Mexico' is a work for the layman: history, travelogue and guide book in one. Into it has gone an enormous amount of patient and detailed research, considerable perceptivity and a fair portion of skill in selection and popularization. . . . The book is suitable alike to the grand tour, the hurried excursion, and long years of loafing and living all over the Mexican land." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p7 My 11 '47 850w

"This is a book for persons without previous preparation in the subject, written with enthusiasm and distinction."

+ U S Quarterly Bk 3:225 S '47 280w

SANSOM, WILLIAM. Three. 191p $2.50 Reyn-

47-3105

Two short novels and a story by a young English writer. Contents: The cleaner's story; Cat up a tree; The invited. The first is an allegorical tale, told from the viewpoint of a café scrubwoman in a little French town. Cat up a tree, the short story, is a sketch of a fire engine's mission on a windy morning. The Invited is another allegory.

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 My 18 '47
320w

"Once again there's inevitable comparison with writing in the Kafka school, though Sansom seems, in this volume, to have emerged with a sharper, almost Shavian identity. The best of the three stories is 'The Invited' though it is occasionally clogged with class consciousness as Pierrot, from the 'flats' and Doreen from the 'yards' argue out their relative positions in philosophical terms. . . . Obscure and esoteric for the general reading public."

Kirkus 15:77 F 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:29 Je 9 '47 290w

"Its appeal will probably not be very wide, in fact it may be limited almost definitely to those readers who like Franz Kafka a great deal, but stop short of idolatry. The stories are so severely in Kafka's vein they will appear to the latter group as too derivative, yet only those who react to this rather narrow fable-and-fact type of imagination can be truly moved. Others, for the most part, are likely to find these contributions a trifle wan, despite Sansom's exceedingly precise craftsmanship." Kenneth Fearing

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ap 20 '47 650w

Reviewed by Richard Sullivan

N Y Times p18 Ap 27 '47 800w

New Yorker 23:113 Ap 19 '47 160w

Reviewed by Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 25 '47
750w

Time 49:114 Ap 21 '47 460w

SANTEE, ROSS. Apache land; il. by [the author]. 216p $3.50 Scribner

970.3 Apache Indians 47-11035

"Stories of the Apaches, whom the author likes without having any illusions about them. Their history, customs, and beliefs are seen in the accounts of such colorful personalities as Old Jim the cowboy, the Chiefs Cochise and Geronimo, and the white men, Agent Clum and Burro Frenchy, who ran the Apache gauntlet and lived to tell it." Booklist

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

Kirkus 15:253 My 1 '47 170w

"Not too important. For men and boys." L. R. Etzkorn

Library J 72:1373 O 1 '47 70w

"Charming and at the same time unpretentious book." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
O 19 '47 650w

"There is but one real criticism to be made of Ross Santee's books—there aren't enough of them. He has written only six or seven since—thirty-odd years ago—he gave up all notion of becoming a cartoonist and returned to Arizona and the life of a horse-wrangler and cowboy. Few men have known the dry ranges more intimately; fewer have written of them or sketched them more entertainingly." Hoffman Birney

+ N Y Times p46 N 9 '47 500w

Reviewed by Luther Nichols

San Francisco Chronicle p5 N 30 '47
500w

"As both writer and artist Mr. Santee makes his picture a convincing and interesting one."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:60 N 15 '47 40w

SAROYAN, WILLIAM. Jim Dandy, fat man in a famine; a play. 128p $3 Harcourt 812

47-30962

A new play by the author of The Time of Your Life (Book Review Digest 1939). As is usual the theme is brotherly love. The action takes place in a transparent egg shell, in which are some miserable and some majestic ruins representing immemorial and immediate reality.

"This is Saroyan's standard technique, and the 'message' is his constantly repeated message. . . . It is possible that some will shudder slightly at the grotesque 'communion' in the passing of the common loaf from hand to hand, but this is no 'black mass,' no sacrilegious perversion of the sacred ceremony. It is grotesque only in its garb. I prefer Saroyan's surrealism to Dali's. With Dali, it is a symbolic representation of the hopeless irrationality and futility of everything. Saroyan uses it as a starting point to show from what moral chaos men can rise to a world of beauty and brotherhood. Those who think that such a faith is too naive can stay behind with Dali. I choose Saroyan."

+ Christian Century 64:1146 S 24 '47 280w

"As a recognized master of subtlety Saroyan is well-known; and Jim Dandy gives further credence to this reputation by the fact that one suddenly realizes he has heard a sermon on brotherly love." Mary Batey

Churchman 161:16 N 1 '47 90w

Kirkus 15:499 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by George Freedley

Library J 72:1472 O 15 '47 60w

"His characters are again symbolic figures performing in a vacuum from which the oxygen of reality has been drained. As usual, many of these characters have a quaint charm and speak sometimes with the tongues of poets—though not in this case so often as in the past with irresistible humor. As usual, the message that all people are beautiful and it's love should make the world go round, is obvious, and stated in eloquent speeches. But just what was really the matter with the people in the first place and just how love is to solve their problems remains misty." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23
O 19 '47 320w

"Its alleged fun is as meaningless as its fury: here and there one glimpses an enraged pixie shaking his fist at destiny—but for the most part the pixie seems only to be sparring with himself." C. V. Terry

N Y Times p45 N 30 '47 100w

Reviewed by Keith Kay

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 9 '47
750w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. The age of reason; tr. by Eric Sutton. (The roads to freedom, v 1) 397p $3 Knopf

47-4526

First of a series of three novels by the French philosopher, exponent of Existentialism. The scene of this novel is Paris in 1938. "The central character is Mathieu, a professor of philosophy who writes one short story a year. . . . The problem that obsesses Mathieu, that of freedom, how to remain free, is worked out in the story and exemplified in the lives of the characters. . . . Mathieu differs from your ordinary character of fiction in that he is motivated by this abstract ethical ideal to keep his freedom. It is assailed as soon as the novel opens, for he learns that his mistress is pregnant; the action consists largely of his attempts to raise by borrowing—in the end, by stealing—the five thousand francs required to procure an abortion; unnecessarily, as it turns out, for Marcelle decides to marry someone else and have the child." (Spec)

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 J1 27 '47
500w

"The pattern of the world as set forth by M. Sartre, shoddied by the worn threads of self-indulgence and of vice, is so narrow that only the hopeless could find it an explanation of existence. For instead of drawing upon the whole wide open book of life for his conclusions, he has torn off a stained thumb corner of its yellowest page." Virgilia Peterson

— Commonweal 46:360 J1 25 '47 800w

Current Hist 13:294 N '47 30w

Kirkus 15:289 Je 1 '47 210w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel

Library J 72:1034 J1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 F 7 '47 270w

"As an artistic performance, 'The Age of Reason' is rather more than competent. I especially like its relaxed command of language, its easy movement between the colloquial and the educated idiom. Its chief interest, however, is as a document in an extraordinarily interesting moral research." Diana Trilling

+ Nation 165:146 Ag 9 '47 1550w

Reviewed by George Mayberry

New Repub 117:28 J1 14 '47 650w

Reviewed by Rayner Heppenstall

New Statesman & Nation 33:139 F 15
'47 420w

"For those able to penetrate beneath the formidable crust of Gallic realism to the drama of philosophical ideas at its core, this first volume of Jean-Paul Sartre's trilogy of Existentialist novels entitled 'Roads to Freedom' should prove an excellent introduction to the basic tenets of a philosophical doctrine that has created the greatest artistic discussion in France since the Liberation. . . . The translation is the work of Eric Sutton and bears the imprint of that authenticity of mood and insight, and that smooth and practiced felicity of phrase invariably associated with his name." Geraldine de Courcy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
J1 20 '47 900w

Reviewed by Justin O'Brien

N Y Times p4 J1 13 '47 900w

"The incidents are mostly sordid, but, if you don't mind this, entertaining. The characters are well observed and conscientiously and intelligently studied, so that the book makes an interesting document on the quality and morale of the French just before their great capitulation. An American reader is struck by the close similarity of these young people . . . to the same kind of men and girls at the same period in the United States—just as the novel has itself much in common with certain novels that these young people produced." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:58 Ag 2 '47 3200w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p10 J1 27 '47
1350w

"Few readers who knew Paris can fail to be struck by Sartre's knowledge of and feeling for Parisian life. . . . And like the best of the Russian and French novelists, Sartre is never unmindful of his first obligation to tell a story. Tiresome, petty, disagreeable as are the esthetes, students, and liberals who make up Mathieu's little group—they represent an excellent argument for existentialism." Richard McLaughlin

Sat R Lit 30:13 J1 19 '47 950w

"A consummately planned novel, the development of the plot continually surprises, the invention never flags, and the style constantly delights with its brilliance." Walter Allen

+ Spec 178:152 Ja 31 '47 750w

Reviewed by S. E. McClure

Theatre Arts 31:78 N '47 850w

Time 50:94 J1 21 '47 950w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. Existentialism; tr. by Bernard Frechtman. 92p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

111 Existentialism

47-6814

"Originally delivered in Paris in 1945 as a lecture, this essay presents the implications

SARTRE, J. P.—Continued
pursuant upon assuming the non-existence of God, denying the existence of fixed human nature, and Sartre's refusal to allow man any support external to himself... A one page index follows the transcription of a discussion between Sartre and M. Naville, well known French Marxist." Library J

Reviewed by R. W. Sellars
Am Soc R 12:725 D '47 950w

Reviewed by O. F. Kraushaar
J Philos 44:717 D 18 '47 750w

Reviewed by H. S. Taylor
Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 130w

Reviewed by Justus Buchler
Nation 165:449 O 25 '47 800w

"The volume 'Existentialism,' manages to give in relatively clear and direct language the outlines of Sartre's philosophy." Arthur Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ag 31 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Oliver Barres
Sat R of Lit 30:14 My 31 '47 850w

Spring'd Republican p10B N 23 '47 480w

Reviewed by S. E. McClure
Theatre Arts 31:79 N '47 180w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. No exit (Huis Clos) a play in one act; & The flies (Les mouches) a play in three acts; English versions by Stuart Gilbert. 166p $2.50 Knopf

842 47-1619

Two plays by the leader of French Existentialism. "The first, produced on Broadway this season . . . [is] the story of a man and two women consigned to a hotel room in Hell for eternity. . . 'The Flies' [is] the Orestes-Electra story again." (New Yorker)

"Highly recommended." George Freedley
+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 30w

"The reader, if unprepared, may think that he has lifted the lid on a smouldering volcano where lava boils and noxious yellow gases puff up into apparitions vaguely resembling human beings. The three creatures in 'No Exit' whose hell it is to be shut up together in a windowless room for all eternity to torture each other with their horrid confessions, go right on torturing after an arbitrary curtain falls. . . 'The Flies' is in prose and full of images and odors of filth and decay." W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
Mr 16 '47 600w

Reviewed by Eric Bentley
+ N Y Times p20 F 23 '47 750w

"These are the first of Sartre's plays to be printed in English. Even if they are not very enlightening as to the meaning of Existentialism, they are well worth your time."

+ New Yorker 23:102 Mr 8 '47 160w

SARTRE, JEAN PAUL. Reprieve; tr. from the French by Eric Sutton. (Roads to freedom, v2) 445p $3 Knopf

47-11584

"The Age of Reason published several months ago, introduced the American public to Sartre's trilogy, Roads to Freedom. . . This second novel, ironically titled The Reprieve, confines itself to the eight frenetic days that led to the Munich Pact and the rape of Czechoslovakia. The original characters reappear merging now with many others as a shocked France mobilizes for war. Sartre, the leading exponent of Existentialism manages in this kaleidoscopic novel to recreate the confusion, even the odor of the fear that gripped Europe in September, 1938." Library J

Reviewed by Jex Martin
Chicago Sun Book Week p10A D 3 '47 320w

Kirkus 15:587 O 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by J. H. Berthel
Library J 72:1540 N 1 '47 110w

"Viewed externally the work is a mixture of vulgarity, perversity, low dialogue and brutality, but here and there, in spite of its philosophy of isolation, its caustic irony, its 'external round of nameless moments that revive no memories,' there are strokes of strange analytical keenness and poetry, brief flashes of spiritual insight that strike a familiar chord for all those who lived through that momentous week." Geraldine De Courcy
— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
N 23 '47 700w

"'The Reprieve'—by means of a vivid, concrete dialogue, halting and broken as in real life, a natural use of the stream of consciousness, and a complete mastery of the cinema technique of simultaneity—suddenly achieves what Malraux accomplishes in his best novels. . . [It] is a brilliant kaleidoscope, realizing with ease (but with more demands upon the reader) what Jules Romains so strived for in his Men of Good Will." Justin O'Brien

+ N Y Times p26 N 23 '47 800w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 23:133 N 22 '47 1350w

Reviewed by Richard McLaughlin
Sat R of Lit 30:24 D 6 '47 1350w

Reviewed by S. E. McClure
Theatre Arts 32:64 Ja '48 360w

SASNETT, JOSEPH RANDOLPH. Living memorials; principles and plans for church memorials. 192p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

254 Church finance 47-876

"A detailed study of the ways in which a church may best perpetuate the memory, or give visible expression to its appreciation of the generosity, of those whom it wishes to honor, whether living or dead. 'Living memorials' means such as further the work of the living church, as distinguished from things like tablets and plaques. The list of things which may be provided or financed in this spirit ranges, alphabetically, through fifty-three items from 'Additions to the church' and 'Altars' to 'Parsonage maintenance' and 'Psychiatrist—a fund for counselor's fees.'" Christian Century

Booklist 43:235 Ap 1 '47

Christian Century 64:145 Ja 29 '47 110w

"The author's philosophy of memorials is sound and highly commendable. When developed in a church, it will not only minister to existing needs but will also reveal new and challenging opportunities for religious expression both credible and creditable." R. E. Keighton

+ Crozer Q 24:285 Jl '47 190w

SASSO, JOHN, ed. Plastics handbook for product engineers. 468p il $6 McGraw

668.4 Plastics 46-8051

"In this volume the author has consolidated a large amount of information regarding the properties and uses of plastic materials that will be of value to product engineers concerned with the selection, design and processing of plastic goods. Much of the material has appeared previously in Product Engineering, and chapters four and eight, entitled 'Machining and finishing of plastic parts' and 'Common faults, causes and remedies in molded plastic parts,' are reprinted from the author's earlier work, Plastics for Industrial Use [Book Review Digest, 1942]. However, in addition to this reprinted material, the author discusses the latest techniques and developments in processing, fabrication, and design." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:165 F 1 '47

"Combining factual data, which has been published heretofore chiefly in manufacturers' bulletins, with selected portions of articles on the design of molded parts which have appeared in Product Engineering under his editorship, Mr. Sasso has produced a meaty volume. . . The reviewer believes that a product engineer who has been working with plastics for three years or more should have collected the original references which are combined in this volume, during that time; however, for the many designers of more limited experience, it should provide a good starting point." W. E. Gloor

Chem & Eng N 25:461 F 17 '47 350w

"It is a compact, clear and readable compilation which should prove most helpful to those who have had limited experience in the plastic field. It will also provide convenient reference and check-list information for those who have had extensive experience. . . There are several slips and weak spots. . . The index is skimpy; since the volume is designed to serve as a handbook, the reviewer feels that its usefulness would be appreciably enhanced by the inclusion of a more complete index. The format is good. There are numerous carefully selected illustrations." M. A. Coler

+ — Eng N 54:302 My '47 600w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:66 O '46

SASULY, RICHARD. IG farben. 312p $3 Boni & Gaer

338.8566 Interessengemeinschaft farbenindustrie aktiengesellschaft, Frankfurt-am-Main. Chemical industries 47-3731

"A carefully documented account of 'the world's most powerful cartel,' the huge German concern which is said to have controlled 380 other firms in Germany and 500 in other countries, and to have manufactured and distributed forty-three important products besides the dyes which gave it its name. The author, who was with the Allied control council in Germany, tells of the military and political ramifications of this gigantic structure, its part in the Nazi network, and the process of denazification." (Christian Century) Index.

Reviewed by S. B. Clough

Am Hist R 53:168 O '47 120w

Booklist 44:29 S 15 '47

"Although I. G. Farben is at times dull and repetitious, it will repay study by chemists and laymen alike." Otto Eisenschiml

Chem & Eng N 25:3878 D 29 '47 400w

Christian Century 64:853 J1 9 '47 120w

Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 2 '47 480w

"Exciting, well-documented book."

+ Columbia Law R 47:1257 N '47 80w

"The study of I.G. by Richard Sasuly is an excellent description of this organism which grew from test tubes and a very clear report of the participation by I.G. in Hitler's plans and deeds. . . For the general reader Sasuly's book is especially good because while telling of one of the most fascinating industrial histories of this era it emphasizes the way in which science and industry can become the weapons of philosophies of power." C. A. Welsh

+ Nation 164:746 Je 21 '47 550w

New Repub 117:29 J1 21 '47 250w

"Tacked onto the end of the book are several chapters dealing with occupation policies, with particular reference to reparations and denazification. It seems to this reviewer that these fields are too big to have been dealt with as a postscript to a more specialized subject. . . The part of Mr. Sasuly's book that is devoted to a study of the rise of I. G. Farben, to its structure and its practices contains a good deal of interesting material. From there on, the argument is tenuous, the presentation biased, and the conclusions reached consequently lacking in conviction." Russell Hill

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Ag 31 '47 750w

Reviewed by Charles Hurd

N Y Times p18 S 21 '47 750w

"Highly competent study."

+ New Yorker 23:126 Je 7 '47 100w

Reviewed by Joseph Prendergast

Sat R of Lit 30:14 J1 19 '47 900w

Spring'd Union p5 Ag 18 '47 240w

"A fiery and spirited account of the historical background, activities, and operating tactics of I. G. Farben, the huge German chemical and industrial combine. But in his zeal to indict international cartels in general, and I. G. in particular, the author falls from one broad generalization into the next. . . While he had a vast amount of material to draw information from, not all of it was chosen with a view toward objectivity or exactness." George Lobbenberg

+ — Survey G 36:451 Ag '47 450w

SATTLE, HELEN R. Young barbarians. 212p $2 Morrow

47-1834

Story for teen-aged girls. It describes Barbara Hiatt's junior year in high school, when the only cloud on her horizon was her new stepmother. Ann Hiatt was not used to the behavior of Barbara's crowd, but in time that situation cleared up.

Booklist 43:259 Ap 15 '47

Kirkus 15:32 Ja 15 '47 150w

"Not literature, but a wholesome and entertaining story which will be popular with girls 12-16." E. E. Frank

Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 70w

"If you are at all interested in high-school life—and if you are of high-school age you are interested in practically nothing else—one glance at the jacket of this book and a glimpse through its pages will make you begin it. If you like young folks the chances are good that you will then read it straight through." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 30 '47 380w

"In spite of an unfortunate title this is an essentially good story. . . While many girls will feel that the pattern of teen-age self-interest is overstressed they will recognize some of their friends in the story." V. H. Mathews

+ — N Y Times p30 Mr 23 '47 200w

"This is an understanding story of modern young people, although the methods chosen as a basis for working out their problems are not very original. The characters are interesting and very real."

Sat R of Lit 30:35 My 17 '47 80w

Wis Lib Bul 43:85 My '47

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical). More Post biographies; ed. by John E. Drewry. 392p $3.50 Univ. of Ga.

920.5 Journalists

"Articles of enduring interest about famous journalists and journals and other subjects journalistic."—Subtitle. Sketches of 16 newspapermen and women and chapters on the Christian Science Monitor, Who's who, Encyclopaedia britannica, and newsreels. Reprinted from Saturday Evening Post; the subjects are less well known than those in Post biographies of famous journalists." Booklist

Booklist 43:222 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by P. S. Deland

Christian Science Monitor p12 Mr 25 '47 500w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Kirkus 15:156 Mr 1 '47 150w

"Prepared primarily for teachers and students of journalism, it would be a pity if this entertaining volume were confined to a classroom public, for it brings together twenty-two glimpses into a rich and racy section of the American working world. Nearly all the contributors have been working newspaper men themselves, but the general reader will have no trouble understanding and enjoying their pungent shop talk." Richard Match

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Ap 27 '47 600w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 11 '47 90w

SATURDAY EVENING POST (periodical).
Stories, 1946. 326p $2.75 Random house

Short stories—Collections (37-27266)

Contents: The return, by Noel Langley; Tugboat Annie wins her medal, by N. R. Raine; The murderer, by J. T. Rogers; So long, Joe, by Win Brooks; Command, by J. W. Bellah; Glencannon and the ailing cockroach, by Guy Gilpatric; Grandpa and the miracle grindstone, by J. D. Brown; Natives are sometimes people, by Roderick Lull; Old professors never die, by Wilbur Schramm; Flood burial, by Shelby Foote; Trouble with the union, by Dennis Harrington; We shall live again, by Sophie Kerr; Departure, with swords and ashes, by George Weller; Sweet-talk me, Jackson, by Douglass Welch; Rebound, by Robert Carson; Grown-up wife, by M. B. Hasbrouck; Port of call, by Bud Hutton; Memo on Kathy O'Rourke, by Jack Sher; Behind locked doors, by Thomas Walsh; Fire in the night, by Frank O'Rourke.

Booklist 44:185 Ja 15 '48

"The 1946 edition of this anthology is possibly not as good as some of the past volumes, but still it is worth reading." Nelson Olmsted
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 3 '47 290w

"There can be but few readers who do not know what Saturday Evening Post stories are like—that they are quick-moving, deftly constructed, essentially modern, decent, and a little on the masculine side, for women readers are eclectic and will take not only what they like but what men like. Within that pattern, the stories range all the way from clever craftsmanship to artistry. Generally speaking, they have to be within the taste of a huge body of Americans who are not pulp-magazine readers and, at the same time, are not inveterate intelligentsia; in short, persons like most of us." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 12 '47 340w

Kirkus 15:265 My 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 23 '47 90w

"It is customary to end a Post anthology review with one of two sneers: (a) any entry would sound much better in technicolor and (b) one misses the ads. Both these melancholy clichés are as true of the present collection as they ever were. The basic fact remains that these stories are expert and fun to read, if taken sparingly. The professional writer who can't profit from a close study of all twenty should have his head examined." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p19 Ag 24 '47 410w

San Francisco Chronicle p24 S 14 '47 190w

SATURDAY REVIEW OF LITERATURE (periodical). Laughs from the Saturday review of literature [cartoons] introd. by Bennett Cerf. 127p $2.50 Vanguard

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 46-7966

Cartoons selected from the Saturday Review of Literature over the years since 1935. There is an introduction by Bennett Cerf.

Reviewed by J. L. Harrington

Canadian Forum 27:22 Ap '47 150w

"Some of the jokes have a bookish flavor, but you won't need a library card to enjoy them. At least two have a desert-island locale; what book to take along is not specified." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 1 '46 150w

SAUNDERS, CLARE CASTLER. Design for treachery. 236p $2 Scribner

47-5250

Detective story.

"Involved, close patterned-reasoning."

Kirkus 14:629 D 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 Mr 2 '47 150w

Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 50w

Reviewed by W. R. Manchester

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 4 '48 110w

SAURAT, DENIS. Modern French literature, 1870-1940. 192p il $3 Putnam

840.9 French literature—History and criticism 47-4030

"Review and study of the literary output of France from 1870 to 1940. History, significant events and other influences are evaluated with regard to their effect upon French literature. The chief writers, both prose and poetry, of this period are studied individually. Saurat discusses their faults, virtues and greatness exhaustively and objectively and endeavors to show what effect each writer has had upon the literature of France." (Library J) Bibliographical index.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

Commonweal 46:365 Jl 25 '47 460w

"Without doubt the author's views will provoke considerable debate, but the book should be read by those who wish to be informed regarding the literary scene of France during these troubled years. Recommended." W. A. Kalenich

+ Library J 72:461 Mr 15 '47 110w

"As a mentor he is most stimulating on authors whom he admires—Zola, Loti, France, Proust, Rolland. It is a pity he has so little sympathy with other significant writers, such as Gide, who have considerable literary importance whatever their effect on contemporary life and letters. . . . As an introduction to a deeply fascinating study this lucid if unkind presentation should be handled with care. The book is illustrated by 16 excellent portraits." R. N.

Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 7 '47 210w

"Saurat's book is hardly more than an introduction to the extraordinary searching of consciousness and experience, of language, manners, morals, and ways of life which have marked French literature for the last seventy years. As an introduction, it is valuable enough, and the chief critical point to be made is that the book is far less ambitious than its title." Delmore Schwartz

+ N Y Times p4 O 5 '47 550w

"There is something in the book to offend almost everybody, but it is delightfully written and even sounds pretty convincing. To solace the lovers of French writing, the author reminds us of somebody's remark that the failures in French letters would equip several other nations with creditable claims to culture."

+ New Yorker 23:106 My 10 '47 110w

"Professor Saurat affects a cleverness that does his scholarship no small dis-service. We are constantly prompted to ask why it is necessary, and for whom he is writing. He assumes in his readers a certain familiarity with his subject, yet there is little to reward the informed for this breathless scamper across one of the most fertile regions of modern literature; as for those seeking guidance, they are likely to be bewildered by too many arresting and disconnected generalizations, which leave them very much where they started, having run very hard indeed. There is something of the Red Queen about Professor Saurat."

Times [London] Lit Sup p35 Ja 18 '47 950w

SAWDON, B. M., and WANSBROUGH, P. Another love, another spring. 328p $2.50 Curl

47-2031

Character sketch of a beautiful woman whose ideas of love and life are slightly unconventional. Louise Vallence returns to England after several years in France, bringing her illegitimate daughter, to live with thoroly conventional relatives. The situation is strained to the limit, until the coming of the war, which makes further complications, but finally brings a happy marriage to Louise.

Kirkus 14:430 S 1 '46 110w

"Not as somber as Miss Sawdon's 'Son of Normandy,' this is an equally mature and sensitive study of character." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 20 '46 110w

Reviewed by Paul Griffith

N Y Times p12 F 9 '47 230w

SAXON, JOHN A. Half-past mortem. 250p $2.50 Mill

47-31056

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:378 J1 15 '47 80w

"Surely there is variety enough here to please the most exacting mystery fan." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p30 S 21 '47 190w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 5 '47 80w

"Agreeable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 4 '47 40w

SAXON, JOHN A. Liability limited. 212p $2.50 Mill

47-16338

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 F 2 '47 100w

Kirkus 14:583 N 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p33 Ja 19 '47 140w

"Fast-moving and readable enough." L. G. Offord

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 26 '47 50w

"Mildly diverting."

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 40w

SAXTON, MARK. Prepared for rage. 360p $3.50 Sloane

47-3395

Character study of Jerry Osgood, which traces his slow years of maturing from childhood, thru prep school and Harvard days, his attempts to find a career, and his marriage, and ends with his departure for war in 1943.

"In spite of tediousness in the theme, and a repetitious dredging of the liberal sands, there is care in Saxton's work. There is sincerity of tone and manner, and there is clarity of expression. Too bad that his characters are typed almost to the point of exhaustion, that his realistic scenes are slightly comic, and that Jerry's bedlam becomes, finally, little more than confusion." T. E. Cassidy

+ Commonweal 46:44 Ap 25 '47 460w

"Better than the average novel in autobiographical vein—of youth recaptured—but at that, it has numerous competitors, and nothing strikingly original, except perhaps its restraint."

Kirkus 15:133 Mr 1 '47 180w

"Book has merits but is overlong and marred by interpolated sex episodes. Price high for the investment value." G. W. Hill

+ Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 70w

"Mr. Saxton writes an honest prose that matches his narrative." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ap 13 '47 600w

"The story of Jerry Osgood, as treated by Mr. Saxton, is distinguished principally by the psychological adjustment of his hero in the midst of his incredible intellectual confusion. It is also noteworthy as the chronicling of a particular and specialized Ivy-League personality which, in its chronological maturity, peoples a considerable sector of the publishing and class magazine fields. As for social or even personal maturity, there is doubt aplenty that it has been either reached or approached." E. V. Winebaum

N Y Times p14 Ap 6 '47 750w

"Mr. Saxton puts into the mouth of his chief character, Jerry Osgood, a lot of the ruminating he, Saxton, has been doing in the last few years. Whether or not you find anything especially stimulating in it depends, I should say, upon what your own thinking has been. Aside from this, however, you are likely to find the novel good reading for another reason—that is to say for its picture of a certain type of young-to-middle-aged American who because of what may be called his 'connections,' is perhaps rather more influential in the conduct of American affairs than his numbers would suggest. . . Mr. Saxton knows the kind of people he is writing about and he knows how to make the reader see them, much as Mr. Marquand does. He is an accomplished craftsman." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ap 14 '47 650w

"The book is interesting for its recreation of that between-wars blooming of faith in right reasoning and good will, right up to the moment when these were discovered to be useless weapons." N. L. Rothman

Sat R of Lit 30:19 My 10 '47 450w

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

SAYERS, DOROTHY LEIGH (MRS ATHERTON FLEMING). Unpopular opinions; twenty-one essays. 236p $3 Harcourt

824

47-31220

"An English writer, best known for her mystery novels, has collected essays and addresses of the past 10 years that are distinctively individual commentaries on such topics as Christian morality, religion, women, responsibility of the press, and use of the English language; one section is a group of studies on Conan Doyle's Sherlock Holmes stories." Booklist

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

"One of the most alert and interesting minds in England is that of Dorothy Sayers. Moreover, her style is so piquant that her writings would have charm even if her ideas were dull—which they are not. . . Miss Sayers really does not need to exploit the unpopularity of her opinions in order to enhance the popularity of her book. She is an unconventional thinker, but her ideas are not conspicuously unpopular, even though she does delight in expressing them as pungently as possible." W. E. G. + Christian Century 64:1616 D 31 '47 200w

"Stimulating."

+ Kirkus 15:530 S 15 '47 120w

"At her best, Dorothy Sayers writes on controversial subjects with a trenchancy which recalls the early work of G. K. Chesterton. At her worst, she scolds. But this volume offers far more of her best than of her worst." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 O 5 '47 650w

"The style and the substance are a bit brighter in the political section. There is an amusing essay on the influence of the Gulf Stream and the Channel on the English people, and there is a good-natured but penetrating piece on the English themselves. There is a protest against corruption of the language, some observations on the fact that certain people like to work and certain people do not, and an examination of the freedom of the press." Thomas Sugrue

N Y Times p20 N 30 '47 650w

SAYRE, PAUL, ed. Interpretations of modern legal philosophies; essays in honor of Roscoe Pound; with an introduction. 807p $12.50 Oxford

340 Law—Philosophy

47-459

"The present collection of essays presented in honor of Dean Pound spreads over a wide, and singularly unrelated, field. Three are directly concerned with the man himself—though none is, curiously, a statement of his own philosophy of law. The rest range unevenly over disparate subjects from 'A Note on Thomas Hobbes' to 'The Legal System of Occupied Germany.' It is worth mentioning, however, that there is a first-rate monograph by Hans Kelsen on 'The Metamorphoses of the Idea of Justice,' which is apparently due for more extensive treatment by the author. There are other papers of distinction by Hocking, Sorokin, Radin, and Ranyard West." San Francisco Chronicle

SAYRE, PAUL—Continued

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 Mr 2 '47
120w

"An impressive volume," H. D. Laube
+ Harvard Law R 60:995 J1 '47 2100w

"The weakness of the collection is to be found in its lack of integration: there is no central theme, and no co-ordinated plan which could establish the book as a fruitful source of legal philosophy. This is, unfortunately, a common fault of most collections of 'Essays in honor of—'; and it is one that ought to be seriously considered by future compilers."

Louis Wasserman

San Francisco Chronicle p20 My 18 '47
310w

SBARBARO, JOHN A., and SALTONSTALL, ELLEN. Marriage is on trial. 128p $2 Macmillan

392.5 Marriage 47-30846

"To help stem the rising tide of divorce, a judge of the Superior Court, Cook County, Ill., offers counsel to persons considering marriage, the married, and those contemplating divorce. . . Proposals are made for required, state-supervised premarital instruction, more active church leadership, more sensible divorce laws." Library J

Booklist 44:62 O 15 '47

Reviewed by E. W. Burgess

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 21 '47
800w

"His discussion is calm, reasonable, not moralistic. Here, one may say, is a divorce court judge intelligently trying to work himself out of a job."

+ Christian Century 64:1240 O 15 '47 170w

Ethics 58:78 O '47 240w

Kirkus 15:357 J1 1 '47 80w

"Discussion is nontechnical, nonclinical, somewhat superficial." A. I. Bryan

Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 80w

"A valuable handbook for leaders of marital relations courses and for ministers in their pre-marriage counseling. A copy would make a good engagement gift." E. M. T.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 O 12 '47
100w

Social Studies 38:379 D '47 20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

SCARLETT, WILLIAM, ed. Toward a better world. 184p il $2 Winston

261 Sociology, Christian 47-742

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:180 F 15 '47

"The book can be commended for thoughtful reading."

+ Christian Century 64:145 Ja 29 '47 60w

"This is a significant volume not only for church people but for all thoughtful American citizens."

+ Kirkus 15:161 Mr 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by A. C. Dieffenbach

N Y Times p42 F 9 '47 900w

SCHAMONI, WILHELM. Face of the saints; tr. by Anne Fremantle. 278p il $4.50 Pantheon bks.

922.22 Saints 47-2808

The introduction explains the nature of sanctity and gives a factual outline of the process of canonization in various Christian ages. The main portion of the book is composed of portraits of nearly a hundred saints of the Roman Catholic church, beginning with St Helena, who died in 329, and ending with Mother Cabrini, who died in 1917. A brief biographical sketch accompanies each portrait.

Christian Century 64:496 Ap 16 '47
100w

"There are some fascinating mosaics of the early Fathers, but more than two-thirds of the author's portraits and biographies deal with men and women from the fifteenth century onward. He does a good job in avoiding oversentimentalization. This volume will serve as an unusual introduction to the science of the saints." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 46:76 My 2 '47 200w

"Should prove readily useful in libraries large and small."

+ Library J 72:530 Ap 1 '47 110w

SCHEVILL, FERDINAND. The Great Elector. 442p il maps $5 Univ. of Chicago press

B or 92 Frederick William, elector of Brandenburg, known as the Great Elector 47-31370

A biographical study of Frederick William of Brandenburg, the Great Elector, who was the first dominant personality of the Hohenzollern dynasty. The author is professor emeritus of modern history at the University of Chicago. Index.

Current Hist 13:355 D '47 60w

"An excellent piece of historical craftsmanship. . . Volume written for the educated general public should have fairly wide appeal. Strongly recommended for all college and larger public libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:1372 O 1 '47 140w

"Among the many books of recent vintage that have sought to explain Germany and the German problem 'The Great Elector' should take a distinguished place. . . The masterful analyses, the persuasive style, the pleasing illustrations and the excellent index will satisfy all but the most capricious students, and the public will applaud a historian who gauges justly its needs and knowledge and offers it adult fare." Geoffrey Bruun

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
N 30 '47 700w

SCHILLER, CICELY. Maybe next year. 299p $2.75 Prentice-Hall

47-2432

"After World War I the novel about the girl in search of her freedom, economic and otherwise, was fairly common. This story of Rose Weber might be considered a follow-up. Covering three decades of Chicago at a gallop—up to 1950 for good measure—we learn how little this freedom meant to her and how little she made of it." N Y Times

"One feels that more could have been done with this theme. The writing lacks originality, but it is breezy and fast moving." Alice Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 16 '47
240w

"Lots of opportunity for bedroom detail, and it's not neglected, in what is otherwise confessional material. No—for Public Libraries."

— Kirkus 15:39 Ja 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
Ap 6 '47 180w

"Rose and her reactions are convincing, and her problem as a left-over woman is real. She isn't, however, tough enough or moving enough to make her rather commonplace fortunes really dramatic or pathetic. And Miss Schiller tries to cover so much ground that her pace is often not just fast, but headlong." Catharine Brody

N Y Times p39 Mr 30 '47 270w

"The book is a hotbed of clichés and stereotypes, and the dialogue, sometimes even in its most serious moments, sounds like a take-off on a bad movie; the characters even think in clichés. As for the sex scenes—they are all very much alike and sometimes downright offensive in their pointlessness and their apparent attempt to arouse public interest by a now notorious method. All in all, it is rather sad to see a perfectly good sociological situation like this one clouded and abused by unconvincing and hackneyed treatment." N. G. Chaikin

— Sat R of Lit 30:27 Ap 26 '47 320w

SCHLABRENDORFF, FABIAN VON. They almost killed Hitler; based on the personal account of Fabian von Schlabrendorff, prepared and ed. by Gero v. S. Gaevernitz. 150p il $2.50 Macmillan

943.086 World war, 1939-1945—Germany. Germany—Politics and government. Hitler, Adolf 47-3079

"This book could be read as a complement to Allen Welsh Dulles's recently published story of the bomb plot against Hitler, 'Germany's Underground.' It is a detailed account of the attempted coup, as related by Fabian von Schlabrendorff, one of the few survivors, and a ringleader, of the thousands of conspirators. The book claims that there were many more abortive attempts on the Führer's life, and that near the end of the war there was a state of internecine warfare between high Army officers and the Nazi Party—a conflict so serious that Hitler under no circumstances would visit his Army headquarters." New Yorker

"This is a fascinating story by virtue of the 'brute incidents' involved and the deadly and prolonged precariousness of the situation. Even if the reader knows the answers in advance, he cannot escape the temptation to learn the who and the how and the why." R. E. Danielson
+ Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 600w

Christian Century 64:715 Je 4 '47 30w

Reviewed by Charles Gratke
Christian Science Monitor p18 Je 5 '47 210w

Reviewed by John Broderick
Commonweal 46:192 Je 6 '47 1300w
Foreign Affairs 26:227 O '47 70w
Kirkus 15:88 F 1 '47 90w

"His book is brisk and readable. It includes interesting sketches." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 My 25 '47 450w

"The Dulles and Gaevernitz books are rich in hitherto unpublished material... Mr. Gaevernitz, whose scope is more limited, fills in many details of the broader picture." Shephard Stone

+ N Y Times p3 My 11 '47 1000w
New Yorker 23:106 My 10 '47 140w

"A limited and sketchy account, with occasional highpoints of melodramatic suspense." A. B.

San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '47 120w

"The story makes good reading, thanks to Dr. Gaevernitz, and contains much of interest concerning the military-aristocratic elements in the conspiracy, thanks to Herr Schlabrendorff's remarkable memory. In some cases, the data can be checked against other sources; by such tests, the book's accuracy is rather high. In some other cases, however, no corroboration, or very little, is possible." F. L. Ford

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 My 10 '47 600w

Reviewed by Helmut Kuhn
Social Forces 26:108 O '47 600w

Reviewed by Paul Hagen
Survey G 36:552 O '47 80w

SCHLATTER, CHARLES FORDEM WALT. Cost accounting. 699p $6 Wiley

657 Cost accounting 47-4021

"This revised one volume edition, contains new material on purchase discounts, pricing of materials for consumption, premium wages, payrolls, burden, calendar variations, cost reports, basic standards and current standard costs." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:816 My 15 '47 30w

Management R 36:612 N '47 100w

SCHLESINGER, ARTHUR MEIER, 1888-. Learning how to behave; a historical study of American etiquette books. 95p $2 Macmillan

917.3 U.S.—Social life and customs. Etiquette—Bibliography 46-8112

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by A. F. Tyler

Am Hist R 52:568 Ap '47 320w

"In Learning How to Behave, Arthur M. Schlesinger has produced what is not only a fascinating and thoroughly delightful story of the evolution of etiquette books in this country, but a history of our ever-changing moral and social codes, and the irresistible influence of such changes on our behavior, patterns." L. E. Watson

+ New Eng Q 20:128 Mr '47 750w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson
New Yorker 23:58 Jl 19 '47 3200w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser
San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 9 '47 450w

"One could write a history of the manners of this country—manners being inclusive of etiquette—by a study of its etiquettes in various times and places. Dr. Schlesinger has furnished an outline of that study, though he has modestly appended 'Books' to his title. Though this amusing and scholarly thesis is complete in itself, it is too bad that the author did not do it in four hundred and fifty pages instead of seventy-one and call it, perhaps, 'Manners And Americans; or, From Fleas to Emily Post.'" Phil Stong

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 F 8 '47 1200w

U S Quarterly Bk 3:168 Je '47 240w
Wis Lib Bul 43:53 Mr '47

SCHLESINGER, RUDOLF. Federalism in central and eastern Europe. (Int. lib. of sociology and social reconstruction) 533p $6 Oxford 321.021 Federal government. Europe—Politics 46-650

"A studious review and appraisal of the experiments in federalism made during the last hundred years in Germany, the Hapsburg domains, and Russia." Foreign Affairs

"Dr. Schlesinger is a more reliable guide in the field of history than in that of philosophical analysis."

Foreign Affairs 25:519 Ap '47 40w

"The information in this book is most valuable, and ably presented, even though the conclusions are dictated by party bias, and are now somewhat out of date." Albert Guerard

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ap 27 '47 1100w

Reviewed by C. E. Schroske
Pol Sci Q 62:315 Je '47 1050w

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Jl 27 '47 120w

SCHLOERB, ROLLAND WALTER. Preaching ministry today. 113p $1.25 Harper 46-7534

Study of the object as well as the subject of the sermons in today's preaching. Contents: Ultimate goals and immediate hazards; Preaching as the proclamation of news; Preaching as the communication of insight; Preaching as a summons to action; Preaching as a pastoral function.

"Splendid little book on preaching today." B. H. Bruner

+ Christian Century 64:17 Ja 1 '47 700w

"Seldom has so much sound homiletical common sense been packed into so small a space. The volume will prove of value, not only to students but also to experienced preachers." J. D. Morrison

+ Crozer Q 24:187 Ap '47 400w

SCHLOERB, R. W.—Continued

"Ministers would be the most apt to be interested in the published volume. They will find interesting and helpful suggestions, but nothing startlingly original."

Kirkus 14:497 O 1 '46 100w

SCHMITT, GLADYS (MRS SIMON GOLD-FIELD). Alexandra. 316p $3 Dial press

47-31103

This is the story, as told by her closest woman friend, of Alexandra Hill, a great American actress. The story, beginning with their school days together, goes on to tell of Alexandra's struggles to succeed in her chosen art, of the part played in her education and life by an aging actor, a one-time matinee-idol, and finally how and why, at the height of her success, Alexandra Hill committed suicide.

Booklist 44:70 O 15 '47

"In outline this could be many another novel; in substance it carries the full Schmitt technical excellence, penetration, wisdom and humanity, the ability to probe human action and expose motive. Makes some other psychological novels seem like freshman term papers. Rare talent, forcefully expressed and not derivative."

R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 110w

Nation 165:533 N 15 '47 290w

"Miss Schmitt's philosophy, in spite of her preoccupation with romantic ideals, is cynical. The world is intolerable, art is rotting with commercialism, people can recognize genius, but they cannot escape it. Is this quite true and is that what she means to say in this unquestionably superior novel? Have we failed, are we failing to be guided and influenced and fed by the highest standards of our artists? Her own standards are among the highest found in thoughtful fiction today, her artistry is sure, her emotion true. But there is bitterness here. She would have us love Alexandra as Sophie Litman loved her, yet all we can summon is pity." Richard Mealand

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 O 26 '47 420w

Reviewed by C. V. Terry

N Y Times p24 N 2 '47 380w

"The plot is not startling, but the author's breathless style makes it seem quite fresh and vital."

+ New Yorker 23:125 O 18 '47 160w

SCHNEIDER, ALICE, ed. Tales of many lands; ill. by Erika Weihs; introd. by Josette Frank. 320p $2.50 Citadel

398.2 Fairy tales 47-2668

"The world is truly one in this collection of fairy tales drawn from the folk literature of twenty-nine countries. The stories range from Denmark to New Zealand, from Alaska to West Africa, yet through each runs a truth so universal that it will instantly be recognized by boys and girls the world over." N Y Times

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 26 '47 160w

"Good for storytellers and for the children's own reading." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:229 F 1 '47 60w

"Variety and entertainment value have evidently been the basis for selection. Here old favorites, such as John Henry, Puss in Boots, and Paul Bunyan, appear along with little-known stories, while traditional tales stand side by side with selections from Hans Andersen and Joel Chandler Harris. All are rich with the wonder, the humor and the adventure which have gladdened children throughout the years. Story tellers, as well as their audiences, will welcome this attractive book." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p29 F 16 '47 140w

SCHNEIDER, HERBERT WALLACE. History of American philosophy. 646p $4.50 Columbia univ. press

191 Philosophy, American

A47-737

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by F. G. Wilson

Am Pol Sci R 41:772 Ag '47 650w

"Professor Schneider has given us the most scholarly and the most comprehensive history of American philosophy yet written." E. S. Brightman

+ Crozer Q 24:167 Ap '47 1000w

Current Hist 12:375 Ap '47 60w

"Professor Schneider's History of American Philosophy is without doubt the most important general treatment of American intellectual history since Parrington's Main Currents; and considered simply as a student's handbook it is immensely valuable. . . . But, despite all its virtues, Professor Schneider's volume is essentially a collection of materials rather than an interpretation, and the new light which it throws on the American past is less important than what it tells us about the present state of American thought. While his pages reflect a scholarly candor and a vast industry, they also confess a pervasive bewilderment. And this bewilderment is clothed with the dignity of a method." D. J. Boorstin

+ Ethics 57:227 Ap '47 1000w

"Only those who have labored long with some of the same problems will appreciate fully the sagacity and the thoroughness of Professor Schneider's long-awaited history. As Number 18 of the Columbia Studies in American Culture, it is the distilled wisdom of a program which both anticipated and accelerated the present wave of interest in the subject. It is not a book for beginners. It is a superbly suggestive source-book and manual for teachers, but most students will have to earn the privilege of reading it effectively." H. A. Larrabee

+ J Philos 44:272 My 8 '47 2150w

"Herbert W. Schneider has given us a very good book. It is a book we have anticipated for a long time, and it fulfills our expectations. In length and soundness, in comprehensiveness and insight, it fits the needs both of the institutionalized reader and of the reader at large. The former will take to it for its accuracy and its bibliographies, the latter for its generous quotations and its clipped asides." Charles Morris

+ Nation 164:225 F 22 '47 900w

Reviewed by Cameron Thompson

New Eng Q 20:413 S '47 1550w

Reviewed by Louis Wasserman

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 23 '47 450w

"The most serious limitation upon the effectiveness of this major contribution to American cultural history is that the reader will require discrimination and intellectual sensibility, as well as a modicum of familiarity with the history of philosophical ideas to appreciate the virtues of what he reads. . . . Herbert Schneider proves himself to be a creative philosopher in the history of ideas, and he now helps us to see not only our three-century drama of ideas as they affect our institutions and mold our ideology, but in general to know ourselves as a people a little more dispassionately and a little less bumpiously. I believe that his work will last longer and be more fecund of further research by others than any other history of American thought this century has produced." Adrienne Koch

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 7 '47 1000w

"A learned, acute and entertaining work. . . . One group of philosophers is rather harshly treated, the imported Scotch defenders of Calvinism or of 'common sense.' . . . One might suspect Professor Schneider of having no great liking either for Scottish philosophy or philosophers. . . . This defect is probably a minor flaw caused by Professor Schneider's intent watch on the American ball. . . . In his pursuit of philosophical thought and attitudes Professor Schneider has accumulated a vast and most valuable bibliography and a great deal of odd information. . . . He is tough-minded and (all critical rights reserved) open-minded enough to please William James. And this is a book that William James would have liked, for many good reasons, including its serious appreciation of the philosophical merits of his father."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p329 J1 5 '47
3700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:32 Mr '47 230w

Reviewed by Brand Blanchard
Yale R n s 36:530 spring '47 1150w

SCHNEIDER, HERMAN, and SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. Now try this; pictures by Bill Ballantine. 40p $1.50 Scott, W.R.

530 Physics—Juvenile literature 47-30817

Using the same means as in their former book: Let's Find Out (Book Review Digest 1946) the authors explain such things as friction, levers, and wheels as the easiest way to move a load. For ages eight to ten.

Booklist 44:54 O 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4A N 19 '47
110w

* Kirkus 15:468 S 1 '47 170w

"Clearly stated and well illustrated. Recommended." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:156 N '47

SCHNEIDER, ISIDOR. Judas time. 361p $3
Dial press

47-2416

"The hero is Calvin Cain, an instructor in biology at a college like Columbia. As long as he can prosecute others for heresy and make romantically revolutionary demands in strike struggles, Cain is happy in the party. But as soon as he is disciplined, as soon as his vanity is injured by the ideological triumphs of a rival, he quits the movement and takes his wife and faithful friend with him. In return for an assistant professorship, he gives the president of the college the names of the members of the secret Communist faculty cell, begins consorting with Fascists and contributors to 'The New Leader,' sinks to joining the Trotskyists, and is sent to Mexico to meet Trotsky himself." N Y Times

"A 'proletarian novel' apparently designed to satisfy some obscure private grudge, and written in a style which makes Theodore Dreiser sound like Walter Pater. The final chapter deserves a prize for some kind of utter tastelessness. Book might conceivably be acquired by larger libraries as a prime specimen of its particular genre." E. F. Walbridge

— Library J 72:464 Mr 15 '47 70w

"In his portrayal of Calvin Cain, Schneider has repaid the detractors of communism in their own coin. In doing so, however, he sometimes writes with the prejudice of the polemicist rather than with the insight of the artist. Nor can one completely accept the goodness and wisdom of the faithful, Murray and Rose Grossman, Communist saints, are idealized beyond belief. Such black-and-white characterization seldom achieves the quality of fictional art." C. A. Madison

New Repub 116:33 Mr 31 '47 440w

"Although 'The Judas Time' is so oversimplified that it loses much of its potential effectiveness, it has considerable interest, not as a novel but as a document of our time. Chiefly, as has been suggested, that is because, with such a steady and violent stream of books written by the men whom Mr. Schneider looks on as traitors, it is valuable to hear the other side for a change. Another reason is that, for all his defects as a novelist, the author of 'The Judas Time' is often impressive in his bitterness." Richard Watts

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Mr 30 '47 1100w

"Mr. Schneider's evocation of radical Bohemia is likely to give the average reader (temporarily, at least) an intense and indiscriminating distaste for the whole life of the Marxian Left. . . Cain has no saving virtues whatever, nor have any of the many characters in 'The Judas Time' who precede or follow him into apostasy. . . Mr. Schneider's substitution of the pure pleasure of hating in place of any measure of detachment, self-criticism or complexity, makes the book impossible as a work of art. To this reviewer, it plays into the hands of what Mr. Schneider would call Red-baiters, because of the feeling of revulsion it is almost certain to evoke." R. G. Davis

— N Y Times p6 Ap 6 '47 900w

"The portrait of Cain is a violent, gory, and diseased thing, and quite evidently done with partisan fury. It is, to that extent, valueless, and I write this with no sympathy for either side. I remember Mr. Schneider, in his previous books, as a poet and literary artist of distinction. I am sorry to see him turning out a forced and disputatious novel of this sort, which depends for its whole validity upon a straw man built up just so that he may be knocked down with triumphant cries." N. L. Rothman

— Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ap 12 '47 650w

SCHNEIDER, MRS NINA. Hercules, the gentle giant; il. by Kurt Werth. 43p $2 Roy pubs.
47-2724

A new version of the boyhood of Hercules, written and illustrated with humor.

"'Hercules' is outstanding for its gently perceptive, delightfully imaginative, highly humorous retelling of an old legend." Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47
90w

+ Kirkus 15:99 F 15 '47 170w

"Seven-to-nine-year-olds can read for themselves the story of the lovable young giant who outgrows his clothes and his home and enjoys the outdoors where the sky is 'comfortably high,' until the day the king orders that he kill a lion which has been causing trouble. Delightfully original illustrations by Kurt Werth." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 72:467 Mr 15 '47 70w

"The costumes are more medieval than Greek; Hercules belongs to all time. The colors are lively and the lion as comic as a trick animal on the stage. But the spirit of the story gets through for all the high jinks: a really brave man is gentle; it is a coward who blusters and is cruel. I think our littlest folk will remember this first labor of Hercules." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr
16 '47 340w

"'Hercules,' the first of a series of old myths which the author plans to retell for very young readers, has just the right fanciful tone to please the audience for which it is intended. Kurt Werth's droll and sprawling illustrations point up a story told with sprightliness and humor." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p41 My 4 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:84 My '47

SCHOCH, EUGENE PAUL. General chemistry.
2d ed 540p il $4 McGraw

540 Chemistry 46-8116

"For beginning college chemistry courses, this edition, largely rewritten, omits laboratory directions. Revised text includes a chapter on nuclear chemistry and the new elements, neptunium and plutonium. Sections added introducing modernized inorganic chemical nomenclature and the economic factors relating to the chemical industries." (Library J) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1939.

"Notable for its singleness of purpose. One feels that it has been written for use in one well-planned course rather than with a view to giving it a versatility which would make it a possible adoption for many different courses organized along divergent lines. The presentation throughout is a logical, one step at a time development of ideas at a level consistent with the background of a freshman who has had no previous work in science. . . Both the choice of the detailed factual content and of the order of presentation of fundamental concepts in a freshman course are necessarily rather arbitrary. Much more important are the features in which this book is strong—i.e., the clarity with which the fundamentals are developed and the writer's awareness of the student's learning problems." J. E. Willard

SCHOCH, E. P.—Continued

+ Chem & Eng N 25:392 F 10 '47 300w
Chem Eng 54:272 J1 '47 70w
Library J 71:1053 Ag '46 70w

SCHOEN, MAX. Thinking about religion. 156p
$2 Philosophical lib.

201 Religion—Philosophy 46-5933

"Max Schoen's thinking about religion, while it has evidently been influenced largely by existentialism, is his own. It is very personal and highly individual, anti-clerical, anti-ecclesiastical, anti-institutional. . . . The religious in experience is viewed by Schoen as universal and non-transferable. Thus each man, to the degree that he is capable, will naturally have his own religious experience. Any church, any clergy, any attempt to institutionalize religious experience is a violation of the experience." J Philos

"Though its thesis is vulnerable at many points, the book's stimulating and challenging quality and the certainty that it will provoke fresh thinking about religion are reason enough for strongly recommending it." W. E. Hammond

+ — Christian Century 63:1182 O 2 '46 750w

"An interesting and stimulating little book."

J. L. B.

+ J Philos 44:50 Ja 16 '47 650w

SCHOEN, MAX, and others. Understanding the world; an introduction to philosophy. 638p $4 Harper

100 Philosophy 47-2124

"A new approach to philosophy, in which its main problems are considered, in the light of their historical development." (School & Society) Bibliography, Index.

"A highly rewarding book for use by advanced students and by thoughtful mature readers who are capable of holding their own in philosophical discussion, this admirable work has two characteristics which disqualify it as an 'introduction' to philosophy. First, it is too intricate and technical. . . . Second, the book is heavily slanted toward the defense of a particular doctrine." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 64:925 J1 30 '47 1050w

J Philos 44:556 S 25 '47 700w

"In the judgment of this reviewer, the noticeably weak section is that which deals with religion, the writers showing a limited knowledge of this highly specialized field, acknowledging it by repeated references to a certain few books with resulting secondary interpretations. A commendable feature of the book is the historical survey of classical Western philosophy." Virgilius Ferm

J Religion 27:308 O '47 200w

School & Society 65:351 My 10 '47 20w

SCHOFIELD, WILLIAM GREENOUGH. Pay-off in black, 256p $2 Macrae Smith co.

47-3259

Mystery story.

"The whole tale is hopelessly loose-jointed and quite incapable of standing in any credible posture. The subvillain of the piece is one of the most garrulous in history and issues an almost endless series of Final Warnings." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p11 J1 20 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:177 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
My 25 '47 110w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p22 Je 1 '47 140w

SCHOLEM, GERSHOM GERHARD. Major trends in Jewish mysticism; based on the Hilda Stroom lectures delivered at the Jewish Institute of Religion, New York. rev ed 454p $5.50 Schocken

296 Jews—Religion. Cabala. Hasidism

"Dr. Scholem, a native of Berlin, has found his academic home. . . in the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. His book, based on lectures delivered in the Jewish Institute of Religion in New York, was published some six years ago by the Schocken Publishing House . . . in Jerusalem. It is this book, now revised, which sees its second edition produced by Schocken Books in New York. . . . With unequalled command of his literary sources (some 3,000 printed books and innumerable unpublished manuscripts), Professor Scholem guides the reader with sure steps through the long story of the mystic's attempt to express ecstatic consciousness of the Divine Presence through the media of words, symbols and allegories." (N Y Times) Bibliography, Index.

"The scholarly Christian reader who may be interested in exploring a world of religious thought and experience that is absolutely unknown to him could not do better than to take Dr. Scholem as his guide and thread the mazes of Jewish mysticism."

+ Christian Century 64:593 My 7 '47 280w

"More than one eminent Jewish scholar has hailed this volume as a 'classic of Jewish literature.' A Christian may be permitted to add his tribute by recognizing it as a major classic in the history of mysticism." H. P. Van Dusen

+ Nation 165:319 S 27 '47 1050w

Reviewed by D. de Sola Pool

N Y Times p24 Je 8 '47 650w

SCHOLZ, JACKSON VOLNEY. Gridiron challenge. 240p $2.50 Morrow

47-30681

Football story for older boys and football addicts. The scene is a state university and the hero is a cocksure young man who expects to win laurels easily. When he attempts to use the wrong tactics in his freshman year he is off to a bad start, but three years of struggle finally brings him the esteem of his fellow students.

Booklist 44:37 S 15 '47

Kirkus 15:469 S 1 '47 80w

"A satisfactory football story for all sports addicts. . . . Routine but wholesome and exactly what the sports readers want." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 72:1280 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 9 '47 430w

Wis Lib Bul 43:136 O '47

SCHOONOVER, MARY T. Mrs McFinny and her friends; il. by Helena Schoonover. 78p $2 Macmillan

47-3622

Story of little old Mrs McFinny who lived in a tiny house on an even tinier income, but whose loving heart and intuition made life a happy thing for a lonely little boy and his father. For ages six to eight.

Kirkus 15:99 F 15 '47 90w

"Its obvious plot and stilted style are relieved by nice descriptions of the village and the charming black-and-white drawings. Not an important book, but third and fourth graders will enjoy the adventures of the dog and cat." N. L. Rathbun

Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 70w

"There is a dear little old fashioned picture, soft and fluffy, on every page, and the quiet, steady loving-kindness makes it admirable goodnight reading aloud to little folks." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
J1 20 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:122 J1 '47

SCHORER, MARK. State of mind; thirty-two stories. 346p $3 Houghton

47-2350

Volume of short stories, many of them about failures in personal relationship. Several of the stories appeared in the New Yorker.

"Perhaps Schorer's stories, if you like to run away from reality, will depress you. But they will be a revelation for the thinking ones and a hoard of literary treasure whose effects and deeper meanings will stay with you long after the junk of the second-raters has been dumped overboard." Herman Kogan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 6 '47
430w

Kirkus 15:38 Ja 15 '47 160w

"The characters in the stories resemble the readers for whom they were written, the prosperous public of the slick magazines, and while few of the stories exceed the level of high competence, they are an unpretentious and exact report of certain prevalent symptoms of emotional and moral bankruptcy." John Farrelly

New Repub 116:34 Ap 14 '47 160w

"Only an immense compassion saves Mr. Schorer's delineation from becoming sheer misanthropy. He writes of the inhumanity, the desperate loneliness, the endless fears that bind modern man in their hideous enchantment. With such a light touch, with so much subtlety and restraint in his combination built up, however, that his stories are individually often delectable, some times gay or even diverting, and almost always distinguished by some deft turn, an obliquity or happy omission." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
Mr 23 '47 700w

"In his most characteristic later stories, Mr. Schorer uses very familiar family situations, apparently comic ones: a struggle with eccentric neighbors when they complain of the children's noise, a father's trying to set up an electric train properly, a boy's bringing a note home from school when the father is in an already exasperated mood. These are very real, beautifully understood situations in which the characters' wider knowledge (socially and psychologically) brings a wider sense of duty... This is true also of the studies of other relationships, between teachers and pupils, between Americans and Europeans, and some frightening ones about the relationship of the intellectual and non-intellectual classes." R. G. Davis

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 23 '47 850w

"Many of the briefer tales have an astringent humor and all of them make interesting reading."

New Yorker 23:105 Ap 5 '47 50w

"[The stories] all are on the same high level of quality—even the little triptych, 'A Friend of the Family,' in which, as in none of the others, the author exhibits a kind of delicately savage humor that can be compared only to the immortal 'Saki.'" J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 31 '47
750w

"As fine a group of stories as has come along in quite a while. They are stories that stay with you." Jack Iams

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 Ap 19 '47 750w

Springf'd Republican p10B S 28 '47
180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:69 Ap '47

SCHOYER, PRESTON. Indefinite river. 325p
$3 Dodd

47-11499

"Novel of character and authoritative picture of civil war, ruin and survival in China, just prior to Hiroshima. Author of The Foreigners echoes the T'ang poet's 'Pitiful are the bones by the Indefinite River. Yet still they live in the dreams of the Secret Chamber.' Russell, American Army Intelligence, keeps straight road of his integrity through danger, intrigue and corruption, while his career and his world disintegrate." Library J

Booklist 44:172 Ja 1 '48

Christian Science Monitor p10 D 20 '47
450w

"Far better than average book on the war and China." George Streater

+ Commonweal 47:308 Ja 2 '47 650w

"Exciting as Graham Greene; subtle, lucid and sensitive to nature as Conrad. Love story of Russell and Nina, mysterious Soochow girl, moves melodiously, with close relevance, throughout action. Highly recommended." M. L. Barrett

+ Library J 72:1471 O 15 '47 100w

"It's an unusual story that Mr. Schoyer tells, subtle, significant and intellectually probing. But he is a little slow in getting into action; a little overconscientious in building up his background of Chinese figures. One gets lost in too many characters and too many names. Not until the last third of the book does the story assume pace and suspense. What comes before is, however, highly interesting as an American's evaluation of China's problems." Rose Feld

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
N 23 '47 550w

"Some of the best passages are those which picture the net of cruelty that such men have knotted over the face of China: whether by satirical portraiture, by descriptions of the Kuomintang soldiers or by exposing the reasons why the officials insist on calling the Communists 'Border Bandits,' Schoyer presents a subtly damning picture. To this reviewer, the profundity with which the author explores this theme is limited by his preoccupation with negative forces, a preoccupation that excludes a sound evaluation of what is dynamic and changing in present-day China." John Bicknell

+ N Y Times p22 N 23 '47 500w

"The Indefinite River' is a mature, sensitively written novel, one of the best of this year's writing." Eleanor Breed

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 15 '47
850w

"Preston Schoyer must be regarded as our Number One Boy in China fiction. He has come dangerously close to writing a great novel." Gorden Link

+ Sat R of Lit 30:41 N 22 '47 600w

SCHRAMM, WILBUR LANG. Windwagon Smith, and other yarns; il. by Joe Krush. 208p $3 Harcourt

47-11419

Eleven tall tales featuring such individuals as Windwagon Smith, the man who put sails on a prairie schooner in order to sail over the plains; Grandpa Hopewell who drove his flying tractor faster than the Rock Island trains; and the horse who played third base for Brooklyn.

"Illustrations for each of the stories have been conjured up by Joe Krush, who captured with his pen and ink the pathos, the humor, the astounding but delightful insanity that is Schramm." Nelson Olmsted

+ Chicago Sun Book Week N 6 '47 500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 24 '47
650w

"Wilbur Schramm has fun in all the stories of this little volume. Sometimes it is an hilarious, headlong fun—a hop, skip, and jump into fantasy and extravagance; sometimes it is a half-humorous wondering about the horizon, and the blue prairie sky, and death. One of the first things you feel in these stories is movement. They are American stories, all restless, all in motion." Walter Havighurst

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 N 29 '47 600w

SCHREIBER, GEORGES. Bambino, the clown [il. by the author]. 32p $2 Viking

47-5526

Picture-story book about a small boy who lost his hat, but is made happy again by a jolly clown and a seal. For seven to ten-year-olds.

SCHREIBER, GEORGES—Continued

Booklist 44:75 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3a N 19 '47
160w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p5 Ag 26 '47
230w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 23:247 S '47 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:439 N '47 50w

Kirkus 15:364 J1 15 '47 50w

"Recommended for limited purchase.
Fragile." Helen Kremer

+ Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
N 16 '47 270w

"Bambino, representing the warmth and human kindness of the universal clown, is a lovable figure, but one wishes that he had had a more substantial story, one with the unerring timing of the clown's act. The pictures, however, are memorable, fluid in line, gay with color and full of the glamour of grease-paint and footlights. For 7 to 10 year olds." E. L. B.

+ — N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '47 150w

"It is a clever and amusing performance and the children laugh and shout and clap their hands as all children do at a circus. . . . To this reviewer the book has one fault. The excessive use of a rather harsh red in the color printing obscures the lovely vista of the little town and the expressive faces of the children."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:37 N 15 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:156 N '47

SCHULBERG, BUDD WILSON. Harder they fall, 343p $3 Random house

47-30396

A fictionalized exposé of the boxing racket. An unscrupulous fight promoter builds up a simple Argentine peasant to be the champion, and then lets him down. Along with the story of Nick Latka and his unprincipled crowd, is told the story of the well-educated press-agent who sells out his own integrity.

Reviewed by Edward Weeks

Atlantic 180:120 S '47 480w

"The narrative [is] a full and disgusting expose of the whole ring racket. . . . In the customary hyperbole of the jacket blurb, Schulberg's publishers insist that this book surpasses the saga of Sammy Glick. They're way off base on that one, I think, but this does not mean that 'The Harder They Fall' is not a good book. It is a very good book and if you like your literature rough and tough, smelling of blood and lust and mayhem, you may think it a great book." Herman Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 10 '47
430w

"A hard-socking shocker that continues the expert delineation of heels begun in the earlier novel and cuts to a deeper level. A book for men, almost entirely."

Kirkus 15:287 Je 1 '47 210w

"A crude, lewd story, written in ringside patois (rather boring). Definitely not recommended unless you are collecting psychopathia sexualis." R. W. Henderson

— Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 120w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 165:236 S 6 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 117:27 Ag 11 '47 1700w

"Acute, unsparing reporting at its best. There has been no comparable picture of the sleazy side of the business." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ag 17 '47 900w

"Budd Schulberg's new book is a hard-boiled successor to his first and tough little novel, 'What Makes Sammy Run?' Just as full of heels and no-goods, and as fast, slangy and wisecracking, 'The Harder They Fall' is in many ways a much better novel than 'Sammy.'" John Horn

N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '47 800w

"In spirit, subject matter, and even style, 'The Harder They Fall' has a great deal in common with 'The Hucksters.' . . . As a man who has always considered prizefighting at least as scientific as, and certainly a good deal more spirited than, advertising, I enjoyed Mr. Schulberg's novel." Wolcott Gibbs

+ New Yorker 23:84 Ag 16 '47 1500w

"A big gallery, with a surprising number of good portrait sketches in it. In the end, however, it is the pitiful figure of the bumbling, earnest, hopelessly incapable El Toro that will come back to you—and this in spite of the author's own interest in the big racketeer, Nick Latka. El Toro is the eternal Victim, the man preyed upon by those colder and harder and more evil than he could ever be. Mr. Schulberg has here done what every good novelist should do in one way or another. He tells a fast story and through his story says something about human society. What he says you may not find pleasant. But you will find it true." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 13 '47
900w

"The book is very cleverly written and at all times is brilliant, witty, and amusing. As a reflector of the prize-ring gentry, it is far more accurate than most modern writers have been in their numerous works on the subject. With all its cynicism, humor, and wit, it still contains enough pathos to equal Ernest Hemingway's 'The Killers,' and it has the practicability of 'Fifty Grand.' . . . 'The Harder They Fall' is the best book on fighting that I have read since Bernard Shaw's 'Cashel Byron's Profession.' Everyone who follows boxing, either through the sports pages or radio broadcasting, will want to read it, but I suggest that it not be sent to the uninitiated; nor is it the kind of book you would want to send junior to read during his spare hours at summer camp." Gene Tunney

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ag 9 '47 1500w

"In 'The Harder They Fall, professional prize fighting is presented as a thoroughly crooked and brutal business. This point of view is entirely tenable, but as the theme of a full-length novel it gets tiresome. All the shocking details that Schulberg desperately dishes up cannot disguise the sophomoric quality of his story telling, and readers will end up feeling that his book is almost as coarse and phony a performance as the show it satirizes."

— Time 50:100 Ag 13 '47 650w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 37:191 autumn '47 320w

SCHULZ, FRITZ. History of Roman legal science. 358p $7 Oxford

349.37 Roman law

[A47-97]

"A comprehensive history of Roman jurisprudence. . . . The plan of the book divides the history of Roman jurisprudence into four periods: the Archaic (from the XII Tables to the close of the Second Punic War), the Hellenistic (201 B.C. to 27 B.C.), the Classical (27 B.C. to 284 A.D.), and the Bureaucratic (284 A.D. to 534 A.D.). Each period is analyzed with reference to the jurists, the legal profession and education, the character and tendencies of jurisprudence, and, finally, the literature of the law and its forms." Ann Am Acad

"The product of forty years of study and reflection. Scholarly but not pedantic, lucid in style, it is a book not only for the specialist but for all who would know more of the nature and development of Roman thinking about law. Although Professor Schulz does not pretend to have written a complete history of the subject, his book is a highly important contribution to it and is the first to deal specifically with the whole field." G. L. Haskins

+ Ann Am Acad 250:146 Mr '47 330w

"Whatever one may think of particular points, it must be stressed that this comprehensive presentation of Roman legal science is an admirable achievement. It is written with profound knowledge and understanding, and it will be a standard book for a long time to come. Professor Francis de Zulueta of Oxford has provided an excellent English translation for which all readers are indebted to him." E. F. Bruck

+ Harvard Law R 60:1002 J1 '47 1800w

"Dr. Schulz's volume is a masterly contribution of outstanding and lasting value to the history of Roman legal science."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p400 Ag 24 '46 1900w

SCHULZE-GAEVERNITZ, GERO VON., ed. See Schlabrendorff, F. von. They almost killed Hitler

SCHUMPETER, JOSEPH ALOIS. Capitalism, socialism, and democracy. 2d ed 411p $3.50 Harper

335 Socialism, Capitalism, Democracy 47-604

"The text of the first edition [Book Review Digest 1943] is unchanged, but 30 pages dealing with the consequences of the war have been added and some criticisms answered." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:226 Mr 15 '47

Current Hist 12:15 F '47 1/0w

Foreign Affairs 26:222 O '47 20w

"Liberals should expose themselves to this important book for a number of reasons. 'Capitalism, Socialism, and Democracy' is the performance of an intellectual virtuoso, brilliant, complex, perfectly controlled. Schumpeter has an architectonic sense of the flow and structure of an argument, of the panorama of logical possibilities and logical exclusions. His methodological sophistication is not the jargon-chopping of the sociologist; it goes to the heart of serious issues." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ — Nation 164:490 Ap 26 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Robert Strausz-Hupe
N Y Times p6 Mr 30 '47 1200w

SCHUSCHNIGG, KURT. Austrian requiem; tr. by Franz von Hildebrand. 322p $3.50 Putnam 943.6 Austria—History. World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons 47-164

"Author, courageous Austrian chancellor in critical period before Hitler annexed his country, kept secret diary during seven years of his imprisonment. His detailed report about tragic Berchtesgaden meeting of February 12, 1938, at which Nazi dictator began to force Austria into submission certainly makes this a historic document of lasting significance. Also his observations about conditions in German concentration camps will long remain worthy of attention." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:184 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:11 My '47

Reviewed by Fritz Caspari

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 19 '47
650w

Reviewed by Ernest Pisko

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ja 14 '47
700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '47

Reviewed by Henry Bund

Commonweal 45:520 Mr 7 '47 1100w

Foreign Affairs 25:702 J1 '47 110w

"Book is much more impressive human document than his earlier volume My Austria. Strongly recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 71:1541 N 1 '46 140w

"Schuschnigg's language is clear and concise, and he seems to mean what he says. But his confessions do not exonerate him; he was a poor statesman, vacillating and wasting his opportunities, who permitted himself to be trapped by his 'best friends,' including fifth columnists. He was also a small man who worried more about his electricity bill than about the hecatombs that took place outside his own swanky 'prison' in the Belvedere Castle." Alfred Werner

Nation 164:47 Ja 11 '47 1000w

"It is the confession of a decent sort of man, dry, scholarly, honest, incredibly naive in the face of the Nazi gangsters and of his friends who betrayed him, a man whose good intentions were limited by a narrow background and a narrow view of man and modern society and a statesman who could never quite resolve his own inner conflict between his staunch German nationalism and his deep devotion to the Catholic Church and the House of Hapsburg. . . . At a moment when the Americans have amnestied nearly a million 'little Nazis' and when American, Russian and British statesmen are vying with one another to help the Germans, Dr. Schuschnigg's story of his experience with Hitler's Germans makes timely reading. And there is something poignant in the confessions of an honest, intelligent, well meaning but frighteningly limited man and statesman caught up in the angry torrent of a tragedy which engulfed him and his people and nearly drowned us all." W. L. Shirer

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R pl Ja 12 '47 2000w

Reviewed by C. A. Gulick

N Y Times p4 Ja 5 '47 1500w

"His secret diary of those years reveals no rancor and no self-pity. He still believes that his line of action in the face of the Nazi threat was the only logical one; he is still an Austrian nationalist and still a legitimist. Whether you agree with his politics or not, you can't help admiring his integrity and tenacity."

New Yorker 22:70 Ja 4 '47 160w

"Makes interesting reading and gives food for thought, but it contains nothing startling nor historically epochal."

Pol Sci Q 62:635 D '47 550w

Reviewed by A. D. K. Doughty

San Francisco Chronicle p26 My 25 '47
220w

"Drama and tragedy deserving of the pen of the greatest novelists and playwrights of our times fill the pages of this book by Kurt von Schuschnigg, onetime Chancellor of Austria and prisoner of Hitler for seven long years. The man whom Hitler wanted to see driven to death or insanity tells the story of what he saw and experienced, of the miracle of his survival, of a wife's love that made his survival possible, of his hopes for a better Europe, in simple words with a great deal of restraint, leaving it to the facts and events which he reports to convey the full impact of the drama through which he lived." Sigrid Schultz

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ja 25 '47 2000w

"Taken at face value the book is informative, and is written in such a fashion that will certainly arouse the layman's interest, if not his support. The historian may find it useful. Finally, the didactic character of the work is worth the attention of those interested in preventing another world catastrophe." Claude Babin

+ Social Studies 38:278 O '47 550w

"The story is told simply without bitterness or recrimination. It is the story we might expect from an Austrian officer and gentleman who refused to betray his country or sacrifice his principles, and, like so many other Austrian patriots of all parties and classes, paid the inevitable price accordingly." Walford Selby

+ Spec 179:594 N 7 '47 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p599 N 22 '47
200w

Reviewed by Sigmund Neumann

Yale R n s 36:748 summer '47 900w

SCHWAMB, PETER, and others. Elements of mechanism; 6th ed, rev. by Venton Levy Doughtie. 428p $4 Wiley

621.8 Machinery, Kinematics of 47-2051

"This standard textbook retains former fundamentals and current terminology and in 'bringing up to date, all chapters have been completely revised.'—Preface. New illustrative examples and problems. Covers, in general,

SCHWAMB, PETER—Continued
mechanism, kinematics, and machine design.
Technical. For student or engineer." (Booklist)
Index.

Booklist 43:294 My 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:228 F 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:33 Ap '47

SCHWARZ, OSIAS L. Average man against superior man. 124p $2.75 Philosophical lib.

151.1 Man, Genius 48-926

"Theory of psychology in opposition to Freud's theses." Publisher's Weekly

"The puerility of this book is overmatched only by its putridity. Whatever semblance of sense the book has arises from making bogus categories—'Average,' 'Superior,' and 'Pseudo-superior'—mutually exclusive, as if all the constellation of traits attributed to each were not sadly mixed in all. This invidious, rather than descriptive, use of categories leaves me reminded of nobody whom any of the categories describe." T. V. S.
— Ethics 58:78 O '47 340w

"It is difficult to judge just what the author's intentions are in this wordy diatribe, since he seems to be shooting at several targets at once." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 130w

SCHWARZENBERG, ADOLPH. Prince Felix zu Schwarzenberg, prime minister of Austria, 1848-1852. 1td ed 244p il $3.50 Columbia univ. press

B or 92 Schwarzenberg, Felix, fürst zu. Austria—Politics and government A46-3700

A biographical account of the author's great-grand-uncle, with a view of the Bohemian policies of the period. Covers the early years of the reign of Franz Joseph, and contains much information on the times. Bibliography. Index.

"The published material has been well used by the author, and the life of the Austrian statesman is told with considerable historical objectivity. The reader will hardly complain of too high an evaluation, in spite of an attitude of deserved, and in this case very natural, sympathy. The weaker part of the book is the delineation of the historical background against which Prince Felix is drawn." Friedrich Engel-Janosi

+ — Am Hist R 52:316 Ja '47 700w

Current Hist 11:401 N '46 60w

"Dr. Schwarzenberg is the head of the former princely house, a Czechoslovak citizen with a good record of opposition to the Nazis. This book is the result of his wartime exile in the United States. Although it contains no new material and little that is personal, it is competently done and will serve a useful purpose."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p75 F 8 '47 650w

SCHWARZSCHILD, LEOPOLD. The red Prussian; the life and legend of Karl Marx; tr. from the German by Margaret Wing. 422p $4 Scribner

B or 92 Marx, Karl 47-3563

"A biography of Karl Marx, mostly based on the enormous Marx-Engels correspondence, along with a critique of Marx's 'Capital' and of the Marxian theory of value. Mr. Schwarzschild does not present a kindly portrait of his subject; he convicts Marx, by quoting him, of virulent anti-semitism, and makes him out to be a petty, dishonest, completely unscrupulous, and opportunistic man, a loose thinker, and a very bad prophet—in other words, the archetype of the totalitarian exponent of power who has become such a common figure in our time." (New Yorker) Index.

Booklist 43:346 Jl 1 '47

Reviewed by F. H. Underhill

Canadian Forum 27:139 S '47 750w

"The author is not objective, no more objective than was Marx. He has set out to debunk the man who devoted his life to debunking. And, because of that, his picture is not complete nor entirely fair. In places, it is too bright and hard and cold. But its details are not inaccurate. They are well documented." R. H. M.

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 27 '47 600w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Commonweal 46:266 Je 27 '47 850w

"A well-documented, decidedly unflattering biography of the 'proletarian dictator', Karl Marx, and a derogatory interpretation of his economic philosophy... This is an extensive work which sketches in the temper of the time but which belittles the man to a degree incongruous with his historical influence."

Kirkus 14:571 N 1 '46 160w

"Book will be more enjoyed by lovers of readable biography than by students looking for enlightenment on historical background and theory of Socialism." Recommended for public and college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 130w

"The entire volume is destructive. If it has any positive, constructive elements I have been unable to find them. Although this unpleasant book appears in the garb of learning, it has no more value than Ossendowski's pornographic biography of Lenin. If the tide of reaction has reached so deeply into our intellectual life that books like this one are written, published, read and probably widely praised and distributed, what can the critic who bases himself on science accomplish?" Frederic Wertham

— New Repub 116:27 Je 16 '47 1300w

"Few men who have made history have done it as much the hard way as Marx did. The most recent biography, by Leopold Schwarzschild does little to explain this. It is based on fuller material than earlier accounts of Marx's life, including the complete Soviet edition of the letters exchanged between Marx and Friedrich Engels, many of which had been suppressed or edited by German Marxists before 1917. These letters help to document what was already known of Marx's troubles with money, with political rivals, with family tragedies, with health, even with boils and carbuncles, but they leave as mysterious as ever the enormous influence this brilliant, stubborn, unreadable and almost friendless German scholar has had on a full century of European history." Joseph Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 18 '47 750w

"As there are so few generally accessible critical biographies of Marx and critical analyses of his work, Mr. Schwarzschild's book fulfills a useful and important function. Yet, few readers will lay it down without asking themselves the troubling question how it could happen that this apparently unbearable man and his apparently insufficient doctrine could influence the forces and the interpretation of history and society to the degree that they have done. Marxism has shown itself one of the creators of the modern world. No reader of Mr. Schwarzschild's book will gain a full understanding how that has come to be... Mr. Schwarzschild's book has a highly useful place because it explains decisive aspects of present-day communism by an analysis of corresponding traits of Marx' personality and work. Mr. Schwarzschild has apparently enjoyed his job; he has written with gusto, and this will enhance his book's readability and interest. But its iconoclastic zeal lacks the perspective which alone could make the great prophet's influence upon the crisis of our time comprehensible." Hans Kohn

N Y Times p4 My 25 '47 1250w

"In holding the Marxian economic theory up to a strong light, the author uncovers some grave flaws in it, which have been noted by other critics but rarely so sharply illuminated. An important and well-presented book."

+ New Yorker 23:116 My 17 '47 150w

"Mr. Schwarzschild deserves credit for recognizing the character of the present Soviet regime for what it is. He is free from all the illusions of the totalitarian liberals. But in implying that social democratic movements which have drawn their inspiration from Marx are necessarily committed to the Stalinist variety of totalitarianism because of the character of Marx's personality, he writes bad history." Sidney Hook

— Sat R of Lit 30:13 My 31 '47 1350w

Springf'd Union p11 J1 30 '47 360w

"Author Schwarzschild's biographical facts are true, as far as they go. But the Marx he presents is a man with his brain cut out. Hence the facts add up to a caricature. . . . Marx's mind was undoubtedly diabolic (history is studied with malign political geniuses). But it is no help in understanding or combating Marxism to deny its author's perverse brilliance."

— + Time 49:111 My 19 '47 1250w

SCHWEITZER, ALBERT. Anthology; ed. by Charles R. Joy. 323p $3.75 Harper

208.1 47-11732

"Over five hundred excerpts from twenty-two writings of Dr. Albert Schweitzer, edited by subject. Philosophy, theology, ethics, biography, music and medicine are all interpreted by 'the beauty of years well spent, a mind well stored, a spirit enriched and beautified by renunciation, dedication and a boundless loyalty to life.'" (Library J) Bibliography of books by Dr. Schweitzer. Indexes.

"It is not intended to replace Dr. Schweitzer's books, but will effectively introduce his philosophy of life to those not already acquainted with it. Because many of this great man's works are out of print the editor is to be commended for making available much that is now scattered and hidden." O. G. Lawson

+ Library J 72:1687 D 1 '47 110w

"Schweitzer's character and mind stand revealed in his writings, where they are embellished with no little literary skill. For this reason, Mr. Joy's cogently assembled 'Albert Schweitzer: An Anthology' probably is the best introduction to him." Herbert Kupferberg

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 D 7 '47 410w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p6 N 30 '47 400w

"This book, which contains a biographical sketch, is a good introduction to the man and his works; it provides enough examples of his thinking and world outlook to show that, whether or not he is the greatest man alive, he is a writer and philosopher of the very first order."

+ New Yorker 23:93 D 20 '47 110w

SCIANKY, LEON. Farewell to Salonica; portrait of an era. 241p $2.75 Current bks.

B or 92 Salonica 47-550

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:203 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:14 Ja '47

"In a sense, the author has two stories to tell: the first, considered more objectively and with a minimum of sentiment, might have made a warm-hearted little family chronicle; while the second, if expanded, could have been a first-rate job of historical correspondence. Combined, the two never quite jell." R. B. Gehman

+ — N Y Times p27 F 2 '47 320w

SCIENCE DIGEST (periodical). Reader. (Windsor Press publications) 310p $3 Pop. mechanics

508 Science 47-30223

"A selection of outstanding articles published in Science Digest during the past ten years." (Subtitle). Written in a popular style, including subjects ranging from atomic power, radar, and rocket trips to the moon, to health, neuroses, and how to reduce." Booklist

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47 80w

"Since the pseudo-sciences are supposed to have the most immediate 'human interest,' we must be grateful that there are any good sound pieces in the 'Reader.' . . . But there is altogether too much mischievous gibberish of the miracle drug and electronic brain type. The writers of this sort of thing think in exclamation points. They have no more to do with disseminating scientific knowledge than bookies have with improving the breed of horses." Donald Barr

— + N Y Times p18 Je 15 '47 450w

School & Society 65:253 Ap 5 '47 20w

SCLATER, WILLIAM. Haida; with an introd. by A. V. Alexander, and 24 drawings in colour by Grant Macdonald. 221p $5 Oxford

940.545 Haida (destroyer). World war, 1939-1945—Naval operations [47-24798]

"This is, in effect, the log of a Canadian destroyer. Lieut. Commander Sclater, who was one of her officers, begins his account the day she was launched in a shipyard in wartime England, and carries it through two years of very active duty until she and her crew sail out of the war, back to Canada for a long refit." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 3 '47 270w

"Commander Sclater is deeply absorbed in his subject, and very well-informed in all phases of it—the men, the ships, and the organization. He tells his story in a straightforward manner and with considerable quiet humor. As a log . . . the characterizations of particular individuals are very limited and conventional. But as an account of a ship and her crew operating as an active unit in one of the most stirring phases of the war, it is exciting and moving." Robert Cronbach

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 N 1 '47 450w

SCOGGIN, MARGARET CLARA, ed. Lure of danger; true adventure stories. 374p $3 Knopf

910.4 Adventure and adventurers 47-5026

Anthology composed of chapters of true adventures, taken from adult books. Among the subjects covered are deep-sea diving, mountain climbing, hunting dangerous animals, and flying. Partial contents: The terror of the deep, by H. W. Lanier and Victor Berge; The Laurentic yields her gold, by Edward Ellsberg; Escape artist and master magician, by Harold Kellock; On safari, by T. J. Waldeck; The cave of the bats, by I. T. Sanderson; Elephant, by Carl Akeley; Buying dynamite, by R. L. Ditmars; The great climb, by Edwin Muller, Jr; Summit of the world; the fight for Everest, by J. R. Ullman.

Booklist 44:19 S 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:445 N '47 70w

Kirkus 15:435 Ag 15 '47 80w

"Excellent format. Recommended." Clara Adams

+ Library J 72:1280 S 15 '47 60w

"Miss Scoggin's selections are not only exciting, they are also filled with nature lore by specialists in their field, the sort of tales to send one in search of more by the same writers." Howard Pease

+ N Y Times p33 S 14 '47 190w

"A good collection of true adventure stories, many of them told in the first person, about men who liked to do difficult things." R. C. Benét

+ New Yorker 23:156 D 6 '47 60w

"A fine collection based upon qualities that appeal to all young people."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:61 N 15 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:158 N '47

SCOTT, ERNEST FINDLAY. Man and society in the New Testament. 299p $2.75 Scribner
225.8301 Sociology, Biblical. Bible. New Testament 46-5934
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:180 F 15 '47

"The book is full of interesting and valuable interpretations of New Testament thought, and it moves easily and confidently through the Gospels and the Epistles. But, with all its qualities, it does not contribute greatly to the elucidation of the very difficult problem with which it is chiefly concerned; on the contrary, it adds to our confusion." F. W. Beare
J Religion 27:56 Ja '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p312 Je 21 '47
700w

"The book will invite supplementation from those who find traces of natural law in the New Testament, as well as from advocates of the 'social gospel.' The use of antiquated and inconsistent symbols for footnote references subtracts from typographical effectiveness."
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:33 Mr '47 220w

SCOTT, NATALIE ANDERSON (originally NATALIE B. SOKOLOFF). Story of Mrs. Murphy. 445p $3 Dutton

47-30362

Jimmy Murphy was "married to booze." He had no other wife, although three women had loved him: a neighbor girl, a wealthy matron, and an artist. Eventually they all found it impossible to live with his drunkenness and Jimmy died miserably in his early forties.

"The interplay, the sparks, the conflict and affection of this case history are best displayed in the relations between Rags and his Mom, but even here the feeling is dimmed by the author's flat prose and by the long tedium of Rags's deterioration. What alcoholism costs the American home is a story we should take to heart. But it must be better written than this." Edward Weeks

— Atlantic 180:121 Ag '47 300w

Booklist 43:360 J1 15 '47

"A stark, horrifying tale of Jimmy Murphy. To read it is a devastating experience. In its immensity of naturalistic detail, scope of action, and richness of character, it is easily the best book of its kind since publication three years ago of Charles Jackson's masterpiece. It lacks much of the introspective insight of 'The Lost Weekend,' it has some highly sentimentalized writing, lapses into gushiness and tearful prose, and often contains a certain mawkishness of phrasing. But its final, overall effect is impressive and terrifying." Herman Kogan

— Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Je 29 '47
1300w

"Moving and unpleasant book, by all odds the best of the novels dealing with alcoholism to come off the press since The Lost Weekend established a market and set a pattern, but a book that assuredly no one will read for pleasure."

Kirkus 15:260 My 15 '47 170w

"Engrossingly written with simplicity and compassion, [this book] is unforgettable and tragic. Somewhat like A Tree Grows in Brooklyn in quality, but without its hope. Will be widely read but not enjoyed." M. C. Manley
— Library J 72:961 Je 15 '47 80w

"Only in Miss Scott's eager acceptance of her weakening hero's beauty and charm does anything appear unbelievable about the manner in which a male drunk is studied, dissected and analyzed by a woman. Everything else that she has to tell us, including the unsensational handling of the matter of abnormal sex in the prison where Jimmy does time and the final scenes of his complete destruction as a human being, has the ring of understanding. Another virtue is that, although her material is sensational, sordid and so disagreeable that 'unpleasant' becomes a euphemism, there is never any suggestion that the author is striving for sensationalism. She is neither reticent nor unnecessarily rough in what she has to say, and the novel is unquestionably a sincere and artistically earnest effort to study a great social evil with rigorous compassion. I cannot see it as the American equivalent of Dostoevsky, as some of its advance enthusiasts have called it, although there is a frequent trace of Gorky to be found, but it is a realistic novel of power and credibility." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:24 Je 30 '47 1250w

"Mrs. Scott's Dostoevsky-like novel about a dipsomaniac should do much to convince a wide and still much too indifferent public that an uncontrollable appetite for alcohol is not a vice but an illness, and a symptom, far more than it is a cause, of the psychic maladjustment that afflicts its victims. . . . The major accomplishment of 'The Story of Mrs. Murphy' is, of course, its brilliant, almost psychiatrically clinical account of a sensitive, emotional, unstable fellow with all the ruthlessness to family and friends that goes with instability, pursuing his slow alcoholic course to complete disintegration. And along with Jimmy's story—vital to and completing it—Mrs. Scott gives us immensely effective portraits of the women who loved Jimmy and drew the protective veil of their tenderness over his exasperating ways. . . . Mrs. Scott's study is remorseless in its frankness, grotesquely ugly, emetically coarse in spots, because Jimmy's life was like that, and Mrs. Scott spares herself and you no pains in its presentation." F. H. Bullock
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Je 29 '47 600w

"The novel will, by its candor, offend some readers. But it is safe to predict that as many will be engrossed by its camera-like fidelity to a wide-spread psychotic phenomenon. . . . Unfortunately, the story . . . fails to come to life. The failure applies to Jimmy's type-trite family (a priest, a policeman, an overcredulous mother—the Mighty Lachrymose variety) as well as to the women in his life. None of these is convincingly drawn. . . . The artistic quarrel will reveal that the story is weak, that the central character is more externally than introspectively alive (what makes Jimmy thirst?), that the style is too often lacking in finish. Too many sentences suffer from what might be called clausal staggers. What shall one say of a nose like 'a little eagle's,' of lamps that shine 'opaque,' on an 'unconcealed' pleasure that is 'masqueraded?' . . . For all its faults, Miss Scott has written an absorbing book. No one, except the unfeeling sensationalist, will read it for pleasure. Few who read it are likely to forget it." Charles Lee

+ — N Y Times p5 Je 29 '47 1050w

"I don't remember ever having read a presumably serious book that came closer to being absolutely worthless, but I am inclined to think that this book has a certain value as a travesty, though hardly an intentional one, of 'Studs Lonigan,' 'A Tree Grows in Brooklyn,' and 'The Lost Weekend.'" Hamilton Basso

— New Yorker 23:78 Je 28 '47 950w

"The author gives Jimmy to you complete and in many ways with extraordinary skill, understanding the little things that make Jimmy actual and true. . . . All this the author does magnificently, with a fine sureness in conducting her Jimmy's downward progress straight to its inevitable end. You will find her treatment sympathetic, if clinical. Nowhere does she show anything but pity for the utterly lost character she is describing. On this ground her book does indeed approach the exceptional. . . . But on another ground I find myself—as other readers will find themselves—just plain bewildered at the badness of the book. This is the ground of just plain, ordinary competence in the decent use of the English language. For in this novel, otherwise so significant a performance, there is some of the worst writing it has ever been my fortune to encounter in any book of some pretensions to importance." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 Je 30 '47
950w

"It would have been achievement enough to have succeeded so thoroughly in the immensely difficult assignment of creating this charming heel, but Miss Scott has done more. Jimmy Murphy, besides being a brilliant individual characterization, is a type. In tracing his course, the author has thrown a searchlight into some of the darkest alley-ways of modern urban life, revealing without squeamishness a sordidness at which even most sophisticates have barely guessed. With her complete lack of the tendentiousness so characteristic of contemporary naturalist writers, no word of social comment escapes her. Nevertheless, 'The Story of Mrs. Murphy,' in addition to being a chef-d'oeuvre of fiction, is an important sociological document." M. B. Hexter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Je 28 '47 800w

Spring'd Union p4 Ag 23 '47 120w

Reviewed by Harry Hansen

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 50w

"A clumsy, cliché-sodden version of The Lost Weekend. The problem of the alcoholic in society is as grave as ever, but The Story of Mrs. Murphy swamps it with glycerine tears and marshmallow emotions. . . . Distinguished by nothing except low-grade prose and high-grade intentions, it is probably the worst novel of its kind since the days of T. S. (Ten Nights in a barroom) Arthur."

— Time 49:100 Je 30 '47 350w

"Mrs. Scott's novel is overlong, repetitious, and monotonous; but it is powerful and even absorbing in a gruesome way." Orville Prescott

+ — Yale R n s 37:189 autumn '47 230w

SCOTT, NEIL. Joe Louis; a picture story of his life [foreword by Frank Sinatra]. [126p] $2; pa $1 [Greenberg]

B or 92 Louis, Joe 47-5025

A picture story of Joe Louis' life, with chapters on his background, childhood, and rise to fame.

Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 N 30 '47 130w

"Mr. Louis one feels, deserves such a book and such a tribute. There's a satisfying, clean text by Mr. Scott, and a reticent page by Mr. Crosby's nearest rival, a Mr. Sinatra." H. B.

+ N Y Times p12 Jl 27 '47 150w

SCOTT, REGINALD THOMAS MAITLAND. Nameless ones. 254p $2.50 Dutton

47-3633

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 13 '47 70w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Je 22 '47 90w

"A novel of the old school and as enjoyable as anything since Hanshew and Rohmer, from its concepts of the reality of dream life to its agreement with Montague Summer's linkage between Black Magic and Communism." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Je 22 '47 100w

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 5 '47 40w

SCOTT, SALLY. Mr Doodle; il. by Beth Krush. 46p $1.75 Harcourt

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-30513

Story of a charming cocker puppy who tried so hard to understand the ways of humans, and was hopelessly confused until he was given to a loving, understanding little boy named Peter.

Booklist 44:54 O 1 '47

Reviewed by F. C. Darling

Christian Science Monitor p4 S 9 '47 110w

Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 20w

Kirkus 15:428 Ag 15 '47 90w

"There is a clarity and simplicity of style which will make this story a wise choice for the seven- and eight-year-old readers. . . . Recommended." Elizabeth Sussdorff

+ Library J 72:1198 S 1 '47 80w

"I hope some older folks read this pretty little book. It may give them ideas on training children to be well mannered." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 S 14 '47 250w

"Affectionately observed and well-written narrative for readers aged 6 to 8. The excellent black-and-white drawings are by Beth Krush."

+ N Y Times p27 Ag 24 '47 140w

Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 40w

Spring'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 60w

Wis Lib Bul 43:134 O '47

SCOTT, THOMAS JEFFERSON. Sing of America; folk tunes collected and arranged; text by Joy Scott; wood engravings by Bernard Brussel-Smith. 82p $4 Crowell

784.4 Folk songs, American 47-4885

A collection of thirty-five of our popular American folksongs, with piano accompaniments, a few words of introduction for each, and illustrated with woodcuts. The compiler is a Kentucky ballad singer, and composer; and his wife, who wrote the introductions, has taught school in the Kentucky hill country.

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

"This collection is representative and interesting. It is for the whole family. There is something here for all tastes and ages." R. M. H.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Jl 26 '47 750w

"The piano accompaniments are not at all difficult yet they are sufficiently spicy to be interesting. Joy Scott's running comment and Bernard Brussel-Smith's wood engravings help to make this an attractive book." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 72:1036 Jl '47 130w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 N 23 '47 150w

"A pleasant book. . . Mr. Scott's collection is on the polite, well-groomed side; it is slanted toward the children. Dialect has its hair trimmed: Billy Boy's gal bakes her pie 'quick as a cat can wink its eye,' not 'quicker'n.'" Horace Reynolds

+ N Y Times p22 Jl 27 '47 550w

"Neither Mr. Scott nor his publisher intends this as anything but a group of selections; the definitive work on American folk-song would be something else entirely, and for that matter probably couldn't be contained in a single volume. For what it is, then, 'Sing of America' is well selected and designed with exceptional taste. Maybe the publisher would do well to call it the first of a series—if it goes over well enough. Such a series might develop into something important as well as good entertainment." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Jl 7 '47 500w

"This handsome volume is another in the rapidly-increasing collections of folk-music in the United States. As such it deserves the attention of all students and teachers interested in the heritage of American expression." W. G. Tyrrell

+ Social Studies 33:276 O '47 330w

Reviewed by Victor Prael

Spring'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 140w

SCOTT, VIRGIL JOSEPH. The dead tree gives no shelter. 248p $2.75 Morrow

47-30710

Fictionized case history of a juvenile delinquent. There is no explanation of Mike Brandon's tendency to evil; his background was respectable; his father a teacher; but by the time he was seventeen he was wanted by the police. Numbers rackets, bootlegging, women, and finally murder Mike took in his stride, but when he betrayed a woman he had loved, his toughness cracked. At twenty-one Mike writes his story before committing suicide.

SCOTT, V. J.—Continued

"It is a hard, brutal narrative savagely and powerfully told, of the Cain-Weldman-O'Hara school of contemporary naturalism. . . This is a first novel, and a very promising one, tightly constructed, swiftly paced, and skillfully told. Scott has a bright future as a novelist if his subsequent books measure up to this standard." R. B. Nye

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 S 7 '47 240w

Kirkus 15:344 J1 1 '47 120w

"Strong and sordid. . . Despite forced overplotting, Mr. Scott's challenge to society is tangible and provocative. He writes with power and has turned in a creditable piece of work." Jack Glick

+ N Y Times p21 S 7 '47 240w

"Mr. Scott is a competent story teller, but the story is an old one, and there's not much to explain Mike Brandon; there's mostly a lot of tough talk and Humphrey Bogart-type action. I hope Mr. Scott will write another book, but I hope he'll work a little harder on it." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 30:18 Ag 30 '47 230w

SCUDDER, TOWNSEND. Concord: American town. 421p $5 Little

974.44 Concord, Massachusetts—History 47-2755

History of three hundred years of an American town: Concord, Massachusetts, based on all sources available from the files of the local newspapers and the minutes of the town meetings, to unpublished diaries, muster rolls, sermons, and letters. In portraying the life of one American center the author has produced in microcosm a history of the people of these United States, from Colonial days to World war II. Index.

"The book is neither sociological, psychological, nor philosophical. But if what the historian wishes to do is to capture the personality, the known personal experience of a community, Mr. Scudder has shown how it can be done." H. S. Canby

+ Am Hist R 53:191 O '47 400w

Booklist 43:288 My 15 '47

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47 370w

"The prose style which made Mr. Scudder's 'Jane Welsh Carlyle' a delight to read helps him in this lengthy task. It is alive, spare, able to carry a multiplicity of detail without fatigue. Humor spells the load occasionally. His ability to select gives us the cream of his research, without drowning us in the milk. His interest in action makes some of the chapters crackle." T. M. Longstreth

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 19 '47 1000w

"The latter part of the book is so much less satisfactory than the first half, which succeeds so well in bringing home to the reader the human meaning of history. Aside from an overemphasis on military history which may be assigned to the preoccupations of earlier historians and to the period in which this book was written, this is an admirable account of the American tradition which anyone interested in our past should enjoy." Mason Wade

+ Commonweal 46:291 J1 4 '47 200w

Current Hist 13:34 J1 '47 30w

Kirkus 15:205 Ap 1 '47 190w

"A skillfully constructed and often moving book; a profitable acquisition for a library of any size." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:637 Ap 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. H. Kettell

+ New Eng Q 20:419 S '47 700w

"The book is much more than a sound piece of scholarship; it is an absorbing and heartening narrative of the practical working of American democracy." De Lancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ap 20 '47 950w

"Mr. Scudder's volume is skillfully, carefully, meticulously woven. . . He does not speak as a historian who gives his own version and then illustrates it with citations, but rather he takes over his sources and refashions them into a new fabric by delicate paraphrase. His method is substantially that which Van Wyck Brooks has lately made extensively popular. It is a technique designed, no doubt, to escape the pedantry of quotation and footnoting, to present history so that it can actually be read by persons who are not themselves scholars but who are prepared to be interested if the history is made interesting." Perry Miller

+ N Y Times p6 Ap 20 '47 1200w

"For his general plan and its fulfillment Mr. Scudder merits hearty praise. He has a keen eye for the significant detail; an apt pen for the shrewd and often humorous phrase." Dixon Wecter

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 My 17 '47 1300w

"This story has been dug from the town and church records, from family and personal histories, and many other sources. Its author has accomplished one of the most difficult tasks of the social historian, to concentrate his research upon a small area and at the same time make the facts live on a larger stage."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:282 S '47 280w

Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

SEAGLE, WILLIAM. Men of law, from Hamurabi to Holmes. 391p $5 Macmillan

923.4 Law—History and criticism. Lawyers 47-31211

"Beginning with legal giants such as Hamurabi, Solon and Gaius this work leads us over Grotius, Coke and Blackstone to Marshall, Jhering and Holmes (to list the most important). Each 'man of law' is representative of an idea and of a society, and author succeeds in weaving each man and his time into a colorful setting." Library J

Booklist 44:107 N 15 '47

"The author is an assistant solicitor in the Department of Interior. 'Men of Law' will be interesting to every alert citizen. It justifies room especially on the bookshelves of those concerned with the panorama of social change and reform." Earnest Hodess

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 28 '47 360w

Reviewed by W. W. Garrison

Christian Century 64:1455 N 26 '47 600w

"Warm, human lives as well as popular legal history."

+ Kirkus 15:269 My 15 '47 260w

"Lively style, nontechnical language, combined with real insight into historical and social background make the reading of this book as much a pleasure as a source of information for educated laymen. Recommended for public and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

+ Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 110w

"Mr. Seagle's short history of law is written in the form of a series of biographical sketches, each describing a commanding legal personality at work amid the social and economic forces of his time. Few subjects are harder to popularize than jurisprudence, yet Mr. Seagle (himself a lawyer now in Government employ) has made the wordiest and murkiest of sciences not only intelligible to the lay reader, but even intellectually attractive." E. B. Garside

N Y Times p32 O 19 '47 650w

School & Society 66:351 N 1 '47 30w

SEAMAN, MRS AUGUSTA (HUIELL). Mystery of the other house. 211p $2 Doubleday

47-3748

Mystery story for girls. The setting is New York city in 1870.

"The glamor of mysterious scions of France's noble houses in hiding may still have appeal for today's children, but Miss Seaman assumes too much background knowledge for the average young American who knows little of sides and issues."

Kirkus 15:190 Ap 1 '47 130w

"Recommended for girls 10-13 who are mystery fans." D. M. MacDonald
+ Library J 72:1040 Jl '47 70w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:154 D 6 '47 50w

SEAMAN, LOUISE HUNTING (MRS EDWARD BECHTEL). Mr Peck's pets; il. by Berta and Elmer Hader. 95p $2 Macmillan 47-30651

Mr and Mrs Peck loved animals of all kinds, or at least Mr Peck loved and Mrs Peck acquiesced. The book describes in pictures and text the habits of the many birds and animals acquired by the Pecks.

"A good book to read aloud to older children and adults who will appreciate the humor of the situation." A. C. Moore

+ Horn Bk 23:347 S '47 90w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:363 S '47 80w

"There's lots of scattered entertainment value, but there's looseness of construction, unevenness of interest, and a resultant lack of holding quality that is disappointing."

— + Kirkus 15:365 Jl 15 '47 120w

"The abundance of detail concerning town and country pets . . . could well have been more sparingly used for greater clarity and charm. The parade of pets is well illustrated by Berta and Elmer Hader." Elizabeth Sussdorff
+ — Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 70w

"The book, full of fun, goes from one pet to another, its incidents told with quiet enjoyment of each as an individual, practically a person. People can seldom write about their own pets so successfully, but they can recognize their ways and their waywardnesses in this story. In the same loving spirit, the Haders made the pictures." M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 16 '47 360w

"Though there are no children in this unusual animal story, boys and girls of 6 to 10 will enjoy it because Mr. and Mrs. Peck are just the kind of people they would like their parents to be. Every child will understand why Mr. Peck finds animals irresistible and will echo his sentiments when he says, 'What a comfort creatures are!'" Elizabeth Hodges
+ N Y Times p35 S 7 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:146 D 6 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. E. Hawk
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '47 90w

Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 230w

SEARS, JESSE BRUNDAGE. Public school administration. 433p $4.50 Ronald 379.73 School administration and organization 47-4876

Textbook on school administration which is intended as a general reference work. "The reader will identify three unique features of this book which are particularly useful. One feature is the chapter in which the author describes the organization, purposes, and activities of the major professional associations in which administrators have a direct interest. . . The second feature is the inclusion of background material from the areas of history, philosophy, sociology, and psychology. The third, and most significant, feature is the emphasis on reference material throughout the book. It is probable that the topical bibliographies which are included in each chapter represent, in the aggregate, one of the most complete and selective bibliographies on administration available in a single volume." (School R) Bibliographies. Indexes.

School & Society 66:351 N 1 '47 20w

"It is a tribute to his leadership in the field that so useful and challenging a contribution as Dr. Sears has produced in this new book has been written by one who, during his long service to the profession, has witnessed most of the changes he discusses. . . The absence of illustrative or pictorial material is to be noted but not necessarily deplored. The merits of the book are immediately obvious, and it should become a popular and well-appreciated volume." R. H. Anderson

+ School R 55:558 N '47 900w

SEASHORE, CARL EMIL. In search of beauty in music; a scientific approach to musical esthetics. 389p il $4.50 Ronald

780.1 Music—Philosophy and esthetics. Music—Psychology 47-3744

"Presenting a picture of the general status of the University of Iowa's program in the field of the psychology of music." (U S Quarterly Bkl) "This volume is designed as an introduction to the science of music for advanced students of music and psychology, music teachers, educators, professional musicians, and general readers interested in the scientific approach to the understanding and appreciation of beauty in music. It is an attempt to integrate by interpretive and popular articles on research in the psychology of music which have more or less direct bearing on the problem of esthetics." (Pref) Index.

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 10w

Social Studies 38:336 N '47 20w

Theatre Arts 32:68 Ja '48 30w

"Since all the articles have been published before, in whole or in part, in journals, the resulting compendium is repetitious on the one hand, and inconsistent in style of approach and in thinking on the other. . . Students of the psychology of music, some teachers and professional musicians, and relatively few general readers will find this book of value and interest. Only a later generation can decide whether the Iowa studies, as represented in this volume, are leading toward an integrated musical esthetic, or are leading in an opposing direction."

— + U S Quarterly Bkl 3:230 S '47 240w

SEAUER, EDWIN, ed. Cross section, 1947; a collection of new American writing. (V3) 516p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

810.8 American literature—Collections. Short stories—Collections. American poetry—Collections

"A collection of fifty-odd new stories, novellettes, excerpts from unpublished novels, and poems, chosen from more than seven thousand manuscripts." (New Yorker) Brief notes on contributors.

Reviewed by Jack Conroy

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 26 '47 400w

"The selections, for the most part, reveal literary incompetence as well as emotional and intellectual immaturity. Some of the better stories, given experienced polishing, might look well in a pulp magazine. They have the same fascination with brutality and inverted sentimentality, the same hair-raising situations—a bank robbery and the escape, for example, or a young boatman's lone struggle with an oppressive 'Fisherman's Association.' Others, in their jejune pretense to shocking realism, might have attracted favor in 1919; now they seem only to be pallid imitations of the early Hemingway or Dos Passos. . . Of the verse, one can only say that no two readers are likely to misunderstand it in quite the same way." D. S.

— Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 10 '47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

"There's humanity shorn of tenderness, lacking the emotional pull that leaves its mark. In form, many of the stories have an episodic quality, as if drawn from context—an incident

SEAVER, EDWIN—Continued
vignetted, lacking roundness, fullness. Possibly this is the new school. Possibly growth will bring the fullness this growing pain period lacks. Interesting as a phase of literary history."

Kirkus 14:556 N 1 '46 170w

"This is not a volume to send your Aunt Cynthia for her birthday. Nor is it a volume you would read yourself straight through. But if you are interested in what American literature will be like tomorrow, it is certain you will find at least some of its authors here." Kenneth Fearing

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ja 12 '47 950w

"Looking at Mr. Seaver's anthology as an outsider without benefit of his intensive experience, it does seem definitely superior, just as he suggests, to others of recent issue. The poetic fragments scattered at intervals throughout the volume, however, are the most feeble squeaks imaginable; and one can only imagine that Mr. Seaver included them merely in order to enhance the décor of the book. But the short stories are all expertly written and in some instances display unmistakable virtuosity. . . Hamlen Hunt's 'One Heart in Cambridge' is a meticulously conceived story and scores through sheer technical excellence, likewise Teo Savory's 'Eat Dusty Bread.' And by far the most startling thing in the anthology is Terry Morris' 'Stalies,' which handles with exactly the right amount of reticence an adolescent tragedy that is a commonplace in psychiatric literature, but ordinarily taboo in polite publications." E. B. Garside

+ — N Y Times p5 Ja 19 '47 800w

"It is easily the best of this series. Only a few of the writers, such as Ann Petry, William March, and Meridel LeSueur, are at all well known, and a majority are young. Violence, cruelty, and futility seem to be their favorite themes, and flatness and pointlessness are the stories' principal faults. However, this collection, unlike others that specialize in untried talents, contains very little subjective preciousity and, fortunately, no 'laboratory' work at all."

New Yorker 22:94 Ja 18 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 8 '47
600w

"None of these stories resembles the familiar episodic and plotless anecdotes so common to the 'little' magazines. Mr. Seaver has found young and new writers who have learned how to create a complete and rounded story that has both a satisfactory beginning and an end. . . Nevertheless, Mr. Seaver is right in his soundly written preface in viewing with alarm the success and sudden wealth of what he calls 'the smart boys in the smart money, the cake and penny writers who want their compromise and their integrity, too.'" Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Ja 18 '47 1100w

Springf'd Union p4 Je 4 '47 90w

SEAVER, GEORGE. Albert Schweitzer: the man and his mind. 346p il $3.75 Harper

B or 92 Schweitzer, Albert 47-11620

A biography of one "of the great Christian leaders of this generation. Few men in history have had outstanding abilities in so many different fields as Albert Schweitzer. He is one of the leading authorities on the music of Bach; he is a great organist and student of organ music; he is an historian, philosopher, theologian and physician. In all of these various fields he has earned for himself honor and distinction. But he is best known for his medical missionary work in the heart of Africa to which he has brought his extraordinary medical ability and a great passion for the underprivileged among men. This book tells not only the story of Dr. Schweitzer's life, but gives a clear picture of this remarkable personality. In addition it covers his major contributions through his published works to the various fields to which he has given himself." (Kirkus) Index.

Booklist 44:133 D 1 '47

"Staidly written, the biographical sections lack the vitality of Schweitzer and in no way reflect him either as a personality or as one of Protestantism's greatest forces in modern times. Nevertheless this is a book to read, particularly as a companion piece to the current anthology of Schweitzer's writing." J. O. Supple

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p14A D 3 '47
350w

"A comprehensive and definitive account. . . This is a book which should have a wide reading public."

+ Kirkus 15:672 D 1 '47 180w

"The author has first-hand knowledge of the circumstances in which Schweitzer's great work as a medical missionary has been done. He also has unbounded admiration and reverence for his subject. He tells his story well and makes full use of the autobiographical material that is available. The book is admirably illustrated, and text and illustrations together give a singularly vivid picture of the spirit and power of Christ in action in a life wholly devoted to Him." T. W. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 20 '47 150w

Reviewed by Herbert Kupferberg

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
D 7 '47 410w

Reviewed by James Stern

N Y Times p6 N 30 '47 400w

"Mr. Seaver is frank in facing Schweitzer's fundamental intellectual agnosticism with its accompanying pessimism, and he is a lucid guide to the intricacies of Schweitzer's mind. But above all—and for this every reader will be grateful to him—he displays the modesty and majesty of a man who in his African wilderness is a challenge and inspiration to this generation in much the same manner as David Livingstone was to a previous one." Cecil Northcott

+ Spec 179:662 N 21 '47 750w

"George Seaver has written a broadly conceived and thoughtfully documented life of the renowned and beloved Alsatian, Albert Schweitzer." K. N. Rhoades

Survey G 37:31 Ja '48 360w

SEDGES, JOHN, pseud. Angry wife. 243p $2.75 Day

47-31212

Novel based on racial problems in the South in the years following the Civil war. It is the story of two brothers, one sternly determined to carry on in the way of his aristocratic ancestors; the other, who had fought with the Northern troops, determined to marry the beautiful mulatto with whom he was in love. The problems of the two are carried down to the second generation.

Booklist 44:70 O 15 '47

"Perhaps not as exciting a discovery as John Sedges' earlier book, The Townsman, but absorbingly interesting and very different, showing that this writer cannot be pigeonholed."

+ Kirkus 15:515 S 15 '47 160w

"A good novel. Recommended." Helen Peerless

+ Library J 72:1270 S 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by J. M. Morse

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
N 23 '47 450w

"Critical readers may well feel that Tom's actions and Pierce's doubts are a bit premature, that the writer has pushed both far ahead of their time. . . All the characters have a storybook flavor. They read like characters invented by someone who didn't know time, place and people well enough to avoid cliché in all three. . . Social standards change; this novel reminds us of that. It also calls attention to the historical tensions of our racial problems as possible themes for fiction. It does little more. The largeness of its theme only emphasizes the superficiality of its treatment." Horace Reynolds

+ — N Y Times p14 S 28 '47 650w

SEDGWICK, ELLERY, comp. Atlantic harvest. See Atlantic monthly (periodical)

SEDGWICK, HENRY DWIGHT. Horace; a biography. 182p $3 Harvard univ. press
B or 92 Horace (Quintus Horatius Flaccus)
47-30742

"Mr. Sedgwick in this short book presents Horace as he appears in his poems. He quotes him copiously both in Latin and in English. He gives us, besides, a good deal of the historical background and conscientiously sets forth not only the subject matter of the separate satires, epodes, epistles and odes—at least of a great many of them—but even lists Horace's wines and his ladies. Since wine and women played a large part in the poet's life, the list is something more than informative." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 28 '47
30w

"Mr. Sedgwick's book gives us a real understanding of a figure in Western literature which has captivated the imagination of twenty centuries. . . . [Horace] was more than an artist, after all. The world owes much to the freedman's son who moved among the great without servility and criticized life and literature without pedantry. And we owe much to Mr. Sedgwick for reminding us that Horace was also that sort of person." Max Radin
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
S 28 '47 1050w

Reviewed by E. T. Booth
Sat R of Lit 30:15 O 4 '47 330w

SEEGER, ELIZABETH. Pageant of Chinese history; II. by Bernard Watkins. 3d ed 414p $3.50 Longmans
951 China—History 47-30160

"First published in 1934, the last chapter has been revised a second time bringing it up to date in the rapid change of events. An index has also been included. Written for young people, this colorful story of a great nation covers the period from 3000 B.C. to the defeat of Japan." (School & Society) For earlier editions see Book Review Digest 1934, 1944, Index.

Booklist 43:229 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:223 My '47 20w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
My 11 '47 50w

Sat R of Lit 30:37 Ap 19 '47 20w

School & Society 65:127 F 15 '47 60w

SEELEY, MRS MABEL. Woman of property. 399p $3 Doubleday
47-31025

Character study of a female go-getter. Frieda was shrewd and ambitious; she wanted money and position to compensate for the bitterness of her youth in a poor home tyrannized over by a brutal father. After four marriages and much double dealing she managed to get what she wanted, but her sins found her out and she lost that which she wanted most. The scene is the midwestern United States in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Booklist 44:90 N 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 28 '47
700w

"Well-done, but the reader has no glimmer of sympathy for the central character, and, for me at least, there's need for some measure of understanding if there's to be any joy in the reading."

Kirkus 15:374 JI 15 '47 210w

"Well-written, interesting story that should be a best-seller. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1195 S 1 '47 70w

"Mabel Seeley, author of four excellent mystery stories, has taken a wholly different tack in this long and carefully worked out character study of a self-made small-town woman. . . . You won't like Frieda—no one could—but she and her scrambling have an undeniable fascination. As a study in character and a picture of a midwestern small town in the decades just before and after the turn of the century, 'Woman of Property' has strength and distinction." Mary Ross

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
S 21 '47 550w

"The story of a pretty, ambitious, underprivileged girl and her attempt to better herself is probably the most worn (and most often bungled) in American popular fiction. Under the influence of Hollywood it has become even more hackneyed, even more grotesque. False values, impossible situations, romantic and sentimental absurdities mark most of these efforts. However, the reader of 'Woman of Property' will find little evidence of such creaking ineptitudes in Mrs. Seeley's honest portrait of a woman and an era." N. K. Burger
+ N Y Times p5 S 21 '47 750w

"A long, sturdy book that sputters a good deal in places but never really takes fire. The author, though, seems to have the feeling that her heroine's career is a microcosm of the American society of the time."

+ New Yorker 23:101 S 20 '47 120w

"Mrs. Seeley has written a brilliant and compelling novel about a woman who must be accorded a grudging admiration by the reader. The reader will feel little or no affection for Frieda Schlempeke but it is to be hoped that he will feel sympathy. Frieda deserves that much. For Frieda's malady is humanity's malady. . . . 'Woman of Property' is to be regarded as a mature work of art, a serious novel concerned with a serious question. Mrs. Seeley has done a deft and beautiful job. Frieda Schlempeke may not be an attractive heroine but she is certainly an engrossing one." Guy Patrick

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 5 '47
700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

SEIBERT, EDWARD CLEVER. How to design small sailboats [il. with drawings by the author]. 69p $3 Dodd

623.822 Boat building. Sailing vessels

47-3210

"In this little treatise I have endeavored to present a guide whereby the proponent of the modest centerboard boat can design, completely and properly, his own boat. I have covered the design of not only the straightaway centerboarder, but that of the combination keel-and-centerboard boat—the 'compromise' type, as well, and have touched briefly on keel boats. . . . I have not gone into the matter of design at any unnecessarily great theoretical lengths, but effort has been made to develop a procedure on a reasonable and convincing basis." Foreword

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:816 My 15 '47 30w

"Mr. Seibert certainly has made the designing of a centerboard craft considerably more understandable than is usual in such presentations. His illustrations have been worked out carefully. For the small-boat enthusiast who has always wanted to try his hand at designing his own personal 'dream boat,' this book may be the answer to his problem." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p12 Je 29 '47 110w

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH (MRS JOHN GASPAROTTI). So young, so fair. 273p $2.50 Dodd 47-2362

Novel about the return to civilian life of a pretty, young physiotherapist, who had spent two years in an English reconstruction hospital. Returning to her snobbish, suburban St Louis family, Rosalind feared she would have to live down her family's tendency to put her on a pedestal. To her chagrin her problem was of an entirely different type. The doctor who had headed her unit in England, and to whom Rosalind was engaged, was the one who solved her difficulty.

Booklist 43:348 JI 1 '47

SEIFERT, ELIZABETH—Continued

"The idea has a wealth of fictional possibilities, and Miss Seifert does not lack the skill to develop them, but she has chosen a less arduous course—conflict with neighbors who are suspicious of the doctor's project, the antagonistic attitude of the girl's family and the routine complications of romance. 'So Young, So Fair' has the substance its title indicates and measures up to its light requirements, but the author had the foundation for a more searching and dramatically developed story." Lisle Bell

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21
Ap 27 '47 140w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p26 Ap 27 '47 180w

SEIGNOBOSC, FRANCOISE (FRANCOISE, pseud.) Thank-you book, by Francoise [il by the author] $2 Scribner

47-30948

"This is an objective lesson in politeness, with emphasis on the wonders of a child's world, the crowing rooster and the sun, the flowers and the birds, the Easter Bunny, Santa Claus. Each is acknowledged by Francoise, and with good reason." N Y Times

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

"This is a lovely little book, well designed." Commonweal 47:150 N 21 '47 30w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:439 N '47 80w

"A beguiling looking book. . . The conception seems a trifle on the moral side, but it is simply done."

Kirkus 15:500 S 15 '47 70w

"It seems a little coy, but I doubt that anyone will mind." Mary Strang
Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 60w

"Her illustrations, spattered with color, contain a paucity of lines but enough detail and humor to make them as pretty and inviting as a birthday cake. But aside from its visual appeal, the book subtly encourages a sense of appreciation—the natural source of courtesy and gratitude. It makes a fine addition to the nursery book collection." Lillian Gerard
+ N Y Times p4 N 16 '47 150w

"A lovely picture book for very small children."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 30w

SELDEN, ELIZABETH S., comp. Book of friendship; an international anthology. 496p $3 Houghton

808.81 Poetry—Collections. Friendship
47-30132

"A dozen national literatures are drawn upon for the materials of this anthology of poems on friendship from ancient times to the present day. But it is not a random or sentimental collection. The hundred-page introduction gives a thoughtful analysis and exposition of the theme, and the sections of the anthology correspond approximately to the points in the analysis. The whole thus becomes an extended 'essay on friendship' with documentation from the poetry of the ages." (Christian Century) Indexes.

Booklist 43:202 Mr 1 '47

Bookmark 8:9 My '47

"It is a rich collection of the best, and the publishers have made it into a compact volume which woos the hand and eye."
+ Christian Century 64:337 Mr 12 '47 130w

"Unusual and lovely." M. L. E.

+ Churchman 161:17 Ap 15 '47 30w

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Kirkus 14:587 N 15 '46 100w

"In scope, diversity and complete freedom from the perfunctory this is an anthology that deserves to be treasured and will be."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ap 13 '47 400w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 27 '47
20w

Wis Lib Bul 43:115 Jl '47

SELDEN, SAMUEL. First steps in acting. 344p $3.25 Crofts

792 Acting 47-1885

Outlines the basic principles of acting. The author stresses technique, at the same time making it clear that the actor must see and feel what he is trying to portray. Partial contents: Building the stage image; Dramatic pantomime; Dramatic speech. Contains exercises designed to show the value of both pantomime and vocal phases. No index.

Bookmark 8:8 My '47

"Excellent basic book for the young college actor which is soundly written by the head of the Carolina Playmakers. Recommended for college and high school libraries where there is dramatic interest." George Freedley

+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 20w

"Directors and teachers of dramatics who use his book as a text will find it helpful, well-reasoned and explicit, as well as easily related to the exercises and the examples of dramatic writing which supplement the manual." E. J. R. Isaacs

+ N Y Times p16 My 18 '47 330w

Theatre Arts 31:11 Jl '47 60w

SELDEN, SAMUEL. Introduction to playwriting. 120p $2 Crofts

808.2 Drama—Technique 47-563

"The chief purpose of [this book] is to help clear ground, and then to provide a series of simple checks for the first efforts of the beginning playwright. Therefore, everything stated in these pages will be regarded as tentative. As soon as the writer devises his own methods, he will be expected to lay this book aside." Prologue

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

"Selden has written a very pertinent little handbook for the practicing student playwright. It lacks the impressiveness and completeness of Lajos Egri's outstanding volume, but Selden has set narrower limits. Recommended for university and large public libraries." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1541 N 1 '46 90w

"Quietly intelligent primer . . . Mr. Selden lays no claim to a mystic formula that can be converted into smash hits but deals with the main time-tested principles and allows room for the experimentation and originality with which the theatre must refresh itself."

+ Theatre Arts 31:11 Jl '47 140w

SELF, MRS MARGARET CABELL. Horseman's encyclopedia. (Sportsman's lib) 519p il $5 Barnes, A.S.

798.03 Horses Agr47-86

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"An analytical index, together with plentiful cross references in the text and running heads makes the book useful as a quick reference tool. However, inconsistencies occasionally appear in the form of entries and in the cross references. . . Of more importance is the fact that certain errors can be found in the factual information. The statistics are not always consistent with those given in other sources. . . The bibliography is not 'exhaustive' as described in the publisher's advertising, but as the author states, is made up of 'source materials used in obtaining the facts in this encyclopedia.' The photographs of horses are well posed, and there are some excellent action shots. . . Because The Horseman's Encyclopedia makes easily accessible in one place authoritative information pertaining to horses, it is recommended both for libraries and for homes of horse lovers."

+ — Subscription Bks Bul 18:16 Ap '47 550w

SELIGMAN, ADRIAN. Voyage of the Cap Pilar; il. with ninety photographs and thirteen maps. 360p $4.75 Dutton

910.4 Voyages around the world 47-3900

An account of a 32,500 trip around the world in a 295 ton barkentine, made by the author, his young wife, and later their baby daughter, and a crew of adventurous souls, some of whom were on a paying basis, others not. The book was first published in England in 1939.

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by E. S. Watson

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 J1 27 '47
360w

"This is a salty travel adventure, written informally in the spirit of youth, with emphasis on the human side of the experience. It is a trip which many can enjoy through reading but that only a few will ever take. Well illustrated. Recommended." H. A. Wooster

+ Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 100w

"The Cap Pilar seems to have been a happy ship and those clashes of personality which have disrupted other long amateur voyages were absent or quickly smoothed over. The general reader will be happy to know that most details of nautical technique have been omitted, and the book can be read with enjoyment as a travel story." Edward Schriffgieser

+ N Y Times p18 J1 20 '47 140w

"An exhilarating book. It may well be one of the last of its kind, for as the author says, the days of vagabonding from port to port are about over."

+ New Yorker 23:68 J1 12 '47 80w

+ Time 49:100 Je 30 '47 500w

SELMAN, ROBERT. Once upon a crime. 246p $2.50 Morrow

47-31073

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p35 O 17 '47
80w

Kirkus 15:482 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
O 12 '47 70w

"The story has plenty of rapid-fire action, but the racket with which it deals is described too vaguely to be convincing." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p28 S 28 '47 200w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 28 '47
70w

"Lively."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 S 20 '47 50w

SELSAM, MILLICENT (ELLIS). Hidden animals; pictures by David Shapiro. [32p] $1 int. pubs.

591.57 Zoology—Juvenile literature 47-4649

In this book for young readers, author and artist show how Nature protects some animals, fishes and insects, by various ways of camouflage.

"The value of these color pictures would be lost by black-and white reproduction, but if you see one you go straight through the book. It utilizes the allure of the picture puzzle but does not sacrifice natural history to it." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ap
27 '47 220w

"Millicent Selsam supplies the scientific explanation in terms suited to young scientists. With well-chosen questions, she also encourages them to think through to some of the answers for themselves. This is an excellent gift for children at camp and also for those at home, for examples of camouflaging in nature can be found everywhere." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p25 Ag 10 '47 180w

SELTAM, WILLIAM HENRY, comp. Metropolitan opera annals; a chronicle of artists and performances; with an introd. by Edward Johnson [pub] in association with the Metropolitan opera guild, incorporated. 751p il $7 Wilson, H.W.

782 Metropolitan opera company 47-11435

A compilation of the vital statistics of all the operas performed at the Metropolitan opera house from its opening in 1883 to the close of the 1946-47 season. Contains lists of casts, including recastings and last minute substitutions; contemporary reviews; photographs of singers, usually in debuts or celebrated roles; a list of illustrations; and index.

"Of the new music books of the year, not least interesting and valuable is 'Metropolitan Opera Annals.' . . The work is made more notable by the inclusion of newspaper reviews, at the end of each season, of novelties, or of the new singers who appeared in the operas." Felix Borowski

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p14 N 9 '47
750w

"Indispensable for all music libraries." P. L. Miller

+ Library J 72:1613 N 15 '47 130w

"The arrangement of data is simple and consistent. . . Occasionally, an interesting note is interpolated by the compiler, and through this device we learn of accidents, indispositions, and substitutions. The record of each season ends with a selection of contemporary press reviews emphasizing the season's highlights. The book closes with the indispensable index wherein the reader can look up performers, conductors, operas, and even critics to his heart's content. Unfortunately, the book also has faults, and some of these are hard to understand in view of the long experience in reference publications of the H. W. Wilson Company. Believe it or not, there is neither an index nor list of composers. . . [However] every library in the country should certainly have this book." E. N. Waters

Musical Lib Assn Notes 5:97 D '47 700w

"There are more than a hundred photographs and a handy and intelligent index. For the workers in the field this volume will be a horn of plenty; for the music lover it will be an album of remembrance and reminiscence." T. L.

+ N Y Times p16 N 30 '47 160w

Theatre Arts 32:69 Ja '48 70w

SEMPER, ISIDORE JOSEPH. Hamlet without tears. 107p $1.50 Loras college press

822.33 Shakespeare, William—Hamlet.
Shakespeare, William—Religion and ethics
47-152

"In the papers that make up this book the writer argues that there is a formula that will explain Hamlet. The basic assumptions of this formula are that the main issues of the play are theological, and that Shakespeare retained barbaric elements of his source material with a definite purpose, and not simply because they were factors in the old melodrama of blood and violence. The tragedy belongs to the Renaissance but it strikes its roots in the Middle Ages." Intro

"The title seems to me unfortunate, because it is misleading, as one is reminded of Margaret Webster's book, Shakespeare Without Tears, that was so deservedly popular a few years ago. Miss Webster writes as a producer, as an actor, Dr. Semper as a critic and a scholar. These aspects, these different approaches, are complementary but not identical, and because of the title, one does not at first glance realize the critical significance and scholarship of Dr. Semper's interesting little book." M. C. Livingston

Cath World 165:283 Je '47 270w

"I. J. Semper approaches the play from the Catholic point of view and applies the 'touchstone of Thomistic philosophy' to the problems of the text. . . The author has to do some violence to accepted readings in order to prove his point. . . Though not entirely convincing to the sceptical, I. J. Semper does succeed, in the course of working out his thesis, in throwing some interesting sidelights on an ever-fascinating theme."

SEMPER, I. J.—Continued

+ — Theatre Arts 31:74 My '47 170w

SEUSS, DR., pseud. See Geisel, T. S.

SEVERN, DAVID, pseud. See Unwin, D. S.

SEWELL, HELEN, and ELESKA, ELENA. Three tall tales; with pictures by Helen Sewell. [40p] $1.50 Macmillan

47-31213

In many pictures and brief text this volume tells three stories of jungle people and animals—the story of the elephants who didn't like work, and one about five monkeys who got rid of a governess, and finally the story of Abdul and his donkey. The stories were told to Miss Sewell by a fellow artist, Eleska from Vienna, who had heard the tales in the course of her travels in distant lands.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p17a D 3 '47 50w

"Cleverly following comic-strip layout, Helen Sewell and Eleska have produced a book that is good for fun-loving youngsters." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:34 Ja '48 50w

Kirkus 15:578 O 15 '47 170w

"A comic book of the highest caliber. The pictures tell the story, but the text does add something. . . Recommended for ages 5-7, but you will doubtless find any age chuckling over these stories." E. T. Dobbins

+ Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Eleanor Brent

N Y Times p19 Ja 4 '48 180w

New Yorker 23:139 D 6 '47 80w

"The drawings are printed in black, blue, and brown and this reviewer feels that they would have been clearer if they had been printed in plain black. However, this is a small matter in comparison with the sheer joy that one gets out of the sequence. The pictures are numbered, just like the comic strips in newspapers, and they need very little text to interpret the progress of the story. . . There is no doubt that this book will be presented to children by their elders. There is no doubt at all that their elders will enjoy it as much as they do."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 200w

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM. Essays; an arrangement by George Coffin Taylor. 144p $2.50 Putnam

822.33

47-12148

Fifty-six short essays on abstract subjects pieced together from Shakespeare's plays and poems. It is the editor's contention that Shakespeare was one of the most important thinkers of all time, and the thoughts expressed here are offered in evidence. Includes a key for each essay, locating the various works from which sentiments are taken.

"It is admirable to have Shakespeare's thoughts brought together in readable and condensed form, but civilization will be neither revitalized nor saved by capsules of Shakespearean thought. But 'Essays of Shakespeare' may well accomplish the highly commendable objective of leading readers back to some of the greatest dramas and finest sonnets in any language." T. A. Kirby

+ Commonweal 47:356 Ja 16 '48 900w

"An ingenious piece of literary basketwork, with some merits and one bad flaw, which is the author's assumption that the sentiments Shakespeare put into the mouths of his many and disparate characters always represented Shakespeare's own opinions—an implied denial of the playwright's ability to delineate character."

+ — New Yorker 23:93 D 20 '47 120w

"Scholars will have a field day trying to place less familiar quotations; and, should their memories lag, a key at the end of the volume conveniently reveals the exact location of each line. But not only will scholars be able to play fascinating games; they will gain in that these essays indicate the extent of Shakespeare's Renaissance inheritance. It has long been known that Shakespeare was a child of his age, that he both absorbed and reflected ideas current in the spacious times of great Elizabeth. But Professor Taylor's compilation, perhaps more succinctly than any one volume of criticism, has presented the wealth of Renaissance thought embedded in Shakespeare's poems and plays." G. F. Sensabaugh

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 18 '47 650w

SHAKESPEARE, WILLIAM. Maurice Evans' G.I. production of Hamlet; acting ed. with a pref; designer's sketches by Frederick Stover. 187p $2.50 Doubleday

822.33

47-30052

"The streamlined Hamlet, arranged and presented by Maurice Evans in overseas camps and later on Broadway and on tour in the U.S. Illustrated with 16 photographs and designer's sketches. No fees for amateur productions if permission is asked." Booklist

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

"The enthusiastic reception of 'Hamlet' by the troops has caused it to be dubbed the 'G.I. Hamlet.' Its subsequent acceptance by Broadway theater-goers and its current successful tour have created a demand for a printed edition of the production. In preparing it I have endeavored to communicate to the reader the flavor of the play as it appears to a theater audience. For those who have attended a performance of the play I hope this publication will serve to refresh their memories, and for those who have not seen the production I trust it is a reasonably vivid record of what was achieved in the stage presentation." Maurice Evans

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 D 8 '46 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p2 Ja '47

Kirkus 14:536 O 15 '46 60w

"Highly recommended for all drama collections." George Freedley

+ Library J 71:1714 D 1 '46 70w

"After the endless commentaries on this play it would seem difficult to add anything fresh, but Mr. Evans has succeeded. The play, of course, had to be drastically cut because the soldier audiences had just so much free time and no more. It had to be cut in such a way that the story, unfamiliar to most of them, would be clear and move rapidly to hold interest. . . Most people who saw the production will agree that it achieved its ends for the most part with exciting success, and it is now possible to study in some detail the how and why." W. P. Eaton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29

Mr 23 '47 600w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Mr 23 '47 30w

Theatre Arts 31:74 My '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:35 F '47

SHALLIT, JOSEPH. Billion-dollar body. 253p $2.50 Lippincott

47-11822

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week D 12 '47 50w

"We'd call Joseph Shallit a refreshing new talent in the comedy mystery field, the first to appear in quite some time." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11

D 14 '47 200w

N Y Times p52 N 23 '47 160w

"Joseph Shallit makes his debut with this one and a nice performance it is." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 30 '47
120w

"Lively."

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 29 '47 50w

SHANKLIN, MARGARET EBERHARDT. Use of native craft materials. 135p il $2.75 Manual arts

745 Handicraft 47-4785

"For the school, the camp, the home. Clear instructions are given for making worth-while objects from the simplest, cheapest, most easily accessible materials—straw, cornhusks, grass, rush, nuts and seeds, vegetables, sawdust, clay. Bibliography. Numerous photographs." Booklist

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

"The underlying idea of this book is a good one. However, the advanced handicrafter may be disappointed in it because the information included is elementary and rather meager. The chief feature of the book is the section on pottery, forty-nine pages long, which includes not only the expected material but full instructions for making an electric kiln, and a series of photographs that show Marie Martinez at work. The book is best suited to beginners in handicraft who need to be awakened to an interest in common materials."

+ — N Y New Tech Bks 32:50 J1 '47

SHAPIRO, KARL JAY. Trial of a poet, and other poems. 81p $2 Reynal

811 47-11585

"Karl Shapiro has collected a group of his poems . . . together with a short defense, in dramatic form, of the poet confronted and condemned by modern materialist society and religion. In this collection he occupies himself more with character and motive than with scene. He continues to broaden his interest in problems of human justice and human faith, and to dramatize people in situations that produce typical or atypical reactions." New Yorker

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

"Shapiro has done enough already to prove that he is much more important than the mistakes he makes. He has the personal vigor and the personal capacity—as few young poets in America have—to make his way forward through his work; through mistakes, if necessary, but through his work, and I think he can work well enough to work through anything. When you have read a good amount of his verse you are sure that he is a real poet, really feeling things and really sure that he is feeling them. He has the vocation. I say this as my last word because I am confident that in the development of Karl Shapiro as a poet, this strength, this integrity, this personality will have the last word." Henry Rago

Commonweal 47:352 Ja 16 '48 1150w

Kirkus 15:461 Ag 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Gerald MacDonald

Library J 72:1688 D 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Selden Rodman

N Y Times p6 N 9 '47 1150w

"'Trial of a Poet' is successful because it does not attempt too much; Shapiro has not developed into a pure virtuoso." Louise Bogan

+ New Yorker 23:134 N 15 '47 160w

SHAPIRO, LIONEL. Sealed verdict. 278p $2.75 Doubleday

47-11086

Novel based upon the American occupation of Germany. Major Robert Lashley, a lawyer in civilian life, here serving as prosecutor in the trial of the Nazi Steigmann is the hero.

Thémis Delisle, the mysterious French girl, is the heroine. The story of Lashley's love for Thémis and its tragic outcome provide the plot.

Booklist 44:152 D 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p24 N '47

Kirkus 15:406 Ag 1 '47 160w

"Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

Library J 72:1375 O 1 '47 70w

"An interesting theme, this, but unfortunately, as presented in 'The Sealed Verdict,' unconvincing. . . The girl Thémis Delisle, is well characterized, the romance credible enough under war-time conditions, but the manner in which Lashley flaunts his affair with the girl merely reflects on his common sense and further detracts from his stature as protagonist of the main thesis. This thesis is never resolved to the reader's satisfaction." J. D. Ross

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 12 '47 650w

"Authentic American humor walks through the sullen streets; home-made slang sounds unconcernedly through the mournful echoes of defeat; quick compassion flows out to cover the wounds of degradation; easy national optimism falters in the face of unending, monotonous horror. Wherever the author's eye and ear have the chance they give us a full, indelible picture." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p16 O 19 '47 600w

"'The Sealed Verdict' is a most adroit and suspenseful tale, beautifully constructed and beautifully written." Struthers Burt

+ Sat R of Lit 30:22 O 11 '47 2350w

SHARP, SIR HENRY. Good-bye India. 244p il $4.25 Oxford

915.4 India—Description and travel, British in India [A47-2703]

An account of the author's experiences in the Indian civil service, which he joined in the 1890's. Index.

"'This book,' its dust-cover informs, 'is a swan-song, a dirge over a way of life doomed to disappearance. But it is a cheerful dirge.' Reading this facetious, but shamefully unfunny, indeed boring, book, it is possible to offer thanks in advance for a disappearance devoutly to be wished."

— Commonweal 46:362 J1 25 '47 460w

Foreign Affairs 26:231 O '47 10w

"This somewhat artless but delightfully written narrative shows both the quality of the benevolence and the extent of the autocracy of British rule in the early years of Sir Henry's service." J. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 F 25 '47 270w

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 10 '47 320w

"This wise and witty little book will be read with pleasure by all who have had the privilege of serving India, and by many who have never visited the country, but are anxious to have a fair-minded survey of the peoples and their problems. It may, too, bring home to critics of British rule of how much generations of devoted officials have done to bring order out of chaos and fit the land for self-government." H. G. Rawlinson

+ Spec 177:714 D 27 '46 650w

"The book has something to suit almost every taste; anecdotes, tiger stories, shrewd observations of places and people, well mixed together with plenty of dry humour and vigorous writing. Many readers will regret that it is not longer."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p639 D 28 '46 420w

SHAW, CHARLES GREEN. It looked like spilt milk [il. by the author]. [31p] $1 Harper 47-30767

White silhouettes on a blue background with simple captions: "sometimes it looked like a tree," "sometimes it looked like a bird," etc. lead to a surprise ending "sometimes it looked like spilt milk, but what it was was—."

Kirkus 15:334 J1 1 '47 80w

SHAW, C. G.—Continued

"What one thing could look like all of these? On the last page you are told, and I could no more tell you now than I could spoil an adult mystery by a review that gives away its solution." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
O 12 '47 140w

"For very little children or for children interested in drawing."

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 30w

SHAW, FRANK HUBERT. White sails and spindrift. 214p $2.75 Odyssey

910.4 Seafaring life 47-4769

Reminiscences of a man who served his apprenticeship and many years thereafter on the old square-riggers. He sailed with the British merchant marine as an apprentice in the late 19th century, and before he ended his days at sea had risen to the rank of captain.

"A meandering collection of yarns, full of salty prejudice and superstition, spun by an old sea dog landlocked for many years. The yarns are stirring and full of color, but somehow they don't quite keep you on the edge of your seat." C. T.

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 J1 27 '47
180w

"Captain Shaw's reminiscences follow a familiar pattern, for many old salts have written of the brave days of their youth. But he buttresses his memory with a professional writing skill which makes his story pleasant to read, and, though he does not fear to repeat tall yarns from the forecabin, most of what he tells of his own experiences has the ring of authenticity." Edward Schirf-giesser

+ N Y Times p18 J1 20 '47 410w

SHAW, GEORGE BERNARD. Geneva, Cymbeline refinished, and Good King Charles [three plays]. 233p $3 Dodd

822 47-11396

This volume contains two previously unpublished plays, and a new ending for Shakespeare's Cymbeline. The two original plays are each furnished with a lengthy "preface"; the Shakespeare with an explanatory foreword.

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

Reviewed by George Freedy

Library J 72:1781 D 15 '47 40w

"At ninety and more, not even G. B. S. can be expected to add anything to his reputation, and it would be too much to say that the contents of the present volume—written between 1937 and 1945—will do anything of the sort. At best we get mostly repetition of familiar ideas; at worst something that sounds a bit like such a parody as Beerbohm might do of the real Shaw. But for all that, there is still an astonishing energy and a liveliness which would unmistakably identify any one of the more than two hundred pages." J. W. Krutch

+ Nation 165:388 O 11 '47 320w

Reviewed by W. P. Eaton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
O 26 '47 750w

"By and large, all readers of Shaw will find the new book to be old stuff, and at times distressingly so. . . . Since even the collected portion of the life-work runs to over thirty volumes, it is not likely that many who have not read all of Shaw as it came out will read it in time to come. But the few who do so will realize even more fully than contemporary readers how extremely large Shaw's contribution has been both to art and thought." Eric Bentley

N Y Times p16 N 23 '47 650w

"The plays have their points; they both start well, but, like most of the work of Shaw's old age, they tend to lose their grip and trail off in the air."

New Yorker 23:137 N 22 '47 120w

"Mr. Shaw has never been closer to men than in the ripeness of his old age, although I am not sure that that is a virtue. After all, there has never been anyone with his special capacities. Amid the bitterness and emptiness of this post-war era there is not much to be thankful for in general. But one of the things worth thanksgiving is the astonishing fact that in the fullness of the years Mr. Shaw has retained his intellect and integrity and that he is able to address his contemporaries everywhere with wisdom." Brooks Atkinson

Theatre Arts 31:74 N '47 850w

SHAW, HARRY LEE, and DAVIS, RUTH, eds. Americans one and all. 330p $3.50 Harper

Short stories—Collections 47-30363

An anthology of short stories selected to demonstrate the many racial strains which have had a part in building our nation. Partial contents: Russian: The first day, by George and Helen Papashvily; Filipino: Helen, thy beauty is to me—, by John Fante; Portuguese: Footfalls, by W. D. Steele; Dutch: A trough of low pressure, by D. C. DeJong; American Indian: North is black, by Oliver La Farge; Armenian: The broken wheel, by William Saroyan; Finnish: All he ever wanted, by Nancy Hale; Jewish: Jacob and the Indians, by S. V. Benét; Irish: Himself, by James Pooler; Negro: Fine wagon, by Paul Green; German: Four generations, by Ruth Suckow; Spanish: Man among men, by Katharine Patten; Chinese: My song Yankee Doodle, by Car Glick.

Booklist 43:360 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 3 '47
80w

"The editors feel that they have not deliberately chosen stories that exhibit individuals of these minority groups in either a favorable or unfavorable light, but it would probably have defeated their purpose if the light were not one that brings to view the best of the group concerned. Notable for its blend of realism with sympathy, picturing the honest ambitions and the shortcomings of the Negro, is Paul Green's 'Fine Wagon.' These stories are for better understanding; they are for good reading, too." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p 14 J1 8 '47
450w

"An exceptionally interesting collection of short stories, entirely apart from the basis of selection. I approached it with a somewhat half-hearted awareness of the values incident on bringing together human pieces about the peoples that make up the melting pot that is America. As I read, I realized that there is scarcely a second-rate story in the lot."

+ Kirkus 15:224 Ap 15 '47 250w

Library J 72:961 Je 15 '47 30w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:28 J1 7 '47 300w

"Better-than-average anthology of recent American short stories by well-known writers." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p16 J1 6 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 19 '47
550w

Reviewed by D. S. Gillmor

Survey 83:293 O '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 J1 '47

SHAW, JOSEPH THOMPSON, ed. Hard-boiled omnibus. See Black mask (periodical)SHEARING, JOSEPH, pseud. See Long, G. M. V. C.SHEAN, VINCENT. A certain rich man. 378p $3 Random house

47-11066

The story of Don Roebuck, who upon his return to civilian life, becomes dissatisfied with his former life as a man of wealth and social position. Two love affairs—with a young social worker and with a sophisticated divorcée—are involved with his decision to devote himself to the improvement of social conditions.

Reviewed by P. L. Adams

Atlantic 180:152 D '47 450w

Booklist 44:91 N 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 O 19 '47 70w

— Kirkus 15:439 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Rather disappointing as a whole, but good writing and character drawing. Recommended, for larger libraries." E. S. Brown

+ — Library J 72:1195 S 1 '47 130w

"Every creative writer has had the bitter experience of starting with an idea that held promise of crystallizing into a gem only to have it disintegrate under pressure of writing. Vincent Sheehan's new novel, 'A Certain Rich Man,' falls into this category." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 N 2 '47 430w

Reviewed by Wilson Follett

N Y Times p7 N 2 '47 850w

"Mr. Sheehan is such a superlative reporter that it is a pity that he periodically feels obliged to set his not very fertile imagination and his very fuzzy brand of idealism to work on fiction. . . Mr. Sheehan is not much of a hand at character and cannot seem to keep his social viewpoint in leash, but he has turned out a smooth and deft enough story."

+ — New Yorker 23:133 O 25 '47 160w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p20 N 23 '47 600w

"Mr. Sheehan writes vivid individual scenes and can capture a quality or state a point memorably and with compassion. 'A Certain Rich Man,' however, lacks cohesion; the whole falls to measure up to its various parts. The writing seems hurried, with a woeful repetition of phrases; albeit, often excellent, still unedited. Mr. Sheehan thinks right and is what the world calls good, but somehow even these enviable qualities are not enough." C. M. Brown

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:38 D 6 '47 500w

SHEED, FRANCIS JOSEPH. Theology and sanity. 407p $3 Sheed

230.2 Roman Catholic church—Doctrinal and controversial works 47-21

"The author's initial distinction between facts that are unimaginable and facts that are inconceivable serves notice on the reader that here is an invitation to think. To Catholics who hold themselves well-instructed because they have exhausted the possibilities of the Baltimore Catechism, 'Theology and Sanity' offers a healthfully humiliating experience. Mr. Sheed's thesis is that if we and our universe are part of a greater reality and a greater purpose, we cannot hope to live sanely without knowing our place in that reality and our part in that purpose." (Commonweal) Index.

"This is an important book and because it is so important, it is a pleasure to report that its fascinating style, its precision of thought and the fresh approach to old truths (frequently only half-understood) make its reading a thrilling and most profitable experience." J. T. Clune

+ Cath World 164:565 Mr '47 650w

"The practical theologian might find fault with the chapters on the testing of angels and men. . . Again, in treating of grace, the identity of sanctifying grace with God the Holy Spirit seems insufficiently emphasized by Mr. Sheed. . . There are other minor points with which issue might be taken. For example, the author considers the angels and blessed in Heaven to have achieved the highest freedom, whereas actually freedom ceases in Heaven. There the will is irrevocably fixed upon its proper object—God. But these are minor, almost carping criticisms. In a field so vast as that explored by Mr. Sheed, a field where definitions are so precise and immutable, even a Thomas Aquinas may be found suspect." L. J. Trese

Commonweal 45:429 F 7 '47 700w

"The thoughtful reader who wants to know what the Christian synthesis is like, and what foundation it offers for the solution of the perplexities of modern life and society, will find the basic answers in this book." Granger Ryan

+ N Y Times p14 S 21 '47 750w

Times [London] Lit Sup p174 Ap 12 '47 900w

SHEEHY, MRS EMMA DICKSON. There's music in children. 120p il $2 Holt

780.7 Musical ability. Child study 46-7525

The book is "dedicated to the proposition that music is a part of life, that nobody should miss its pleasures, and that these pleasures have their spontaneous beginning in infancy and early youth." Lists phonograph records to be used with young pupils. Bibliography.

Booklist 43:238 Ap 1 '47

Bookmark 8:8 Mr '47

"The most dynamic, commonsense, inspirational book of the year. Every teacher who works with young children ought to read it. Parents will feel as if they'd been handed a new round of ammunition for doing their job after they've read it."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p26 N 10 '46 250w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"The book comes from a recognized pioneer, successful in cultivating music in many children. She tells how to do it, what instruments to give children and how to introduce them. She also gives valuable suggestions for reading."

+ Horn Bk 23:117 Mr '47 80w

"By all odds this is the best book in this field that has come our way. A teacher who has worked closely with children for many years says that it should be read by every teacher working and playing with children."

+ Kirkus 14:461 S 15 '46 110w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33 Mr 30 '47 150w

"Some of her anecdotes are delightful. . . The book is illustrated with really charming photographs of children playing or listening to music. Mrs. Sheehy also includes a valuable list of records and books." M. C. H.

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 9 '47 360w

SHELLABARGER, SAMUEL. Prince of foxes. 433p $3 Little

47-30364

A romantic novel of the Renaissance period in Italy, particularly of the years during which Cesare Borgia rose to power—and fell. At the beginning of the tale, the chief character, a mysterious soldier of fortune, is a protégé of the Borgias. Andrea Orsini falls in love with one of the Cesare's intended victims, changes sides, and eventually defeats his master's purposes in one small city state in Italy.

"In addition to spinning a lively tale of love and intrigue, Mr. Shellabarger has a fine touch with historical background. It is there, it is vivid, it is accurate, but it is never permitted to interfere with the story. The author displays a blessed willingness to leave unnecessary information in his files. It must be admitted that the people are never quite so entertaining as the story. . . The great disappointment in this otherwise entertaining novel is Cesare Borgia. Mr. Shellabarger has probably done him strict historical justice, but it is disillusioning. I had thought worse of Borgia than this." P. L. Adams

+ — Atlantic 180:128 Ag '47 500w

Booklist 43:360 Jl 15 '47

Reviewed by Louis Zara

Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Jl 13 '47 1200w

SHELLABARGER, SAMUEL—Continued

"Dr. Shellabarger's earlier novel, 'Captain From Castile,' was exceedingly popular. There is good reason to think that 'Prince of Foxes' will have the same reception, for the author moves as easily across Italy as in Spain and Mexico; and he is a first-class story-teller, who knows how to keep the action moving, how to develop climax after climax. He is also able to transmute a scholarly study of a gorgeous era into human interest, without either sermonizing or making a modest reader blush."

W. K. R.
+ Christian Science Monitor p14 J1 14 '47 490w

Reviewed by M. C. Scoggin
Horn Bk 24:69 Ja '48 60w

"One of the best historical novels that has come my way for a long time."

+ Kirkus 15:259 My 15 '47 420w

Reviewed by Katherine Shorey
+ Library J 72:1034 J1 '47 80w

"'Prince of Foxes' is less melodramatic than 'Captain From Castile' but seems to this reviewer to be more human, less forced. With all its fast-paced gait—and there is something doing on every page—the novel still has room for character development and for genuine historical background." P. J. Searles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 J1 13 '47 400w

"On the whole Dr. Shellabarger displays his great learning with exceptional skill. . . . Shellabarger is equally happy in creating the mixed atmosphere of medieval superstition, ethical depravity, intellectual curiosity, political backwardness and artistic magnificence so characteristic of the Italian Renaissance. His depiction of Cesare Borgia, tainted by 'impermanence,' dazzled by his dream of Italian unity and doomed by his demonic selfishness to destruction, is shrewd and persuasive. Skillful, too, are his briefer glimpses of the other Borgias. Allowing for the exaggerations of romance, one must conclude that the whole story is indeed, certainly in essence, a faithful and fascinating resurrection of the spirit and look of a furiously exciting, cruel and splendid age."

Charles Lee
+ N Y Times p1 J1 13 '47 1000w

"'Prince of Foxes' is a worthy successor to 'Captain from Castile,' expertly written, well thought out." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 J1 13 '47 750w

"It is not contended, to be sure, that his spirited novel is quite as excellent as the same author's 'Captain from Castile' of two years ago. But that is praising with faint damns indeed, for that story about sixteenth-century Spain and Mexico was so outstanding a costume romance that it would be hard to duplicate it. Nor is it likely that it will be required reading for your children's children when they study American literature. But if you like historical novels, it is certainly required reading for this summer of 1947. Personally, I do."

T. C. Chubb
+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 J1 19 '47 800w

Springf'd Republican p18A O 12 '47 390w

Time 50:94 J1 21 '47 220w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 37:189 autumn '47 50w

SHELLEY, MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT (GODWIN) (MRS PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY). Journal; ed. by Frederick L. Jones. 257p il $4 Univ. of Okla. press

B or 92 Shelley, Percy Bysshe 47-31418

"A document of major importance to biographers and students of Percy Bysshe Shelley, the English poet, is the manuscript journal kept by Mary, his second wife . . . from the time of their elopement in July, 1814, until Shelley's death by drowning eight years later. With some gaps due to occasional neglect on the part of the diarist and one serious break caused by the loss of a volume of the original journal, the manuscript covers approximately three-quarters of the years that Shelley and Mary spent together. . . . Though practically all the journal has previously been printed in one form or another, notably in the four volumes of Shelley papers privately issued in 1882 by the poet's representatives, Professor Jones, of the University of Pennsylvania, has performed a service to scholars by preparing a continuous text with all necessary critical apparatus, including the identification of books and persons mentioned." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index

Booklist 44:89 N 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p22 D 6 '47 950w

Reviewed by G. F. Whicher

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 O 26 '47 900w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

N Y Times p3 O 5 '47 1150w

"Until now, Mrs. Shelley's journal has been used only to document heavyweight biographies of the poet and has never been printed in its entirety. Professor Jones' book rectifies this omission but also raises the question of whether the job was worth the effort; there are some interesting stretches, but there are too many entries like 'Read Greek and "Sintram."' Shelley not well."

New Yorker 23:126 O 11 '47 80w

"The chief virtue of this volume is that now, for the first time, in the words of the editor, 'the most important single document in Shelley biography' has been 'made easily accessible' in completeness and by itself, and not as it has formerly been available, 'piecemeal by Mary Shelley, Lady Jane Shelley, Dowden, Mrs. Marshall, Newman Ivey White, and others' . . . for the real friends of Shelley and Mary, there is a great deal of detail, delightful and moving, even if a good part of the journal is already familiar. The editorial apparatus is excellent."

W. R. Benet

Sat R of Lit 30:13 N 8 '47 600w

"In publishing the Journal entire Professor Jones has sought to serve a 'select but persistent class' of readers—the class of investigators, intent 'to make their own compilations and draw their own conclusions from the facts.' Stretches of the Journal indeed are stony ground for all but these zealots."

Times [London] Lit Sup p560 N 1 '47 800w

SHEPHERD, MASSEY HAMILTON. Living liturgy. 139p $2.25 Oxford

264.03 Protestant Episcopal church in the U.S.A.—Liturgy and ritual 47-427

Brief chapters, most of them reprinted from The Witness, all of them dealing with the liturgy. The author, who is a member of the faculty at the Episcopal Theological school at Cambridge, feels that the place of the liturgy is very important in the work of the church. Partial contents: The Daily office; The Holy communion; Baptism and Confirmation.

"Written primarily for members of the Protestant Episcopal Church, they at the same time offer an insight into the nature of liturgical worship which is needed by all of Protestantism." R. C. Miller

+ Christian Century 64:174 F 5 '47 1000w

"Episcopal clergymen and church leaders and other Protestants interested in the subject will find this a helpful volume."

+ Kirkus 15:64 F 1 '47 90w

"Many of the liturgical usages which have been taken for granted for centuries are given new meaning in this collection of essays. It should appeal to clergymen and laymen who are interested in the historic liturgy of Protestantism."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 23 '47 50w

SHERIDAN, JOHN DESMOND. Paradise alley. 248p $2.75 Bruce pub.

47-4513

Character sketch of an Irish schoolmaster, who won the respect of his pupils, the undernourished children of the Dublin dock area.

Other characters are the saintly old canon who struggled to get a better school; the schoolmaster's loveable, gentle wife; their spoiled son who died a hero; and the school duncie who became a success in the business world.

"The book is notable for its clean-cut character sketches. . . It is a well written, human story of devotion to ideals under difficult and discouraging conditions."

+ Cath World 166:286 D '47 160w

"It is a novel about which one has mixed emotions. He would like to praise it lavishly because of the author's passion for social justice and for his wrath. But, unfortunately, it is actually a mediocre novel in both style and characterization." J. O. Supple

— + Chicago Sun Book Week p10 J1 20 '47
230w

SHERIF, MUZAFER, and CANTRIL, HADLEY. Psychology of ego-involvements; social attitudes and identifications. 525p $6 Wiley

153.72 Social psychology 47-3913

"Broad outline of the psychology of socialization correlating previously disconnected observations and facts from the experimental laboratory, sociology and ethnology, controlled studies of social life and from everyday life situations." (Library J) Chapter bibliographies. Indexes.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:393 Je 1 '47 30w

"The book will interest a good many persons concerned with personality and social behavior. . . The book will not lack critics. Philosophers may feel the authors have slighted subjective aspects of the ego—the ego as 'knower.' Psychoanalysts certainly will object to the predominantly social rather than libidinal and instinctive orientation of the book. . . However, it is impossible for a book which pioneers in integrating divergent fields of study to satisfy all specialists concerned. Sherif and Cantril deserve great credit for clarifying and bringing order into an area of central psychological and social importance." S. S. Sargent

N Y Times p14 Ag 17 '47 1100w

"Should prove of valuable assistance to sociologists, psychologists, and others concerned with problems of social behavior."

+ School & Society 66:31 J1 12 '47 30w

"The volume is notable for bringing together material from a variety of sources including literature and casual observation of daily life as well as systematic psychological studies. The concepts used in this integration are not themselves, however, very systematically treated."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:290 S '47 240w

SHERMAN, HENRY CLAPP. Food and health. new rev ed 290p $4 Macmillan

613.2 Food. Nutrition. Diet Med47-691

"This new edition of Dr. Sherman's book abounds with the message of the relation of the right food to positive health and vigor; the importance of increased use of milk, fruits, vegetables, and grains and the decreased use of meat. . . The author's purpose has been to record scientific advancement in food and nutrition knowledge and to give practical aid for its everyday application." (J Home Econ) Bibliography. Glossary. Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest 1934.

Reviewed by A. H. Smith

Am J Pub Health 38:118 Ja '48 320w

"Although purported to be written in non-technical style, the language is scholarly and the sentences are long. . . Best use of the book probably would be as a narrative review of the field. The book contains a good bibliography and food composition tables." R. M. Leverton

J Home Econ 39:522 O '47 150w

"The volume records much learned in wartime, and is a model of a scientist's contribution to adult education. . . The volume is enriched with many practical items such as a table of the nutritive values of common foods, a record of actual meals representing a long range balanced diet, a glossary, and a bibliography."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:192 Je '47 160w

SHERMAN, HENRY CLAPP. Foods: their values and management. 221p $3.25 Columbia univ. press

641.1 Food. Nutrition A47-927

"The present book provides a general introductory view of today's activities in the field of food supply, then a chapter on each food-group, and finally a concluding consideration of food adjustment problems. In the discussion of each article or type of food, its place in the individual or family dietary or in the national food supply is considered from the viewpoint of its contribution to each main aspect of nutritive value: energy, protein, mineral elements, and vitamins. Special attention has been given to new knowledge of the distribution and conservation of vitamin values and to the amounts of individual amino acids in the different food proteins." (Pref) Bibliography. Index.

"This book is largely nontechnical and clearly written in a style acceptable to scientist and layman alike. It is for everyone who every day must decide what to eat." W. L. duBois

+ Chem & Eng N 25:562 F 24 '47 350w

Reviewed by R. M. Leverton

J Home Econ 39:301 My '47 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:228 F 1 '47 80w

San Francisco Chronicle p14 F 23 '47
50w

"In a simple, nontechnical style, fundamental nutritional knowledge is interwoven with practical day-to-day food problems, from the point of view of the urban consumer, the farmer, or the legislator. . . The text is supplied with tables, presenting valuable economic and nutritional statistics, and gives accounts of studies of food habits, trends and figures in production and consumption, and the roles of such guiding bodies as the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:93 Mr '47 200w

SHERMAN, JOSEPH V., and SHERMAN, SIGNE LIDFELDT. New fibers. 537p il $5 Van Nostrand

677.46 Textile fabrics. Textile fibers 47-838

"Complete details of the new developments of the past ten years in the field of manufactured fibers. History, growth, processing, properties and application of every new fiber as well as improvements in rayon, etc. are covered and book is enhanced by chemical treatment of textiles, applications and trade names and 1700 patents, including composite yarns and textiles, classified by fiber and according to process or objective. It correlates scientific, industrial and economic information about the new fibers and related fields from the entire textile industry. Diagrams, tables, charts, photographs." Library J

"To the technician, a valuable section of this book is the listing of over 1,600 patents. The authors have quite successfully filled a gap in our textile literature on synthetic, semisynthetic, and manufactured fibers. This book will be popular and will find an appreciative response in schools and laboratories." W. F. Leggett

+ Chem & Eng N 25:3676 D 8 '47 200w

Reviewed by W. O. Jelleme

Chem Eng 54:258 N '47 700w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"We need information and reference texts such as this available at a moderate price for our libraries." Hazel Manning

+ J Home Econ 39:524 O '47 150w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1628 N 15 '46 140w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:19 Ja '47

SHERMAN, J. V.—Continued

"In form suitable for use in schools, libraries, and laboratories, this book gathers together a large mass of periodical literature and will serve as a convenient general reference on its subject."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:214 Je '47 210w

SHERMAN, RICHARD. Bright promise. 373p $2.75 Little

47-4997

Story of a young American couple during the years of Franklin Roosevelt's presidency. The story is told in the first person by the wife.

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Serrell Hillman

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 24 '47 290w

Reviewed by Margaret Williamson

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 25 '47 600w

Reviewed by P. T. Hartung

Commonweal 46:629 O 10 '47 450w

"A very smooth, slick-paper job, with the inspirational quality that is passport to sales and rentals."

Kirkus 15:315 Je 15 '47 240w

"'The Bright Promise' is easy—really much too easy—reading. Filled with haunting remembrances of things past, it offers innumerable opportunities for ready recognition, and has all the surface appearances of realism. But reality seems to have slipped softly away through Mr. Sherman's fingers: he never comes to grips with it. As a result, his bright story of the long, hard, often deeply confused years is by no means so significant as the materials with which he deals." F. H. Bullock

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 24 '47 500w

"Several novels for the price of one are started (but never even remotely finished) in 'The Bright Promise.' There's a big book to be written on the impact of pictorial journalism on American mores—Mr. Sherman hardly more than sketches that one. City versus small-town mind has been a fruitful theme ere now—Mr. Sherman (who came from Iowa himself, once) never quite tells us if he admires or detests his synthetic Ammon. And, of course, there's a bang-up novel in the Roosevelt era. Mr. Sherman has told that one in straight, woman's mag patter—and let the clichés fall where they may." J. M.

— + N Y Times p24 Ag 24 '47 600w

"A study of a small-town girl in the big city, the story of the founding of the first picture newspaper, a great deal about a wife who is Not Understood, and an inspirational ending that may rest uneasily on a queasy stomach—all bound together by an amalgam of cliché and slick-paper technique."

— New Yorker 23:120 S 14 '47 100w

"'The Bright Promise' is topnotch light reading, far better done than most novels of its general sort. To call it more, however, would be to go a bit too far." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ag 25 '47 500w

"Though he is absorbed in detailing their uneven fortunes, it is hard to think that these people interest Mr. Sherman deeply. They are middle-of-the-road people, ambitious to a degree, intelligent within limits, capable of living in Ammon, Iowa, or in New York with moderate satisfaction. Mr. Sherman's interest in them is that they mirror, like a hand-glass catching a scrap of sun, the Roosevelt who stood astride their time." Walter Havighurst

Sat R of Lit 30:24 Ag 23 '47 800w

"Bright Promise was serialized in Good Housekeeping, has been sold to 20th Century-Fox, and is a Literary Guild selection for September. It is not nearly so bright as its success story promises."

Time 50:108 S 8 '47 280w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

SHINN, ROGER LINCOLN. Beyond this darkness; what the events of our time have meant to Christians who face the future. 86p $1 Assn. press

261 War and religion. World war, 1939-1945 —Religious aspects 47-934

"The author, a graduate of Union Theological Seminary who waived his exemption as a theological student, was drafted into the army as a private, became a captain commanding an infantry company, and was captured in the Battle of the Bulge. He has assimilated his war experiences in terms of his Christian insights—which were in turn deepened by his experiences—to produce a little book containing much profound wisdom about dying, living, and Christian faith." J Philos

Christian Century 64:240 F 19 '47 50w

"Here is a high-minded little post-war book. . . Shinn should be read, pondered, and given a high rating." Roger Shaw

+ Churchman 161:17 F 15 '47 270w

"It is directed to young men and women who are looking forward, who will live their lives in the world that they must help make. It could be placed with great profit in the hands of veterans who are looking for light and direction. This book might also be used as the basis of a series of discussions in which nonveteran adults and young people could join with great profit. Beyond This Darkness is not just another war story." F. B. Iglar

+ Crozer Q 24:188 Ap '47 400w

"This little book, written for young people, deserves a much larger audience. Reading it is well worth anyone's time." R. W. Day

+ J Philos 44:109 F 13 '47 90w

Kirkus 14:494 O 1 '46 120w

"A straightforward, often blunt discussion of the role Christianity played in the war." W. R. M.

Springf'd Union p3 My 10 '47 90w

SHIPLEY, JOSEPH TWADDELL. Dictionary of word origins. 430p $5 Philosophical lib.

422 English language—Etymology 45-6301
For descriptive note see Annual for 1945.

"While the book might save some time and afford some amusement as casual reading for the trained linguist, its superficiality would make it a dangerous guide for the untrained user needing a comprehensive etymological dictionary. . . The explanatory notes which precede the text are so brief as to be inadequate. . . The book is well bound with wide margins, although the type, set in double columns, is small and the quality of paper only fair. The main entry words are clearly indicated in boldface. The Dictionary of Word Origins is not recommended."

— Subscription Bks Bul 17:13 Ap '46 500w

"For a dictionary, the structure of the book is unusual. The articles begin, though not always immediately, with some statement about the lemma; they continue with anything that can be connected therewith in the compiler's mind and finish—often with an attempt at a witticism—when he has exhausted the possible concatenations. There is no reason, therefore, to be surprised at the number and the nature of the cross-references which fill a great part of the pages. . . It would be tedious to enumerate the compiler's positive errors, which are many, though he is capable of following trustworthy authorities and so (almost automatically) presenting reliable information. . . This volume may be sure of such readers as enjoy pseudo-science, thinking that they are learning something, and becoming learned the while, whereas all that is happening is that their curiosity is being titillated."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 2 '47 550w

SHIPLEY, JOSEPH TWADDELL, ed. Encyclopedia of literature. 2v 571:572-1188p $12 Philosophical lib.

803 Literature—Dictionaries, indexes, etc. 47-3870

"A two-volume reference work of 1188 double-column pages. The past and present literatures of the world, based on nationality, race or language are surveyed under seventy-seven major headings in signed articles which vary from 500 to 25,000 words. Short, critical biographies of outstanding writers occupy final 135 pages of volume two." (Library J) No index.

"Major points which would recommend this encyclopedia for reference collections and school and college libraries are its list of contributors, its appreciation of the importance of oral literature and folklore, its timeliness (O'Neill's The Iceman Cometh gets a paragraph), and the compelling fact that no general encyclopedia includes all of the literatures herein surveyed. In some cases no history of the literature, concise or extended, has been published in English." G. D. McDonald

+ Library J 71:1541 N 1 '46 170w

"An especially valuable feature of the work is a lengthy biographical section which includes brief sketches of several hundred of the more important writers cited in the articles. Altogether, this history of the world's literatures makes available an excellent source of general and specialized material." Louis Wasserman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ja 19 '47 300w

School & Society 65:96 F 1 '47 10w

"One serious weakness of the Encyclopedia of Literature from the viewpoint of its reference use is the absence of an analytical index. Uniformly comprehensive bibliographies would also have enhanced its value as a guide to the study of world literature. These shortcomings, however, are somewhat outweighed by the fact that many minor literatures about which information is difficult to locate are included. Most of the literatures are surveyed, usually at greater length, in general reference works such as the Americana and the Encyclopaedia Britannica. The less-known ones are, unfortunately, treated very briefly, often without a bibliography, or with but one or two references. For these reasons the Encyclopedia of Literature is recommended only for those libraries or homes needing extremely sketchy accounts of the literatures of many nationalities and countries brought together in one source."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 18:15 Ap '47 650w

Theatre Arts 31:69 Mr '47 80w

SHIPPEN, KATHERINE BINNEY. The great heritage; il. by C. B. Falls. 230p $3.50 Viking 333 U.S.—Industries and resources—Juvenile literature 47-31007

A historical discussion of the natural resources of this country from the time it was first settled to the present. Among the subjects are fur, wheat, corn, timber, coal, iron, gold, etc., and the folklore and personalities connected with them have a part in the book. Bibliography. List of records of American music, and of films on American life, agriculture, and industry. Grades six to nine. Index.

Booklist 44:21 S 1 '47

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson
Cath World 166:237 D '47 70w

"Distinguished and vivid appraisal of the bountiful earth of the United States. . . This humanized and scholarly record of our great heritage from the land and from the men before us will be immeasurably useful in homes and in schools and in libraries. C. B. Falls' illustrations admirably depict the grass roots of this enormous land." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p13 Ag 28 '47 550w

+ Commonweal 47:156 N 21 '47 140w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:449 N '47 120w

"Superior organization and presentation of the history of our country's natural resources."

+ Kirkus 15:436 Ag 15 '47 140w

"Excellent written companion volume to author's Latin-American history 'New Found World' in much the same format and illustrated in black and white by C. B. Falls. . . Will appeal to the junior, and senior high school student of America." Elizabeth Burr

Library J 72:1280 S 15 '47 70w

"A book such as this should be in every school library: this book will be read through with a rush, whether there or at home." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 N 16 '47 150w

"The book is original in conception and brilliant in execution. Large segments of our past are carefully interwoven with present problems, and the whole is skillfully and dramatically presented. Quotations from some of our great poets and visionaries add to the book's appeal for readers of high school age as well as to its value to teachers and librarians. Mr. Falls' illustrations are superb."

R. A. Brown

+ N Y Times p27 S 28 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:156 D 6 '47 20w

Reviewed by F. C. Sayers
San Francisco Chronicle p7 N 16 '47 40w

"This is a book so satisfying in content, in design, and illustrations that it can be given to boys and girls with the feeling that one is bestowing a treasure."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:60 N 15 '47 180w

Wis Lib Bul 43:136 O '47

SHIRER, WILLIAM LAWRENCE. End of a Berlin diary. 369p $3.50 Knopf

940.5343 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American. World war, 1939-1945—Germany. World war, 1939-1945—Peace 47-31007

"Covers the period from July, 1944, to December, 1945, with a postscript bringing the reader up to the spring of 1947. It is the day-to-day record of Mr. Shirer's observations, impressions and comments, in diary form, on his life and assignments as a radio commentator and war correspondent during those fateful days, which include the year of Our Lord, 1945. . . Besides recording that tremendous year [the book] begins the story of peace-making. In reading it one can trace the slow decline of the 'high hopes, the noble purpose' which Mr. Shirer discovered at San Francisco when the United Nations was being born and see with him 'how the dark cloud, which presently envelops us, grew.'" (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Index.

Booklist 44:31 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p16 S 26 '47 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

Current Hist 13:356 D '47 40w

Kirkus 15:518 S 15 '47 260w

Reviewed by B. B. Libaire
Library J 72:1268 S 15 '47 130w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 8 '47 90w

"During Mr. Shirer's second term in Berlin, from October to December, 1945, the smoke of war was still drifting over the broken country and events had not settled into a dynamic pattern. Even so, 'End of a Berlin Diary' is a powerful book, and a tragic one. There is no victory in it. . . At times the author himself appears to be caught in the general confusion. . . And one hesitates to approve of the 'tribute' idea, if that is what Mr. Shirer means. But these criticisms tell little against the merits of a book that so vividly reports the facts upon which political schemes must rest." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 165:341 O 4 '47 1350w

"This material may be a sort of grab-bag of information about Germany at war and after, with incidental reflections on the state of the world elsewhere, but it is also an important, chastening and rather terrifying study in Lest We Forget. . . Shirer's published documents show in detail the criminal evil of the alliance between the Nazi Party and the General Staff, particularly as represented by such men as Jodl and Keitel. The interpolated documents are in general the most interesting part of the book." Richard Watts

SHIRER, W. L.—Continued

+ New Repub 117:28 S 22 '47 1650w

"William L. Shirer's new book deserves to repeat the phenomenal success of his earlier 'Berlin Diary,' but to the thoughtful reader it has even deeper and more enduring interest than this evaluation suggests. Like 'Berlin Diary,' this book is readable, informative, intellectually and emotionally stimulating. The millions of Americans who have listened to Mr. Shirer's broadcasts or read his newspaper articles or his earlier book will find in 'End of a Berlin Diary' all the qualities—often a ripening and development of the qualities—which have for years made him one of America's best and most effective journalists." Edmond Taylor

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R pl S 21 '47 1600w

"Mr. Shirer's sequel to his earlier story, falls well short of its predecessor. It lacks the fire of a missionary purpose; it is the writing of a man on the verge of disillusionment as he sees the beginnings of the failure of the peace. In part, it duplicates a score of books which have already given us the documents on Nazi aggression and atrocities. . . . Today, in a fast moving world, it is not very significant what Mr. Shirer thought, two years ago, about the San Francisco Conference, the Potsdam Agreement, the atom bomb or our then relations with Russia. . . . The German war is not finished; the hardest task—because peace is harder than war—lies ahead. I fear that the philosophy of this book will not do much to help us solve it. It is useful for the light it casts on the disease of Germany, but the diagnosis does little to help us to deal with a patient well-nigh dead." A. W. Dulles

+ N Y Times pl S 21 '47 1800w

"It is possible that Shirer's new volume will reach as many readers as 'Berlin Diary' did. I hope so, for the man has the truth in him, although he is old-fashioned in the naïve, 1939-45 manner. A mighty smudge is going up from some prestigious smoke pots to obscure the memory of what the war was fought against, and Shirer's ability to interest a lot of people can be extremely valuable in laying the soot. . . . If Shirer will devote some of the time his enforced departure from radio gives him to construct a careful book, planning each paragraph thoughtfully and going over it at least twice, we may live to thank whoever was responsible for firing him." A. J. Liebling

+ New Yorker 23:109 S 27 '47 1600w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 28 '47 1050w

"Gift, conviction, and timeliness combined to make the publication of 'Berlin Diary' an American event. . . . Shirer's second book may—if it is well read—render the equal service of preventing us from listening to the siren voices of those who would have us rebuild Germany either as the 'key to European recovery' (which it is not) or as a 'bulwark against bolshevism.'" E. A. Mowrer

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 S 27 '47 1200w

Time 50:108 O 6 '47 600w

Wis Lib Bul 43:174 D '47

SHIREY, ORVILLE CRESAP. Americans; the story of the 442d combat team. 151p il $5

Infantry journal

940.542 U.S. Army. 442d combat team

47-2680

"In January, 1943, the War Department, as an experiment, directed the activation of a combat team composed of Japanese-Americans. It was composed of an infantry regiment, a field artillery battalion and a combat engineer company. The outfit became the 442nd Combat Team. . . . Orville C. Shirey served as an intelligence officer with the 442nd and has dedicated this unit history to the Nisei who have asked only for the right to be called Americans." San Francisco Chronicle

"It is lively reading, lots of drama, without overdramatizing the story, concise without stripping it of color and detail, and accurate in showing them as American boys doing a swell job of team work and play. Excellent photographs. One of the best unit records in book form that we've seen."

+ Kirkus 15:156 Mr 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Millard Lampell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Mr 30 '47 850w

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Mr 23 '47 250w

"A straightforward, plain-spoken narrative of misery and heroism." Bradford Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:20 Je 7 '47 200w

SHNEIDERMAN, S. L. Between fear and hope [tr. by Norbert Guterman]. 316p $3.75

Arco 914.38 Poland—Description and travel. Jews in Poland 47-11676

An account of present-day Poland, written by a Polish newspaperman of pre-war days who has just revisited his homeland. "It gives a deeply perceptive picture of political and church leaders, workers, peasants and intellectuals, old cities and new territories, recalls heroic fight of Warsaw Ghetto and Kielce pogrom trial. Appallingly strong antisemitism is properly exposed; political opposition identified as reaction." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Benjamin Weintraub

Chicago Sun Book Week p12A D 3 '47 270w

"It is impossible to list here all of S. L. Schneiderman's sins of omission and commission. It should be sufficient to state that if you seek a balanced picture of conditions in the Poland of today, you will not find it in the pages of 'Between Fear and Hope.'" Ralph De Toledano

Commonweal 47:357 Ja 16 '48 390w

"Stirring and sympathetic inside account. . . . Unusually informative, but Russia's influence is not fully weighed and given statements to prove Poland's 'definite rights to Silesia' are questionable." Kurt Schwerin

+ — Library J 72:1192 S 1 '47 120w

"A well-written report on Poland."

+ New Yorker 23:137 N 15 '47 100w

"As far as news goes, it is probably the chapters on Stanislaw Mikolajczek which will be most interesting to readers in this generally very interesting book. . . . Mr. Schneiderman has been working for many years for Jewish newspapers in western countries. He is concerned primarily with Jewish affairs. Thus his book is another story about 'homecoming,' another native's return to the graves of his community and its charred shambles." Robert Pick

Sat R of Lit 31:15 Ja 3 '48 400w

SHOEMAKER, ROBERT HILLES, and PARIS, LEONARD ALLEN. Famous American generals; il. by Constance Joan Naar. 218p $2.50

Crowell

923.573 U.S. Army—Biography 46-7868

Brief biographical sketches of eighteen American generals, giving backgrounds and anecdotes, as well as military exploits. Contents: George Washington; Robert E. Lee; Ulysses S. Grant; William L. Mitchell; John J. Pershing; Dwight D. Eisenhower; George C. Marshall; William H. Simpson; Robert Eichelberger; George Patton; Mark W. Clark; Omar N. Bradley; Jacob L. Devers; Claire L. Chennault; James H. Doolittle; Carl A. Spaatz; Douglas MacArthur; Alexander Archer Vandergrift. For grades six to nine.

Booklist 43:193 F 15 '47

Kirkus 14:595 D 1 '46 50w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Burr

Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:43 Mr 8 '47 20w

SHOMON, JOSEPH JAMES. Crosses in the wind. 191p il maps $3 Stratford house

355.69 Soldiers' bodies, Disposition of. Cemeteries. World War, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 47-19538

The story of the men in the 611th quartermaster graves registration company, which was organized for the purpose of gathering and burying the dead on the battlefield. The book answers the most common questions asked about the remains of American soldiers, and lists organizations equipped to answer further questions and help next of kin.

"Major Shomon writes a necessarily painful book but one of paramount interest to wives, sweethearts and parents whose men now lie dead and who must decide their final resting place. This is a guide, based on official information, to that decision and perhaps even a consolation. . . . Essential in all public library collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:386 Mr 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

N Y Times p34 O 26 '47 270w

SHORE, MAURICE JOSEPH. Soviet education; its psychology and philosophy. 346p $4.75 Philosophical lib.

370.10947 Education—Russia. Education—Philosophy 47-11344

"Traces the growth of Marxian education for more than a century, with documentation from primary sources in the original languages." (School & Society) Bibliography. Index.

"Highly useful, though doctrinaire study, because of dearth of other information on this subject." R. E. Kingery

+ — Library J 72:1468 O 15 '47 100w

School & Society 66:351 N 1 '47 20w

"The lack of an editor's hand is painfully obvious in the frequent stylistic gaucheries, platitudinous passages, misprints, and the next-to-useless index. The 603 footnotes testify to the author's diligent and extensive reading in original Russian sources, and the 19-page multilingual bibliography, while incomplete and inaccurate, appears to cover the subject." W. W. Brickman

+ — School & Society 66:517 D 27 '47 470w

SHORES, LOUIS. Highways in the sky; the story of the AACs. 269p il maps $3 Barnes & Noble

940.544 U.S. Army airways communications system. World war, 1939-1945—Aerial operations 47-4623

"Spirited story of AACs (Army Airways Communications System) of the AAF and its development and achievements from 1938 to V-J Day when 65,000 AACs men operated a thousand airways radio stations in every part of the world. These communicators, the radio operators, maintenance men, tower operators, cryptographers and a variety of other specialists made the 'highways in the sky' over which our transport flew and our aerial might was thrown at Germany and Japan." (Library J) Maps on end papers. Index.

Booklist 44:12 S 1 '47

"Important chapter in the history of World War II and the development of first world-wide communications system. . . . Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 170w

School & Society 65:447 Je 14 '47 40w

SHORT, LUKE, pseud. See Glidden, F. D.

SHOSTAKOVICH, DMITRI DMITRIEVICH, and others. Russian symphony; thoughts about Tchaikovsky. 271p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

780.81 Tchaikovsky, Peter Ilyitch 47-3999

A collection of essays on Tchaikovsky, his works and his influence, by a group of Soviet musicians and critics. Contents: Thoughts about Tchaikovsky, by Dmitri Shostakovich; The great Russian composer, by Boris Asafyev (Igor Glebov); Tchaikovsky the man and his outlook, by Yuri Keldysh; Operas, by B. Yarustovsky; Symphonies, by Daniel Zhitomirsky; The ballets of Tchaikovsky, by Vasili Yakovlev; Chamber music, by Arnold Alshvang; The archives of the Tchaikovsky museum, by Ksenia Davidova; List of Tchaikovsky's works for the stage; Literary works. Index.

"Most of the so-called music criticism we are likely to be exposed to is not authentic aesthetic evaluation. But Marxist music criticism, of which this book is an example, makes even less sense as functional writing than does most of our domestic production. On the other hand, while we may regard Western critics as naive because of their failure to utilize the principles of art properly, it is quite probable that the Soviet error of applying economic concepts to the world of the spirit represents a much more serious offense. In artistic terms, the present book is downright reactionary." James Lyons

— Atlantic 179:132 Je '47 420w

"Translation reads well, but as in the case of other recent music titles from this publisher, text is woefully under-edited. Note that Shostakovich's contribution consists of five introductory pages. The remaining contributors are well-known Russian critics. . . . Excellent list of all Tchaikovsky's musical and literary works. Despite faults and duplications, recommended." Leonard Burkat

+ — Library J 72:465 Mr 15 '47 90w

Theatre Arts 31:76 Je '47 40w

SHRIBER, MRS IONE (SANDBERG). As long as I live. 243p $2 Rinehart

47-23977

Mystery story.

Kirkus 15:484 S 1 '47 70w

"The author has been particularly successful in depicting Ann's state of mind as her suspicion wavers among the persons who might be responsible for what is happening to her." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p53 N 16 '47 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p14 N 30 '47 90w

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 29 '47 50w

SHRYOCK, RICHARD HARRISON. Development of modern medicine; an interpretation of the social and scientific factors involved. rev & enl 457p il $5 Knopf

610.9 Medicine—History Med47-49

A study of the development of medical science in relation to social and intellectual conditions. The book covers the period from the first attempts to establish the science in the seventeenth century to the controversies of the present day. This volume was published originally in 1936 by the University of Pennsylvania press (Book Review Digest 1937). Index.

"Those who study, teach, write, or think in the medical-social field will turn often and eagerly to this almost pocket manual of medical history in the making. Physicians will welcome so correct and balanced a presentation. The educated laity will be better patients and fairer judges of their physicians if they indulge themselves in this good book." Haven Emerson

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1342 O '47 420w

Booklist 44:72 O 15 '47

"Dr. Shryock's prose makes considerable demands on the general reader. Those whose interest in the subject is more than casual will, however, find his book worth examining." Donald Powell

Commonweal 46:506 S 5 '47 390w

"Despite its scholarly nature, the book is interestingly written. Highly recommended for the intelligent layman." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 130w

SHRYOCK, R. H.—Continued

"This is an important contribution to medical history, not only as regards recent developments but also as regards its attitude toward the place of medicine in the whole human story."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 S 7 '47 80w

"For the doctor as well as the thoughtful layman this book should serve as a guide and a stimulus to fruitful thinking. . . If the general reader has given thought to the profession's all-but-incredible expansion in the last century (and to the all-but-insoluble dilemmas it now faces), these lucid pages will open his eyes still wider—and provide some useful signposts."

F. G. Slaughter
+ N Y Times p21 Ag 24 '47 800w

"Dr. Shryock has written a brilliant and scholarly analysis of the change in fundamental psychology necessary to permit the development of modern medical science and a resumé of what those developments have been."

L. L.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 O 5 '47 450w

"A mine of information, expertly interpreted, this book is invaluable for doctor and layman who wish to understand the present medical scene, whether it be the discovery of penicillin, the trend toward health insurance, or the growing menace of the chronic degenerative diseases."

E. P. Boas
+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 S 27 '47 1000w
School & Society 66:208 S 18 '47 40w

SHULMAN, IRVING. Amboy Dukes. 273p $2.50 Doubleday

47-2664

Crime and juvenile delinquency during the war years are exemplified in this story of a group of boys and girls living in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn. Violence begins and ends the novel.

Kirkus 14:558 N 1 '46 260w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Mr 30 '47 1100w

"In 'The Amboy Dukes,' Mr. Shulman illuminates the problem of juvenile delinquency during our hectic war years. His style is fervid, yet terse, his understanding genuine. He writes not to shock, but to clarify."

Edwin Fadiman
+ N Y Times p5 Ap 13 '47 470w
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47 100w

Reviewed by Benjamin Appel

Sat R of Lit 30:42 My 24 '47 500w

SHUMAN, JOHN ROGERS. Cairo concerto. 277p $2.75 Harcourt

47-3526

Cairo in the spring of 1945 is the main scene of this novel. Johann Kreutzer, an Amsterdam diamond merchant, is struggling to escape the consequences of his past. His fate is involved with that of several others: Anastasia Propocglu, Greco-Rumanian refugee; Clement Woodlee, a young official of the State department; and Dr Shipwin, among others.

Reviewed by D. M. Weil

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 6 '47 100w

"A rather subtle, sophisticated intelligence gives this its distinction—though its irresolution is unsatisfying."

+ Kirkus 15:201 Ap 1 '47 160w

"A bewildering composition. Mr. Shuman's designation of his novel as a concerto is lofty literary license. In relation to the musical form, it may be emotionally tangent, but it is not even remotely parallel. No one voice stands out in its development, and the several voices that rise above the babel utter a message in code. You know what the characters are saying, but you have to guess what the words mean."

Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 Ap 27 '47 320w

"'Cairo Concerto' is an unusual novel; and, like its characters, it is in many respects outside the main stream of modern fiction. It is neither so musical nor so sensational as its title implies. In fact, the only similarity to a concerto is that both develop interacting themes productive of a final resolution. The author, for the most part, rejects the opportunities for sensationalism inherent in wartime Cairo. He is much more concerned with the moral dilemmas of his characters. The treatment, however, is overcerebral, oversubtle and often unclear."

John Bicknell
N Y Times p24 Ap 20 '47 500w
— Springf'd Union p14 Jl 17 '47 120w

SHURTLEFF, BERTRAND LESLIE. Long lash. 273p il $2.50 Bobbs

Dogs—Legends and stories 47-1635

Two World war II veterans and their K-9 dogs, Huskie and Spareribs, go in for placer gold mining in Alaska. They run into difficulties, but with the help of the dogs they prove their rights to their claim. For older boys and girls.

"Dog lovers and readers who like their adventure robust will welcome this new tale of the far north."

O. C.
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 9 '47 50w

Kirkus 15:10 Ja '47 80w

"Swift-moving, dramatic story with well-drawn characters and plausible situations. Writing is only fair, but the picture of life in the far north compensates for deficiencies in this respect. For the teens and not too critical adults."

Claire Nolte
+ Library J 72:468 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 9 '47 110w

"In spite of a familiar plot, boys will enjoy the exploits."

Frances Smith
N Y Times p33 Ap 27 '47 170w

SHUTE, NEVIL, pseud. See Norway, N. S.

SIEGEL, PHILIP. Aircraft mechanic; a manual for certificate candidates. 313p $4 Pitman 629.13076 Airplanes—Maintenance and repair 46-8286

"The contents of this volume and the method of arrangement are designed to assist mechanics in preparing for the examination for an aircraft mechanic certificate as set by the Civil Aeronautics Administration. The material is divided into five main parts that cover propellers, hydraulic systems, rigging and assembly, wood and fabric, and sheet metal. The fundamental principles of each subject are briefly outlined, but most of the material deals with maintenance and repair operations that concern the mechanic in his daily work. Each section contains approximately two hundred multiple choice questions for which an answer key is provided at the end of the book." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"Most complete book so far (with questions and answers) on subjects required by the C.A.A. for licensing an aircraft mechanic."

A. Eales
+ Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 80w
N Y New Tech Bks 31:55 O '46

SIEGELE, HERMAN HUGO. Roof framing. 175p $2 Drake, F.J.

694.2 Roofing 47-6295

"A thorough treatment of the different branches of roof framing covering: terms, stepping off, cuts for common rafters, cuts for hips and valleys; cuts for jacks and cripples. How to frame irregular plan roofs. How to frame irregular pitch roofs. Cuts for sheeting. Polygon roofs and how to cut the rafters and sheeting. Backing hips and valleys. Barn roofs, gambrel roofs, flat roofs, miscellaneous roof framing and practical craft problems." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1617 N 15 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:57 J1 '47

SIGSGAARD, JENS. Nils all alone; pictures by Arne Ungermann. [47p] $1.75 Oxford 47-5503

One morning Nils wakes up in a world in which he is all alone, everybody else has disappeared. Mother and Father are not there to supervise his dressing or forbid his going out, there is no motorman on the trolley car, no clerk in the candy store. At first it is great fun, then it isn't quite so much fun and is a bit frightening, and by the end of the day Nils is very glad to wake up and find it was all a dream.

Commonweal 47:150 N 21 '47 20w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 24:35 Ja '48 60w

Kirkus 15:501 S 15 '47 120w

Reviewed by D. M. MacDonald
Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 50w

"This vivacious story came out first in Denmark, where I can believe it was immensely popular—and that it will be wherever it is now appearing, in England, France and elsewhere. For it has not only an original idea but one many children will welcome because in their more imaginative moments they have had an idea something like it. . . I don't doubt that when author and artist set to work on this book they had, as its publishers say, the co-operation of thousands of children." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 16 '47 270w

"Arne Ungermann has drawn a very appealing little, tousle-haired boy of about 5, whose countenance progressively expresses surprise, curiosity, excitement, forlornness. This is a story for children old enough not to be disturbed by the idea of being alone, for 5-year-olds and up." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p41 O 5 '47 230w

"A simple, realistic story with bright, amusing pictures."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 15 '47 30w

SILLER, VAN. See Van Siller, H.

SILVERS, EARL REED. Son of tomorrow. 192p $2.50 Presbyterian bd. 47-11243

College story for older boys. It describes the machinations of a seventeen-year-old boy to gain just what he wants on his college campus. But the time is 1945-46 and he cannot compete with the older more serious GI's, so he decides to enlist in the army, and then re-enter college on a firmer footing.

Reviewed by M. B. King
Chicago Sun Book Week N 8 '47 200w
Kirkus 15:471 S 1 '47 170w

"Dr. Silvers, as Dean of Rutgers, has faced the problem of the teen-age student in competition with the mature veteran on the college campus. The solution he gives seventeen-year-old Bob Wallace—18 months in the Army—will be challenged, but not his understanding of the necessity for grim adjustment by the young student to the present abnormal conditions." Mary Strang

Library J 72:1695 D 1 '47 80w

"Here, once again, we see an important, timely problem superimposed upon a story possessing values dangerously naive for today."

Howard Pease
N Y Times p54 N 23 '47 140w

"It is really a thoughtful study of the problem that the GI Bill of Rights has created in our colleges. It is, also, a good story."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:53 N 15 '47 50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:179 D '47

SILVETTE, HENRY (BARNABY DOGBOLT, pseud). Goose's tale. 317p $3 Dutton

47-4529

Gay story of young Oliver Fewmish, librarian of a small southern town, who suffered from a rare disease. His ideal of life was to sit quietly with his manuscript collection but life was not like that in Hatchettsville, Virginia. His endeavors to introduce trade unionism to his town were lively and complicated, as was his wooing of his elderly doctor's young wife.

"The book, like the seductive Elaine Gander-moon, has its moments. But neither, unfortunately, quite makes the grade." Thomas Daf-fron

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ag 3 '47 380w

Kirkus 15:265 My 15 '47 120w

"Mr. Dogbolt's first novel 'Eve's Second Apple,' was ribald, racy and unpredictable. He hasn't reformed, and the results are excellent—a better mixture than before. . . Mr. Dogbolt has a delicate leer. 'The Goose's Tale' is well worth a gander." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Ag 24 '47 140w

"In his quiet way, Mr. Dogbolt manages to tell much more than a funny story. For all its distractions, his book is definitely one man's view of the home front during the late war."

B. V. Winebaum

+ N Y Times p18 S 14 '47 470w

"There is a drier, more cutting humor in this story than there was in the first Dogbolt tale. The element of assignation has been built to greater suspense, and the clinical discussion of maladies and cures rather than more detailed. But the steel of Dogbolt's twinkling malice is as pointed and polished as ever." P. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 S 7 '47 400w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud (GEORGES SIM). Black rain [tr. by Geoffrey Sainsbury]. 176p $2.50 Reynal

47-7083

"M. Simenon has chosen a little boy, a member of an impressively untidy family in a French provincial town, as the medium through whom he reports on the trapping of a criminal. The child keeps his nose to the window of his father's linen shop and watches the police close in on the house across the way, where an anarchist is hiding out." New Yorker

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 21 '47 410w
Kirkus 15:611 N 1 '47 170w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p55 D 7 '47 230w

"The master has lost none of his skill in the creation of atmosphere and suspense." Lawrence Dodd

+ N Y Times p60 D 7 '47 270w

"Very quietly done, and very unnerving, too."

New Yorker 23:140 N 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p30 N 23 '47 100w

"Absorbing and effective character studies, with tenuous story leading up to impressive climax. But why blurb it 'thriller!'"

Sat R of Lit 30:40 N 29 '47 40w

SIMENON, GEORGES, pseud (GEORGES SIM) First born [Eng title: Magnet of doom]. 310p $2.75 Reynal

47-4014

"Psychological development of a murderer. A young French clerk, Michel, ambitious for an easy way to riches and position becomes secretary to Dieudonne Ferchaux, wealthy, ruthless, one-legged veteran of colonizing activities in Africa. When prosecution for the thirty-year-old murder of three Negroes drives Ferchaux from France, Michel accompanies him, fascinated by the mysteries of his employer's early life. In exile the fascination pales to boredom; frustration and greed in time drive him to murder." Library J

SIMENON, GEORGES—Continued

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 22 '47
230w

Kirkus 15:173 Mr 15 '47 180w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers

Library J 72:810 My 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 116:27 Je 30 '47 270w

"Up to the final pages the book is a highly interesting study of criminal psychology. The end, however, is a little too neat and too pat in its horrible resolution of the conflict between the two men. It may make poetic sense, but it lacks credibility." Rose Feld

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p30
My 25 '47 600w

Reviewed by Florence Crowther

N Y Times p14 My 25 '47 550w

"It is a generally satisfactory examination of a disagreeable relationship between two genuinely complex scoundrels, and it is pleasant to be able to report that the story is presented in a somewhat less cockney translation than are most of M. Simenon's books."

+ New Yorker 23:102 My 24 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p28 Je 8 '47
170w

SIMEY, THOMAS SPENSLEY. Welfare and planning in the West Indies. 267p $4.75 Oxford 309.1729 West Indies—Social conditions

[47-3545]

"It is the contention of Professor Simey that the social scientist, especially the sociologist, holds the key to the problem of the intelligent and successful progress of Crown Colonies into responsible Dominions. . . Assuming the acquaintance of his readers with West Indian climate, topography, and economy, Simey proceeds forthwith to an analysis of the social characteristics which constitute the special problem of the islands: the common origin of most of the population in slavery, Britain's lack of policy after emancipation, the growth of social classes, the emergence of a new (and to the moralist, disconcerting) family organization. His discussion of native cults in relation to missionary activity, as well as of education, crime, housing, and the more specific social problems, is particularly revealing because of his emphasis upon the daily life of a people constantly hungry and constantly aware of skin color." Ann Am Acad

"For two reasons American sociologists will read with a great deal of satisfaction this book written by an Englishman who has spent some time in the West Indies. First, it acknowledges generously the contributions which American social scientists have made in the field of human relations in general and of racial and cultural contacts in particular. Second, it maintains that the knowledge and insight gained thus far in the social sciences should now be brought to bear on practical social problems." W. J. Cahnman

+ Am J Soc 53:312 Ja '48 1000w

"Although Professor Simey does not lay down in minute detail the steps by which the West Indian colonies may achieve their transformation, his comments upon recent plans and events indicate what should not be done. His writing is lucid and his analysis penetrating. Only occasionally does the discussion bog down in minutiae." J. G. Leyburn

+ — Ann Am Acad 253:229 S '47 450w

"Penetrating and original study."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:709 Jl '47 40w

"To those who have a concern for the West Indians, this book is very welcome. Many of them, without knowing quite why, have felt that the British policy, so honestly and competently undertaken, was turning out to be too timid and limited, too conceptual and orthodox, to meet the grave accumulation of disadvantage under which the people of the area suffer. By perusing this book they can find out why this is so and toward what direction policy will have to turn if it is to be more successful in the future." R. G. Tugwell

J Pol Econ 55:473 O '47 1050w

Reviewed by Hubert Young

Spec 178:244 Mr 7 '47 800w

Times [London] Lit Sup p135 Mr 29 '47
1200w

SIMMEL, ERNST, ed. Anti-Semitism; a social disease; with a pref. by Gordon W. Allport. 140p $2.50 Int. univs. press

296 Jews—Political and social conditions
47-552

"The papers were prepared by a group of scientists invited by the San Francisco Psychoanalytic Society to participate in an unbiased scrutiny of the problem. To provide a sociological background, Max Horkheimer discusses historical aspects of anti-Semitism. Otto Fenichel describes the inner conflicts inducing projection or displacement of hatred onto the Jew, while Ernst Simmel elaborates the conflict arising between the person and his civilization which creates prejudice. Bernhard Berliner presents some of the latent principles in the Christian and Jewish religions which are thought to contribute to anti-Semitism. In his study of the psychology of errors, Douglass W. Orr contributes chiefly to the data on projection of inhibited hatreds. From extensive psychological research, Drs. Else Frenkel-Brunswick and R. Nevitt Sanford determine the type of anti-Semitic personality. Finally, T. W. Adorno illustrates how anti-Semitic propaganda is designed to meet the irrational and emotional needs of personality." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliographies.

"The section by Horkheimer is a good brief sociological frame of reference into which the entire volume tries to fit with varying success. The care with which the research was done, as reported in this volume, is in notable contrast to the hysterical tone of other works on the same problem area."

+ Am Soc R 12:381 Je '47 150w

"While no claim is made for the final word on the psychopathology of anti-Semitism, careful study of this serious work begets confidence in the validity of the clinical approach and the theoretical formulations on the data. A long range educational program is found necessary for eliminating anti-Semitism as a social disease."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:185 Je '47 250w

SIMMONS, ADDISON. Dead weight. 256p $2
Phoenix

Detective story. 47-358

"Passable writing and quite a bit of ingenuity." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 12 '47
50w

Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ja 18 '47 50w

SIMMONS, ERNEST JOSEPH, ed. USSR; a concise handbook. 494p $4.50 Cornell univ. press

914.7 Russia 47-1883

"A collection of studies of the Soviet Union under the heads geography, political science, the social sciences, and the humanities and science. . . These studies were originally written for the 'Encyclopedia Americana' and are reprinted from that work." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R) Bibliographies at ends of chapters. Index.

"In any collection of work by different people, there is inevitably a certain unevenness in quality among the different contributions. This volume is no exception. Vladimir Kazakevich's discussions of Soviet history and economics are not only superficial, probably inevitable in such brief compass, but too often misleading as he follows the tortuous Soviet rewriting of history and exaggeration of the U.S.S.R.'s economic achievements. . . . On such controversial subjects as the authenticity of the confessions of the Moscow trials of the middle 1930's, F. L. Schuman and other writers in this volume accept the Soviet view uncritically, despite the very respectable mass of evidence attacking the confessions' credibility. In general one may regret that this volume lacks an overall critical sophistication which would prevent many of its writers from taking as the truth what is actually only Soviet propaganda. Persons with little or no background on the U.S.S.R., therefore, can use much of this volume only at the risk of securing a more idyllic picture of the U.S.S.R. than is justified by the facts." Harry Schwartz

Ann Am Acad 252:121 J1 '47 400w

Bookmark 8:12 My '47

Christian Science Monitor p12 My 3 '47 120w

Commonweal 46:125 My 16 '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 26:229 O '47 20w

"The authors are informed and generally friendly towards the Russian people, and they give little space to either apologetics or censure."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 6 '47 90w

"A unified, well-edited collection of articles. . . . The articles are carefully written, informative and accurate in detail except for an occasional slip of the pen. Many will, however, take exception over matters of interpretation, as is inevitable whenever anything is written on the Soviet Union. The critics in this case will come chiefly from the anti-Soviet camp, for none of the participating experts is a Russophobe and a few hew closely to the Soviet line. It is, however, to the credit of the more partisan writers—Corliss Lamont, for example—that they do attempt to present at least a partially balanced picture." S. S. Harcave

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 20 '47 650w

"The authors are well-known experts who are generally objective and unemotional about their subjects: Soviet politics, law, economics, foreign policy, etc. The personalities of the Russian scene are deliberately de-emphasized; figures like Stalin and Trotsky are barely mentioned for the record. The book carefully avoids controversy; it is an academic piece of work, with neither a too-friendly nor too-hostile attitude." M. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47 160w

"William M. Malisoff's contribution on the history of science in Russia is excellent. It is obviously founded on a wide knowledge of the topic, is well written and fair to both pre- and post-revolutionary development of science in Russia. Professor Simmons himself contributed three fine essays on language, literature, and drama and the theatre. They are very good indeed. Nicholas Corotneff's brief article on armed forces is well informed and readable. . . . Sir Bernard Pares's very good article on religion is marred by an error which is very difficult to reconcile with his knowledge of Russian history. Sir Bernard confused black clergy with white. . . . Corliss Lamont's piece on minorities suffers from excess of zeal. . . . Dr. John Sommerville's article on education does not show either serious knowledge or clear understanding of some of the matters he discusses." D. F. White

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 My 17 '47 600w

School & Society 65:198 Mr 15 '47 30w

Theatre Arts 31:79 My '47 80w

SIMMONS, RICHARD F. Wildcat cartridges; introd. by Harvey A. Donaldson. 333p il $5 Morrow

623.4553 Cartridges 47-4811

"Several hundred experimental wildcat cartridges now standardized and non-commercial cartridges produced by handloaders and gunsmiths are analyzed and compared in this book. Many notable cartridges like the .220 Swift, the .22 Hornet and the .25 Roberts started out as 'wildcats.' Illustrated." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1113 Ag '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:45 J1 '47

SIMON, HERBERT ALEXANDER. Administrative behavior; a study of decision-making processes in administrative organization; with a foreword by Chester I. Barnard. 259p $4 Macmillan

350 Organization 47-30782

"In this book Professor Simon gives us an important contribution to the social science of formal organization and administration. His objective is to construct a set of tools—a set of concepts and a vocabulary—suitable for describing an organization and the way an administrative organization works. His interest has been primarily in the field of public administration; but to achieve his purpose adequately he has taken into account experience in other kinds of formal organizations such as military, commercial, and industrial and private non-profit organizations. This makes his conclusions generally applicable and his work useful for describing administrative behavior in all types of organizations." (Foreword) Several chapters have been published in whole or in part as separate articles. Index.

Reviewed by L. M. Short

Am Pol Sci R 41:1215 D '47 850w

"Although some readers may consider the work verbose, it is a thorough treatment of these aspects of administration. Administrative Behavior should, therefore, be helpful for practical administrators as well as for students of administration." A. D. Angel

Ann Am Acad 254:184 N '47 350w

"Though his treatment is generalized and theoretical, it is concrete in its close relation to realities and his findings readily lend themselves to specific application." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1111 S 17 '47 150w

Kirkus 15:331 Je 15 '47 170w

"He does not write for everybody. His ambitious attempt to discuss the sociology and the practical science of administration is tailored to the reading habits of the academic man who needs a framework for research and teaching. But that is no reason why the book should not become a best-seller in this age of widespread college education. The inclusion of material from military administration should add to its appeal for our veteran." Bjarne Braatoy

+ — Nation 165:478 N 1 '47 750w

"This is an important book for all students of organization (here used in the sense of structure and operations combined). If the immediate contribution is essentially critical and hence negative, it is nonetheless useful in revealing the sterility of much past theorizing. Simon and many others must now move forward on a new plane with the hope of obtaining more fruitful results in understanding how men work together in the formal administrative units of our economy and of our government." J. D. Millett

Pol Sci Q 62:621 D '47 650w

Social Studies 38:375 D '47

SIMON, LESLIE EARL. German research in World war II; an analysis of the conduct of research. 218p il $4 Wiley

509.43 Science and state. Research 47-3752

"Dramatic record of Nazi war science. Penetrating analysis of the organizations, backgrounds, and fundamentals of German weapons research. Discusses researches in ballistics, fire control, aerodynamics and instruments and measurement techniques. Included also are discussions on the wind gun, sound as a weapon, tanks, rockets, the super gun, aircraft armament, and jet-motor research." (Library J) Index.

SIMON, L. E.—Continued

"Here is an interesting and informative book for the man with average technical training. . . . As one reads this well-printed book one is aware of the tremendous research which lies behind the discussion, the result of first-hand viewing of the Nazi war machine on a War Department mission. It is a definite contribution not only to the problems of research but to an understanding of how the German machine functioned." Julius Alsberg
+ Chem & Eng N 25:2461 Ag 25 '47 350w
Cleveland Open Shelf p19 S '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:816 My 15 '47 70w

"Although this book contains a considerable amount of information on technical achievements, it is primarily a critical review of the organization, and the successes and failures, of German research. Aside from its value as a study of research methods, it also has some utility as a source of information on German weapons, including some of the 'super' weapons that had more propaganda than military value."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:37 Ap '47
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:321 S '47 320w

SIMON, YVES R. Community of the free; tr. from the French by Willard R. Trask. 172p $3 Holt

172 Political ethics 47-11183

"Professor of Systematic Philosophy at Notre Dame discusses in this brief but profound book the problem of freedom in modern society—the current confusions concerning it, the contemporary mood of despair and widespread capitulation to forces of evil, the sin of modern racial theories, the confusion of freedom with liberalism—and finally offers a realistic basis for belief in the possibilities of a new and better world." (Library J) No Index.

"It is a relief to turn from the dogmatic narrowness of many current political tracts to this work by Yves R. Simon. The book is short . . . but like Aristotle [the author] is concerned with the whole man, with political science and not propaganda and in a short space he illuminates wide areas." Edward Littlejohn

+ Commonweal 47:124 N 14 '47 800w
Kirkus 15:422 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Religious and philosophic in treatment, this should prove stimulating and rewarding to readers accustomed to such a serious and demanding approach, but it is not for many. For larger and scholarly libraries." George Wakefield

+ Library J 72:1192 S 1 '47 100w

SIMONDS, HERBERT RUMSEY, and SHERMAN, JOSEPH V. Plastics business. 439p il $5 Van Nostrand

338.476684 Plastics industry 46-8638

An analysis of the plastics industry, describing its mechanics and development, and the role it will play in the future of industry. Contains a list of trade names, a list of tables, and an index.

"The comments of the authors on the future of the industry appear well taken. That section devoted to the investor and technician is good for the beginner, the GI, and the layman having a desire to start in the plastic business; the government agencies promoting jobs for veterans need this information. . . . The book itself is not and could not be complete on any one subject, but is well compiled to present the over-all industry make-up and provide general information on the plastics industry today." F. H. Carman

+ Chem & Eng N 25:631 Mr 3 '47 350w

Reviewed by M. A. Coler
Chem Eng 54:295 Ap '47 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 71:1129 S 1 '46 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:15 Ja '47

SIMONDS, PETER. Maple leaf up, maple leaf down; the story of the Canadians in the second World war. 356p $3.50 Island press 940.542 World war, 1939-1945—Canada.

World war, 1939-1945—Campaigns and battles 47-754

A summary of the Canadian role in World war II, from Dieppe to the Mediterranean and western Europe. The author served in the Canadian army for five and a half years. The title is based on the name given to the main route to the First Canadian army on the western front. Maple leaf up was the road sign to the front, maple leaf down marked the roads to the rear, down which the empty supply trucks and full ambulances rolled.

"The book is very uneven, and includes errors of judgment which (coming, as they do, even after the event) undermine the reader's confidence. . . . The chronicle of operations is often perfunctory where it should be detailed, and elaborate where a quick summary would suffice; and it contains far too many inaccuracies. The writing (perhaps not the worst test of the author's clarity and precision) is amazingly weak and confused. These criticisms, however, do not necessarily invalidate Captain Simonds' comments; they do serve to make more important the question of what help (if any) he obtained from his brother, the corps commander; such portions of the book would be exempt from the suspicion of weak military judgment." E. Sirluck

Canadian Forum 26:282 Mr '47 700w

Reviewed by J. B. Conacher
Canadian Hist R 28:319 S '47 280w
Foreign Affairs 25:705 Jl '47 20w

"The story is a fine tribute to the Canadian forces." W. H.
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 Mr 2 '47 120w

SIMONSEN, SVEND T. Blue water navigation. 198p il $3.50 Cornell maritime press

527 Navigation 47-3242

"Arranged from material used by Captain Simonsen in teaching navigation to GIs training in amphibious operations. Simple explanation of use of navigation instruments and fundamentals of navigation carefully discussed with necessary pages from the Nautical Almanac and An Almanac to work out problems." Library J

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 50w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:34 Ap '47

"Will appeal primarily to the experienced sailing man. . . . However, Captain Simonsen has taken the most simple approach to this somewhat difficult subject. The bright student should run into few difficulties." Theodore Sweedy

+ N Y Times p12 Je 29 '47 170w

SIMPSON, CUTHBERT AIKMAN. Revelation and response in the Old Testament. 197p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

296 Jews—Religion. Bible. Old Testament 47-5545

The Paddock lectures delivered at the General Theological seminary (Episcopal) in New York. They contain an interpretation of the development of the central religious ideas of the Hebrews, especially the concept of God and of national destiny. The author begins with the primitive stage of Jahvism, and continues to the beginning of the exile. Index.

"Scholarly and penetrating. . . . A sequel is called for, and Professor Simpson could write a good one." W. E. G.

+ Christian Century 64:1207 O 8 '47 210w
Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 161:16 N 1 '47 310w

"Students of the Old Testament are indebted to Professor Simpson for this straightforward statement of his conclusions with regard to Israel's early traditions; the book will eventually be judged, however, upon the work which lies behind this more popular presentation." J. B. Pritchard

+ Crozer Q 25:72 Ja '48 1050w

SINAI, NATHAN, and others. Health Insurance in the United States. (N.Y. acad. of medicine. Com. on medicine and the changing order. Studies) 115p $1.50 Commonwealth fund 614.2 Insurance, Health Med47-364

"This monograph is limited almost entirely to voluntary health insurance plans, principally the Blue Cross hospital plans, and the medical care plans of the state medical societies. The book begins by tracing the history of the health insurance movement, dividing its course roughly into three periods: 1910-18, when workmen's compensation developed and an impressive movement toward health insurance took place; 1919-29, a fact-finding decade during which the Public Health Service made important morbidity studies and the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care laid the foundation for its reports; 1930 to World War II, a period of surveys, conferences, and planning during which the medical and hospital plans began to emerge. Characteristics of the plans and the complex problems that face them are described." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"An able discussion by an able authority and his associates. . . This is a most valuable book. But so rapidly has this problem been advancing that need for a revised edition can already be seen." E. S. Rogers

Am J Pub Health 37:928 Jl '47 150w

Christian Century 64:81 Ja 15 '47 20w

Management R 36:302 My '47 40w

"A more selective bibliography would have been helpful. Nevertheless, physicians, medical students, and others interested will find this a very good introduction to the subject."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:93 Mr '47 200w

SINCLAIR, FREDERIC. Drop one, carry four. 220p $2 Doubleday 47-4266

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Jl 6 '47 80w

Kirkus 15:202 Ap 1 '47 80w

"Thrilling and suspenseful drama is played. Read the first few pages of this book and then see if you can lay it down." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p22 Je 15 '47 140w

"Varied and detailed local color almost saves familiar and foolish plot." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 22 '47 60w

"Humdinger."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Je 28 '47 50w

SINCLAIR, MRS. MARJORIE JANE (PUTNAM). Kona. 248p $2.75 Day 47-30161

Novel based on life in Hawaii which spans the years 1925 to 1946. Martha Luahine Bell, who is part Hawaiian, marries Winslow Wendell, of a family still sticklers for the New England way of life. Gradually Martha conforms to the wishes of her husband, but when her daughter marries a Hawaiian boy, Martha rejoices.

Booklist 43:224 Mr 15 '47

"The story is romantic and is not afraid of sentiment." W. K. R.
Christian Science Monitor p16 F 27 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:10 Ja 1 '47 170w

"An amateurish, fictional attempt to show unsuccessful as well as happy marital blending of Polynesians with whites in Hawaii. . . Scenic descriptions, however, create an atmosphere attractive enough to make the reader long for technical skill and mature conception in handling the material." H. S. Taylor

+ Library J 72:320 F 15 '47 70w

"There is much of interest and charm in Mrs. Sinclair's picture of life in the islands; her enthusiasm is infectious and makes you want to go there. . . It is pre-eminently a book about a place and its people—the women are far more real than the men of the story—rather than a novel that creates individuals." David Tilden

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 F 16 '47 550w

"Marjorie Sinclair writes with sincerity and real knowledge of Hawaii. Yet her novel lacks sufficient power to lift it beyond mere conscientious story-telling." Anne Richards

+ — N Y Times p16 Mr 2 '47 150w

SINCLAIR, UPTON BEALL. Presidential mission. 645p $3.50 Viking 47-30286

In this eighth volume in the series about Lanny Budd, confidential agent and friend of Franklin D. Roosevelt, he carries on his work during the African landing, sees Hitler and Göring, is bombed in Berlin, and comes home to tell the president about it. The time is between the springs of 1942 and 1943.

"As usual the story is long, with unnecessary and platitudinous detail, and embued with the author's socialistic theories. Remarks about the Catholic hierarchy will be offensive to some readers, and the adulation of Roosevelt will be anathema to others."

— Booklist 43:291 My 15 '47

Reviewed by Eleanor McNaught

+ Canadian Forum 27:118 Ag '47 320w

Reviewed by P. W. Ferris

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47 330w

Kirkus 15:169 Mr 15 '47 260w

"Well written, interesting and informative."

L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:810 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Milton Rugoff

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Je 15 '47 550w

"The pattern of this, as of previous Lanny Budd novels, is by now familiar. Again, despite the creaking stage management, the stilted writing . . . and the deadly repetitiousness, the story makes absorbing reading—at least as exciting, let us say, as 'The Three Musketeers.' Mr. Sinclair's vitality, like his hero's, is unflagging, and once more we must admire the creasingly plain that the author understands series, he so planted his characters that he always has somebody on hand, whether in Vichy, Algiers, London or Berlin, to point the moral and frequently to adorn the tale." Perry Miller
+ — N Y Times p5 My 18 '47 1050w

"With 'Presidential Mission,' it becomes increasingly plain that the author understands no more than his foolish and wholly preposterous hero does."

— New Yorker 23:105 My 24 '47 240w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p15 Je 22 '47 600w

"Actually what the author has done, is to set a fictional character in motion against a backdrop of real persons and historic facts. This is a legitimate and daring technique; customer response indicates that Mr. Sinclair has successfully accomplished what he attempted to do. The readers like it just fine, and not even this crabbed critic would suggest that Mr. Sinclair alter one jot or tittle of what he has written. For better or worse, his Lanny Budd novels succeed because they purvey to the well-known human fondness for peering over the shoulder of exalted personages while affairs stand, as J. Caesar said, in augustus res. As sheer reading matter 'Presidential Mission' combines the best features of E. Phillips Oppenheim and Milton Caniff." H. M. Robinson

Sat R of Lit 30:9 My 17 '47 1200w

Time 49:106 My 26 '47 440w

SINGER, MRS DOROTHEA (MAYER). Insurance of libraries; a manual for librarians. 92p pa $1.50 A.L.A.

022.27 Libraries—Insurance requirements 46-11964

"Based on wide experience supplemented by information on library insurance practice recently gathered from libraries of all types, distributed geographically. Discusses attitude toward library insurance, preparation for placing insurance, basic insurance principles, risks, various types of coverage, determination of values, valuable papers and fine arts policies, how to effect savings, etc. Appendices, glossary, bibliography, index." Special Libraries

Booklist 43:82 N 15 '46

Reviewed by H. P. Bowmaster

Library J 72:452 Mr 15 '47 750w

Special Libraries 37:333 D '46

SINGMASTER, ELSIE (MRS HAROLD LEWARS). I speak for Thaddeus Stevens. 446p $3.50 Houghton

B or 92 Stevens, Thaddeus 47-3551

Somewhat fictionalized biography of Thaddeus Stevens, nineteenth century lawyer and statesman, a powerful figure in the American Congress of the Civil war years.

Reviewed by L. P. Stryker

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 8 '47 900w

Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 28 '47 850w

"It seems impossible not to develop a spirit of sympathy for Stevens. Miss Singmaster is completely convinced that Stevens was utterly sincere in all his undertakings; she sees nothing partisan in his conduct. She presents her point of view with the aid of much dialogue; she employs no footnotes but uses much direct quotation. The book may well influence the general opinion held concerning the man who so very profoundly influenced the reconstruction period." Paul Kinlery

Commonweal 46:291 J1 4 '47 390w

Current Hist 13:164 S '47 70w

+ Kirkus 15:208 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Completely adult biography of a great statesman. . . Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 130w

"Careful research, documentation, knowledge of place, time, national and local politics. . . all the thousand items that concerned the life of its central figure have been assembled in this fictionalized life. Mrs. Singmaster is in love with her hero, and in love, almost more, with his adopted State of Pennsylvania and his town—for a while—of Gettysburg. . . Judged as a biography, no one can complain that the work has been scantied. . . But the story, qua story, drags particularly in the section dealing with Stevens's youth." Constance Robertson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 My 25 '47 850w

"The book is certainly fiction, and not good fiction at that. There is no growth or change in the protagonist; there is little conflict in the story; Stevens, bland and slightly sardonic in the face of opposition, moves impassively and charitably on one plane, thinking of his family. Miss Singmaster is so busy painting the simple heart that she does not sense the scheming brain, the will to power, and the complex emotions and motives of an exceedingly interesting man." W. B. Hamilton

— N Y Times p19 Je 8 '47 650w

"Miss Singmaster piles up a pretty good case in his behalf, citing his incorruptibility in personal matters, his lifelong fight against slavery, the humanity he displayed toward the Negro race, and his ardent support of free education for all. In dealing with his early career, the author gives an excellently detailed account of what life was like in rural Pennsylvania and Vermont before the Civil War."

+ — New Yorker 23:79 My 31 '47 110w

Springf'd Union p12 O 3 '47 240w

SISKIND, CHARLES SEYMOUR. Electricity; principles, practice, experiments. 448p il $2.60 McGraw

621.3 Electric engineering 47-3693

"Basic elementary principles of electrical circuits and machines covering direct and alternating currents. For vocational schools, technical, high and trade schools, junior colleges and colleges, and useful as a refresher. Mathematics kept to a minimum. 40 experiments with instructions for setting up and testing circuits and machines." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:355 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:81 Ja 1 '47 80w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:30 Ap '47

SISSONS, CONSTANCE KERR. John Kerr. 232p il $3 Oxford

B or 92 Kerr, John Andrew 47-1437

"A biography of a pioneer Canadian, born in Perth, Ontario, in 1851, who, after distorting the visage of Prince Arthur while acting as a photographer's assistant, enlisted in the 1st Battalion, Ontario Rifles, and went with that battalion to Red River in 1870. After discharge he joined the Manitoba Constabulary. Later he went to the Saskatchewan country where he spent some time in Gabriel Dumont's camp at St. Laurent. Here he was known as 'le petit Canada.' In 1873 he acted as guard to Ambrose Lépine when Louis Riel's erstwhile lieutenant was on trial for his part in the death of Thomas Scott. Returning to the prairies Kerr accompanied Lieutenant-Governor Alexander Morris to the North Saskatchewan on the occasion of the negotiation of Treaty 6 with the Cree Indians of that region. Finally, having been soldier, policeman, hunter, clerk, trader, prison guard, interpreter, guide, teamster, and farmer in Western Canada, he returned to Perth where he lived an unexciting forty years as town clerk. He died in 1940." Canadian Hist R

"It is a vivid tale, told mostly in his own words, of this part of the Dominion before it was tamed, and as such it will be of special interest to all students of western Canadian history. Its most valuable contribution is the clear picture it gives of Gabriel Dumont, for whom Kerr had a great admiration not shared by many Canadians who have written about this picturesque half-breed without having known him." A. L. Burt

+ Am Hist R 53:158 O '47 280w

"The author has quoted fairly liberally from John Kerr's letters and notes (written apparently in later life) and it is no intended slight to her to say that these excerpts are the most useful portion of the book to the historian. The fact is that John Kerr saw little of the big events of early western Canadian history; but what he did see and record was what is so often missing from formal historical accounts." G. F. G. Stanley

+ — Canadian Hist R 28:328 S '47 400w

SITWELL, EDITH. Green song, and other poems. 49p $3 View editions; for sale by Vanguard

821

[44-9768]

"In this new collection of poems, Miss Sitwell continues to prove her skill with words, sounds, and subtle rhythms. The verse is deeply reflective, somewhat elusive and remote, slightly introverted and self-conscious. Through it runs a wistful questioning from the pen of the mature poet, who looks on while the newer generation begins its development." Christian Science Monitor

"The writing of this pioneer in English modernism is not for the casual reader. It is intellectual and reserved. It requires concentration, and what it brings to the reader depends largely on what he contributes along that line." P. P. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ja 18 '47 260w

"'Green Song,' containing the best of her recent work, will be greeted with pleasure by Miss Sitwell's admirers and with surprise by those who recall chiefly the contrived, elegant artifices and formal wit of her early poems. For these new poems, written under the impact of the war years, show a deepened and broadened perception, concern for humanity in conflict, but at little sacrifice of the brilliance of image and richness of music that have always characterized Miss Sitwell's work." Ruth Lechlitrer

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
F 23 '47 800w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts
N Y Times p26 F 23 '47 300w

"Miss Sitwell's technique and vocabulary, once brisk and brilliantly sharp, have become excessively romantic. She is now openly emotional and prays, invokes, and exhorts—a surprising shift toward the Victorian rhetoric that she had worked hard to break down. Bizarre and lovely moments still come naturally to her, however."

New Yorker 22:87 Ja 11 '47 80w

Reviewed by George Snell
San Francisco Chronicle p14 J1 27 '47
30w

SITWELL, SIR OSBERT, 5th bart. Great morning! (Atlantic monthly press bk) 360p $4 Little

B or 92 Sitwell family. Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-11034

The third volume in the series of these autobiographical studies, of which the first two were Left Hand, Right Hand; and The Scarlet Tree (Book Review Digest, 1944, 1945, and 1946). In the present volume he covers the years 1911 to August, 1914. Index.

Booklist 44:89 N 1 '47

"Dullness is the last word to describe it. This reviewer at least found the world immediately preceding the First World War coming to life again in a way which is the best proof of the author's artistry. Those who did not know that world will find the book historically valuable too in view of the shattering changes resulting from the two wars of this century. Its importance is primarily as an imaginative work. But in fact it presents a civilization not far removed from us in time but gone forever." Robert Wilberforce

+ Cath World 166:377 Ja '48 500w

Kirkus 15:452 Ag 15 '47 170w

"The effect of this book, the effect of all these memoirs, is of some extraordinary musical experience, some long-drawn-out farewell, with interludes of music hall ribaldry, and a delicate theme now and then in the flutes hailing some future when the old Philistines will be replaced by newer ones, perhaps, but with the 'artist' secure in his enduring caste. . . No one now writing can chisel scenes off to such perfection as the eldest of the Sitwells." Ernestine Evans

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
O 19 '47 1900w

"There will be many readers, I think, who will enjoy 'Great Morning!' not for the sake of reading 'literature' but for a far more immediate reason—the delight in the narrative that it unfolds. No one has written so intimately of the lost age of peace—the decade before 1914—in England as Sir Osbert." Horace Gregory

+ N Y Times p3 O 12 '47 1400w

"Everything is given the fine gloss of the famous Sitwell style."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 18 '47 90w

"It speaks well for the author's artistry and for the excellence of his taste that his record of this destructive parent is almost untouched by hatred or resentment; that it is marked by forbearance, affection, and even a kind of admiration. The portrait of Sir George and his entourage of Cassandras and Harpies, of Sir George and his children, of Sir George and his servants, is a masterpiece. . . Only an artist and a wit could bring Sir George to life, and, let us admit it, a man who is both artist and wit has beautifully done so." George Dan-gerfield

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 O 18 '47 1750w
Time 50:112 O 20 '47 650w

SKAAR, GRACE MARION. Nothing but cats, cats, cats [il by the author]. [20p] $1 Scott, W.R.

47-30824

Picture book for three-year-olds showing several kinds of cats all in color.

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47
30w

+ Kirkus 15:463 S 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p8
N 9 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lois Palmer
N Y Times p4 N 16 '47 50w

SKIDMORE, HOBERT DOUGLAS. Disturb not our dreams. 161p $2.50 Houghton

47-4554

A beautiful little girl, left as a baby at an old ladies home is the central figure. On her first day at school the child learned of the disfiguring birthmark on her face, a thing the gentle old ladies had always avoided. The child's acute agony over the cruelty of the other children calls for help, and in answering her need, several older people found their own readjustments.

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

Reviewed by E. D. Branch
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 3 '47
430w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 23
'47 550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 J1 '47

Kirkus 15:316 Je 15 '47 150w

"In writing of Lovely and Dr. Thompson, Mr. Skidmore enters the realm of the whimsical and fanciful and it cannot be said that he is too happy in this climate. There are many moments when the quaintness of the cracked old ladies becomes a little tiresome. But there are occasional flashes of the Skidmore of the first book which make one eager for those that may follow." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
J1 20 '47 430w

"The fragile story is neither as obvious nor as over-sweet as it sounds in recapitulation; Mr. Skidmore's clear, unpretentious prose, in fact, makes it rather lovely."

+ New Yorker 23:69 J1 19 '47 160w

"Mr. Skidmore has built a slender, tenuous plot that, in a manner quite as strange as his characters, leaves one with a feeling of rightness and pleasure." Constance Curtis

+ Sat R of Lit 30:23 Ag 9 '47 470w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 J1 '47

SKILLING, HAROLD GORDON. Canadian representation abroad; from agency to embassy; issued under the auspices of the Canadian institute of international affairs under whose direction this book was written. 359p $6 Humphries

327.71 Canada—Foreign relations [46-5562]

"Analysis and description of the growth of the Canadian diplomatic service from the informal beginnings after the Confederation to the establishment by 1944 of formal relations with eleven foreign countries and with six members of the Commonwealth. The first three chapters survey this growth from the dispatch overseas of immigration agents in the sixties to the appointment of commercial agents and a Canadian High Commissioner in London in the seventies and eighties. Succeeding chapters describe Canada's relations with the Empire, the League and the Commonwealth, the establishment of legations in Washington and elsewhere, and the organization, activities and expansion of the Department of External Affairs since its founding in 1909. The concluding chapter discusses the factors which have accelerated or retarded the growth of external representation and outlines the problems which confront the Department today." Pol Sci Q

SKILLING, H. G.—Continued

"The Institute is to be congratulated on this first outcome of its planning. Dr. Skilling's book sets a high standard for the monographs to follow." H. D. Hall

+ Am Pol Sci R 40:1198 D '46 1050w

"The aspect of our Canadian history with which the book deals has long needed a full study, and this is a very satisfactory one indeed." F. H. U.

+ Canadian Forum 26:115 Ag '46 350w

"In this painstaking and scholarly book Mr. Skilling has set a high standard for the new series on international questions promised by the Canadian Institute of International Affairs." F. H. Soward

+ Canadian Hist R 27:437 D '46 800w

"A sound, scholarly history."

+ Foreign Affairs 25:170 O '46 20w

"An excellent . . . volume which will satisfy the political scientist as well as the historian. Professor Skilling's fresh material and new point of view enrich the familiar story of the emergence of Canada from the status of a colony to a status comparable to that of a sovereign state." Chilton Williamson

+ Pol Sci Q 61:638 D '46 480w

SKLAR, GEORGE. Two worlds of Johnny Truro. 372p $2.75 Little

47-1650

A first novel by a playwright and Hollywood script writer. It portrays the emotional awakening of a talented seventeen-year-old boy, who falls in love with a sophisticated older woman. Helen's husband is a captain in the army, and while he is away his wife fills up her life with a factory job and in teaching Johnny Truro to paint. The love affair which follows is a time of alternating confusion and exhilaration—the "two worlds of Johnny Truro."

"The 'Two Worlds of Johnny Truro' is often suffused with understanding and sympathy; it is sometimes spotty and weak. That Sklar acquits himself as well as he does is due mostly to his skill as a dramatist and writer of excellent dialogue rather than as a novelist." Herman Kogan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 9 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:9 Ja 1 '47 170w

"Details clarify the difficulties and ultimate pain in such an affair as well as the pleasure, but without moralizing. The goings-on of the high school crowd may horrify some readers. Advise caution in buying." Margaret Owen

Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by F. H. Bullock

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 F 23 '47 700w

"George Sklar, a playwright turned novelist, has, I would say, shown more than angels' courage, if not brashness, in attempting his present theme. . . [It is] one which demands great delicacy and understanding. They are not present here in sufficient measure to give this novel conviction; and a flair for dramatic incident and a blunt, honest, inflexible style do not compensate for their absence. In the theatre, perhaps, the task is not so difficult. But in this first novel, moving with apparent fearlessness and obvious awkwardness in an unfamiliar field, Mr. Sklar depends heavily upon statements without concomitant evocation, upon earnestness undirected by finesse. He tells the reader what happens, without making him the willing accessory before the fact, and without ever gaining his full belief." John Woodburn

N Y Times p18 Mr 16 '47 430w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47 80w

"It is not an unusual situation for a boy of seventeen to fall in love with an older woman. . . It is more unusual when the woman returns that love and becomes passionately and emotionally involved with, and dependent on, a boy hardly half her age. Mr Sklar has set himself the difficult and delicate task of making such a relationship understandable and acceptable. I do not think he has quite succeeded; not because the situation itself is impossible, but because the two people involved, Johnny, aged seventeen, and Helen Borden, thirty-one, are inconsistent and unreal." S. H. Hay

— Sat R of Lit 30:20 My 10 '47 700w

SKOLSKY, SYD (COHEN). Make way for music. 138p $2.50 Dutton

780.072 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation 46-6699

"Part One traces fashions in music, feeling of style and period of composer; outlines of patterns in orchestral music in very simplified terms, the make-up of the orchestra, instruments and grouping and the contribution each group makes. Part Two presents six programs, with descriptive highlights of each composition selected for the program. Useful for the listener who enjoys music, but wants to know more about what he is hearing. Brief notes on Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, Mendelssohn, Chopin, Liszt, Brahms, Tchaikovsky. Indexed." Kirkus

Booklist 43:166 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:8 Ja '47

Christian Science Monitor p18 D 7 '46 40w

"A handbook for the musically untutored, a very ABC book to help the listener get the most out of recorded music."

+ Kirkus 14:444 S 1 '46 100w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33 Mr 30 '47 100w

SKOLSKY, SYD (COHEN). Music box book; il. by Roberta Paffin. 79p $1.50 Dutton

785 Music—Analysis, interpretation, appreciation. Music—Juvenile literature 46-5956

Introductory book on music appreciation for boys and girls. It explains the themes and musical instruments used in six compositions, all available in recordings. They are Scheherazade, Bartered Bride, Nutcracker Suite, Sorcerer's Apprentice, Midsummer Night's Dream, and Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks.

Booklist 43:40 O 1 '46

Kirkus 14:347 Ag 1 '46 110w

"At the end of each story an outline of the music and its relation to the story is given. Excellent material for musical story hours. Recommended." G. E. Joline

+ Library J 71:1210 S 15 '46 70w

Wis Lib Bul 42:171 D '46

SLATER, HUMPHREY. The heretics. 210p $2.75 Harcourt

47-30884

Three children, Elizabeth, Paul, and Simon, orphaned during the campaign against the Albigenians in 1197 are caught up in the Children's Crusade. More than seven centuries later three English students become involved in the Spanish civil war. These two groups of young people are the protagonists of the two parts of this novel. The connecting link is the recurrence of savagery toward friends and associates which permeated the two widely separated events.

"Certain details of history are handled a bit inaccurately. It was Philip Augustus of France, rather than Frederick II, who served as Innocent III's muscle man to threaten John of England. Frederick was not 'atheistic.' 'Nominalism' was not the characteristic doctrinal heresy of the Albigenians. It is questionable whether the children set adrift by the massacre of their parents as Albigenians furnished the chief element in the Children's Crusade. However, the chronology is right. The author is right, too, in making these heretics at least the moral and cultural equals of their orthodox persecutors. . . . In this novel [the author] has achieved a style remarkable for its compactness and cool detachment ('emotion remembered in tranquility'), and has virtually created a new form of fiction. It produces on me the impression, unusual for a 'first novel,' that I must be sure not to miss any future novels he may write." W. E. Garrison

+ — Christian Century 64:1206 O 8 '47 850w

"It is not too pleasant for a Catholic to read the first half of this novel, and it is not too pleasant for a communist to read the second half. . . . 'Heretics' might have been a stronger book, intellectually speaking, had there been greater insight into the serious problem of maintaining orthodoxy. But it has the merit of forcing anyone of good faith, Catholic or Communist, to weigh his conscience before the facts of the past and the present." C. G. Paulding

Commonweal 47:99 N 7 '47 1150w

"Worthwhile."

+ Kirkus 15:475 S 1 '47 160w

"A vivid tale of unchanging conformity and heresy—no matter what age begets it. Recommended." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1271 S 15 '47 110w

"Unfortunately Mr. Slater's good sense and taste, while they save him from the common pitfalls of current political fiction, seem also to put a strong brake on his novelistic energy. 'The Heretics' is lamentably underwritten in point of character development and drama. It is only the suggestion of the fine novel it might have been, a seed rather than a full growth." Diana Trilling

— + Nation 165:452 O 25 '47 850w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:30 O 6 '47 290w

"'The Heretics' is a book which can be quickly read, but which remains in the mind, making its point, fastening its implications, impressing its inescapable truth, long after it is put aside. It is a book, in fact, which cannot be put aside. All who are heretics will want to read it and teach it and preach it; all who are not heretics will want to burn it. As Mr Slater so expertly demonstrates, the situation remains the same." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S 23 '47 950w

"The hypnotism of this author's first novel lies in the almost mystic way he has jumbled the rules and still produced a powerful and engrossing story. The thread which holds the two parts together is almost imperceptible, yet persistent; his characters are secondary to the history which betters them, yet they maintain dramatic force." Florence Crowther

+ N Y Times p5 O 5 '47 700w

"In 'The Heretics' you can get two good novels for the price of one. . . . The first of these novels is a fine example of how the historical novel ought to be written. The usual cloaks and daggers have been done away with, a sense of history has replaced the traditional historical nonsense, and the ability to create characters is proved more important than an inordinate passion for research. . . . The second novel, which brings Mr. Slater's theme of what happens to people because of fanaticism up to date, is not quite as impressive." Hamilton Basso

+ — New Yorker 23:120 O 11 '47 500w

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 23 '47 350w

"An addition to the impressive number of passionate, wise, and brilliant volumes that have, in different tongues, come out of the battles and the disillusiones of the International Brigade. . . . You have to go back to 'A Farewell to Arms' as poignant, as tender, and yet as matter-of-factly told as that of Elizabeth and her colonel. Nor do I know of any piece of fiction which unfolds a clearer picture of the many-cornered Spanish struggle. Mr.

Slater writes beautifully in that urbane manner which succeeds in presenting the subtle as well as the crude . . . with provoking detachment." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 S 27 '47 550w

SLATKIN, CHARLES ELI, and SHOOLMAN, REGINA LENORE. Treasury of American drawings. 35p 163pi $7.50 Oxford

741.973 Drawings

47-5754

"The first really thoroughgoing attempt to make a survey of American drawings, from Colonial times to the present. . . . A hundred and sixty-three illustrations." New Yorker

"The essay with which these handsome full-tone reproductions are prefaced is a concise, informative outline of the several social forces which have conditioned America's artistic growth. It is written with the eye of the philosophical historian, or historical philosopher—which ever name best describes an author who has judiciously avoided confining his remarks to a panegyric of the illustrations." B. H. Hayes

+ N Y Times p5 S 28 '47 500w

"A good deal of solid research has gone into the book, but in spite of all this scholarship the text is crisp and readable. A valuable contribution to American art history."

+ New Yorker 23:106 S 20 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. T. Soby

Sat R of Lit 30:41 N 1 '47 70w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Golden isle. 373p $3 Doubleday

47-11274

Historical romance of the African slave trade in the early nineteenth century. The scene is Spanish Florida where a villainous plantation owner bred and trained black slaves by the thousands. The central character is Dr Michael Stone, kidnapped abroad and sent to Florida to doctor the slaves.

Kirkus 15:442 Ag 15 '47 130w

"Medical aspect and good love story will draw plenty of readers. Recommended." Katharine Shorey

+ Library J 72:1471 O 15 '47 70w

"The novel is vivid, colorful stuff, and Dr. Slaughter has a sardonic touch in laying bare the motives of men and the emotions of women." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 N 9 '47 170w

"A resident of Jacksonville and a collector of Floridiana, Dr. Slaughter knows the land of pine-barrens and salt-water bayous intimately. If the human motivations behind Michael Stone's two loves verge on the melodramatic—if the ghastly retribution that overtakes Adam Leigh seems a shade too ghastly—the author may be forgiven. His fictional trimmings are hardly more hectic than history itself as it was played out in Fernandina: his public should enjoy this baroque narrative." Richard Match

+ — N Y Times p12 O 19 '47 800w

SLAUGHTER, FRANK GILL. Medicine for moderns; the new science of psychosomatic medicine. 246p $3.50 Messner

616.8 Medicine, Psychosomatic Med47-2490

A survey of modern psychosomatic medicine, written for the layman by a doctor who is also an author. A short historical sketch is followed by discussions of the emotional background of such conditions as peptic ulcer, spastic colitis, heart disease, diabetes, asthma, allergy, migraine, and various skin disorders. Index.

Booklist 44:180 Ja 15 '48

Kirkus 15:494 S 1 '47 170w

"Fairly readable, but definitely geared to adult, with superior intelligence and education." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1539 N 1 '47 110w

SLAUGHTER, F. G.—Continued

"An explicit, concise and thoughtful compendium of the ills to which the mind and body, as an entity, are heir, as well as the therapies involved." A. H. Weller
+ N Y Times p59 N 9 '47 600w

SLICHTER, SUMNER HUBER. Challenge of industrial relations: trade unions, management, and the public interest. 196p $2.50
Cornell univ. press

331 Industrial relations. Trade unions
47-3448

"Based on lectures at Cornell last November, Professor Slichter (Harvard) presents the problem of the relations between trade unions, management and the public interest. The mechanics of union organization and practices have increased interest at present, and the author goes into practical details rather than theory." (Current Hist) Index.

Reviewed by Avery Leiserson
Am Pol Sci R 41:782 Ag '47 1300w

Reviewed by John Van Sickle
Am Soc R 12:726 D '47 600w

Reviewed by T. R. Fisher
Ann Am Acad 253:232 S '47 400w
Current Hist 12:584 Je '47 40w

"This book is a 'must' for all serious students of the policies which should be pursued toward trade unions." E. E. Witte
+ Management R 36:554 O '47 440w

"The book is far better in presenting problems than it is in supplying answers. This is perhaps inevitable because of the great range of topics the author attempts to cover in a relatively few pages; it is nevertheless useful to have the questions that need answering so penetratingly presented." A. H. Raskin

+ — N Y Times p24 Jl 13 '47 380w

"This little book ought to be required reading for labor relations men in industry, for union members (and, especially, union officials), for students of labor relations and for citizens at large who want to live up to the responsibilities of citizenship in an industrial community which strives to be democratic." P. F. Brisenden

+ Pol Sci Q 62:447 S '47 1150w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:296 S '47 330w

SLOANE, WILLIAM. British isles; il. by Raffaello Busoni. 25p $1.25 Holiday

942 Great Britain—History—Juvenile literature
47-477

Brief history of the British isles, stressing their democratic heritage. For ages nine to twelve.

Kirkus 14:527 O 15 '46 40w

Reviewed by A. H. McGinity
Library J 72:84 Ja 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
Ja 12 '47 200w
Sat R of Lit 29:70 N 9 '46 20w
Wis Lib Bul 43:40 F '47

SLOBODKIN, LOUIS. Seaweed hat [il. by the author]. [47p] $2 Macmillan

47-11033

Pictures in color and nonsense verse tell the story of a little girl who had some gay adventures at the bottom of the sea, and was not afraid because of the protection of her seaweed hat.

Kirkus 15:578 O 15 '47 80w

"Humorous drawing and a superlative color job are the main recommendations for this book. The story of Millie's seaweed hat and the protection it gave her in the submarine and on the bottom of the sea is rather forced and told in verse that just doesn't click. If you must have Slobodkin, even in board binding, go ahead and buy this." Gertrude Andrus
Library J 72:1543 N 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
N 30 '47 190w

"The colorful pictures are better than the brief text, which is in verse, but both show considerable inventiveness." R. C. Benét
+ New Yorker 23:145 D 6 '47 60w

"It is a very gay story. The cool blues and greens of the under-ocean scenes are a relief after the angry red that seems to dominate so many picture books."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 N 15 '47 110w

SLONIMSKY, NICOLAS. Road to music. 178p il $2.75 Dodd

780 Music—Instruction and study 47-2495

The material in this book first appeared in a series of articles written for the Children's page of the Christian Science Monitor. In brief chapters the author covers the technical side of music, composition, instrumentation, musical forms, history and brief biographies of great composers. Index.

Booklist 43:363 Jl 15 '47

"Nicolas Slonimsky gives much helpful information to untrained readers who wish to cultivate a more intelligent appreciation of music." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:223 My '47 70w

"Of special interest to music-lovers and students of all ages. Recommended." E. M. Gordon

+ Library J 72:646 Ap 15 '47 70w

"In his foreword Nicholas Slonimsky says that he 'would not talk down to his listeners whether they be children or adults.' One must agree that he never does. This is an enlightening book to those of us who seek a painless study of the principal points in musical theory from the Greeks to Gershwin. There are many factual points and many illustrations. For beginners and for little children Mr. Slonimsky should, perhaps, have talked down a bit more."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 14 '47 90w

SMALL, MRS MARIE. Four fares to Juneau; il. by Erna Károlyi. (Whittlesey house publication) 237p $2.75 McGraw

917.98 Alaska—Description and travel
47-30280

During the depression years the author and her husband sold their furniture and car for enough money to transport themselves and their two small children from Seattle to Juneau, Alaska. They arrived with just ten dollars in cash, no place to live, and no jobs. Their first year was one of almost disheartening struggle, but eventually they acquired a home and an income. The story of their experience is told with much quiet humor.

Booklist 43:289 My 15 '47

"Pathetic, moving, grim and sometimes humorous, the book is a social document of some value. It is Alaska seen, not through the summer tourist's eyes but through the terrors and hungers of a woman who must buoy up her husband's spirit, nurse the children through all their sieges, be a jack-of-all-trades around the house, hold a job, cook meals from scraps and keep her own courage flying." Ruth Gruber

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
Ap 27 '47 300w

San Francisco Chronicle p21 My 25 '47 70w

"No prospective pioneers in Alaska should fail to read this book before making their plans." Ernest Gruening

+ Sat R of Lit 30:28 Ag 2 '47 180w

Springf'd Union p4 S 5 '47 120w

Wis Lib Bul 43:96 Je '47

SMART, CHARLES ALLEN. Sassafras Hill. 246p $2.50 Random house

47-2905

Story of how one ex-service man, Lieutenant David McDermott of the Navy, found a job, contentment and romance, when, on impulse, he left the train which was carrying him to New York, at a small Ohio town instead.

Booklist 43:310 Je 1 '47

"Pleasant, evanescent entertainment."

Kirkus 15:136 Mr 1 '47 160w

"The characters are interesting, normal people and the action holds the attention. Novel provides good reading for all." M. A. Johnson
+ Library J 72:734 My 1 '47 60w

"If you are fed up with fiction with high blood pressure and want something less turbulent and possibly more true, you will find 'Sassafras Hill' keyed to your mood." Lisle Bell
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27
My 4 '47 340w

"The author disarms heavy criticism by stating blandly that McDermott cherished the theatricality of his life and thought of his personal history in terms of a light novel. The story lives up very entertainingly to this hypothesis—incidentally sniping at fairly important problems." Barbara Bond

+ N Y Times p25 Je 15 '47 320w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 Jl '47

SMIRNOV, V. A. Sons; tr. by Naomi Y. Yohel; introd. by Paul Hollister. 305p $2.75 Double-day

Novel based on the collectivization of land in Russia. The heroine is a strong-willed peasant woman, whose husband is killed in the early days of the Revolution. Left alone Anna struggles with bitter poverty, but manages to raise her twin sons well. When the collective farms come Anna and her boys benefit, and eventually she earns a trip to Moscow and a decoration for her efforts.

Booklist 43:224 Mr 15 '47

"Recommended for young people as well as adults who, because of length, usually avoid Russian novels." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 70w

"Some readers may be repelled by the novel's unmitigated optimism. Those who are interested in the Soviet Union's vast project in human engineering will find it valuable for the insight it affords into the every-day life of the ordinary Russian citizen." Stephen Stepanchev

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
F 23 '47 600w

"This is not a novel of action. It moves as seasons and time move. And it is not a novel for those who wish to hate; for it is filled with a humble love and with a great good-will. It is a simple tale told with great simplicity. V. A. Smirnov, a writer, but recently well known in Russia and until now unknown in the United States, has done a novel of the earth and of motherhood in 'Sons,' and it is a book which should win an unquestioning and immediate respect for its author." Lawrence Lee

+ N Y Times p12 Mr 2 '47 800w

"As the saga of just one small mother, this tale is credible and not propagandistic. The kolkhoz actually makes mistakes; the peasants prove to be human beings, and not the noble lay-figures who sometimes inhabit the Russian novel. Even the fact that Anna gives both of her sons to the army in the end is less a gesture of patriotism than an inevitable solution for their emotional rivalry. The characters of Mikhail and Alexai, and their touching love for their mother, make this a novel of any country at any time. V. A. Smirnov has written a good story, pleasantly told and restrained in feeling." M. S.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p15 Ap 13 '47
210w

"This latest novel to come out of Russia appears to be a workmanlike mixture of pious, idyllic German mid-nineteenth-century peasant romance and American rags-to-riches story. Yet it is at the same time decidedly much more than a piece of good workmanship. Therefore we must assume that this is the kind of fiction Moscow counsels, asks, or—I wouldn't know—commissions its first-rate authors to produce." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:21 Mr 8 '47 550w

SMITH, BERNARD, and STERN, PHILIP VAN DOREN, eds. Holiday reader. 750p $3.95 Simon & Schuster

820.8 Short stories—Collections. American literature—Collections. English literature—Collections 47-4333

Anthology of fiction, humor, essays, poetry, etc. selected especially for vacation enjoyment. The material is divided into seven sections: Stories; Humor; Travel, exploration, and nature; Mystery, fantasy, and murder; Poetry; Eating and drinking; Three quizzes. Most of the material is on the light side, and except for the poetry, modern.

"Fine bedside book for guest rooms in the country."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
My 25 '47 90w

"A rich, well-balanced grab-bag, varied enough to keep even a three-week vacationer busy." James MacBride

+ N Y Times p14 Je 15 '47 270w

New Yorker 23:107 My 10 '47 90w

"Many of the articles may be familiar to the reader. Some of them may be new. They are not necessarily the authors' best. As edited, the book will satisfy the most diversified of idle-hour moods. A wealth of entertainment and relaxation lies between its covers." Curtis Floyd

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 8 '47
750w

SMITH, EDWARD COSTELLO, and THOMPSON, VIRGINIA VAN HORN. Traditionally Pennsylvania Dutch. $1p il $3.50 Hastings house

917.48 Germans in Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania—Social life and customs 47-11739

Drawings, sketches and brief text describe some aspects of life in Pennsylvania Dutch communities. Includes recipes for apple butter, apples and dumplings with ham, and pretzel soup. Index.

"Anyone interested in American folklore will find this fragmentary series of brief notes on community life, crafts and food absorbing." J. A. E.

+ Commonweal 47:181 N 28 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:644 N 15 '47 130w

"Recommended for adults as well as older boys and girls." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:1696 D 1 '47 50w

SMITH, EDWARD STAPLES. Control charts; an introduction to statistical quality control. 161p $3 McGraw

658.532 Sampling (statistics) 47-31006

"Text on the purpose, construction and interpretation of charts of statistical quality control designed for men in industry. Written in nonmathematical style with detailed discussion of frequency curves and their value in interpreting statistical data. Practical examples are emphasized." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:168 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:51 Jl '47

Reviewed by J. M. Juran

N Y Times p30 Ja 11 '48 70w

SMITH, EDWARD STAPLES COUSENS, and others. Applied atomic power. 227p il $4 Prentice-Hall

621.48 Atomic energy 47-30095

"Explanation in relatively simple language what atomic power is, the history, development and benefits. Most important part of book by R. Tom Sawyer concerns the possible methods of converting atomic energy into mechanical power and its use in marine, railway and power plant applications. Work on the Atomic Bomb is an added feature. Illustrated." Library J

Booklist 43:250 Ap 15 '47

SMITH, E. S. C.—Continued

"The book is simply written and can be profitably read by those with limited technological and scientific background. . . The volume shows evidence of hasty preparation. Editing, both as to content and grammatical form, could be much improved. The purpose of the book might be better served with more of the space devoted to the physical background and a better integrated discussion of the engineering development involved. It is inevitable that in a popular work exception can be taken to looseness in phraseology and minor scientific errors. However, readers will not be significantly misled, and laymen, scientists, and engineers will all find provocative suggestions in its pages." F. T. Barr

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:1470 My 19 '47
370w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:391 Mr 1 '47 60w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:3 Ja '47

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:112 Mr '47 240w

SMITH, ELVA SOPHRONIA, comp. Mystery tales for boys and girls; selected; decorations by Edwin B. Kolsby. 1 v ed 397p $2.75 Lothrop

46-22915

"This new one-volume edition includes most of the selections found in Mystery tales for boys and girls and More Mystery tales for boys and girls, published in 1917 and 1922 respectively. Some selections have been omitted; a few others have been added. New format with illustrations in heavy black and white." Booklist

Booklist 43:140 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ja 19 '47
90w

"Elva S. Smith's fascinating new edition of this collection has uses as first-class entertainment and as a source of stories to use at Halloween time. Decorations by Edwin B. Kolsby furnish an appropriate eerie atmosphere." H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 My 15 '47
180w

Horn Bk 23:120 Mr '47 40w

"Excellent selection, of course, but I wish that better paper could have been used. As it is, book is not as attractive as it deserves to be." J. D. Lindquist

+ Library J 72:167 Ja 15 '47 70w

"A book a young person cannot leave around the house without having to hunt for it when he wants it again, for it will be in the possession of somebody else in the family. The divisions are on hidden treasure, ghost-ships, humor and fantasy, the supernatural and stories of these types with a historical background. Several are generally regarded as masterpieces, and I am glad to say there are some for which we should be grateful because they seldom see print nowadays—such as that prize story of an American ghost, William Austin's 'Peter Rugg, the Missing Man.' Poetry of the same general nature is scattered through the book, and if any one still recites poetry, these verses are well adapted to such use in schools." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
Ja 12 '47 270w

Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ja 18 '47 270w

SMITH, EVELYN E. Building book; about houses the world over; il. by H. Lawrence Hoffman. 79p il $2 Howell, Soskin 728 Architecture—Juvenile literature.

Dwellings—Juvenile literature 47-4292

Elementary history of architecture, from the days of the cave men to the modern skyscraper. Stresses public buildings rather than homes. For ages ten to twelve.

Reviewed by E. T. Dobbins

Library J 72:963 Je 15 '47 50w

"There is one picture for each chapter. . . These pictures, in brilliant color, are more decorative than informative. The story itself is lively and, though naturally giving a child only a few salient points for each period, brings out the main idea of each." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Je 22 '47 270w

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hodges

N Y Times p18 Ag 3 '47 180w

Sat R of Lit 30:57 N 15 '47 40w

Springf'd Union p5 Ag 12 '47 80w

SMITH, GEORGE GEOFFREY. Gas turbines and jet propulsion for aircraft. 4th ed 256p il $5 Aircraft bks, inc, 370 Lexington av, N.Y. 17

629.13435 Airplane engines. Gas turbines
47-1081

"Enlarged edition of the first book on the subject. Among the new chapters are 'Thrust & Performance,' 'Testing & Maintenance,' 'Metallurgy,' 'Components,' 'Combustion Systems,' 'Turbine Propelled Aircraft,' 'British Gas Turbines,' 'American Gas Turbines,' 'German Gas Turbines,' 'Guided Missiles & Flying Bombs,' 'Tailless Aircraft,' etc., 200 illustrations." (Library J) Index. For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1944.

Booklist 43:333 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 100w

Reviewed by James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p33
My 4 '47 110w

Special Libraries 37:332 D '46

SMITH, HARRY ALLEN. Lo, the former Egyptian! line drawings by Leo Herschfeld. 212p $2 Doubleday

B or 92

47-11538

Autobiographical musings by the author of Low Man on a Totem Pole, etc. occasioned by his visit to the place of his birth, McLeansboro, situated in that part of southern Illinois known as Egypt.

Reviewed by Keith Wheeler

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 N 9 '47
230w

Kirkus 15:497 S 1 '47 120w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18
N 9 '47 320w

"These adventures are recounted with tang and wit, and, although the author seems at times to be trying to pound bluish skim milk into whipped cream, he has gotten off a fair companion piece to his other humorous works." Rex Lardner

+ — N Y Times p24 N 16 '47 550w

"There are H. Allen Smith enthusiasts who relish every wacky line he writes; there are others who like him up to a certain point. Readers in this second group will probably prefer this pleasant little autobiographical fragment to his other books. There is an agreeable restraint which in no way dampens his natural exuberance, and he nearly always remembers that it is better to tell four-fifths of a joke than six-fifths." R. A. Cordell

Sat R of Lit 30:37 N 22 '47 700w

SMITH, HARVEY HASSALL. Twin Pines, and other highlights in the lives of the Horace W. Osbornes; with il. by Arthur T. Blomquist. 262p $2.75 Scribner

47-30653

Short sketches about the life of a typical American family, living in a suburb not far from New York.

Reviewed by P. E. Bradley
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 24 '47
260w

Kirkus 15:294 Je 1 '47 120w

"Characterization is well done. Some chapters are cleverer than others. Will appeal to the reader who enjoys this type of writing, but the lack of plot and no development except the passing of years, will limit its popularity." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15
S 7 '47 110w

"I suppose everyone who reviews this book will mention 'Mr. and Mrs. Cugat.' It's something you can't avoid, I'm afraid. But the comparison is a good one. The same kind of thing is what will amuse you throughout. As a matter of fact, Mr. Smith does the job quite as well as Mrs. Rorick did, even better in one way—which is when it comes to the perpetual alumnus aspect of it." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 26 '47
600w

SMITH, KATHERINE (MRS JOHN RODE-RIGO DOS PASSOS), and SHAY, MRS
EDITH (FOLEY). Down Cape Cod. rev ed
230p il $5 McBride

917.449 Cape Cod—Description and travel
47-5922

A revised edition of Down the Cape (Book Review Digest 1936). Has a chapter on Cape Cod cookery; a brief bibliography and index.

Booklist 44:71 O 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Jl 27 '47
70w

"It is brilliantly written and it contains a wealth of valuable information. Included in its last chapter are a score or more of authentic Cape Cod recipes, and these alone are worth the price of the book." James Lyons

+ N Y Times p24 Ag 3 '47 230w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 27 '47
210w

"A thoroughly workmanlike and readable panorama of Cape Cod from Provincetown to Buzzards Bay." Richard Aldrich

+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 Ag 16 '47 240w
Spring'd Union p3 Jl 25 '47 130w

SMITH, KEN. Baseball's hall of fame. 244p il
$2.75 Barnes, A.S.
796.357 Baseball

Story of the founding and dedication of the National baseball hall of fame and museum at Cooperstown, New York. Lists the baseball heroes who have been admitted to the Hall, with a brief story of the life of each of them.

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Reviewed by R. W. Henderson

Library J 72:1383 O 1 '47 70w

N Y Times p22 D 14 '47 90w

"Despite some intimate glimpses of famous personalities of the sport, nearly everything and everyone in the book becomes too irretrievably magnificent to be convincing. However, if you want information about Cooperstown's baseball Mecca, here it is." Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 28 '47
150w

Spring'd Republican p5B S 14 '47
300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:138 O '47

SMITH, LEONARD J. Collective bargaining.
468p $5 Prentice-Hall

331.116 Collective bargaining 46-5896

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Perhaps, at times, the material is too elementary to be informative, but this minor shortcoming hardly detracts from its genuine value as a technical guide."

+ Columbia Law R 47:172 Ja '47 60w

"An admirable book. . . There is little moralizing in Mr. Smith's book. It is not a tract intended to prove the value of collective bargaining. It is a source book of information about its objectives, techniques and subject-matter. . . Even old-timers in collective relationships will profit by checking their own experiences against some of Mr. Smith's conclusions." A. H. Raskin

+ N Y Times p30 Ja 26 '47 450w

"The author's experience as a corporation director of industrial relations and as a teacher of the subject in various colleges is manifested in the practicality of the tone throughout." L. B.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ja 26
'47 90w

SMITH, MOSES. Koussevitzky. 400p il $4 Allen,
Towne & Heath; for sale by Arco

B or 92 Koussevitzky, Sergei Alexandro-vitch 47-1929

"Serge Koussevitzky had a big career in Russia, followed it with an equally significant one in France and has crowned it with more than twenty years here, where he has not only integrated his work into the life of the country but has become a friend, leader and spokesman of America's creative forces in music. The story of his life, rich in action and accomplishment, is now told in a biography by Moses Smith, who was for years a music critic in Boston and later in charge of the masterworks section of Columbia Records." (N Y Times) Index.

Reviewed by Alexander Williams

— Atlantic 179:154 Ap '47 300w

"Mr. Smith's book traces Koussevitzky's career with more detail than has been made available before. . . But Mr. Smith's attitude is not really objective. It is true that he has much that is good to say about Koussevitzky, his stature as an artist, his generosity, his devotion to his art. But there is also, running through his account, an animosity which is not quite concealed. . . Mr. Smith was in a position to be aware of things not known to the ordinary music lover, and he has written an interesting account of the negotiations." L. A. Sloper

Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 6 '47
850w

"Very interesting to musical world; too full of professional details for general public." G. E. Chamberlain

Library J 72:318 F 15 '47 150w

"Mr. Smith has told the story comprehensively. He does not hesitate to be critical of Mr. Koussevitzky, but he also gives credit where credit is due. This biography does not belong to the flowery school of writing; it is sober, conscientious and perhaps too detailed for its own good. But the reader will learn a lot about musicians from it and will gain new respect for Koussevitzky's achievement." Howard Taubman

+ N Y Times p5 F 16 '47 1000w

Theatre Arts 32:69 Ja '48 170w

"If this book is not the last word on the great conductor, and undoubtedly it is not, it will satisfy many until a more definitive one appears."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:264 S '47 240w

SMITH, NEWLIN RUSSELL. Land for the small man; English and Welsh experience with publicly-supplied small holdings, 1860-1937. 287p maps pa $3 King's crown press
333.38 Land tenure—Great Britain. Agriculture—Economic aspects A47-359

"Considerations of economic and social order induced the British Parliament to empower county councils to purchase agricultural land and lease it to small holders. Twenty-five thousand small farmers, market gardeners, and part-time agriculturists were the beneficiaries of this program. Sufficient time has elapsed since the passage by the Parliament of the enabling act, in 1892, to permit analysis of the program in operation, and of its efficacy in terms of the purposes which the advocates and promoters of the scheme hoped to attain. The book reviews the social and economic origins of the movement and, on the basis of a large body of statistical data, examines the many and various economic factors which affected the operation of the program." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

SMITH, N. R.—Continued

"This excellent study of British and Welsh experience with publicly-supplied small holdings in the period from 1860 to 1937 should be required reading for most American public officials." Carey McWilliams

+ Ann Am Acad 253:248 S '47 750w

"Well documented and equipped with a detailed index, this study should prove of value to the student of the economic and social history of Great Britain."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:51 Mr '47 320w

SMITH, ORSINO CECIL. Identification and qualitative chemical analysis of minerals. 351p col pl $6.50 Van Nostrand

549.1 Mineralogy, Determinative. Chemistry, Analytic—Qualitative 47-1088

"Tables give specific gravity, hardness and other properties of 2000 minerals useful for identification. Sections on methods include tables of simple tests for investigating minerals, blow pipe tests used for identification, and a new scheme of qualitative analysis. Shows actual appearance of the minerals by many natural color plates and numerous plates in color showing appearance of fluorescent minerals, under ultra-violet light and blow pipe test results for various minerals are shown in full color." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 100w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:64 O '46

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:210 Je '47 230w

SMITH, ROBERT AURA. Divided India. (Whittlesey house publication) 259p il $3 McGraw

954 India—Politics and government 47-1225

Discussion of the Indian situation, taking up the demand of the Indians for political changes, the British commitment to withdrawal, and the mutual distrust of the two peoples. Social and economic problems are discussed; the part played by religion in the life of the people; and the obstacles to constitutional growth in the differing political philosophies of the Hindus and Moslems. Index.

Booklist 43:221 Mr 15 '47

"If one will deduct the occasional intrusion of a rather startling sympathy for the British Foreign Office, he will find this a valuable book." J. O. Supple

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 23 '47 190w

Current Hist 12:499 My '47 80w

"An important and valuable book."

+ Kirkus 14:615 D 1 '46 340w

"No one can object to Mr. Smith's desire to improve British-American relations. But in the case of this book, that desire—or, if not it, what else?—has led him to produce one of the more confused of the books recently published about India. For in his preoccupation with justifying Britain's policy toward India during the last ninety years he often gives an arbitrarily selective, sometimes even unintelligible, account of important topics. . . The better part of Mr. Smith's book is toward the end, where he gives a fairly clear recital of events during the war years and since."

W. N. Brown

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 F 23 '47 1350w

N Y Times p20 Mr 9 '47 650w

Reviewed by Marvin Sargent

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 29 '47 400w

Reviewed by Louis Fischer

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Mr 1 '47 800w

Springf'd Union p4 Ag 15 '47 210w

SMITH, ROBERT MILLER. Baseball; a historical narrative of the game, the men who have played it, and its place in American life. 362p $3.50 Simon & Schuster

796.357 Baseball

47-4836

"A book that has caught the spirit of baseball from its early days, full of the outstanding personalities, teams, events that have helped make baseball America's most popular sport. Thumbnailed sketches of the great, Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Christy Mathewson, Radbourne, Waddell, Hal Chase, etc. and many others who have made millions of fans. From strike-outs to bonehead plays, this has a lot of famous past history which will be remembered as long as baseball is a favorite game to see and read about, although none of the material is original and much of it is familiar." Kirkus

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Rissler

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 S 28 '47 470w

Kirkus 15:385 Jl 15 '47 90w

"Writing throughout is excellent; this is not a book, in short, intended only for baseball fans. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:1192 S 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 S 14 '47 450w

"Since he writes as the zealot rather than the critic, Mr. Smith's 'Baseball' teems with flavorful episodes. . . True, Mr. Smith skids occasionally in his identifications. . . And more than one authority will challenge his statement that Bob Feller peddled hot dogs in the Cleveland park before he started to whip his blazing fast balls past the bewildered batsmen. But then, 'Baseball' is no attempt at encyclopedic history. To every reader of the sports page, it will be an entertaining and satisfying volume." Richard Maney

+ N Y Times p22 S 14 '47 800w

"No baseball fan can help but like this book; it is intensely colorful, provocative, and a labor of infectious love by a man who knows the game thoroughly." Luther Nichols

+ San Francisco Chronicle p23 S 28 '47 600w

"I dare anyone to meet me under the the grandstand who says that this isn't the best book on baseball ever published. To be sure, some wisecracks will try to spike this praise by saying that so few serious books on baseball have been written that any new book doesn't have to be particularly good to win top billing. But even admitting that insufficient competition makes comparatives difficult, there is no need to hold back on the superlative." Norman Cousins

+ Sat R of Lit 30:24 S 13 '47 1100w

School & Society 66:335 O 25 '47 20w

SMITH, SHELLEY. Come and be killed! 242p $2.50 Harper

47-3821

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 15 '47 80w

Kirkus 15:178 Mr 15 '47 70w

"The fiend is easily the most fascinating of the characters, even if he (or she, as the case may be) is stuffed with standard ingredients and tricks that look dangerous a block away. . . [The book] has story interest, and it's good fun much of the way, if you care to take it like that." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 10 '47 230w

"Miss Smith's plausible tale of how Mrs. Jolly—rather like George Joseph Smith, the 'brides-of-the-bath' killer—lures lonely spinsters to an untimely end, packs a bigger punch than any dozen routine detective stories."

+ New Repub 116:29 My 26 '47 90w

"The long suspense and the excellent character-drawing more than make up for the lack of mystery in this unusual novel." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p34 My 25 '47 180w

"Unpretentiously written, and a superlative suspense story."

+ New Yorker 23:103 My 24 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 1 '47 100w

"Expertly contrived and deftly written chiller. No mystery about slayer's identity, but events leading up to her downfall are hackle-raising. Admirable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 My 24 '47 50w

SMITH, THOMAS VERNOR. Atomic power and moral faith; foreword by Robert J. Bernard. 56p $2 Claremont colleges

170 Atomic energy. International federation 47-975

Two lectures delivered at Claremont colleges. The author's "key words are courage and faith: 'high courage for the atomic age,' for both its dangers and its possibilities, resting on knowledge of the grounds of fear and hope; and 'the simple faith required for justice.'" (Christian Century)

Booklist 43:248 Ap 15 '47

"T. V. Smith is at his best—and that is very good indeed. . . The new atomic age has produced no clearer thinking, and the discussion of its issues has evoked nothing which, as literature, is half so good."

+ Christian Century 64:178 F 5 '47 110w
Cleveland Open Shelf p21 N '47

SMITHER, ETHEL LISLE. Picture book of Palestine; il. by Ruth King. 64p $1 Abingdon-Cokesbury

913.3 Palestine 47-30304

Short chapters describing life in Palestine in Bible times. There is information on houses, clothing, food, industries, farming, trees, flowers, and animals. The facts have been authenticated by both Christian and Jewish scholars. Illustrated with drawings.

Booklist 43:313 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:266 Jl '47 60w

Kirkus 15:100 F 15 '47 180w

"Illustrations are undistinguished but may prove useful for costumes and properties needed in plays about the period. This book will prove useful in church libraries and children's rooms in public libraries where there is a demand for this type of information. Recommended." M. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 100w

"Palestine of the Old Testament and the New is here described and pictured for children, so simply and clearly that the stage, one might say, is set for Bible reading with better understanding of the conditions under which its scenes took place. But it is by no means what we used to mean when we spoke of a 'Sunday-school book.' Its interest is general and good for any day of the week." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 My 11 '47 320w

"There is no dogma, so that Bible students of every creed will find it acceptable. Much scholarly research has gone into the writing but it makes easy and delightful reading. For Sunday school pupils and teachers, for parents who wish to enrich their children's religious education, this attractive little board-bound book will be worth many times its modest price. One can only wonder why it has not been done before." N. B. Baker

+ N Y Times p33 My 18 '47 150w

Sat R of Lit 30:35 Jl 12 '47 80w

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:122 Jl '47

SMITHSONIAN series; ed. by Charles Greeley Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. 12v 1929, 1934, 1938, 1943, 1944 il pl buckram $5.79 ea. set $69.50; fabrikoid $99; sturdite $129; leather $198 Series publishers, inc, 11 W. 42d st, N.Y. 18

500 Science

"The Smithsonian Series, formerly published as the Smithsonian Scientific Series, was noted in Subscription Books Bulletin in April and July 1930, and was reviewed more thoroughly in April 1934. . . The twelve volumes cover the major fields of scientific activity in which the Smithsonian Institution is interested and each has been written by members of the staff who are leaders in their fields. There is no attempt to cover the whole field of science, but the set presents the knowledge gathered by the work of a great museum in a form understandable and interesting to the layman. Each volume is a unit in itself. . . The present edition has been somewhat revised by the original authors of the volumes. Revision is chiefly in the form of new final chapters on recent activities, changes in certain appendices, bibliography, and minor corrections and insertions in the text." Subscription Bks Bul

"On the whole, knowledge in the fields covered by these volumes is basic, and discoveries subsequent to the original date of publication have not resulted in any major changes which would necessitate extreme revision. The final volume on Great Inventions, perhaps shows the need of fuller revision most clearly, though a number of recent developments have been added. It, too, is still valuable for historical purposes. . . The price still seems somewhat high, considering that text and plate revisions have been so minor. However, libraries possessing the original set may be interested in purchasing individual copies of popular volumes, although the changes in this edition do not seem sufficiently important to necessitate replacement of the entire set. For libraries and individuals wanting well-written, well-illustrated books in the fields covered by the set, The Smithsonian Series is recommended either as a whole or as individual volumes."

+ Subscription Bks Bul 17:35 Jl '46 750w

SMOCK, NELL STOLP. Little and big [il. by the author]. [24p] 50c Abingdon-Cokesbury 47-30408

Picture book for the very young, showing on opposite pages a small animal, and across from it the same animal grown larger.

"Two and three-year-olds will delight in it." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p12 O 14 '47 120w

Kirkus 15:334 Jl 1 '47 80w

"A slight story but one that has possibilities in several directions. Children like to imitate the sounds animals make, and this book lends itself to dramatization for young children. Also, it is a good story to read aloud. . . Recommended." Marian Webb

+ Library J 72:1199 S 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 N 16 '47 140w

Springf'd Republican p14B N 2 '47 70w

SMYTH, DAME ETHEL MARY. Impressions that remained; memoirs; introd. by Ernest Newman. 509p il $5 Knopf

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 46-20769

"This autobiography of a composer has been available only in a small imported edition; this is the first one-volume edition and the first American printing. The author was an energetic, quick-tempered Englishwoman, an eminent musician, a militant suffragette, and the friend of Brahms, Grieg, and other musicians. She was born in 1858, and these reminiscences of life in England, Germany, and Italy end in 1892, and were first published in 1919." (Booklist) Index.

SMYTH, E. M.—Continued

Booklist 43:169 F 1 '47

"In the pages of this book can be found the personal friends and famous contemporaries of Miss Smyth—Brahms, the Empress Eugénie, Grieg, Anton Rubinstein, Clara Schumann, Tchaikovsky, Wagner—all of whom are met with through the medium of the author's keen wit and broad, human understanding."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 O 27 '46 180w

"The author of Wagner's biography, considers 'Impressions That Remained' among the best six autobiographies in English: a dictum I cannot endorse. It remains for someone to edit her four or five volumes of memoirs, reducing the clutter of family material and adding her reminiscences of the Empress Eugénie and suffragette exploits to her memories of Germany and famous musicians. Dame Ethel Smyth must certainly have been a stimulating companion, and if she is also the greatest woman composer, it seems the time to revive some of her compositions." E. V. R. Wyatt

Commonweal 45:329 Ja 10 '47 950w

"A period piece, overlong, very Victorian, and a little precious for the modern reader; Limited in appeal to musical circles, largely."

Kirkus 14:406 Ag 15 '46 120w

"When such a man as Ernest Newman issues a critical appraisal the judicious take it seriously, even though it may be a literary, not a musical, judgment. The eminent music critic and biographer of Wagner calls Ethel Smyth's memoirs 'one of the half-dozen best autobiographies in the English language'... Vivid, tempestuous, amusing and written apparently with great honesty, the book certainly deserves a place of high distinction, despite its puzzlement over a problem that is no mystery to the modern reader. Perhaps Ernest Newman was not extravagant, in any event, he was not very extravagant." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14 O 20 '46 1050w

SNEDEKER, MRS CAROLINE DALE

(PARKE). Luke's quest; il. by Nora Unwin. 208p $2 Doubleday

Luke, Saint—Fiction 47-11184

In this novel for young people the author tells the story of Luke, the physician and beloved companion of St Paul, from the days of his youth as a Greek priest in a pagan temple to the execution of Paul outside the city of Rome.

Booklist 44:118 N 15 '47

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 18 '47 300w

"Out of the scanty available material on Luke, Mrs. Snedeker has woven a lovely sensitive romance." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:360 S '47 160w

Kirkus 15:430 Ag 15 '47 80w

"Showing much research and a fine feeling for the period, this fictionalized account is stirring and reverently presented to young people. Recommended." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 72:1695 D 1 '47 60w

"As a story for young people 'Luke's Quest' suffers from impoverished language and sketchy characterization which are at variance with the deep emotional impact of the theme and the color of the period. A kind of surface sentimentality mocks incidents of harrowing import, passed over lightly because they are being told to children. Readers of 11 to 15 may enjoy it, but if they have read any of Miss Snedeker's previous splendid books, they will be disappointed, for the drama found in them is absent here." V. H. Mathews

+ N Y Times p27 Ja 18 '48 220w

Reviewed by Margaret Goodloe

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47 160w

Sat R of Lit 30:61 N 15 '47 70w

SNELL, GEORGE DIXON. Shapers of American fiction, 1798-1947. 316p $3.75 Dutton

813.09 American fiction—History and criticism. Authors, American 47-3071

A critical study of imaginative literature in the United States from 1798 to 1947. According to the author "there are four principal traditions in American fiction, each with its separate forerunners. Thus, literary history begins four times—with Cooper's 'The Spy' (1821), with Brockden Brown's 'Wieland' (1798), with Irving's 'Sketch Book' (1819-21), and with Howell's 'A Modern Instance' (1881). Mr. Snell attaches importance to these volumes as the first in each instance of a major literary genre: the romantic, the apocalyptic, the temperamentalist, and the realistic. To these separate fictional traditions the author traces all our important contemporary work." (N Y Times) Index.

"At best, his studies make us want to read the representative works which he cites. Yet, like many another literary historian, he tends to tread his fictionists as museum specimens. That is, he implies that novels are begotten by a deliberate conjunction of 'influences' and 'isms,' rather than by flesh-and-blood writers seeking in each creation the best form into which to pour their materials. He implies a little too strongly, perhaps, that good novels grow out of novels, not out of life, though he himself confesses that it is impossible 'to pigeonhole anything so Protean as the creative spirit.' But this reviewer's fault-finding must not be magnified; on the whole, his book serves as a substantial guide for those who have not yet encountered his writers." Robert Berkelman

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 My 22 '47 490w

Kirkus 15:205 Ap 1 '47 80w

"'Shapers of American Fiction,' to this reviewer's regret, does not offer either significant scholarship or a penetrating criticism. The scholarship is ineffectual. Twenty-four writers are studied in some detail, and there are brief references to another fifty. The impression is one of a hasty glance at the offering of a book stall. Furthermore, although a critic has a right to his individual taste, it is startling to find only passing allusions to Cabell, Dell, Fitzgerald, Glasgow, Anderson and Wright... Mr. Snell has correctly sensed the need for a review of American novelists, and he has approached his task with a quite sufficient knowledge of his books. But his study is not successful either as scholarship or appreciation. I think he fails because he has not clearly established in his own mind his intent as a critic." G. L. Joughin

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p23 My 25 '47 1250w

"By grouping the masterpieces of the present with those of the past, Mr. Snell immensely stimulates both his own and his reader's critical faculties. Because he is an enthusiastic writer and reader of novels himself, his insights are fresh and clear, his conclusions stimulating and largely valid. If we feel constantly like quarreling with him, it is because he is a thoroughly worthy antagonist. He deals in no second-hand impressions or opinions; and, for this reason, the perspective he supplies should encourage the rethinking of old and fixed ideas." R. E. Spiller

+ N Y Times p3 My 18 '47 800w

"A critical and fairly easygoing story... Some of the author's judgments are dogmatic—as when he lumps Hemingway and Steinbeck with Edith Wharton and Henry James as Temperamentalists—but his book is full of lively and provocative opinions, even if they provoke only opposition."

+ New Yorker 23:119 My 3 '47 160w

"A rare compound of solid scholarship, a savor for words and an earthy sense. Fainstaking research is evident on every page of this book, from the analysis of Ahab vs. the White Whale to that of the sick mental wastelands of Studs Lonigan and crew." E. V. McQuade

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 My 12 '47 900w

"As a rule, such books represent the best that has been thought and said by everybody else on the same subject. But the present survey has enough points of interest to escape from this unhappy category. . . Yet Mr. Snell's four categories of native fiction are valuable. They illuminate some obscure phases of the work of our best novelists, and they bring out some new connections between a series of apparently disparate individuals. . . On the whole, though, while 'The Shapers of American Fiction' is not a distinctive work of literary criticism, it is an intelligent and very readable introduction to some of the major figures in our letters." Maxwell Geismar

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:21 My 31 '47 600w
Wis Lib Bul 43:79 My '47

SNIDER, JOSEPH LYONS. Guarantee of work and wages. 191p $2.75 Harvard univ. Division of research

331.23 Wages 47-1991

"Arranged in three parts and a summary, this study presents a compact and incisive analysis of company plans for the guarantee of work and wages. The investigations include abandoned plans as well as apparently successful ones. Part I discusses the experience of industry with plans in effect, and with those which have been discontinued; Part II offers suggestions to management and labor on next steps that might be taken; Part III deals with long-range considerations." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"This study should be read widely by those officials in management who are seeking ways and means for the improvement of labor relations and increased production through new incentives. Labor leaders should become familiar with the contents of this volume, and it may well be assigned as collateral reading in university courses on personnel management." A. G. Taylor

+ Ann Am Acad 253:233 S '47 420w

"This is a study for the practical man rather than for the economist or specialist. It presents no basically new data, nor does it attempt to break new analytic ground for the student of the problem. If the reader seeks a mine of information, he had better dig into the extensive veins of the Latimer report. Mr. Snider is particularly weak in his treatment of the probable effects of guaranteed wage plans and other stabilization devices on the stability of the economy. . . On the practical side, the book should be very helpful to executives (and labor leaders too, for that matter) in helping them understand the nature and advantages, from a business viewpoint, of schemes of this sort. It would be a particularly good volume to put in the hands of persons whose initial reaction to guaranteed wage schemes is antagonistic." Max Millikan

+ — Management R 36:355 Je '47 480w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:161 Je '47 270w

SNOW, EDGAR. Stalin must have peace; with an introd. by Martin Sommers. 184p $2.50 Random house

947.084 Russia—Foreign relations 47-30249

"The Introduction and Chapters I, II and III of this book originally appeared as articles in The Saturday Evening Post." The author, a veteran newspaper correspondent, claims that the Soviet Union threat to us exists only in our fears; that Stalin would have everything to lose, and that he could not wage a successful war with us.

Reviewed by Bernard Pares
Atlantic 180:121 Jl '47 550w

Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Je 1 '47 130w

"Mr. Snow tangles with the paramount problem of how to deal with Russia in the name of peace. The objective is laudable. But to describe his book as convincing, its premises as unassailable, or its reasoning as flawless, would be to depart from careful judgment. . . Mr. Snow's book brings home with fervor and sincerity the perils of a new arms race, the dangers of any final break with Russia, and the ominous portents of the current international drift. Here is a plea for stronger peace efforts—a plea which resounds with the approval of us all. But Mr. Snow's landmarks do not adequately point out the way." DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p14 My 13 '47 800w

Foreign Affairs 26:228 O '47 60w

"A short book—but one that packs a punch, and backs it with solid facts and sound reason."

+ Kirkus 15:179 Mr 15 '47 360w

"Here is a book indescribably important which everyone should read. . . He writes well; his knowledge is sound; and though he may provoke quick anger, he finally inspires new and vital comprehension. . . Highly recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:638 Ap 15 '47 110w

Nation 164:721 Je 14 '47 180w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 116:31 Ap 28 '47 1200w

Reviewed by Joseph Barnes

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
My 18 '47 800w

"Snow, veteran correspondent has studied Marxist-Leninist-Stalinist theory not for the sake of doctrine but as a clue to everyday Russian policy. It is hardly too much to say that his study is the most penetrating analysis of the Soviet which has yet appeared in the American press." H. E. Salisbury

+ N Y Times p1 Ap 27 '47 1000w

"Mr. Snow is surely one of the most temperate of the journalists who have tackled the Soviet problem in the past few years. This book . . . has the chiding tone of a kindly uncle and admonishes us (displaying an impressive array of facts to make the point) that we shouldn't go off half-cocked about Russia."

New Yorker 23:118 My 3 '47 110w

Reviewed by Maurice Hindus

Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 24 '47 450w

SNOW, EDWARD ROWE. Pilgrim returns to Cape Cod. 413p il $3.75 Yankee pub.

917.449 Cape Cod 46-7923

The author took a seven weeks' walking tour around Cape Cod, collecting stories of adventure, shipwrecks, storms, and rescues, and other strange things which have happened to Cape Codders. Each chapter is devoted to a single town or community. Illustrated with photographs and drawings. Index.

Booklist 43:168 F 1 '47

"Such an abundance of anecdotes, legends, and stories are included in the 13 chapters . . . that the book may be read with enjoyment in small amounts. Although the major portion of the account deals with past history, Mr. Snow catches some of the present-day flavor of the Cape without emphasizing the change in character which has transformed the fishing, glass-making, sea-going, thrifty Cape Cod of this book into the happy, carefree playground now known to thousands of summer visitors."

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 D 7 '46 360w

"The book has many virtues, chief among them being the enormous amount of information that Mr. Snow collected in so brief a sojourn, and which he presents in so lively a fashion. The volume is full of enthusiasm yet free from sentimentality—a combination as rare as it is welcome. It is a buoyant and vigorous chronicle and it will give honest pleasure to many readers." H. C. Kittredge

+ New Eng Q 20:130 Mr '47 490w

SNOW, JACK. Dark music, and other spectral tales. 208p $2.50 Herald pub. co, 45 E. 17th st, N.Y. 3

47-2785

Eighteen short stories of the weird, fantastic, and supernatural.

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Mr 23 '47
250w

"Most of the stories are badly overwritten, often ruining by sheer verbosity an original idea with good possibilities. Mr. Snow is announced on the back of the book as the current historian of the Land of Oz and a member of the NBC promotion department. Probably a writer on the supernatural doesn't need to remain steeped in the atmosphere of the charnel house, but in Mr. Snow's case a little of it would help." R. F. H.

— Spring'd Union p9 Mr 15 '47 90w

SNYDER, LLEWELLYN R. Essential business mathematics; F. G. Nichols, consulting editor. 434p $2.75 McGraw

511.8 Arithmetic, Commercial 47-2405

"Although this work is intended for college use, the topics covered and the manner of presentation make it suitable also as a home study text and reference book. The first part provides a concise but clear review of basic operations in arithmetic including operations with fractions and a short outline of the Roman system of notation. The second part treats operations in interest and discounts, retail markup and markdown, inventory and stock control, distribution of profits in a partnership, purchase and sale of stocks and bonds, social security payments, wages, insurance, property taxes, amortization of mortgages, and in finding averages and drawing graphs. One of the appendixes illustrates short cuts in multiplication. The presentation is largely arithmetical, and a prior knowledge of algebra is not required of the student." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:269 My 1 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 32:12 Ja '47

SOBOL, LOUIS. Some days were happy; foreword by Gene Fowler, 210p $2.75 Random house

B or 92 47-30483

Reminiscences of the author's childhood and youth spent in a Jewish home in Connecticut in the early 1900's. The author is now a Broadway columnist and comments on New York are interspersed with stories of the simpler joys of country living.

Booklist 44:10 S 1 '47

Reviewed by Dale Harrison
Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 21 '47
230w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

"It has some of the values, in a warm appreciation of the qualities in Jewish home life, of Harriet Lane Levy's 920 O'Farrell Street but doesn't cut as deep."

+ Kirkus 15:330 Je 15 '47 150w

"A series of short episodes, wittily told, give a good picture of life in Connecticut towns, mostly Waterbury, pre-World War I. Of special interest is the description of the Waterbury Republican." R. W. Henderson
+ Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 80w

"It contains an affectionate tribute to a home and family, but Mr. Sobol is not one to be either maudlin or wetly sentimental. He is a good reporter, and one of the virtues of a good reporter is an air of detachment and a fellowship with the doctrine that true facts speak best for themselves. Those days were happy, and, like the lily, they need no exterior paint. Mr. Sobol also has a respect for the English language as opposed to breast-beating Broadwayese." Lewis Robbins
+ N Y Times p10 Ag 31 '47 500w

"Mr. Sobol's book is considerably marred, in my opinion, by the inclusion of vignettes of more recent events—Manhattan happenings in the O. O. McIntyre tradition, gossip chit-chat about Broadway and nightclub personalities, mawkish and sentimental tear-jerkers and atmosphere bits. I advise the reader to skip these italicized inserts and stick to Mr. Sobol's heartwarming memoirs of his youth." S. H. Hay
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:12 Ag 30 '47 850w

SOBY, JAMES THRALL. Salvador Dali. 2d rev ed 108p il $3 Museum of modern art

759.6 Dali, Salvador 47-857

"An enlarged edition of a book first [published in 1942, Book Review Digest 1942], with additional text and illustrations that include Dali's later work. Appended are lists of Dali's exhibitions, of films and ballets in which he has collaborated, his jewelry, and a bibliography." Booklist

Booklist 43:226 Mr 15 '47

"Mr. Soby's survey, now in its second revised edition, is sympathetic yet objective, authoritative without being academic. Eighty plates, four in color, give a thorough and revealing cross-section of the artist's work, including his designs for ballet and film. One more in the superior series of monographs on modern artists published by the Museum of Modern Art."

+ Theatre Arts 31:70 F '47 80w

SOCIAL SCIENCE RESEARCH COUNCIL. Committee on historiography. Theory and practice in historical study; a report. 177p pa $1.75 The council

907 History—Historiography 46-3597

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Looking at the book as a whole, one is driven to the conclusion that it was compiled by a committee that did not know its own mind or quite what it was supposed to be doing and so tried to solve its problems by farming out a few matters upon which it happened to achieve some agreement. That in two cases the results have been good is to the credit of the respective authors rather than to that of the committee." E. R. Adair + Am J Soc 52:458 Mr '47 650w

"The reviewer must confess that he stands somewhat aghast at the slenderness and conventionality of the product, in the light of the talent available, the funds consumed, and the time exhausted in the project." H. E. Barnes
+ Am Soc R 12:360 Je '47 1050w

Reviewed by B. F. Hoselitz
J Pol Econ 55:387 Ag '47 600w

Reviewed by Oscar Handlin
New Eng Q 19:538 D '46 900w

Reviewed by W. E. Caldwell
Social Forces 25:358 Mr '47 750w

"These well-meant and naive propositions are a lame conclusion to the whole matter, and something more robust is required for the classroom, for which they are recommended. As they stand they beg every question, and in particular that of definitions."

— Times [London] Lit Sup p405 Ag 9 '47
1200w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:63 Mr '47 290w

SOKOLOFF, BORIS FEDOROVICH. Jealousy; a psychiatric study. 263p $2.50 Howell, Soskin 157.3 Jealousy Med47-630

"Sokoloff sketches the wide range of jealousy, beginning with the primitive manifestations in dogs. He concludes that jealousy is a negative and atavistic emotion which can be inhibited by proper training. . . He maintains that when children or adults are able to recognize and admit their jealous feelings they have won half the battle against its dangers. This book is filled with accounts of those who lost the battle, often with the most tragic results." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Kirkus 15:87 F 1 '47 100w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p37

My 11 '47 600w

"Dr. Sokoloff has produced an interesting and serious study of an important part of our emotional life and a real contribution to the popular literature on psychological subjects."

F. G. Slaughter

+ N Y Times p32 Mr 23 '47 700w

SOKOLOFF, NATALIE B. See Scott, N. A.

SOLBERG, HARRY LELAND, and others.
Elementary heat power. 480p il $4.75 Wiley
621 Heat engines 46-8280

"College text presenting a balanced treatment of construction principles of operation and performance of power generating equipment. Has problems dealing with material and energy balances. One chapter on the gas power turbine plant." (Library J) Chapter bibliographies. Index.

Library J 71:1053 Ag '46 60w

Reviewed by James Stokley

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28

F 23 '47 120w

"Although the treatment is intended for college students who have had courses in chemistry and physics, most of the text can be understood without such preliminary education. The book should therefore be useful to general readers who wish to know such things as what methods have been developed to obtain high efficiencies in power plants or how a gas turbine operates."

N Y New Tech Bks 32:3 Ja '47

SOLOMON, MRS HANNAH (GREENEBAUM).
Fabric of my life; the autobiography of Hannah G. Solomon. 263p il $2.50 Bloch

B or 92

47-734

"The founder of the National council of Jewish women has written a very personal story of her life since 1858. She found time not only to be a leader of many worth-while projects in Chicago and to represent American and Jewish women internationally on several occasions, but also to be an unusually good wife and mother." Booklist

Booklist 43:289 My 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Mr 9 '47
110w

SOLOVEYCHIK, GEORGE. Potemkin, soldier, statesman, lover and consort of Catherine of Russia. 346p il $3.50 Norton

B or 92 Potemkin, Grigorii Aleksandrovich, kniaz'. Catherine II, empress of Russia

47-11345

Biography of Potemkin, who for seventeen years was chief adviser to Catherine the Great, and part of that time her lover. The author is Russian by birth and is now a British subject. Chronological table. Index.

Kirkus 15:564 O 1 '47 170w

"An exceptionally attractive biography. . . Book is based on rich documentary material. . . Well-written book which will please adult readers in public libraries and deserves also a place in college libraries." F. E. Hirsch

+ Library J 72:1539 N 1 '47 140w

"It is the merit of this book that the personal lives of its two chief figures, Potemkin and Catherine, are described in terms of the expansive, romantic, restless age in which they lived. This is a careful, scholarly study of the Russia which seemed so likely, about the time the United States began, to join the European world, and of the deep forces in Russian life which eventually made that promise false. It is good reading." Joseph Barnes

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ja 11 '48 550w

"This very readable biography is based on a considerable amount of research and a good knowledge of historical literature pertaining to the reign of Catherine II of Russia. . . Mr. Soloveytschik wisely refrains from applying later ideas and standards to that baroque world, which had its counterparts in other countries of Europe. He has written a delightful book about a complicated and powerful personality. For its reading interest alone, the volume deserves to become widely known. And it is good history, too." D. F. White

Sat R of Lit 31:27 Ja 17 '48 750w

"Mr. Soloveytschik, a Russian-born British subject, has put sound historical research and judgment into his book and has written without extreme bias, nor does he force into his 18th century scene, any 20th century social concepts. As a result his narrative of the fantastic, barbaric splendor of Catherine's medieval empire, of the eastern magnificence and sometimes contrasting personal squalor in which Potemkin lived . . . take on virility and authenticity." L. S. Munn

+ Spring'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 550w

SOLOVEYCHIK, GEORGE. Russia in perspective; with a foreword by G. P. Gooch 244p $3 Norton

947 Russia—History

47-2113

A rapid survey of Russian history and international relations, written to show that the questions asked today concerning Russia's attitudes and policies differ little from those asked in the past, that Soviet Russia and old Russia are essentially one and the same.

"The highest tribute which one can pay this book is that it is journalism of a very superior order. The author cuts no new scholarly furrows. Most of the material which he presents will be familiar to those versed in Russian history. Yet as a vade mecum for those who come fresh to the Russian problem, the book has a useful rôle to play. It is soundly grounded on the premise that the Soviet régime is the child of Russia's prerevolutionary past, and that it is therefore important to study that régime against the perspective of the historical factors which have conditioned its emergence and development." Merle Fainsod

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:801 Ag '47 550w

Foreign Affairs 26:228 O '47 30w

"Mr. Soloveytschik seems to allow his judgment to be influenced excessively by his dislike of what he calls 'Leftist intellectuals.' His book tends, in consequence, to become a polemic conducted on this level. The most interesting and useful chapters are those which deal briefly with the earlier history of Russia." B. de C. I.

Manchester Guardian p3 Je 13 '46 110w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 164:776 Je 28 '47 330w

"Mr. Soloveytschik does not rise above the very understandable prejudices of a white emigré. He has not apparently lived in the Soviet Union and his deductions from what he has read are generally wide of the mark." John Lawrence

New Statesman & Nation 31:288 Ap 20
'46 120w

"Mr. Soloveytschik cannot prove his thesis, but he offers important evidence to sustain it, and his generally objective approach is a welcome antidote to the emotional and often hysterical tone of so much that is being written about Russia today. Both the American public and American statesmen badly need something of the perspective that can be derived from a study of Russia's past, and it is refreshing to find an author who can at once be a severe critic of Soviet policy at home and abroad, and yet not be carried away by fears of an irreconcilable conflict between Russia and the Western World." F. R. Dulles

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36
My 11 '47 650w

SOLOVEYITCHIK, GEORGE—Continued

"Both the title and introduction of 'Russia In Perspective' give promise of a short history of the Soviet Union which might, in some measure, relieve the aura of mystery and menace that currently envelop the great Eastern Power. Unfortunately, that promise is short-lived." A. C. Book

— San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ap 6 '47
400w

Times [London] Lit Sup p219 My 11 '46
450w

SOMERVILLE, JOHN. Soviet philosophy; a study of theory and practice. 269p $3.75 Philosophical lib.

197 Philosophy, Russian 47-3367
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by H. J. Morgenthau
Am J Soc 53:228 N '47 600w

"In the flood of books on Soviet Russia now appearing this one occupies a distinctive place. So far as I know it is the most comprehensive, concise and lucid exposition of the whole of Soviet philosophy available in English. It is fairly objective, although there is little criticism of Soviet practice, and the soft pedal is put on its cruelties and inconsistencies." J. A. Leighton

+ — Am Soc R 12:126 F '47 1000w

Reviewed by P. B. Anderson
Ann Am Acad 250:148 Mr '47 750w

"Written in non-technical language, this survey of first principles will prove especially valuable to the growing legion of close students of Soviet civilization in the Anglo-Saxon world." Henry Shapiro

+ Atlantic 179:158 Ap '47 650w
Cleveland Open Shelf p5 Mr '47
Current Hist 12:375 Ap '47 60w

Reviewed by T. V. Smith
Ethics 57:218 Ap '47 1900w
Foreign Affairs 25:527 Ap '47 20w

"An objective exposition and analysis of Soviet philosophy and practice would meet a genuine educational need. Even a tendentious account would still be serviceable were it based on authentic fact. Unfortunately, in this book Mr. Somerville has written a crude piece of apologetics which would hardly warrant notice save that it treats of some subjects with which not many are familiar. The author pretends merely to report the facts and not to evaluate them, but at almost every point he justifies what he fuds, answers in advance hypothetical criticisms, sometimes with derision, and, most culpable of all, suppresses relevant information." Sidney Hook

— Nation 164:188 F 15 '47 1250w

"Dr. Somerville's most important contribution to the understanding of Soviet thought by the layman lies in Chapters III, V, and VI. Chapter VII is also rewarding. . . Academic philosophers and, particularly, the exponents of the different schools of Marxist thought will probably find a great deal to criticize in these chapters. Nevertheless, to the layman, unable or unwilling to grope his way through the underbrush of Marxian writings without some guidance, these chapters are a real boon. Other parts of the book are less impressive." D. F. White

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 F 22 '47 850w

Reviewed by M. H. Williams
Social Forces 25:470 My '47 850w
Times [London] Lit Sup p31 Ja 18 '47
2050w

SOMMER, ALFRED. Photoelectric cells. 104p
1l $2.75 Chemical pub. co.

537.53 Photoelectricity 47-2793

"Short British text on photoelectric cells of emission type, written for those who wish to know about the theory, manufacture, types and applications of photoelectric cells. Application deals mainly with problems of a purely photoelectric nature as distinct from circuit and design problems." Library J

"A two-page bibliography gives numerous references to early and recent literature on photoelectric phenomena. This book is not mathematical but does contain numerous tables and illustrations which make it a practical reference work for those working on, or interested in, this field." Ralph Stair

Chem & Eng N 25:2322 Ag 11 '47 220w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:316 My 15 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:13 Ja '47

SONDEL, MRS BESS SELTZER. Are you telling them? 292p $2.95 Prentice-Hall

808.5 Public speaking. Conversation 47-3311

The author's purpose is to teach the reader 'how to converse well and make speeches.' Mrs Sondel is a teacher of speech at the University College of the University of Chicago. Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

"Here is a book that should have been written a long time ago. It uses a novel and modern approach in emphasizing the personal aspect of conversation and speech. Its treatment of the topic is informal and largely unorthodox. It releases one from many speaking inhibitions and stresses naturalness even in the most formal presentation of factual data." Gustav Egloff

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1392 My 12 '47 450w

"This is a vividly written, consistently useful and consistently entertaining book." Struthers Burt

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ap 6 '47
450w

Cleveland Open Shelf p14 Jl '47
Kirkus 15:92 F 1 '47 170w

"Although Miss Sondel's approach is personal, her language involves, along with the staccato of conversation, the special vocabulary of philosophy—a combination that makes her statements sound easier to understand than they are. The book should be welcomed by Mr. Adler's widespread public."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24
My 25 '47 250w

School and Society 66:400 N 22 '47 10w

SOPER, EDMUND DAVISON. Racism, a world issue. 304p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

323.1 Race problems 47-639

"This book is the result of group thinking of experts in the field of race relationships. It began as a seminar on 'Race' held in Chicago in 1942-43, preparatory for the conference on 'Christian Bases of World Order' at Delaware, Ohio, in March, 1943. Ten subsequent seminars were held on 'Racism and World Order' during 1943-44, and a conference on the same subject followed at Garrett Biblical Institute in 1944. At this latter conference Dr. Soper was given the responsibility of preparing a book for general use based on the findings of these various groups." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The presentation is notably objective, diverse viewpoints being stated with candor and insight. Naturally, the book suffers from the defects of its merits. Its brevity and comprehensive scope make it popular and somewhat superficial, in spite of its general validity. . . At no point can the analysis be carried much beyond surface levels. . . However, this book should serve a useful purpose. The reviewer knows of no other work in the field at once so comprehensive, so clear in the exposition of racial issues, and so fair in judgment." F. H. Hankins

Ann Am Acad 252:162 Jl '47 420w

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

"The volume could be important had not the author's theological interpretation of scientific fact resulted in a confusion of religious and racial issues." T. G. Z.

— Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 6 '47
150w

"This study is truly the result of group thinking from a Christian imperative. Dr. Soper begins this well documented book with a short discussion of the anthropology and sociology of race. No new scientific insights are given, but previous studies are competently summarized." H. A. Jack

+ Christian Century 64:303 Mr 5 '47 850w

Reviewed by Leo Shapiro
N Y Times p28 F 16 '47 300w

SORENSEN, MRS VIRGINIA (EGGERTSEN).
Neighbors. 311p $3 Reynal

47-31092

Portrays the struggle between two families dwelling in a valley in the Colorado sheep raising country. John Kels, ex-Denver school teacher was the newcomer; Phineas Roe, the old timer, who resented John Kels and his large family. The attempts to oust the Kels family went on until the marriage of Call Kels and Ann Roe, and the tragic death of the Roes' eldest son, brought the warfare to an end.

Booklist 44:17 S 1 '47

"'The Neighbors' is a sensitive, well-written and eminently readable book which adds appreciably to Mrs. Sorensen's considerable stature as a novelist." Ben Kartman

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 14 '47 360w

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 1 '47 460w

"It might have been a fine and important novel. As it stands, it is badly in need of blue pencilling, drastic editing to control the wandering from the thread of narrative. Both in style and content, it too often flags and lags."

— Kirkus 15:321 Je 15 '47 190w

"Background of sheep raising adds color to the book. Recommended for general reading." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 70w

"'The Neighbors' is thoughtfully written, always with a satisfying knowledge of its background and a sure eye for detail. It somewhat combines the open-air romance of a good Western with the realism of social and economic actualities." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 24 '47 750w

"The tale around which [the author] weaves her plea is not new but the old one of an ordinary family quitting the city to start afresh on the land. Yet it is the very familiarity of the venture, the recognizable emotions of the Kels family as they settle, full of hope, into their new life that brings Miss Sorensen's message home to the reader... It is in delineating the atmosphere of the two divergent households that the author writes most convincingly." Andrea Parke

+ N Y Times p7 Ag 31 '47 600w

"An engaging, human story, in which Mrs. Sorensen uses her head as well as her heart and is able to give a good account of herself in the process."

+ New Yorker 23:78 Ag 23 '47 100w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ag 31 '47 70w

"On the surface of it, Virginia Sorensen has answered her previous critics pretty well, and this story would probably win her first prize in almost any novel contest. But as Vardis Fisher has intimated, writing for the sake of writing is a devilish thing to shake loose... The serene drama of everyday family life apparently does not in itself carry quite enough kick for her... Gratuitous melodrama, so out of place in the pastoral scene, she still finds difficult to do without... Mrs. Sorensen, unlike most 'practising craftsmen' on the scene, has capability in great abundance. It might be realized as soon as she forgets that she is one of them." E. L. McKittrick

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 Ag 23 '47 600w

SOROKIN, PITIRIM ALEKSANDROVICH.

Society, culture, and personality: their structure and dynamics; a system of general sociology. 742p $7.50; college ed $5 Harper
301 Sociology, Civilization 47-4128

"This work attempts to present a system of sociology as a generalizing science of sociocultural phenomena possessing its own set of referential principles, its own meaningful-causal method, and its own special task among the other social and humanistic disciplines. The work unfolds a systematic theory of the structure and dynamics of social, cultural, and personality systems. It is little concerned with physical, biological, and other 'presociological' problems; instead it confines itself to a study of sociocultural phenomena in their structural and dynamic aspects." (Pref) Index.

"I do not imagine that this book will find a very large sale or circulation, but I think it merits respectful consideration." F. N. House

+ Am J Soc Sci 53:225 N '47 450w

Reviewed by J. H. Fichter
Cath World 166:183 N '47 300w

Reviewed by Sidney Hook
N Y Times p4 Ag 17 '47 1800w

School & Society 66:192 S 6 '47 20w

Social Studies 38:379 D '47 10w

SOUTHALL, JAMES POWELL COCKE. In the days of my youth, when I was a student in the University of Virginia, 1888-1893. 197p $3 Univ. of N.C. press

B or 92 Virginia, University 47-4451

Memoirs of the author's childhood in Richmond and his years at the University of Virginia as student and young instructor. Mr Southall was a professor of physics at Columbia for thirty years and now, as professor emeritus, has returned to his beloved native state to live in Charlottesville.

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 15 '47 140w

Reviewed by B. P. Rauh
Christian Science Monitor p11 Ag 23 '47 300w

Reviewed by D. H. Moseley
Commonweal 46:198 Je 6 '47 270w
School & Society 66:16 Jl 5 '47 20w

SOUTHARD, FRANK ALLAN. Finances of European liberation, with special reference to Italy; pub. for the Carnegie endowment for int. peace. 206p $3 King's crown press

332 Finance—Europe. Finance—Italy. Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe A46-5869

"Written by a former financial advisor of the allied military forces in the Mediterranean area, this book presents a useful summary and analysis of financial problems connected with the liberation of Europe. Topics covered include currency policies, public and private finance, foreign exchange and trade, military procurement and spending, and control of inflation. Attention is focused on Italy, with briefer treatment of other countries." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Index.

"Professor Southard's volume is a genuine contribution to an understanding of the use of military and other currencies in occupied and liberated European countries, and to an understanding of the many financial problems which exist in countries uprooted by war." N. L. Silverstein

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:580 Je '47 700w

"This book is heartily recommended not only to students of money and public finance but also to persons more broadly interested in international affairs. It is a tightly written book, clear and concise in its presentation, and a valuable record for future reference. It is to be hoped that the Carnegie Foundation will find it possible to stimulate similar studies on those parts of Europe not covered here, and on the Far East, when conditions permit." W. J. Ronan

SOUTHARD, F. A.—Continued

+ Ann Am Acad 250:145 Mr '47 440w

Current Hist 11:511 D '46 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:522 Ap '47 40w

"Although there remain a few controversial issues which are not always fully solved by Professor Southard, his book is both an extremely capable exposition of monetary and financial problems under the abnormal conditions of total warfare and a critical analysis of the major monetary and financial policies designed to cope with the conflicting requirements arising under military occupation." B. F. Hoselitz

+ J Pol Econ 55:379 Ag '47 1550w

"Dr. Southard has done all students of this field a great service in writing the story of the finances of European liberation and in giving a keen analysis of their effects. Opinions will differ as to the wisdom of the policies pursued." H. S. Miller

+ Pol Sci Q 62:593 D '47 1000w

"The description of the financial policies followed by the occupation forces is well rounded. Criticisms are limited chiefly to various aspects of currency policies and procedures. The book is addressed to the professional economist, but should be of value to more general readers desiring information regarding the financial problems faced by the occupation forces."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:51 Mr '47 130w

SOUTHWELL, JOHN T. Getting a job in television. 120p il $2 McGraw

621.388 Television as a profession 47-6085

"Manual includes information which will be useful to persons seeking a job in television with analysis of various jobs, remuneration and capacities for obtaining them." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:64 O 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Gilbert Seldes

N Y Times p5 Ag 10 '47 280w

SOUTHWORTH, JAMES GRANVILLE. Poetry of Thomas Hardy. 250p $3 Columbia univ. press

821 Hardy, Thomas 47-4418

Study and analysis of the poetry of Thomas Hardy, in which the author concludes that even though Hardy has touches of greatness he is not a great poet. Index.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

"Of the deepest interest to students of Hardy and of his period, Southworth's book is also of positive value to every reader who likes Hardy's poetry, or wishes to learn for himself the full measure of its peculiar and often veiled beauty." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ag 17 '47 140w

"This latest study of Thomas Hardy is strictly for the reader who can enjoy over 230 pages of exhaustive analysis on a poet's thought, technique, and artistic achievement. The work is so scholarly in its treatment that even the Hardy enthusiast may be frightened away, if his pleasure is chiefly in Hardy's prose; and certainly the reader who enjoys poetry in only a passive way will not stick long with Mr. Southworth's strenuous examinations. However, for the person genuinely interested in Hardy and willing to explore patiently the process of poesy, Mr. Southworth has much to say, though he does not always say it too smoothly and is occasionally repetitious." Melvin Maddocks

Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 23 '47 750w

"Admirers of Hardy as a late Victorian iconoclast may quarrel with the thesis of Dr. Southworth's mildly pejorative book, which is that Hardy cannot be ranked among the great poets because 'his lark never lost itself in the light.' But with the larger implications of the judgment they may find it harder to disagree. Hardy was not, in the fullest sense, a free man." Carlos Baker

N Y Times p3 Ag 3 '47 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:233 S '47 280w

SPARKES, BOYDEN. Home freezing and storage of food; zero storage in your home. rev ed 175p il $3 Doubleday

641.48 Food, Frozen 47-11108

"Outlines just about everything a housewife needs to know about home freezing of food, with a great deal of emphasis being placed on small units for city apartments. The book is complete with clear and detailed charts covering food preparation, packing, wrapping and directions for cooking the food when it is removed from the freezer." (San Francisco Chronicle) Previously published with title Zero Storage in Your Home (Book Review Digest 1944).

Kirkus 15:355 Jl 1 '47 150w

"As nearly as a layman and a non-freezer can judge, this is the definitive work on freezing foods in the home."

+ New Yorker 23:127 O 11 '47 90w

Reviewed by Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 19 '47 120w

SPEARE, DOROTHY (MRS C. J. HUBBARD). Spring on Fifty-second street. 249p $2.50 Rinehart

47-30397

Psychological novel. Eight years after Ann Barclay, a beautiful young society woman, had unaccountably committed suicide, her cousin met the handsome young soda clerk with whom Ann had been in love. The two determined to pool their knowledge of Ann, and together they solved the mystery of her death.

Kirkus 15:291 Je 1 '47 130w

"Skillful revelation of the background holds interest and is in keeping with the characters. Although there are unconventional situations the descriptions should not offend the sensitive." M. A. Johnson

+ Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 90w

"Miss Speare has written a psychological study of the New York scene, mainly concerned with that strange milieu shared by cafe society and big shots of the underworld. The story is compact, convincing and unsweetened." Lisle Bell

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31 O 26 '47 110w

"Dorothy Speare has written the engrossing story of a Lost Lady—a slick job and a far cry from Willa Cather. It is brightly done with all the modern embellishments... Credit the tale with plenty of punch and holding power." Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p24 Ag 24 '47 400w

"The events leading up to Ann's suicide and to Jerry's becoming involved in a racket are tersely told in a kind of not-quite successful James M. Cain manner. Somehow, it doesn't quite come off; everything seems rather one-dimensional and unimportant, and Ann herself is more foolish than tragic. However, Miss Speare does know how to keep a reader interested; I don't think anyone will want to put down her book without finishing it." Merle Miller

Sat R of Lit 30:34 Ag 23 '47 550w

SPEARHEAD; 10 years' experimental writing in America [ed. by James Laughlin]. 604p il $5 New directions

810.8 American literature—Collections

47-11637

"This book has both a pleasant and a serious purpose. Its pleasant purpose is to commemorate, and celebrate, the first ten years' activity of New Directions by reprinting some of the best work that was published in the annual volumes New Directions in Prose & Poetry, many of which are no longer in print. Its serious purpose is this: to present an impartial historical survey of the significant experimental and advance guard writing in the United States during the past decade. This objective has required the addition to the nucleus of New Directions material of much that has been published by other publishers and editors." Editorial notes

Reviewed by Elizabeth Hardwick
N Y Times p26 D 7 '47 800w

"Makes entertaining reading, but the question arises of whom this vanguard is leading; it almost seems as though each member were a one-man parade."

New Yorker 23:138 N 15 '47 90w

"As an 'historical survey' of the last ten years, 'Spearhead' can be misleading. On the other hand, as an index of the preoccupations and enthusiasms of the last decade of experiment in writing, 'Spearhead' has a definite value." G. P. Meyer

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:30 N 29 '47 700w

Time 50:115 N 24 '47 550w

SPECTORSKY, AUGUSTE C., ed. Man into beast; strange tales of transformation; with a preface. 368p $3.75 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections 47-11097

Anthology of stories about men or women who turned into animals. Contents: The adventures of Professor Emmett, by Ben Hecht; Green thought, by John Collier; Mr. Sycamore, by Robert Ayre; Laura, by Saki; The monkey, by Isak Dinesen; The king of the cats, by S. V. Benét; Mr. Limpet, by Theodore Pratt; The Cyprian cat, by Dorothy Sayers; Tarnhelm, by Hugh Walpole; Metamorphosis, by Franz Kafka.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Nelson Algren

Chicago Sun Book Week p9 N 23 '47 330w

"Even those who never read ghost stories or fantastic tales must be pleased with this book." Ann Hunter

+ Commonweal 47:232 D 12 '47 250w

Kirkus 15:440 Ag 15 '47 120w

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 O 19 '47 200w

"There emerge finally from these records of man's retreat from humanity some excellent and subtle pictures of desperate human straits. Most of the stories wear the badge of mental sophistication; that faint air of inhumanity which keeps man mocking his own anguish and destroying his own hope. Over the assemblage hovers the aroma of mischievous sadism. Perhaps man is too adaptable a creature to write humanly of metamorphosis." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p32 O 26 '47 800w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p15 O 26 '47 220w

"Man has always been fascinated by the possibility of his kind being transformed into animals, trees, and other living forms; and during many periods of his history it is a possibility in which he has firmly believed. I can promise that readers of 'Man Into Beast' will be fascinated, too; and I suspect that they will even find it hard, such is the hypnotic skill of some of these writers, to hold belief at a distance." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 N 1 '47 270w

SPEERS, WALLACE CARTER, ed. Laymen speaking [talks by laymen on the layman's personal and business life, church role and social attitudes]. 207p $2 Assn. press

248 Christian life 47-5820

The contributors are twenty-five business and professional men who are also active churchmen. In this volume they discuss the needs of men in the present world, and what the writers as Christians and members of the church can do to help solve their problems.

Booklist 44:83 N 1 '47

Christian Century 64:1240 O 15 '47 150w

Kirkus 15:532 S 15 '47 250w

SPEISER, EPHRAIM AVIGDOR. United States and the Near East; maps prepared under the cartographic direction of Arthur H. Robinson. (American foreign policy lib) 263p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

956.9 East (Near East). U.S.—Foreign relations 47-2069

"A timely, informative account of the Near East, which is defined by the author as Egypt, Syria-Palestine, the Tigris-Euphrates valley, and the Arabian peninsula. The book discusses the historic, cultural, and economic background and presents an objective statement of present problems with special emphasis on the situation in regard to the U.S. This is the second of 25 volumes to be published in the American foreign policy library. The first was Brinton, The United States and Britain." (Booklist) Index.

"The modern Near East is more fully than any other part of the world the product of enduring geographical and cultural factors. These are nowhere so clearly, concisely, and masterfully described as in the first two chapters of this second volume in the American Foreign Policy Library. . . . In thirty-seven illuminating pages he paints this background with broad and deceptively simple strokes, whose correctness and lucidity testify to a truly subtle understanding of the subject. Turning from the broad generalizations appropriate to the sweep of more than fifty centuries to the recent history of the Arab East, the author summarizes in seventy-six pages events down to November, 1946, emphasizing the years since 1914. Here his touch is less sure." W. L. Wright

+ — Am Hist R 53:137 O '47 800w

"Dr. Speiser's book can clarify almost everybody's understanding of some very acute present-day problems. It might well be read most carefully by the current crop of statesmen before they go further with delicate negotiations that can involve serious blunders." A. H. Lybyer

Am Pol Sci R 41:582 Je '47 850w

"Professor Speiser's book is authoritative and brilliantly written. . . . But it should not have its present misleading title. Out of a total of some 260 pages, fewer than twenty deal with U. S. relations with the Near East. It is unlikely that the bulk of the book should have been meant as 'background.'" Emil Lengyel

Ann Am Acad 252:124 Jl '47 400w

Booklist 43:252 Ap 15 '47

Bookmark 8:5 My '47

"I feel a lively and positive sense of gratitude for the just and genuinely illuminating treatment of difficult problems which this book affords. I believe that many readers will share this feeling." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 16 '47 370w

Christian Science Monitor p18 Ap 3 '47 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p18 S '47

Reviewed by Roy Hillbrook

Current Hist 12:580 Je '47 950w

Foreign Affairs 25:706 Jl '47 50w

Geog R 37:522 Jl '47 1250w

"Competent, scholarly, documented study. . . . Invaluable in making us acquainted with these strategically located countries and peoples, and the difficulties confronting them. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:386 Mr 1 '47 140w

Reviewed by Keith Hutchison

Nation 164:633 My 24 '47 600w

"Mr. Speiser is not anti-British nor anti-Arab nor anti-Zionist. He is not even anti-Soviet. He is merely pro-American. That is why he makes an admirable effort to analyze, with the greatest possible understanding, the case of each group or nation interested in the Near East." Andre Visson

SPEISER, E. A.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
Ap 27 '47 1050w

"His book is a mine of valuable information on the Arab lands." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p7 Mr 16 '47 500w

Reviewed by E. M. Wright

Pol Sci Q 62:317 Je '47 1100w

"Dr. E. A. Speiser of the University of Pennsylvania [is] a research worker and teacher of acknowledged ability and integrity in the field of ancient Oriental languages and history. The geographic and ethnic knowledge which Dr. Speiser had accumulated in his profession has been supplemented and deepened by his direction of five archeological campaigns in the field, and his control of immediate events as they now transpire in the southwestern corner of Asia has been gained through his war-time activity in connection with the Office of Strategic Services. The result of these divergent approaches to the problems of the Near East is an admirable sketch of the salient historical and political movements arising there, from the earliest literate period to the present. The purpose of the book is to show how the United States is, perhaps reluctantly, but inevitably, being drawn into the whirl of Near Eastern events." W. L. Westermann

+ Sat R of Lit 30:29 Ap 12 '47 900w

Reviewed by Gordon Waterfield

Spec 179:470 O 10 '47 900w

+ Springf'd Union p12 Ag 8 '47 180w

"A cumulation of events . . . has brought about a new and intense popular interest in the region. . . This newly awakened curiosity has not been well served by readily accessible information, objective or authoritative. It is for this reason that Mr. Speiser's little book is so welcome and so valuable. A recognized authority on the history and culture of the region, he has written a remarkably compressed compendium of information which must be placed in the 'indispensable' category of reading for those who, lacking background, are seeking to become well-informed about this newest area of American foreign policy interest." Grayson Kirk

+ Survey G 36:708 D '47 420w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:178 Je '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:116 Jl '47

"This compact little volume is bound to be appealed to frequently as thoughtful citizens search maps and consciences in quest of answers to unfamiliar and urgent questions of world policy. Expert in the most remote and most recent history of the Near East, Dr. Speiser is well qualified, through his knowledge of languages, terrain, and peoples, to provide a sympathetic interpretation of the Arab East. In a masterly condensation of Near Eastern history from the outbreak of the first World War to the close of the second he has woven a web of significant continuities out of a multiplicity of events, peoples, policies, and states." P. E. Mosely

+ Yale R n s 36:757 summer '47 650w

SPENCE, HARTZELL. Vain shadow. (Whit-tlesley house publication) 432p $3 McGraw

Orellana, Francisco de—Fiction 47-3537

A "romantic biography" of Francisco Orellana, the discoverer of the Amazon. In his Introduction the author says: "This book might have been written either as a biography or as a novel. In the process of its development it turned out to be what, for lack of better definition, I call a romantic biography. As such it is a reconstruction of the life of Orellana from available sources. Where provable facts are lacking, I have chosen to do in words what the architects did in masonry at the restoration of Colonial Williamsburg, Virginia: augment the existing materials with colorful authenticities of the period, in order that the whole impression be at once true and vivid." (p.viii) Bib-biography.

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

Reviewed by S. K. Workman

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 18 '47
450w

"An enthralling story for those who like picaresque adventure."

+ Kirkus 15:196 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Has the color and excitement of a first-rate adventure novel." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:734 My 1 '47 110w

"The book is alive with incident, detailed in precisely right measure, never pushed beyond the limits of credibility." Stephen Stepanchev

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
My 18 '47 550w

"'Vain Shadow' is a distinguished, novelized biography—distinguished at once for its historical fidelity, its style and the author's rare gift for making the past live again in story form. As this reader closed the book, he could only wish that other historical novelists were as convincing—and as painstaking." Samuel Putnam

+ N Y Times p5 Je 1 '47 600w

Springf'd Republican p10B Ja 11 '48
180w

SPENCER, CORNELIA, pseud. See Yaukey, G. S.

SPENDER, STEPHEN, ed. Choice of English romantic poetry; with an introduction. 384p $4 Dial press

821.08 English poetry—Collections 47-4213

An anthology of romantic poetry, chosen from the works of such poets as Blake, Byron, Shelley, Wordsworth, Keats, Coleridge, Beddoes, Tennyson, and Emily Brontë. Index.

"This anthology is more than a handbook of established and proven Romantic poetry; it is a collection rich in the combination of strangeness and delight which is said to be poetry's ultimate gift." E. W. Bates

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 26
'47 480w

"A pleasant book to have around. . . Spender's introduction is intelligent and acute, but for all that, not very good. He writes of romanticism too much in the old academic and literary way. That is, his criticism is descriptive rather than historical. . . It seems to me that by locating and defining, no matter how unsurely, a reason why the romantics felt themselves divorced from history, he would have done more to help the reader understand the poems than he has by describing what took place inside the poets and the poems." H. P. Lazarus

Nation 165:129 Ag 2 '47 360w

Reviewed by Carlos Baker

N Y Times p4 My 18 '47 900w

New Yorker 23:119 My 17 '47 90w

SPENDER, STEPHEN. Poems of dedication. 60p $2 Random house

821

47-2590

Brief collection of poems by this English poet. "Of the group of young English upper-class poets of left-wing sympathies, Spender has always been the most difficult to classify and the most unpredictable. Less directly 'political' than Auden or Lewis in his earliest verse, his concern with day-to-day politics apparently outlasted theirs, but in Poems of Dedication his work has come full circle." (New Repub)

"In his quiet and cultivated way, the poet speaks of what he finds at the core of experience. In addition to showing consummate skill and artistic taste in his verse forms, he also proves, which is most important, that he has something to say. These poems ring true. Carefully and economically built, they have their own distinctive grace and charm." Pearl Strachan

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 Mr 15
'47 350w

Reviewed by George McDonald
Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Hugo Manning
Manchester Guardian p3 D 31 '46 90w

"Spender's greatest shortcomings have always been his unsure ear and sense of form. Spender is an eye poet, and it is no accident that the eye is one of his favorite symbols. . . It is significant that when his meaning is less directly personal, as in the third stanza of Midsummer, sound and meaning are beautifully fused. On the whole, however, the new poems are more controlled and traditional; many of them contain their meanings more surely; and the general tone is less imperative than it is in 'Ruins and Visions'. The advance is clear, and that, in terms of Spender's development, is more important than the consideration that 'Ruins and Visions' contains more examples of his best work, if also more of his worst, than the present collection." H. P. Lazarus

+ — Nation 165:288 S 20 '47 950w

"Poems of Dedication, particularly in 'Elegy for Margaret', reaches an intensity, almost an extravagance, of personal feeling that had been only latent in Spender's earlier work. Paradoxically, this emotion is enclosed in forms that may conveniently be labeled traditional. Altogether, it is an achievement, and one can only hope that its contribution to the stirrings of a poetic renaissance will be warmly recognized." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 116:33 Mr 3 '47 750w

Reviewed by G. W. Stonier
New Statesman & Nation 33:318 My 3 '47 380w

"What Spender really is, as revealed in the present volume, is a man who is working, not too successfully, but sensitively and responsibly, toward an understanding of his and our difficult world. If the book is less immediately appealing than his previous work, it is because his technical ability has not kept pace with the increase in the scope and depth of his themes." Babette Deutsch

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 My 4 '47 1150w

"'Poems of Dedication' is a remarkably appealing work. . . What is missing, however, is the vis ultima, the fatal inevitability, of great poetry." Dudley Fitts

N Y Times p3 Mr 9 '47 650w

Reviewed by H. C. Webster
Poetry 71:153 D '47 1550w

"As one who found (and still finds) Spender's first book of poems little less than miraculous, and who was impressed by the energy and warmth of the second, it is not pleasant to report that his third is slight in substance, thin in texture, and blemished not infrequently with the kind of threadbare 'poetic' properties one would scarcely expect to encounter in the work of a careful third-rate poet." Seiden Rodman

— Sat R of Lit 30:24 Jl 5 '47 500w

"I do not always find Mr. Spender's poetry comprehensible. It is as though he looks upon the universe through eyes whose focus fluctuates. This results in intermittent clarity of image and stumbling of rhythm; sometimes even in an inconsequence of poetic idea. . . There are passages too, where the movement of his verse becomes so disordered that the Shelley-like speed, so characteristic of Mr. Spender at his best, drops down like that of a spent meteor to be lost in a Rilke-like mist. When, however, the poet is most himself, it is a self that creates something remarkably beautiful, as in such poems as The Dream, The Trance and Absence." Richard Church
Spec 178:22 Ja 3 '47 350w

"Mr. Spender has an urgent contemporary quality. For the question how far the self is real or unreal, and what else is more deeply real, is one widely discussed in our time. In a long, ambitious and not wholly successful poem called 'Spiritual Exercises' Mr. Spender, with admirably patient sincerity, provides his answer. But Mr. Spender's attitude is fundamentally dualistic: of these two orders, one, the physical, the inanimate world, 'the star,' lovely as it is, is the body of our death: its remoteness reminds us of our mortality. The other, 'history,' 'humanity'—Mr. Spender, though his thought is very like Kant's thought, does not, unlike Kant, permit himself to say 'God'—is a power to be invoked to give the individual a sense of significance."

Times [London] Lit Sup p6 Ja 4 '47 500w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. Danger to windward;
il. by [the author]. 241p $2.50 Winston

47-11070

The time is the early 1800's, and most of the scenes are on a whaling vessel bound for the South Seas. The hero is Hugh Dewar, an orphan, who has been defrauded of his inheritance by a ruthless step-uncle. This story for older boys describes Hugh's brave fight to regain his ship and his legacy from his grandfather.

Booklist 44:118 N 15 '47

Reviewed by Russell McCracken
Chicago Sun Book Week p7A N 19 '47 250w

"Mr. Sperry knows the South Pacific with its coral islands where part of the story's action takes place, he has a strong and true feeling for ships and the sea and in Danger to Windward he has written an exciting story." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:42 Ja '48 70w

Kirkus 15:581 O 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. B. Snow
Library J 72:1786 D 15 '47 60w

"Whaling stories, of which this is a fine specimen, cannot tell the truth without scenes of brutality, but I never read one that was not hard to stop reading. . . Any boy will agree that the voyage, hard as it was, would make him long for the day the ship once more would lift to the heaven and roll of the sea." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p21 N 16 '47 360w

"Although the plot is hardly original and the characterization none too strong, the action is fast, the suspense is well developed, and both the word descriptions of whaling and the illustrations are excellent. This will appeal to many adolescent boys." R. A. Brown

+ — N Y Times p47 N 30 '47 180w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG. Rain forest. 190p il $2.50 Macmillan

47-1835

"The son of an ardent naturalist and collector finds himself in New Guinea, separated from his father whose pursuit of a rare bird has led him into a region inhabited by cannibals. Together with the excitement of following Chad along a dangerous trail, we get a glowing impression of the jungle vegetation and the different Papuan tribes, both friendly and hostile." Horn Bk

Reviewed by Jane Cobb
Atlantic 179:130 Je '47 60w

Booklist 43:260 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 110w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold
Christian Science Monitor p12 Je 12 '47 300w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 22:468 N '46 100w

"Interesting background for a good yarn by a favorite author."

+ Kirkus 15:31 Ja 15 '47 110w

"Recommended for ages 10-14." D. M. MacDonald

+ Library J 72:85 Ja 1 '47 50w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Mr 30 '47 420w

Reviewed by Frances Smith
N Y Times p40 Mr 30 '47 180w

SPERRY, ARMSTRONG—Continued

"An exciting record. . . The illustrations, printed in a clear green, make the forest and the mountains, the houses and the people of New Guinea vivid."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 My 17 '47 70w

SPICER, DOROTHY GLADYS. Windows open to the world; a handbook of world fellowship projects. 127p $2.50 Woman's press

793 Entertaining. Festivals 46-7108

"Appreciating the need of all peoples to increase their understanding of one another, Miss Spicer offers suggestions for friendship parties, holiday plays, exhibitions of handicraft and means of participating in overseas relief. For the guidance of neighborhood and church groups, plans are given for a New Year's celebration done in the Greek manner, a Pan-American party based on the customs of Mexico and other Latin-American countries, a lucky shamrock party and a camp supper for St. Swithin's Day." (N Y Times) List of program helps.

Booklist 43:83 N 15 '46

Bookmark 8:8 My '47

"Experienced group leaders will find suggested many usable themes." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p29 Mr 9 '47 110w

SPILLANE, FRANK MORRISON. I, the jury. 218p $2.50 Dutton

47-5468

Detective story.

"His novel is a shabby and rather nasty little venture from the indefensible logic of its opening scene to the drooling titillation of its final striptease." James Sandoe

— Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:295 Je 1 '47 60w

"Though the dialogue and action leave little to be imagined, the story will measure up to the expectation of those mystery fans who must have the impact 'right between the eyes.'"

N Y Times p15 Ag 3 '47 160w

"Able, if painfully derivative, writing and plotting, in so vicious a glorification of force, cruelty and extra-legal methods that the novel might be made required reading in a Gestapo training school." Anthony Boucher

— San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47 100w

"Lurid action, lurid characters, lurid writing, lurid plot, lurid finish."

— Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 30w

SPINGARN, LAWRENCE PERRY. Rococo summer, and other poems. 64p $2.50 Dutton 811

47-1452

Collection of poems by an American poet. The themes are "New England vistas and episodes, portraits, love, death, the poet as Whitman, and the poet as Spingarn." (N Y Times)

Cleveland Open Shelf p10 My '47

Kirkus 14:589 N 15 '46 60w

"There is a certain self-consciousness about some of the poems, and a perceptible willingness not to look too closely at a striking image, lest it prove inappropriate. The occasional lapses into sentimentality are pardonable, but hardly admirable." Milton Crane

N Y Times p33 Mr 16 '47 130w

"[Mr Spingarn's] mixed ancestry, Quaker and Spanish-Jew, seems to have bequeathed a different mind-cast to this poet. The result in 'Rococo Summer' is a distinctive point of view that lends interest over and above that achieved by technical competence." George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Jl 13 '47 120w

"Spingarn is self-conscious and the pages of his poems turn like mirrors, and the reflections are for the most part pleasing with many memorable images and musical lines." A. M. Sullivan

+ Sat R of Lit 30:36 Mr 22 '47 330w

SPINK, JOHN GEORGE TAYLOR. Judge Landis and twenty-five years of baseball. 306p il $3 Crowell

B or 92 Landis, Kenesaw Mountain. Baseball 47-3905

"Authoritative account of the unsavory period of Organized Baseball which indicated the need for 'a man who is forceful, fearless and independent enough to reach out after any player, club, owner or official who . . . brings the national game into disrepute,' of the selection of Judge Landis as that man in 1920, and a detailed report on the strenuous but successful efforts of Landis to carry out his difficult assignment. Shows the gradual establishment of the code of baseball law." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:343 Jl 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Jl 13 '47 230w

Kirkus 15:267 My 15 '47 140w

"Author is eminently qualified. Sports-page style makes easy and interesting reading. An important contribution to baseball history." R. W. Henderson

+ Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 110w

"If various baseball magnates and former stars think this history too frank in exhuming certain incidents they should remember that Spink, like Landis, has believed that adult vigilance is the only thing that could preserve his, and Landis's, boyish worship of the national game." Lloyd Lewis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O 5 '47 600w

"It is the measure of Mr. Spink's character, his tolerance and his enthusiasm for baseball history, that he has written a biography of the Judge which is largely sympathetic and wholly free of rancor. Speaking of their differences, Mr. Spink seems to be saying from time to time, 'The Judge behaved a little badly to me, but I forgive him.' I don't know for sure, but I think his new book may be the first example in literary history of a favorable biography of a subject who hated the author." John Lardner

+ N Y Times p14 Je 29 '47 800w

"The book is not very well written, but it is first-rate baseball history."

+ New Yorker 23:68 Jl 12 '47 80w

Reviewed by Dick Friedlich

San Francisco Chronicle p9 Jl 6 '47 400w

Wis Lib Bul 43:117 Jl '47

SPORN, PHILIP, and others. Heat pumps. 188p il $3.75 Wiley

621.5 Heat pumps 47-30830

"Presents technically, problems encountered in attempt to adapt the heat pump to building, heating and cooling service; to important applications in the industrial field for evaporation and purification of liquids; for drying solids and for simultaneous chilling and heating of process fluids." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:8 S 1 '47

"This interesting little book is a collection of widely scattered information on heat pump system design. . . The book does not contain any discussion of packaged units such as are now used for houses and commercial establishments in any localities. This is a very important phase in the future development of the heat pump. At the same time the discussion on heat sources seems rather abbreviated in view of the fact that it is probably the greatest problem confronting the heat pump and its widespread adoption. Very little is said about auxiliary heat sources when the source temperature becomes low." C. R. Freberg

+ — Chem & Eng N 25:3029 O 13 '47 220w
Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47
Eng N 139:95 Ag 7 '47 100w
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 40w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:50 J1 '47

SPOSA, LOUIS A. Television primer of production and direction. 237p il $3.50 McGraw 621.388 Television 47-4863
"Covers basic principles of production and technique. Among the subjects are function of the television cameras, how the television system works, comparison of lighting methods, scenic designing, costuming, make up and other theatrical effects, microphones and their uses and how motion picture films are used in television. Other features are how to write commercials, production and direction techniques and television programming." (Library J) Recommended reading. Glossary. Index.

Booklist 44:64 O 15 '47
Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:391 Mr 1 '47 70w
Reviewed by Gilbert Seides
N Y Times p5 Ag 10 '47 280w

SPRAGUE, ROSEMARY. Northward to Albion; il. by Kurt Werth. 187p $2.50 Roy pubs. 47-18443

According to legend Bruttys, great-grandson of Aeneas, was doomed to kill his own father, so the boy was brought up by Latin foster parents. When at sixteen he was summoned to court the boy did accidentally kill his father, and the young prince was forced to flee to Greece. From thence he crossed the ocean to the northern isle of Albion, and won a new kingdom. The story is told for older boys and girls.

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

"The characters of Bruttys and his young brother have a strong likeness to boys of the present and their adventures with kings and plotters will absorb the readers who like adventurous fiction." A. M. Jordan
+ Horn Bk 23:218 My '47 120w

"An unusual era in history which fills a real need in school and library, is this story of the founding of Britain by the Trojan warriors. . . Well-told and good reading."
+ Kirkus 15:32 Ja 15 '47 120w

"An exciting adventure story which will appeal to boys and girls from the sixth grade up. Excellent characterizations." C. W. Field
+ Library J 72:468 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 My 11 '47 380w

"The latter part of the story is, curiously, less enthralling than the first, but for the most part the adventure-studded narrative moves easily. Though Miss Sprague doesn't ever touch the heights of drama implicit in the epic, she re-creates this sequel to the Aeneid in terms which readers of 12 and up will find easily understandable, and she has brought life and color to those far-off days." E. L. Buell
+ — N Y Times p26 Mr 16 '47 270w

SPRING, HOWARD. Dunkerley's. 246p $2.50 Harper 47-30053

Second volume in the trilogy of which Hard Facts (Book Review Digest, 1944) was the first. The scene is removed from Manchester to London. Daniel Dunkerley now controls a score of periodicals and Alec Dillworth is the editor of the monthly Dunkerley's. Elsie, Alec's sister, finds a new life, to compensate for her tortured past. Alec, too, finds brief happiness and then tragedy. The time is the 1890's.

Booklist 43:171 F 1 '47

"Mr. Spring can tell a story, but his disregard of spiritual values, his casual acceptance of illicit sexual relationships, make him thereby a more subtly pernicious influence." Cath World 164:573 Mr '47 200w

"'Dunkerley's,' like its predecessor, is related with a measure of Dickensian warmth, though with more grimness than the master of Gadshill ever manifested. The new characters, particularly Hesba Lewisohn and Isambard Phye, are developed with considerable care and understanding, though the novel is too short and its incidents too diffuse to permit more than a sketchy total effect." Jack Conroy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ja 12 '47 450w

"It has been said, and with some validity, that Howard Spring resembles Dickens by reason of his portrayal of mean streets in crowded cities, and his sympathy for the poor which has its root in his own early hardships. The comparison to Dickens must not be pushed too far. Howard Spring is at the same time less a humorist and less a propagandist. His character portrayal, though not notably subtle, is vital and done from the inside. His work is decidedly his own, and to be commended to readers who enjoy substantial story-telling, done with a light touch." W. K. R.
Christian Science Monitor p14 Ja 17 '47 480w

Kirkus 14:557 N 1 '46 170w

"Staple British goods, ranking below author's important novel Fame Is the Spur, but well worth reading and buying." E. F. Walbridge
+ — Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Harold Brighthouse
Manchester Guardian p3 N 15 '46 260w

Reviewed by Jennings Rice
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ja 19 '47 950w

"With all his mastery of the moods and manners of the Victorians, Mr. Spring lacks the one attribute which saved the best of their works from triviality and mere melodrama: a passionate attitude towards life that turned their least probable convictions into living reality." Nona Balakian

N Y Times p12 Ja 12 '47 750w

New Yorker 22:93 Ja 18 '47 140w

"That the melodramatic plot is somehow made reasonable to modern readers is due to the author's narrative gifts and to his entertaining description of the early development of a British publishing trust. The novel is at times drenched with the kind of sentimentality that is popular in any age. There are interludes of extraordinary beauty. . . Dickens surrounded uncomfortable ideas with a fog of romantic secretiveness and so does Mr. Spring." Harrison Smith
+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 F 1 '47 600w

"It is plainly and simply an old-fashioned romantic story—something which a great many readers will pursue to the end with the entirely proper purpose of discovering what happens. That end is dramatic, but it is unfortunate that high tragedy should be conveyed to the reader in a wordy report in a letter." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

Spec 177:558 N 22 '46 180w

"To those who have not read of his earlier years in Manchester [Alec's] doom will seem arbitrary, and Alec's brilliance has to be taken too much on trust. Mr. Spring is a great hand at rounding up his dramatis personae, throwing in a page or two of explanation even about such minor figures as Dunkerley's wife and father, but he seems in too much of a hurry to give any one of them the wholehearted attention that would turn him into a fully realized character. What does come through his bustling pages successfully is the drive and zest with which these provincials established their stronghold in London."

Times [London] Lit Sup p561 N 16 '46 300w

Wis Lib Bul 43:38 F '47

STAFFORD, JEAN. Mountain Lion. 231p $2.75
Harcourt 47-1963

A story of two children, brother and sister, and their years of bitterness between childhood and adolescence.

"Miss Stafford holds the reader spellbound throughout the narrative, she creates an intense atmosphere with a few simple phrases and characterizes her figures in a masterly manner through the eyes of the children. . . The author carefully avoids any philosophical or theological implications. This gives the book its strong, realistic flavor since, after all, we are supposed to be looking at the world through the eyes of two 'nicely brought up,' modern children, lamentably free from any religious influence."

+ Cath World 165:476 Ag '47 250w

Reviewed by Ben Kartman

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 2 '47 360w

"Jean Stafford is a novelist of superior ability. . . In the present novel, she seems to feel unpleasantly superior to her characters, as though she were inviting the reader to join her in mildly ridiculing them. This reader is not quite comfortable in sharing that attitude toward two children. . . Nevertheless, it is a novel of superior skill and ingenuity."

+ Christian Century 64:832 Jl 2 '47 120w
Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"This is an even finer novel than 'Boston Adventure,' though less brilliant. It does not have the dazzling wealth of anecdote which Jean Stafford offered in her first novel; but it has a deeper richness of child-myth and child-lore—charms against the adult-world, rhymes, ritualistic 'dialogues' and shared 'jokes,' intimations of mortality—and the statement it makes of good and evil, innocence and experience, is tantalizing in its possibilities of extension." Henry Rago

+ Commonweal 45:618 Ap 4 '47 500w

Kirkus 15:104 F 15 '47 200w

"The novel is as good in its way as Elizabeth Bowen's 'Death of the Heart.' It is less polished, but it may be profounder in accounting for what the children suffer. They suffer from the burden and scariness of being themselves and from the hopelessness of their being inseparable, and beneath the local and satiric pleasure of the story this is put so strongly that, though you read it with amusement, you will feel it aching in you like a tooth for days." Robert Fitzgerald

+ Nation 164:399 Ap 5 '47 1100w

"Miss Stafford's use of the language is integral to her story and intentions to a degree rare in a time when most fiction is written in a slapdash approximate jargon and sluggish monologue." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 116:34 Mr 24 '47 250w

"Miss Stafford is, fundamentally, out for much bigger game than a mere couple of troubled kids. It is life itself—the painful state of being human and conscious—that Miss Stafford's penetrating little story examines and vilifies. For what Molly and Ralph suffer in exaggerated form and almost unremittingly in the pages of 'The Mountain Lion' is but the malaise which from time to time torments us all—that recurrent sense of pain and apprehension which is a function, or at any rate an inevitable by-product, of the state of consciousness itself." F. H. Bullock

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 2 '47 850w

"It is possible that naive readers may miss the deeper psychological developments of the tale. But even if they do, the author manages to convey the sense of dark and rushing wings—darker for the bright blue sky—which plunges the end of the book into unexpected horror. Yet the sense of shock immediately disappears as one reflects upon the point and structure of this beautifully modeled tale." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p5 Mr 2 '47 750w

"A second novel that is hard to match these days for subtlety and understanding. . . A sharply focussed study rather than a broad exploration of adolescence, written wittily, lucidly, and with great respect for the resources of the language."

+ New Yorker 23:97 Mr 8 '47 160w

"A mature and wise novel, a novel so utterly different from her first that it is evident she need never imitate herself, as young novelists too often do after an early success. Written with simplicity and often with astonishing power. . . 'The Mountain Lion' is likely to beguile many a reader into thinking that he has hold of merely a shrewdly perspective and amusing novel of children, when what he really has in his hand is a charge of psychological dynamite." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Mr 10 '47 800w

"Miss Stafford writes with brilliance. Scene after scene is told with unforgettable care and tenuous entanglements are treated with wise subtlety. She creates a splendid sense of time, of the unending afternoons of youth, and of the actual color of noon and of night. Refinement of evil, denial of drama, only make the underlying truth more terrible." C. M. Brown

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 Mr 1 '47 550w

Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 50w

Time 49:100 Mr 10 '47 400w

"The author's strength is in psychological analysis and a control of suggestive imagery which gives to sketches of things and feelings and mental habits a great vitality. The general structure is somewhat loose, the method of understatement and muted tones leads at times to flatness, and the ending too strongly resembles the 'well-made.'"

U S Quarterly Bk 3:140 Je '47 220w

STANDARD, STELLA. More than cooking; recipes and menus; introd. by Helmut Ripperger; decorations by Fritz Kredel. 275p $2.50 Vanguard

641.5 Cookery. Menus

47-30054

Not a large collection of recipes, but clear instructions for basic dishes with a number of "extras." Menus for the four seasons, lists for the pantry shelf, tables of measurements, etc. Index.

Booklist 43:165 F 1 '47

"For the intelligent—the discriminating cook, certainly not for the cook who has to have everything charted."

Kirkus 14:475 S 15 '46 70w

"There is no fanfare about Mrs. Standard's suggestions, but never do you find doubtful combinations, strange ideas. Instead there are old standbys with right-sounding additional touches to make a feast out of an ordinary dish. From appetizers to desserts there is a wealth of good eating for family and friends." Lois Palmer

+ N Y Times p24 Je 15 '47 140w

"A collection of old and new recipes that will be found highly satisfactory by those who eat for pleasure. As you read Mrs. Standard's careful, appetizing directions, you get the feeling that cooking is a matter of the heart as well as of the brain and clever fingers."

+ New Yorker 22:103 F 15 '47 50w

STANDISH, ROBERT, pseud. See Gerahty, D. G.

STANFORD short stories, nineteen forty-six [ed. by Wallace Stegner]. 107p $2 Stanford univ. press

Short stories—Collections

(47-5367)

Ten short stories written by members of a class in advanced fiction writing conducted by Wallace Stegner at Stanford. Of the ten stories six have been published or accepted for publication by American magazines. Contents: The shadow of a dream, by Oliver Lawrence; Money on the ceiling, by Jean Byers; A stranger's funeral, by Don Allan; Who made this subway, by B. B. Watson; Rest camp on Maui, by Eugene Burdick; Dom Pedro's crown, by Oliver Lawrence; The capsule, by Jean Byers; The realist, by Don Allan; Help thou my unbelief, by B. B. Watson; The black box, by Eugene Burdick.

Reviewed by Nelson Olmsted
Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 22 '47
190w
San Francisco Chronicle p10 My 31 '47
550w

STANLEY, DAVE, pseud. See Dachs, D.

STANLEY, EDWARD. Thomas Forty. 307p
$2.75 Duell 47-11829

Historical novel about Westchester county during the Revolution. Thomas Forty, an ex-bound boy, is at first undecided about his side in the struggle, but an encounter in a New York tavern decided him—he is with the Colonies. He becomes a lieutenant in Armand's Partizan legion, and plays an important role in the Westchester part of the struggle to the end of the war.

Booklist 44:110 N 15 '47

"A vigorous, often vivid story of the American Revolution."

+ Kirkus 15:406 Ag 1 '47 150w

"Realistic and readable yarn, recommended for men and for boys of a certain degree of sophistication." E. F. Walbridge

+ Library J 72:1195 S 1 '47 110w

"'Thomas Forty' is an action-packed adventure story and a good one, because adventure of the spirit transcends derring-do. Somehow, with deft selection and skilled phrasing Edward Stanley has brought out burning the notion of Liberty that alone could have kept the Revolutionary cause alive. 'Thomas Forty' is the product of a talent that can put into words what it feels." E. B. Davis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
N 9 '47 450w

"A competent novel inevitably borrows dignity and vigor from such important projects as the clearing of the wilderness or the winning of the West or the American Revolution or the Civil War. This is true of Edward Stanley's forth-right dramatization of some events of the Revolution in which the personal history of a young printer was involved. The fresh angle consists in making him, at the start, a quietist." Catharine Brody

+ N Y Times p30 O 26 '47 550w

"[Some] passages are bad both in themselves and as surrenders to a false convention. . . . As a first novel this is a promising book; and as an adventure story, without pretensions to subtlety in character drawing, or high gifts of style, or other elements that raise a book from the realm of entertainment to that of serious letters, it has more than promise—it is first-rate craftsman's work." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:21 O 11 '47 1000w

STARKIE, ENID. Arthur Rimbaud. rev & ed 464p il $5 Norton

B or 92 Rimbaud, Jean Nicolas Arthur 47-31243

"An enlarged, partly rewritten edition of the French poet's biography which was first published in 1938 [Book Review Digest 1939]." (Booklist) Bibliography. Indexes.

Booklist 44:72 O 15 '47

"Miss Starkie . . . renders [Rimbaud] more comprehensible than he has appeared before." B. I. E.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 8 '47 210w

Reviewed by G. D. Painter
New Statesman & Nation 34:476 D 13
'47 190w

"There was in Rimbaud, as Dr. Starkie remarks, 'the fatality of failure'—his career is 'a tragic example of ultimate waste.' Yet the poetry that he wrote during five years of intense and consuming interior life remains among the most powerful of influences upon all the arts. Because of Dr. Starkie's brilliant interpretation, its sources, its philosophy and its real meaning are now clear." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34
D 7 '47 500w

"Dr. Starkie explores every detail thoroughly, but the picture she presents lacks solidity." New Yorker 23:141 N 29 '47 70w

"Those specialists in the history of modern artistic movements who know the earlier edition will want to check it by the new one; and those who missed the 1939 volume should by all means acquaint themselves with this penetrating study of one of the most significant, yet most baffling, figures of modern literature." G. H.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 D 14 '47
210w

"Arthur Rimbaud has proved a troublesome subject for both biographers and translators; while the first have often become lost in the obscurities of his life, the second have more often strayed amidst the denser obscurities of his writing. The dual result has been a mass of misinformation and misinterpretation. Now, however, Enid Starkie comes close to setting the record straight, at once for poet and poetry. Not that she essays translation. On the contrary, she is content to let Rimbaud speak his own unique French. But she does interpret the burden of that French with remarkable insight." B. R. Redman

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 N 22 '47 1500w

"The claims made for Dr. Starkie's book are abundantly justified. It is the most complete life of the poet in any language and is indispensable to anyone who is interested in Rimbaud." Martin Turnell

+ Spec 179:562 O 31 '47 1050w

Times [London] Lit Sup p674 D 27 '47
3100w

STASSEN, HAROLD EDWARD. Where I stand! 205p $2 Doubleday

973.91 U.S.—Politics and government—20th century. Campaign literature, 1948 47-11622

Summarizes the author's stand on labor and management, socialism, communism, capitalism, taxation, business, health and housing. Does not discuss his ideas on foreign policy. It is a compilation of past speeches, Congressional testimony, and magazine articles, with some personal observations at the beginnings of chapters. No index.

Booklist 44:127 D 1 '47

Reviewed by Robert Lasch

Chicago Sun Book Week N 11 '47
600w

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

+ Kirkus 15:569 O 1 '47 300w

"It is as refreshing as it is unorthodox for a man in public life—particularly one aspiring to the highest office in our land—to come out so early and so flatly with a platform. In so doing, he naturally sets himself up as a target for political enemies and Johnny-come-latelies who may take advantage of changing situations, different tides of public feeling, to fashion a program that will lack nothing in last-minute appeal for either party next summer at Philadelphia." Frank Kelley

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3
N 16 '47 1600w

"If Mr. Stassen were going to expose himself to the political perils of bookwriting, he made a mistake in not taking the job more seriously. . . . For all its candor and good-will, 'Where I Stand' bears all the signs of inadequate thought and hasty composition. Wendell Willkie's 'An American Program' three years ago gave the sense of a humane and realistic mind freshly at work on crucial problems. 'Where I Stand' aims at the same end but falls far short. One can but regard 'Where I Stand' as a political revelation in which Mr. Stassen emerges as an appropriate partner for Senator Taft. This statement, I should add, is not meant invidiously; it is not an expression of judgment but a simple act of reporting." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

N Y Times p7 N 16 '47 1500w

STASSEN, H. E.—Continued

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 14 '47
1000w

"Frankly it isn't much of a book. . . But it is useful in that it brings his ideas together, and emphasizes again that here is a young man who is looking pragmatically at the big issues of the day, thinking his way through to conclusions that avoid the normal pat extremes of national politics, and presenting them concretely as part of an open campaign for the Presidency. There is a wonderful young upstart quality about this man and his ideas."

J. B. Reston

Sat R of Lit 30:9 N 15 '47 2500w

"[Neither] the obvious sincerity of Harold Stassen, nor the fact that he has written the most straightforward statement of principles so far produced by any candidate [can] serve to launch a 'Stassen-for-President' movement that will nurture on its own inherent virtue and expand to the far corners of a country simply because, in the minds of his individual supporters, it deserves to. The unhappy fact is that 'Where I Stand' may live for a little while, will be bandied about by the critics, possibly will be given the silent treatment by the opposition, and will quickly die—unless enough Stassen admirers, with enough enthusiasm and money, roll up their sleeves and—as we say in business—merchandise the book, its ideas, and the man, to the American public." Fred Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:9 N 15 '47 2500w

"Frankly and concisely, this little volume sums up the Stassen political credo. It is frank to the point of revealing the hostile messages he has received at times in his career warning him that the stand he had taken on certain issues will mean a loss of political support. Because of his frankness the book will undoubtedly receive nationwide attention by Americans of all types as a work of timely import." E. A. F.

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47
500wReviewed by F. T. P. Plimpton
Survey G 36:700 D '47 700w

Wis Lib Bul 43:170 D '47

STEARNS, ALFRED ERNEST. Amherst boyhood; foreword by Harlan F. Stone, 212p $2
Amherst college lib, Amherst, Mass.

B or 92 Amherst college 46-4702

The author of this autobiographical study was headmaster of Phillips Academy, at Andover, for thirty years. When his father lost his fortune and died in his prime the author's mother took her seven children to live in a large house in Amherst and there started a school for young ladies. The book is composed of the author's memories of those days.

"This book has a local flavor, enhanced by sketches of amusing characters who used to roam the streets, and is useful to anyone who wishes to know what a New England country college was like in the early nineties." M. T. Bingham

+ Am Hist R 52:572 Ap '47 320w

School & Society 65:447 Je 14 '47 20w

STEBBINS, MRS LUCY (POATE). Victorian album; some lady novelists of the period. 226p $2.50 Columbia univ. press

928 Novelists, Authors, Women A47-15

Chapters on the lives and writings of the lady novelists of the Victorian age. The first essay is a composite study of several writers, among them Harriet Martineau and Eliza Lynn Linton. The four principal chapters are about Charlotte Brontë, Elizabeth Gaskell, George Eliot, and Margaret Oliphant. The final essay, Homekeeping hearts, is a summing up of impressions. Index.

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

Bookmark 8:9 My '47

"The first effect of this mellow and scholarly volume is to make one wish to return to the novels. The second is to make him apply to the lady novelists of the Victorian era the knowledge he has long ago learned to apply to more famous authors: that their works were produced in a social milieu and that no adequate judgment can be passed upon their accomplishment until some understanding of that milieu has been acquired. Mrs. Stebbins' readers may forego their unprofitable scorn of those Victorian ladies and find in them a pleasure renewed by sympathetic understanding." D. S.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 F 15
'47 400w

Current Hist 12:374 Ap '47 30w

"In spite of the fact that Mrs. Stebbins got caught in a small net of controversy over her recent book on The Trollopes (1945), many readers will find this new book on some lady novelists of the Victorian period quite delightful and amusing. . . Recommended for any library." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 71:1805 D 15 '46 110w

"Mrs. Stebbins' book is primarily a work of criticism, of interpretation; and as such it is a valuable addition to the literature on Victorian fiction. Its method, its accuracy, and its carefulness of phrase are wholly admirable." C. F. Harrold

+ Mod Philol 45:67 Ag '47 470w

Reviewed by Naomi Lewis

New Statesman & Nation 34:134 Ag
16 '47 850w

"Few research workers have Mrs. Stebbins's courage in omission. The reader quails at the thought of the number of dull books she has plowed through. . . A baker's dozen of these scribblers are summed up in the first chapter; after that, Mrs. Stebbins settles down to detailed discussion of Charlotte Brontë, Elizabeth Gaskell, George Eliot and Margaret Oliphant. These chapters are the justification for the book. After all that has been written about the Brontës, it might seem that there was nothing left to say. Yet Mrs. Stebbins's study of Charlotte is a masterly piece of common sense." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19
F 23 '47 650w

"Miss Stebbins writes from great fullness of knowledge which rests upon vast penitential reading, as the bibliographical notes illustrate. She has furthermore an easy and lucent style. Her interpretations have some psychological shrewdness, and I suppose we cannot too often be reminded that the Victorian period still remains one of the great periods of English literary history. . . One difficulty is that a collection of biographical essays about Victorian figures inevitably calls up comparison with other collections by wittier writers. Mrs. Stebbins does well in this volume (once past the unfortunate first chapter), but still she does not do well enough in the sense that she lacks the power of portrait-making possessed by a Shane Leslie or a Lytton Strachey." H. M. Jones

+ — N Y Times p10 Ja 5 '47 700w

"The narrative is always simple, smooth, uncluttered, and quietly witty, and behind it is a more than ample erudition. . . Mrs. Stebbins's book would be better throughout for a more critical (I don't mean fault-finding) account of her authors' works. As social history, as a study of mores and a milieu, 'A Victorian Album' is a good book." Eric Bentley

Sat R of Lit 30:21 Mr 15 '47 500w

"[Mrs. Stebbins] has a warm sympathy and a great power of application, but some curious and vitiating fault shows through her work. The Victorians are ticklish people to write about, especially to a generation which has ceased to fear or hate them and now turns on them the cold eye of the museum visitor. . . There is always a danger in looking at them as Victorians, and I would tentatively suggest that this is the mistake Mrs. Stebbins makes. From her title onwards she is over-conscious of period. . . She forgets that they were English writers first, and women who lived in the reign of Queen Victoria second." James Pope-Hennessy

+ — Spec 178:502 My 2 '47 1100w

Times [London] Lit Sup p241 My 17
'47 1000w

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:135 Je '47 270w

STEED, VIRGIL S. Kentucky tobacco patch;
il. by Edward A. Long. 220p $3 Bobbs
633.71 Tobacco. Farm life Agr47-259

In semi-fictional form the author tells the story of a tobacco-growing farm in Kentucky.

Booklist 43:355 Jl 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '47

STEEL, BYRON. Let's visit our national parks; a practical motor guide to the national parks and principal tourist cities of the United States. 224p maps $3 McBride

917.3 National parks and reserves—U.S.
47-30345

Information for tourists on our national parks. Describes thirty-four planned trips giving such information as date of openings, price of admission, accommodations, history, sports, points of interest and car routes in the various parks. No index. No photographs.

Booklist 43:345 Jl 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Jl 6 '47
40w

"A valuable guide book with well-organized information... According to the publisher's note the hotels, restaurants, night clubs and shops mentioned have been included on merit only. Owing to the present price instability some of the rates may have been changed.
Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 130w

"With so comprehensive a program, the author has had to walk an exacting line, and occasionally his foot slips. He gives no more space (seven pages) to Yellowstone, an area nearly as large as the State of Connecticut, than to Sequoia, much smaller and considerably less varied in its attractions... In spite of these shortcomings and a few small inexacti-tudes, Mr. Steel's ingeniously conceived book deserves a place among the baggage of every park-bound motorist. Though it needs intelligent supplementation, it offers a great deal of information in compact form." Robert Shankland

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:29 S 20 '47 260w

Spring'd Union p5 Jl 21 '47 90w

Wis Lib Bul 43:116 Jl '47

STEEL, ERNEST WILLIAM. Water supply and sewerage. 2d ed 666p il maps $6 McGraw 628 Water supply engineering. Water supply. Sewerage 47-4870

"Revisions and enlargement of subject material under chlorine, chlorination, odor test, water softening and correction, sewage pumping, sewer maintenance, and filters." (Booklist) For first edition see Book Review Digest, 1938.

Booklist 44:72 O 15 '47

"In general, the book is recommended as a reliable book for engineering students in this field." S. T. Powell

+ Chem Eng 54:264 N '47 140w

"This volume covers two important and expanding fields, but it does so effectively. It will appeal perhaps more to the student than to the practicing engineer because the material is presented in a compact, and simplified form, characteristics that should encourage its use in connection with introductory college courses."

+ Eng N 139:95 Ag 7 '47 280w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1276 S 15 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:59 Jl '47

STEELMAN, JOHN R., ed. See Who's who in labor

STEERS, HELEN. Death will find me. 216p
$2.50 Dodd

47-11252

Mystery story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 14 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:447 Ag 15 '47 70w

New Repub 117:28 N 24 '47 50w

"Soft boiled, with had-I-but-known foreboding and bits of domestic gayety." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p34
N 16 '47 110w

N Y Times p51 N 30 '47 140w

"The story isn't, unfortunately, very impressive either as detection or as psychological deduction."

New Yorker 23:116 N 1 '47 90w

"We are pleased to report that it is a literate, racy puzzle that kept us intrigued right up to the end." E. D. Doyle

+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 2 '47
120w

"Admirable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 18 '47 50w

STEERS, JAMES ALFRED. Coastline of England and Wales. 644p il $9.50 Macmillan

551.36 England—Description and travel.

Wales—Description and travel [47-22478]

"A physiography on regional lines. The bulk of the book—eight chapters—takes up the major divisions in sequence from Solway Firth to Berwick-on-Tweed. Three introductory chapters give a general statement, a summary of the physiographic history of the land in its bearing on coastal evolution, and a brief examination of shore processes, in which Mr. Steers acknowledges a debt to Douglas Johnson's 'Shore Processes and Shore Development,' the 'first comprehensive book on the subject.' Three concluding chapters return to general discussion in the themes of vertical movements of the coast, sand dunes, and salt marshes. Two outstanding features of the book are emphasis on 'the inter-relations of the work of many sciences in the interpretation of coastal features' and a cautious attitude toward generalization in interpretation." Geog R

Geog R 37:510 Jl '47 450w

"Geologists will find the opening and concluding chapters particularly useful. The descriptive chapters will be of interest largely to travelers and those concerned with special areas." Leland Horberg

+ J Geol 55:378 Jl '47 210w

"There is here little of poetic enthusiasm for the beauties of desolate shores and promontories fronting the gales; it is a book of sober scientific discussion of stratigraphical, glaciological, denudatory, and botanical facts and arguments, finely illustrated by small and large maps and 115 reproductions of good photographs." H. J. Fleure

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 7 '47 650w

Reviewed by C. E. M. Joad

New Statesman & Nation 33:117 F 8
'47 120w

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR, ed. Great adventures and explorations; from the earliest times to the present, as told by the explorers themselves; with an introd. and comments by [the editor] with the collaboration of Olive Rathbun Wilcox; maps designed by Richard Edes Harrison. 788p $5 Dial press

910.9 Discoveries (in geography). Explorers
47-30055

"How men have discovered or 're-discovered' new worlds in our world through twenty centuries, from Pytheas to Byrd. This explorer brings us directly into contact with his explorer friends by lifting out portions of their own reports, or contemporary documents, and knitting into their accounts the events and conditions of the times and points of relationship to other expeditions." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:168 F 1 '47

STEFANSSON, VILHJALMUR—Continued

Bookmark 8:12 My '47

Reviewed by Herman Kogan

Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ja 19 '47
650w

"This book provides a big handful of entertainment, or instruction, and is rather too heavy for easy holding." W. P. T.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 1 '47
180w

"The original accounts given in 'Great Adventures and Explorations' will delight anyone already interested in this field of literature, and many others who could find few better introductions to it. There are wonderful stories and amazing accomplishments told with flavor by the men who went through the experiences." Philip Burnham

+ Commonweal 46:17 Ap 18 '47 900w

Kirkus 14:631 D 15 '46 150w

"The author's personal acquaintance with men of the present generation, together with his extensive library on the undertakings of the fraternity, have combined to give a well-told tale, punctuated with delicious spice of humor." A. B. Lindsay

+ Library J 72:75 Ja 1 '47 110w

"The adventure account of the search for the Northwest Passage ends with a summary of what the Russians are today doing by way of actually putting that passage to work. . . But going farther north the book ends with the achievement of the pole, which was essentially a sporting achievement. After Peary, our present concern with the Polar Sea as a 'Mediterranean' (useful at least for strategic purposes—the term was first used by Stefansson himself), was shaped largely by the great aerial pioneering done by Sir Hubert Wilkins and later by the Russians when they landed a drift party at the pole itself in 1937. Accounts of these achievements would have helped to lead the whole stirring history right into our present-day time of awakening. That, however, is a minor criticism. The book is beautifully planned, skillfully handled, always exciting in even more than its intellectual content, and basically important to those many thousands who are today groping for a new geographical understanding of our world and what made it what it is." Earl Hanson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ja 19 '47 1650w

"'Great Adventures and Explorations' is both an important contribution to world history, an outline of the spread of European civilization, and an account of the development of our geographic knowledge. The use of the explorers' own words gives a vivid picture of the mentality of each period, and the maps which illustrate each section are a great help in following the various voyages. Mr. Stefansson's scholarly discussions of problems of exploration, his pointing up of the significance of each achievement, are among the most interesting passages in the book." H. R. Hays

+ N Y Times p39 F 9 '47 850w

"An anthology, and a good one. . . Except for the accounts of the explorations of the Greeks, Norsemen, and other ancient people, most of the stories of these voyages are told by the leaders of the expeditions themselves or by men who sailed with them. These excerpts from their narratives have been deftly joined together by Stefansson's interpretive comments. Thus, instead of being a conglomeration of bits and pieces, the book is well integrated." Albert Hubbell

+ New Yorker 22:99 F 15 '47 1500w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ja 16 '47
700w

Springf'd Union p12 Ag 8 '47 170w

Time 49:110 Ja 20 '47 240w

STEGNER, WALLACE. Second growth. 240p
$2.75 Houghton

47-4398

The village of Westwick, New Hampshire, has two kinds of inhabitants; the natives, who are unsociable New Englanders, and the summer people, composed mostly of college professors and writers who are a class by themselves. The story covers one summer and is concerned primarily with two of the native young people—Helen Boswell, a college graduate who becomes disastrously involved with Flo Barnes, the sophisticated secretary of a wealthy summer resident, and young Andy Mount, who, thru the encouragement of another summer resident, an educator, plans to break away from his accustomed surroundings and work for a college education.

Reviewed by Avis De Voto

+ Atlantic 180:123 S '47 420w

"'Second Growth' might be deemed hammock reading, but its implications are considerably beyond most hammock fiction. Wallace Stegner's story about a rural community is told with subtle restraint in a style which is often poetic and always sensitive." J. T. Flanagan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 27 '47
500wChristian Science Monitor p16 Jl 26 '47
550w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"So well done that it will be enjoyed by an appreciative though not a large audience."

+ Kirkus 15:201 Ap 1 '47 180w

"Incisive, restrained character delineation reminiscent of Willa Cather. Strongly recommended." L. R. Miller

+ Library J 72:1034 Jl '47 110w

Reviewed by Lorine Pruette

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 3 '47 550w

"Because it is such a very easy-looking, fluid, apparently simple little book, 'Second Growth' is likely to seem to some readers a piece of quick and casual work. Actually, it is a creation of remarkable penetration and skill. Its small, accurate touches build up to a full and firm whole. Its objectivity, its air of knowledge and judgment, are accompanied by an almost lyrical, delicately restrained tenderness. Its prose is disciplined, sensitive and luminous. As a novel, achieving effortlessly and exactly its subtle intentions, it deserves honest admiration." Richard Sullivan

+ N Y Times p4 Jl 27 '47 700w

"It won't harm you, but it won't bring any fresh laurels to Mr. Stegner, either."

New Yorker 23:69 Jl 19 '47 140w

"Mr. Stegner does his job with great success, it seems to me. As the good novelist should, he lets his moral present itself; he never thrusts it at you. His people are credible, rounded men and women, and his handling of the Helen-Flo situation could hardly be better. Most important, his story does not have to be New Hampshire-confined." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Jl 18 '47
850w

"The author's background material is solid and sound and shows he has done some good watching, and the counterpoint of the balky, passive resistance of the natives to the summer city folks is well developed, and the way it really is up there. . . In fact. . . 'Second Growth' is not half-bad; only about a fifth. Maybe if I took it up to the mountains and read it again I might even cut down that fraction a little." John Woodburn

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Jl 19 '47 900w

STEICHEN, EDWARD. The Blue Ghost. 150p
$3.75 Harcourt

940.545 Lexington (airplane carrier). World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 47-31341

The Blue Ghost was what the Japanese called the aircraft carrier USS Lexington. This is Captain Steichen's "photographic log and personal narrative" of his stay on the big ship during part of her spectacular career.

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 23 '47
50w

Kirkus 15:573 O 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by Richard Crandell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
D 23 '47 190w

"Captain Steichen's artistic eye produces several beautiful photographs that belong in any war collection and show that in some fields the still camera holds its place. It is unfortunate that publishing costs made it impossible to print the photographs in color. Tropic seas provide color effects that those who live in the so-called temperate zones would have to see to appreciate. Several of the more scenic shots in Captain Steichen's book must have been breath-taking in color." Foster Hailey
N Y Times p34 D 7 '47 550w

"Steichen does his portrait of 'The Blue Ghost' with the accuracy and comprehension of a great artist. . . He begins with the concept that a well-organized ship is a definite entity. . . He was with the ship only six weeks; but his pictures, with their evidence of the curiosity, energy, nerve and enthusiasm of a man whose foremost hobby is his job, make the time seem much longer." Stanleigh Arnold
+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 O 26 '47 550w

"The greatest living American photographer and a thinking, artistic, three-dimensional character, he tells his story well. Almost every combat photographer worth his salt has shot the 'ready room,' 'dawn takeoff,' 'burial at sea,' 'the victorious warriors return,' and 'the bull session,' to name the photo-cliches of our time. Steichen just happens to do it better. And he has added, this time, intelligent, exciting, often nostalgic running commentary, well-married with the pictures as any good illustrative text must be in a picture-story of this sort." D. W. Scherman
+ Sat R of Lit 30:26 N 1 '47 500w

Wis Lib Bul 43:152 N '47

STEIG, WILLIAM. Till death do us part; some ballet notes on marriage. [128p] $2 Duell

741.5 Caricatures and cartoons 47-2142

A series of cartoons, with captions which the cartoonist calls "ballet notes," all on the subject of marriage.

Kirkus 15:86 F 1 '47 70w

"The drawings are in Mr. Steig's recent energetic manner—derangements in black and white—and show a good deal of frenzied violence along with the goofy bliss he envisions as the wedded state."

New Yorker 22:99 Mr 1 '47 70w

"Fuel for the anti-marriage school, a danger for the dissatisfied spouse, comedy for the happy ditto."

Theatre Arts 31:79 My '47 50w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, pseud). Death takes a paying guest. 187p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 47-30472

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 10 '47 90w

"Assorted characters done with the light Stein touch provide a background of humor, while our hero and heroine deduce and produce the solutions of the murders." J. G.
N Y Times p21 Ag 17 '47 150w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47 60w

"Good character work—especially of poor but powerfully proud Washingtonians—makes better reading than plot, which is on fuzzy side."
+ — Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

STEIN, AARON MARC (GEORGE A. BAGBY, pseud). Twin killing. 218p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 47-2407

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 30 '47 90w

Kirkus 15:46 Ja 15 '47 60w

"Knockabout yarn written, praise be, in nontough language." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Mr 23 '47 180w

"You need not be a baseball fan to enjoy this book, but it will help." Isaac Anderson
+ N Y Times p38 Mr 23 '47 140w

"A trifle loose in solution; but as fresh, lively and agreeable a sports whodunit as has turned up in years." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p10 Ap 6 '47 100w

"Convincing portraits of ballplayers and Broadway characters, also humorous passages, are better than plot."

Sat R of Lit 30:68 Ap 12 '47 30w

STEIN, AARON MARC. We saw him die. 218p $2 Doubleday

Detective story. 47-1212

Kirkus 14:627 D 15 '46 60w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p38 Mr 2 '47 180w

"The explanations Hunt and Mulligan produce for all this are undoubtedly sound, but unless you're as keen on decoding as they are, you may think the book tedious at times."

New Yorker 22:104 F 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p20 F 16 '47 70w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:42 F 15 '47 40w

STEIN, FRED. Fifth ave; 100 photographs; picture text by Andy Logan. 99p $4 Pantheon bks.

917.471 New York (city)—Views 47-2717

A hundred photographs tracing the course of Fifth avenue from Washington Square to Harlem. Captions are by Andy Logan of the staff of The New Yorker.

"Proceeds from Washington Square to Harlem; with irony and emphasis on the contrast between the avenue's poor and rich."

Commonweal 46:125 My 16 '47 30w

"The captions are written in cadenced prose—sometimes with their vividness enhanced by the sharpness of impression the form conveys, sometimes it seems forced, unnatural."

Kirkus 15:156 Mr 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Richard Crandell

N Y Herald Tribune Weekly Bk R p12 Ag 24 '47 330w

"In documenting the grandest street in the world, Fred Stein has essayed a most ambitious undertaking. The product is thoroughly workmanlike but not inspired; too much a catalogue of landmarks, like a glorified tourist handbook." Ray Markland
+ — N Y Times p7 Je 22 '47 200w

"The pictures are captioned in a lyric vein by Andy Logan, and the book is a nice one to look through, but the question arises as to what to do with it once you have looked through it."

New Yorker 23:112 Mr 29 '47 60w

"The result in general is good. It is that, though not a great deal more, it seems to me. The reason, I think, is that Mr. Stein likes to photograph architectural features better than he likes to catch people in off moments. To be sure, he remembers to keep action in his pictures, but for the most part he gets his people in the middle distances, even his children, and to this degree his portfolio lacks something. Maybe what Mr. Stein needs is just a dash of 'Weegee,' the photographer who goes after people exclusively." J. H. Jackson
+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 6 '47 450w

STEIN, GERTRUDE. Four in America; introd. by Thornton Wilder. 221p $3.75 Yale univ. press

814

47-11511

"Posthumous publication of four essays in which Miss Stein considered George Washington, Ulysses S. Grant, the Wright brothers, and Henry James, as Americans and as creators. Long introduction by Thornton Wilder furnishes a gloss on some of the more difficult passages, discusses her aims as a writer, and recalls some of her conversations." Library J

"The book bears the imprint of a great university, and contains an introduction by Thornton Wilder, but it is still nonsense." L. A. Sloper

— Christian Science Monitor p17 N 22 '47 420w

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 47:229 D 12 '47 750w

"An important book because Miss Stein is an important figure in our literary scene. Important also because Wilder's introduction is one of the finest pieces of literary criticism, to be written in our decade."

+ Kirkus 15:596 O 15 '47 180w

"Portions of this work, which is written in Miss Stein's most experimental manner, may seem like prattle to the general reader, but it is part of the record of an important literary career and with the Wilder essay makes a necessary addition to most libraries." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:1468 O 15 '47 100w

"There are entertaining conceptions in Four in America if you have the patience to dig for them. Yet, save for the addicts, this is a dull and exasperating book, because a little less waywardness could have made it so much better and more amusing. So could James Thurber." Richard Watts

— + New Repub 117:28 N 17 '47 470w

Reviewed by Lloyd Morris
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p19 N 30 '47 700w

Reviewed by Dudley Fitts
N Y Times p5 N 30 '47 850w

"The idea sounds promising, but the pieces are in one of the author's less popular styles: the vacuous-repetitive-vague. The book is made interesting, however, by a longish introduction by Thornton Wilder, who tries to provide a summary of its contents."

New Yorker 23:138 N 22 '47 100w

Reviewed by James Gray
Sat R of Lit 30:30 N 22 '47 900w
Time 50:110 N 17 '47 650w

STEIN, LEO. Appreciation: painting, poetry and prose. 215p $2.50 Crown

801 Literature. Painting. Esthetics

47-30525

"A peripatetic, partly autobiographical series of essays by the brother of Gertrude Stein. Mr. Stein, who died [recently], was a painter and collector of art and was one of the earliest buyers of the Ecole de Paris, in the days when the names of Cézanne, Picasso, and Matisse were merely cues for laughter. After half a century of looking at pictures, he arrived at old age with a mind wholly free of cant and parochial preciousness." New Yorker

Booklist 44:65 O 15 '47

"A wonderful book. There are floods of books about writing and painting, and the word 'appreciation' on the cover of a book is enough to scare many people away. . . . Leo Stein's appreciation is not that kind. He has a strong feeling for using words that mean something, and that can be made to mean precisely what he who uses them wants them to mean. He has a passion for veracity. . . . Probably he was considered, by those who knew only that he lived abroad, collected paintings and talked, as a phenomenon uselessly surviving from an easier and leisured century. If he had not written this excellently solid book that judgment could still be presumptuous and utilitarian, for, if it is better to transmit the knowledge one has, it is necessary first to acquire it—disinterestedly." C. G. Paulding

+ Commonweal 46:460 Ag 22 '47 1400w

"Without the least trace of snobbery or obscurantism he has stated the bases of his appreciation with a lucidity and directness which should disarm the most ardent of philistines and inform the most erudite of pundits. . . . Certainly it is the fact that he had obviously integrated his own appreciations so thoroughly into his life and culture that makes this such a charming, informative, and human book." Anthony Bower

+ Nation 165:261 S 13 '47 400w

"At the ripe age of seventy-five, Mr. Stein is as independent in his judgments, as intellectually rebellious, and certainly as iconoclastic as when, forty years ago, he first championed the derided revolutionaries who today figure in our academic pantheon. His pages are studded with trenchant analyses, urbane wit and vivid anecdotal reminiscence, and these make his book one of the most exciting of recent commentaries on the art of our times." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 J1 20 '47 500w

Reviewed by Jerome Mellquist

N Y Times p3 Ag 3 '47 800w

"The writing is full of wisdom and subdued humor, and the book should be a stimulus and a guide to an appreciation of the arts."

+ New Yorker 23:63 Ag 9 '47 120w

"Leo Stein calls his work 'a little debauch in the realm of ideas.' It is but another charming and quaint way of modestly appraising his tendency to ramble, to talk with warmth and intelligence about painters and their paintings, poets and their poems, and those friends and associates he and his sister knew in Paris." Richard McLaughlin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:19 S 6 '47 850w

Theatre Arts 32:70 Ja '48 160w

"Essays and reminiscences are valuable in their own right as an honest, amused and only slightly crochety effort to put the whole matter of 'modern art' in a clear perspective (despite the title, there is little talk of poetry and prose)."

+ Time 50:91 J1 7 '47 800w

STEIN, MONTE (JONATHAN, pseud). Daddy and me, by Jonathan; pictures by Lisa Babcock. [36p] $1 Scribner

47-2540

"This picture book for the nursery school child was 'talked' by Jonathan, who is not quite three, and written down for him. A book of real life experiences that will give small children a great deal of satisfaction." Library J

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 D 22 '46 90w

Reviewed by M. M. Smith

Library J 72:83 Ja 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 29 '46 180w

STEINBECK, JOHN. The pearl; with drawings by José Clemente Orozco. 122p $2 Viking

47-12205

Retelling of an old Mexican folktale. Kino, a simple fisherman found a great pearl, which was supposed to bring great blessings. When instead it brought a series of misfortunes the pearl was thrown back into the sea.

"One can take this as a parable or as an active and limpid narrative whose depth, like that of the tropical waters which Steinbeck so beautifully describes, is far more than one would suspect." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 180:138 D '47 220w

Booklist 44:152 D 15 '47

Reviewed by Ralph Habas

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 N 23 '47 490w

"Form is the most important thing about him (Steinbeck). It is at its best in this work. The story moves with simplicity and direction, with ease and polish. Because of the writing there is a remoteness, a pearl-like quality in it." Anne Hunter

+ Commonweal 47:377 Ja 23 '48 390w

"Steinbeck's peculiarly intense simplicity of technique is admirably displayed in this vignette—a simple, tragic tale of Mexican little people."

+ Kirkus 15:551 O 1 '47 260w

"This is Steinbeck in full stature and in culmination, and is therefore, without reservation, absolutely essential in all collections." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1540 N 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:28 D 22 '47 400w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 D 7 '47 1100w

"Whether because his story was to appear first in a woman's magazine or because he really wished it to be that way, Steinbeck made no allusions offensive to the taste and carefully measured in certain proportions of sentiment. He knew how to keep his little family in the central spotlight. . . And he had long trained his prose style for such a task as this: that supple, unstrained, muscular power, responsive to the slightest pull on the reins, easily moving from walk to trot to center, never breaking through to gallop." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p4 N 30 '47 800w

"There is nothing extraordinary about this story. . . Mr. Steinbeck's version of it, however, has the distinction and sincerity that are evident in everything he writes."

+ New Yorker 23:59 D 27 '47 110w

Reviewed by Donald Weeks

San Francisco Chronicle p16 D 14 '47 600w

"The writing is very good, as are the descriptions of village life and Mexican types, and the Gulf scene itself: the land, the climate, even the various hours of the day. There is less of Steinbeck's romantic whimsicality, too, although one still could do without quite so many of his Mexican 'songs.' And what one notices again is how much more interested Steinbeck really is in the natural scene, and in animal life, than in the people or the human emotions of his narratives." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 N 22 '47 800w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 23 '47 150w

Time 50:90 D 22 '47 500w

STEINBECK, JOHN. Wayward bus. 312p $2.75 Viking

47-30085

A group of people stranded overnight at a roadside gas station and lunchroom in California, and the people who run the station are studied as to the effects of each of them on the others. The next day the proprietor drives the transients over the mountains to the next bus stop, ditching the bus for a time. What takes place on the way is also a part of this "Grand Hotel" type of novel.

"To those of us who admire Mr. Steinbeck, it is refreshing to see the warm flow of vitality which surges up in his pages, and to mark such changes as have occurred in his style and in his philosophy since he wrote his great story of the Okies. . . Very lovely, very sensuous the country is in Mr. Steinbeck's rippling prose. . . Very natural and funny, and at times very candid, is the talk. . . But, for all [the] animal magnetism and photographic reality, one ends by wondering if American life is actually so empty, so devoid of meaning, so lonely for the Juans, the Pritchards, and the Camilles of today. God help us if it is." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 179:126 Mr '47 900w

Booklist 43:186 F 15 '47

"The Wayward Bus is not deficient in entertainment. But to what extent Steinbeck has been successful in reproducing an intelligible and authentic microcosm of our culture is another question." Samuel Roddan

Canadian Forum 27:45 Mr '47 210w

"Though far below 'The Grapes of Wrath' this new novel is clearly superior to the two others [Steinbeck] has written since then. It is better mainly because his choice of characters and his emphasis on healthy, positive values may point to a revival of his interest in the serious and significant themes of American life." Robert Halsband

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 F 16 '47 600w

"Steinbeck's dreary, prurient pilgrimage has no real human or universal significance. It is nothing more than an unusually dismal bus ride—more dismal, depraved and meaningless than any man anywhere has ever taken." Frank O'Malley

— Commonweal 46:43 Ap 25 '47 550w

"Evidently even John Steinbeck 'takes a walk' now and then. This is it. We hope he doesn't continue to walk downhill. For here is a book that will inevitably be a bitter disappointment to those who have put John Steinbeck at the top of the roster of American writers today."

— Kirkus 14:621 D 15 '46 340w

"With frankness, warmth, humor and insight, author reveals his characters' individual Freudian problems as they come to the surface under stress of the situation. Will probably offend some readers but is very much a must novel." H. G. Kelley

+ Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Harold Brighouse

Manchester Guardian p3 N 29 '47 180w

Reviewed by Eleanor Clark

— Nation 164:370 Mr 29 '47 1300w

"If the final effect, although it makes for a striking novel, is less than completely satisfying, it is in great part because we had come to expect another major Steinbeck advance in breadth and power, such as was marked in turn by In Dubious Battle and The Grapes of Wrath, while The Wayward Bus does not reveal such development. Furthermore, the central character of Juan Chicoy, the Irish-Mexican 'natural man,' does not quite come off, and the climax somehow lacks the expected dramatic force. But there is enough in the novel to make one anticipate Steinbeck's next book as hopefully and eagerly as this was awaited. His is a notable American talent." Richard Watts

New Repub 116:37 Mr 10 '47 1250w

"This time Mr. Steinbeck stays within the township lines of comedy and makes only one leap, a short one, into the wide blue yonder. . . His craftsmanship is superb and his prose, always lucid and pleasing but a little soft at the edge in his last few books, has resumed its firmness. There is some symbolism, but it is not intrusive. 'The Wayward Bus' is an amusing, absorbing, superficial novel, whose importance is that it reverses the rather dismaying tendency to which Mr. Steinbeck had seemed committed. . . 'The Wayward Bus' should lay the rumor that the Book-of-the-Month Club, whose selection it is, is likely to be deterred by sex. Its content is the minor pathologies of sex superficially stated, and a long-winded insistence on sexual pruritus that long before the end of the book was fearfully boring, at least to this reader." Bernard DeVoto

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 F 16 '47 1200w

"The novel has as subtle and neat a horizontal structure as Steinbeck has ever evolved. . . This modern version of a medieval palimpsest will provide, for the thoughtful, one more handle to Steinbeck's parable of Everyman." Carlos Baker

N Y Times p1 F 16 '47 1450w

"A sermonizing book, which those who are not of Mr. Steinbeck's priapic persuasion may find fairly tedious. For many readers, no doubt, the moralizing will be well compensated for by the waywardness of Mr. Steinbeck's vocabulary and by his cheery touches of naturalism. . . But even these are veins that others have already worked, I suspect, almost to exhaustion." J. M. Lalley

New Yorker 23:94 F 22 '47 1150w

STEINBECK, JOHN—Continued

"In my opinion I'm sorry to say, the novel is not Steinbeck at his best, (you will note in it also a tendency to write 'literary' rather than true descriptive bits), nor Steinbeck at what a good many people thought he was going to become." J. H. Jackson

— San Francisco Chronicle p17 F 16 '47
1650w

"The Wayward Bus' cannot be coupled with any of Mr. Steinbeck's previous novels. It has not the tenderness of 'The Pastures of Heaven' and 'Tortilla Flat,' or the fierce brutality in 'Of Mice and Men,' and it is not a novel of bitter social strife like 'In Dubious Battle' and 'The Grapes of Wrath.' But every page of it carries the unmistakable seal and signature of John Steinbeck's mind and style. Nor can one say that it is better or worse than this book or that book of his. It stands by itself, the work of a writer as distinctively American as Mark Twain, who has developed in power and dramatic talent for almost twenty years." Harrison Smith

+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 F 15 '47 1200w

"Another load of sleazy characters who deserved oblivion rather than the accolade of a book club." Harry Hansen

— Survey G 36:450 Ag '47 50w

"The simple-mindedness of the story is saved once in a while by Steinbeck's incidental touches. . . But in theme and design the novel is a disappointing piece of second-rate, back-to-the-bulls fiction. Moreover, Steinbeck writes carelessly."

— + Time 49:118 F 24 '47 800w

"The Wayward Bus will not add greatly to Mr. John Steinbeck's reputation. In earlier novels he has shown his ability for describing the lives and preoccupations of the half-baked, a subject he treats with zest and confidence though without much humour. Here something more seems required; the book, although readable and competently put together, never rises above the level of the better sort of film to which some uplift has been added."

— + Times [London] Lit Sup p613 N 29 '47
700w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:140 Je '47 160w

Reviewed by Orville Prescott

Yale R n s 36:765 summer '47 420w

STEINBERG, MILTON. Basic Judaism. 172p $2.50 Harcourt

296 Jews—Religion 47-30768

"Rabbi Steinberg has given us a concise and lucid exposition of the traditions, the beliefs, and practices of Judaism. The author states in his preface that the book is intended especially for three groups of people, viz: for believing Jews to strengthen and encourage them in their faith; for indifferent Jews to show the significance for modern life of the Jewish tradition; and for non-Jews who are curious about Judaism." Kirkus

Booklist 44:45 O 1 '47

+ Kirkus 15:533 S 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by D. De Sola Pool

+ N Y Times p19 Ja 18 '48 800w

"A brief and unentangled explanation of the origins, practices, and aspirations of the Jewish faith, particularly successful because of the author's rare ability to stick to unadorned information, instead of wandering off into the fascinating but convoluted alleys of theological controversy."

+ New Yorker 23:123 S 13 '47 100w

Wis Lib Bul 43:137 O '47

STEINCRÖHN, PETER JOSEPH. What you can do for high blood pressure. 191p $2.50 Doubleday

616.1 Blood—Pressure Med47-40

"A discussion of the diagnosis, prevention and treatment of hypertension. Author stresses the fact that high blood pressure is a symptom, not a disease, and that the medical profession does not know what the underlying disease is that causes this symptom. Through well-chosen case histories, he sketches a philosophy of life and a regime for living that will help prevent the development of hypertension or relieve the patient suffering from this condition." (Library J) No index.

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 10 '47 100w

"Non-alarmist advice for those who insist on knowing more about their condition."

+ Kirkus 15:301 Je 1 '47 130w

"Highly recommended reading for intelligent adults." A. I. Bryan

+ Library J 72:1105 Ag '47 110w

"Because the volume is directed entirely toward the layman, Dr. Steincrohn occasionally is guilty of oversimplification and repetition, but he has wisely refrained from discussing current research and developments awaiting the honest verdict of time and test. And though he admits that high blood pressure has passed tuberculosis as a cause of death, and that more than 4,000,000 Americans suffer from it, his informal and informative record offers some hope that the situation may be improved." A. H. Weiler

+ N Y Times p33 S 7 '47 650w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ag 14 '47
550w

STEINER, MRS CHARLOTTE. Polka Dot [il. by the author]. [32p] $1.25 Doubleday

47-5780

Picture storybook about a little girl named Dot who loved everything with dots, even pets. Together she and her pets won the grand polka-dot prize at the pet show.

"Amusing picture book for the pre-school child." F. C. Darling

+ Christian Science Monitor p4 S 9 '47
90w

Kirkus 15:426 Ag 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by J. W. Butler

Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 50w

STERLING, HELEN, pseud. See Hoke, H. L.STERLING, STEWART, pseud. See Winchell, P.STERN, BERNHARD JOSEPH, and SMITH, SAMUEL, eds. Understanding the Russians; a study of Soviet life and culture. 246p il $2.75 Barnes & Noble

914.7 Russia

47-30224

A collection of articles and excerpts from books by various writers, dealing with Soviet life and culture. Material is grouped under the headings: Soviet principles and goals; The Land and the people; How the Russians govern themselves; The work of the people; Soviet science and medicine; Soviet art, music, and literature; Social life in the U.S.S.R.; Education in the Soviet Union; Soviet law and justice. Among the contributors are Joseph Stalin, Sumner Welles, Edgar Snow, V. M. Molotov, J. B. S. Haldane, John Hersey, Maurice Hindus, Hewlett Johnson.

Reviewed by E. C. Helmreich

Ann Am Acad 252:121 J1 '47 380w

Booklist 43:253 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 16 '47
90w

"Can be recommended as an informative handbook to readers who possess a strong critical sense and are able to hold fast to it." E. S. P.

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 15 '47 600w

Reviewed by Waldemar Gurian

Commonweal 46:290 J1 4 '47 250w

"More a slap-dash anthology than a well-executed handbook. The variety of sources gives 'Understanding the Russians' a most uneven character. . . . Most of the articles are too brief to answer their purposes. The role of the Communist party is dismissed in one page. . . . 'Understanding the Russians' is not without merit or usefulness. It does bring together a number of materials not easily accessible to the general reader." S. S. Harcave
— + N Y Times p37 Ap 20 '47 360w

"'Understanding the Russians' is a less valuable compilation of comments on Russia, mainly because it includes items from Soviet sources which are highly uncritical. . . . the other hand, because the book has some pieces drawn from many diverse sources: Summer Welles, John Hersey, Joseph Stalin—it offers variety, and some human interest." M. S.
San Francisco Chronicle p11 Ap 27 '47 70w

"The body of writings culled from Soviet and Communist sources adds up to an intelligent and well-rounded apologia of the Soviet way of life. Excepting three or four, items of other provenance do not add much to the book's value." D. F. White
Sat R of Lit 30:15 My 17 '47 600w

School & Society 65:152 F 22 '47 40w

Reviewed by W. C. Armstrong
Social Educ 11:282 O '47 1000w

STERN, DAVID (PETER STIRLING, pseud)
Stop press—murder! 255p $2 Phoenix 47-17965

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p10 Mr 9 '47 100w

"Except for the somewhat improbable ending the story is well organized and well told." Isaac Anderson

+ — N Y Times p15 Jl 6 '47 150w

"Short, fast, acceptable time-killer."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 9 '47 40w

STERN, MRS ELIZABETH GERTRUDE (LEVIN) (ELEANOR MORTON, pseud).
Josiah White; prince of pioneers. (Stephen Daye press bk) 300p $2.50 Ungar

B or 92 White, Josiah 47-2085

"Josiah White, according to Miss Morton, belongs 'to the category of Fitch, Evans, Baldwin, Whitney, McCormick, Edison and two brothers named Wright.' That is putting her hero in pretty high-class company, where he doesn't belong as an inventor but where he would be at home as an industrial pioneer. Josiah White, as the inventor of the 'Bear Trap Locks' for this country's early waterway navigation, did have a tremendous effect in opening Pennsylvania's coal resources." N Y Times

Chicago Sun Book Week p23 N 24 '46 230w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 23 '47 150w

"Although Miss Morton's story gets off to a slow start, it moves along with journalistic raciness when she gets down to telling of Josiah's struggle. Some of it is sketchy, though a well-outlined picture of Josiah White finally emerges." R. D. Dinsmore

+ — N Y Times p23 F 2 '47 290w

"This is a saga of America. It is told with sincerity and feeling, and insight into the struggles of a people breaking the sod of a new world. . . . Eleanor Morton, herself a 'Friend' as well as a distinguished columnist and author, has caught the spirit of the man and the times in biography. Here is clear, vigorous, lucid, idiomatic English at its best." F. L. Benjamin

+ Survey 83:62 F '47 450w

STERN, JAMES. Hidden damage. 406p $4 Harcourt

914.3 Germany—Description and travel.
World war, 1939-1945—Germany. Germany—History—Allied occupation, 1945- 47-4442

The author, an Irish-born American journalist and writer, was one of a number of civilians sent to Germany by our War Department after V-E day to interview the German people and find out in particular what was the result of our final bombing of German cities. This book recounts the author's experiences, quotes from interviews, and makes some general comments on German attitudes toward the war.

Reviewed by Heinrich Hauser
Am J Soc 53:315 Ja '48 900w

Reviewed by Erik v. Kuehnelt-Leddihn
Cath World 165:469 Ag '47 240w

Reviewed by Emily Schossberger
Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 29 '47 400w

"The 'human story of the spiritual damage suffered by the plain people' is in the book, diluted by much that is irrelevant and immaterial, but specific and therefore poignant."

+ — Christian Century 64:854 Jl 9 '47 150w

"His attitude is that of a kind, agnostic humanist. He never descends to cynicism nor ascends to high faith, but jeeps along in an amiable manner, sympathizing with the crushed, scorning the crooks, especially the pompous ones. He gives too many details, tells of too many trivialities, and jumbles too many interesting stories into his scrap bag. But if one reads him in leisure he will find much of interest and profit." R. H. M.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Je 25 '47 480w

Cleveland Open Shelf p13 Jl '47

Reviewed by Anne Fremantle
Commonweal 46:289 Jl 4 '47 500w

"A grim book, with little relief, but there is something about it that keeps one reading." Kirkus 15:250 My 1 '47 240w

"Fascinating reading, thoroughly interesting. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:886 Je 1 '47 100w

"James Stern's 'The Hidden Damage' is doubly welcome in that it deals with the reactions of a highly sensitive human being to other persons and is a subtle and penetrating impression of post-war Germany written by a man who knew the country and the people thoroughly before the war, and who can view them now with understanding, compassion, and detachment, and record his impressions in vivid prose. . . . The best sections of the book are the descriptions of the awful damage inflicted on the German cities and the accounts of the people inhabiting the ruins." Anthony Bower

+ Nation 165:19 Jl 5 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 116:25 Je 9 '47 1650w

Reviewed by Debs Myers
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ag 17 '47 600w

"There will be more and more books about conquered Germany, but 'The Hidden Damage' will remain one of the best. It has the double value of being good writing and of being honest testimony from an unpretentious but skilled observer. For historians a hundred years from now it can serve as a dependable record of how Germans talked and acted during the first months after their unconditional surrender. For readers today it will be a relief from the books about Germany that exhort or fulminate or prophesy or try to reduce moral and physical ruin to statistics." Malcolm Cowley

+ N Y Times p1 Je 8 '47 1450w

"What makes the book remarkable, in spite of a curious unevenness in its literary texture, is the author's ability to present good, bad, and merely stupid people as fully rounded human beings."

+ New Yorker 23:125 Je 7 '47 120w

"Unfortunately, despite his fine narrative skill, the author tells us nothing new or unusual about Germany. Stern had lived in Germany before the war and knew the language well enough to have been a translator of German novels. Stephen Spender, under comparable conditions and linguistic facility, came out of Germany with penetrating impressions which he reported sensitively in his 'European Witness.' Stern, on the other hand, concentrated so much on himself, his personal reactions, and the words that he uttered on all occasions, that he neglected to do a clean, objective job of reporting." S. K. Padover

STERN, JAMES—Continued

— Sat R of Lit 30:28 Je 21 '47 600w

STERN, PHILIP VAN DOREN, ed. Travelers in time; strange tales of man's journeyings into the past and the future. 483p $3.50 Doubleday

Short stories—Collections 47-5255

Anthology composed of twenty-four stories dealing with voyages into the past or the future or both. They are by such authors as H. G. Wells, Max Beerbohm, D. H. Lawrence, Algernon Blackwood, M. R. James, and James Thurber.

Booklist 44:32 S 15 '47

"Prolific in his editing, Mr. Stern nonetheless manages to sustain a high standard of excellence in his research, and in the level of reading values. He produces well selected compilations which make a definite contribution in each field."

+ Kirkus 15:290 Je 1 '47 170w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 N 2 '47 150w

"This book is above all a record of man's illimitable capacity to turn the very nature of things as they are into the color and shape of the dream that delights him. On this evidence alone, Mr. Stern wins his argument." Isabelle Mallet

+ N Y Times p5 Ag 3 '47 750w

"This anthology concentrates on fantasy and horror rather than on pseudoscience, and therefore turns out to be a lot more satisfactory than its title might indicate."

+ New Yorker 23:64 Ag 2 '47 80w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p16 S 21 '47 110w

STERN, SELMA. The spirit returneth. 265p $3 Jewish pub.

46-7933

A first novel, translated from the German by Ludwig Lewisohn. It is a story based on the tragedies and heroisms of the Jewish people in fourteenth-century Germany, which ended in the destruction of so many of the famous old Jewish communities along the Rhine.

"Ludwig Lewisohn has given a smooth, skillful translation to Miss Stern's turgid over-packed original. The latter is still too much in awe of the documents to permit the story to emerge cleanly from the record." J. J. Weinstein

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 D 29 '47 600w

"Selma Stern has written extensively on religious terrorism in German history, and here she has voiced her faith in a moving chronicle. Ludwig Lewisohn has given the work a sensitive translation."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ja 19 '47 140w

"The author was witness to the 'culture' of the Nazis in present-day Germany, and with skill and searching knowledge she dips her pen in the essence of things past and gives it meaning for today. . . Miss Stern is the author of numerous books and articles on the history of the Jews in Germany and the picture of their plight through the ages, but 'The Spirit Returneth' is her first novel and introduces her to her new English-reading audience." Anne Richards

N Y Times p28 Ja 12 '47 470w

STERNBERG, FRITZ. The coming crisis [tr. by Edward Fitzgerald]. 280p $3.50 Day

338.91 Economic policy. U.S.—Economic policy. World politics 47-638

"Starting with the overproduction under-consumption theory of cycles the author attempts to show that because United States economic imperialism and European imperialism allied with colonial feudalism have retarded economic development of some peoples and classes, crisis under 'capitalism' is inevitable. For England the Beveridge proposals offer some hope, but for the U.S. there are no effective measures at present. Author advances theory that the only hope is the growing role of the state and of left-wing progressive forces after the crisis, and states that if socialistic forces here do not put forth a positive program, as Russia did with Bolshevism, reactionaries will develop an American Wehrwirtschaft as the basis for a new American imperialism." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. L. Pelletier

Am Pol Sci R 41:805 Ag '47 750w

"This is an excellent book for discussion groups, as well as for the individual, by reason of its wide range and its integrated approach. There is something for everyone to get his teeth into and argue about, which means that it is alive and readable and meaty." E. A. Beder

+ Canadian Forum 26:282 Mr '47 550w

Christian Century 64:145 Ja 29 '47 280w

Christian Science Monitor p16 Ja 20 '47 600w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 Jl '47 30w

"Recommended as evidence of some current thought." Walter Hausdorfer

+ Library J 71:1805 D 15 '46 150w

Reviewed by R. S. Lynd

Nation 164:130 F 1 '47 1150w

"I do not think Sternberg has proved his case, though it is backed by authoritative figures, skillfully interpreted. Social science has not yet advanced to the stage of reliable prediction. Prophecy must still rest on intuition, but the author has demonstrated in the past that his hunches are extraordinarily good. Few would be foolhardy enough to assert that the outline of the future he presents is not one of the possibilities. If it is not to be realized, suitable policies must be adopted to avoid it. Whatever the outcome, it cannot be denied that the course of affairs in the United States will determine the course of world history, so dominant is our economy and so great is our military potential." George Soule

+ New Repub 116:39 Ja 13 '47 1000w

"This book is replete with militant class-struggle slogans. It has a strong continental European flavor. It does not fit well into the traditions of Anglo-Saxon ideology. . . The economics of the book is hopelessly deficient and faulty. It discloses no understanding of modern economic analysis; instead it is cast in terms of outworn shibboleths such as 'economic imperialism,' the drive for 'new markets,' etc. . . When it comes to the home market, the arguments advanced are seriously defective. Home investment outlets are barely mentioned and are given little or no analysis." A. H. Hansen

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 Mr 30 '47 2250w

Reviewed by Alan Cranston

N Y Times p4 Ja 19 '47 950w

New Yorker 22:86 Ja 25 '47 120w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 S 21 '47 600w

"Fritz Sternberg has written an important book on the coming great crisis which he considers unavoidable. Using his analysis of the 'unliquidated crisis of 1929' as a springboard, he examines factors tending to aggravate the future depression. He also offers a well-reasoned conclusion that no effective measures to avoid it are likely to be taken in the United States. . . The importance of the book is in its timely reminder that the 1929 crisis was not resolved by the time war broke out, the analysis of the forces which made for its magnitude and the exposition of conditions leading to another crisis as great or greater than that of 1929. This should suffice to attract a host of readers to this book. The outcome of the coming crisis may decide the fate of the world." D. F. White

+ Sat R of Lit 30:9 Ja 4 '47 1050w

"Dr. Fritz Sternberg, an able German-American writer, expresses the expectations of many people when he entitles his present economic study The Coming Crisis. Little persuasion is needed to make the reader accept the underlying assumption. In answering the further question, posed in the subtitle, whether we have to expect 'a crash far worse than 1929,' Dr. Sternberg draws many of his arguments from the Marxist arsenal. . . Books like The Coming Crisis, critically and intelligently read, can help to avert the disasters they predict."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p475 S 20 '47 1200w

STETSON, HARLAN TRUE. Sunspots in action; with a foreword by Sir Edward V. Appleton. 252p il $3.50 Ronald

551.5 Sun spots 47-6692

"Useful non-technical study of sun spots with emphasis on the effects of the sun on the earth's atmosphere, both as a medium for long-distance radio communication, and as an ultimate source of weather. Pertinent chapters are 'Sunspots and the Economic Cycle' and 'Sunspots, the Radio Industry and the FCC.' Bibliography. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1617 N 15 '47 60w

"The author, director of the Cosmic Terrestrial Research Laboratory at Needham, Mass., associated with M. I. T., has personally contributed much of the observational data in this field over many years of research. But the book relates more than merely his own work, for he has drawn from economics and biology as well as astronomy and physics to give a thoroughly up-to-date account, written for the layman, of what sunspots are, what they seem to do to us and how we may be able to utilize this information."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22 N 2 '47 230w

STEVENS, ALDEN GIFFORD, and KENDALL, PATRICIA. Mark of the leopard; with il. by Roger Vernam. 278p $2.50 Lippincott

47-31075

Story of a young boy of Central Africa and his adventures in World war II. The book is a sequel to the author's earlier tale of Simba, Lion Boy (Book Review Digest 1938).

Booklist 44:175 Ja 1 '48

"A breath-taking story of the wilderness."

A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:42 Ja '48 120w

Kirkus 15:504 S 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by A. M. Wetherell

Library J 72:1620 N 15 '47 70w

"Except for occasional unevenness it is a good, all-around, meaty story for older boys." Frances Smith

+ N Y Times p37 S 21 '47 180w

"It is a continuously exciting story that gives a new knowledge of and feeling for its setting."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:51 N 15 '47 190w

STEVENS, WALLACE. Transport to summer. 148p $2.50 Knopf

811

47-2382

First full-length book by this American poet since Parts of a World (Book Review Digest 1942). It includes two works that had been printed only in limited editions: Esthétique du Mal, and Notes Toward a Supreme Fiction, and some poems never before printed.

Christian Science Monitor p17 My 24 '47 50w

"Stevens has been called the poets' poet here in America. His new volume will be welcomed by all poets and poetry lovers."

+ Kirkus 15:187 Mr 15 '47 100w

"Wallace Stevens is one of the best poets of the past half-century. If he has never had the popularity of Robert Frost, or the international reputation of T. S. Eliot or Ezra Pound, he has, nevertheless, been fortunate in the criticism that he has received. . . A few poems in 'Transport to Summer' are better than anything that Stevens has written since 'Harmonium,' but the earlier book is far more exciting and successful as a whole." Robert Lowell

+ Nation 164:400 Ap 5 '47 2000w

"Stevens is a shrewd impresario. He has always been a master of shades and sonorities, and though far less interested in such effects than of old, he is still capable of making pure sound do duty as meaning. His neologisms are usually witty and his occasional half-hidden allusions to other poets suggestive. Sometimes he retires into extreme privacy or, in a more ambitious piece, he may permit the metaphysical problem that it poses to take precedence of the poem itself. This last is his gravest fault. He does not entirely blink, but neither does he quite frankly confront, what Yeats called the Vision of Evil." Babette Deutsch

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Ag 31 '47 1000w

"All of Stevens' later work has been written against the realization that we live in a time of violent disorder. . . I suppose that Wallace Stevens, in expressing such truths with the mellowness and tang of a late-summer wine, has about one reader to every hundred of the latest best-seller. Yet Stevens, who did not publish a poem until he was 35, will increasingly be recognized to belong in the company of Henry Adams and Henry James, with that small body of important American artists who have ripened as they matured, and who have been far more productive beyond their middle years than during their green twenties or thirties." F. O. Matthiessen

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 20 '47 1050w

"Stevens' poetry, musical and filled with occasional touches of beauty though it is, becomes more and more a luxury product, and his mannerisms are frequently affectations." Louise Bogan

New Yorker 23:116 My 3 '47 100w

"'Transport to Summer' reinforces the accuracy of the appraisal—which is now, at last, current—that Stevens is a most deservedly respected poet." Jeremy Ingalls

+ Sat R of Lit 30:48 Ap 12 '47 600w

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLIE). Kate Hardy. 252p $2.75 Rinehart

47-31386

Kate Hardy, novelist, was fed-up with life in a post-war London apartment where her sister and niece made life difficult. Without warning she bought a country home in Old Quinings and established herself there. The novel describes her experiences as she gradually makes herself a part of the village life.

Booklist 44:91 N 1 '47

Christian Science Monitor p18 N 15 '47 350w

+ Kirkus 15:375 J1 15 '47 160w

"Ideal summer and escape reading. For general purchase." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 70w

"To Miss Stevenson's reading circle all this is familiar feminine ground." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31 O 26 '47 100w

Reviewed by Beatrice Sherman

N Y Times p24 D 7 '47 270w

"The story served up in very gracious prose, is as virtuous as a vicar, as comfortable as an old shoe." W. R. W.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p24 N 23 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:142 O '47

STEVENSON, DOROTHY EMILY (MRS JAMES REID PEPLUE). Mrs Tim gets a job. 282p $2.75 Rinehart

47-1582

England and Scotland form the background of this novel. Tim is still with his regiment in Egypt, the children are away at school; so Mrs Tim takes a job as super-hostess in a Scottish home turned hotel. There Mrs Tim has her troubles with an old car, rationing, talkative guests, and her misunderstood chief. But it turns out quite enjoyable for all.

Booklist 43:186 F 15 '47

"D. E. Stevenson's current novel of English country life follows the reliable pattern of her earlier books. Deftly written, it is always cheerful and often very amusing." A. J. Hiken

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 9 '47 200w

"It takes no serious application to read this brisk, foamy, optimistic, thoroughly ladylike book. It took more pains to write it and keep it true to pitch."

Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 15 '47 400w

Kirkus 14:623 D 15 '46 170w

"Stevenson enthusiasts will welcome this story; other readers, too, will chuckle through a pleasant evening, and look forward to enjoying the earlier titles." Thelma Brackett

+ Library J 72:321 F 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 21 '47 30w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 9 '47 150w

"The whole story—with its air of an operation on borrowed time—is rather terrific for Mrs. Tim and very good fun for the reader too." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p16 F 9 '47 320w

STEVENSON, LIONEL. Showman of Vanity Fair; the life of William Makepeace Thackeray. 405p il $5 Scribner

B or 92 Thackeray, William Makepeace

47-30056

"Although William Makepeace Thackeray died over 80 years ago, very few biographies—even biographical sketches—have been written about him. This full-length portrait against the background of his age, and particularly his friends, is a splendid picture. The American tour, many letters, the illustrations by Thackeray himself, taken from many of his books, all are delightfully presented." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:169 F 1 '47

Bookmark 8:14 My '47

Reviewed by Desmond Pacey

Canadian Forum 27:69 Je '47 650w

"Mr. Stevenson's biography is deficient in color and drama and there are broken threads in the warp and woof of it. But its virtues are solid and command respect. It is honest, tolerant, based on sound but unobtrusive scholarship, and richly informative. It is a book long needed and deserving of a hearty welcome." J. J. Reilly

Cath World 165:186 My '47 500w

Reviewed by G. N. Ray

Chicago Sun Book Week p14 F 9 '47 400w

"Mr. Stevenson has a clear and lively (though never cheap) narrative style. His story flows along so easily that (not altogether to his discredit) the reader may lose the thread of chronology and find himself puzzled as to precise dates. When a new edition is called for, it would be a convenience if the biographer would remedy the paucity of indications as to exact years by supplying this information on the top margins of each page." S. C. C. Christian Science Monitor p16 Mr 1 '47 1050w

"Although certain parts of this book are very well done, it suffers in general from overloading with unessential detail and incident; rigid compression of the first hundred pages, and more careful selection of material throughout would have made the volume more readable and effective." A. P. Campbell

— Commonweal 46:340 Jl 18 '47 460w

"In spite of the attractive title, in spite of the fact that Thackeray is one of the few literary figures of the 19th century whose intimate doings haven't overcrowded library shelves, this is a disappointment. For this, the result of many years of research, is too obviously that, and is both ponderous and pedantic for the general reader. . . A necessity for college and public libraries, a book which will receive critical attention, and a piece of book making which is outstanding. The illustrations, with Thackeray's own amusing drawings, warrant in themselves price of admission."

+ Kirkus 14:630 D 15 '46 170w

"A book recommended for all libraries and the general reader." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:75 Ja 1 '47 100w

"Mr. Stevenson, a Scottish-born professor of English at the University of Southern California . . . has produced what is by far the best available book on the subject of Thackeray. 'The Showman of Vanity Fair' is not merely a sympathetic and well informed account of the restless novelist's actions and accomplishments, but a vivid picture of literary and fashionable society in midnineteenth-century London, Paris and the United States. No aspect of Thackeray's multifarious experience has been neglected. Though his work as an author properly receives major attention, we see him also as a tourist, a clubman, and even as a defeated candidate for Parliament." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Ja 12 '47 1000w

"Mr. Stevenson provides no bibliography. It is therefore impossible to estimate the sources of his information, albeit he writes as one steeped in Thackeray lore. His book is an excellent guide for Thackeray enthusiasts, a kind of narrative cyclopedia of the hero's movements and acts, but whether the ordinary reader will share the delight of the specialist in this survey is more doubtful." H. M. Jones

+ N Y Times p6 F 16 '47 900w

"This biography is a perfect complement to Thackeray's letters and private papers, which have been coming out a couple of volumes at a time. Thackeray makes a highly animated subject for biography. . . Mr. Stevenson does him full justice in an attractive book thickly illustrated with Thackeray's drawings."

+ New Yorker 22:78 F 1 '47 130w

"It is a plain and direct account based on the available printed material, including the first volumes of Mr. Ray's 'Letters,' of which so much use has been made that a word of acknowledgement would have seemed gracious. . . For critical comment on the novels, which must be an important part of the definitive biography, the narrative rarely pauses, and some of the opinions that are ventured seem rather startling." G. S. Haight

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 F 8 '47 1750w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 179:745 D 12 '47 750w

Springfd Union p14 Jl 17 '47 150w

"Mr. Stevenson's biography of Thackeray is in the best Victorian tradition, intelligent and full of matter. . . If on finishing this biography of Thackeray we still cannot define him in a phrase, we gain at least a closer understanding of him, and a wide knowledge of literary and journalistic London in the middle of the nineteenth century."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p659 D 20 '47 900w

Wis Lib Bul 43:37 F '47

"Mr. Stevenson's book is over-titled. Apart from an extraordinarily attractive and unobtrusive style, the principal merit of 'The Showman of Vanity Fair' is in the fulness and precision with which it narrates the happenings in Thackeray's life." E. K. Brown

+ Yale R n s 36:754 summer '47 410w

STEVENSON, ORLANDO JOHN. The talking wire; the story of Alexander Graham Bell; il. by Lawrence Dresser. 207p $2.50 Messner B or 92 Bell, Alexander Graham—Juvenile literature 47-2911

A biography of Alexander Graham Bell for the teen-aged reader. It tells of his boyhood in Scotland; his early education; his coming to America; and especially his part in the invention of the telephone and telegraph. Index.

"An interesting biography. . . It is a stimulating story, essentially true, but reading like fiction." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:267 J1 '47 60w

"The book would have meant more had there been more thoughtful discussion of the scientific problems with which Bell wrestled, or some sense of period and background. As it stands, the scientific aspects are negligible and the world he lived in seems a vacuum, so far as this book is concerned. Too bad—a good opportunity missed."

— Kirkus 15:219 Ap 15 '47 160w

"Simple and readable, it may seem dull to those who read for the story only, but will be enjoyed by anyone interested in science or scientists." Ruth McEvoy

+ Library J 72:820 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 J1 6 '47 410w

"This is a biography that will almost certainly interest young people. It will appeal at the same time to adults. As an excellent history of the development of the telephone . . . it deserves a place in both the public library and the school library, as well as in homes."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 O 18 '47 150w

Wis Lib Bul 43:122 J1 '47

STEVENSON, ROBERT LOUIS. Novels and stories; sel. with an introd. by V. S. Pritchett. 615p $3.95 Duell

The editor is an English short-story writer and critic. "Aiming to get 'the best and most representative' of Stevenson into his collection, [he] chose 'Weir of Hermiston,' 'The Master of Ballantrae,' 'Kidnapped,' 'Thrawn Janet,' 'Travels With a Donkey,' 'The Beach of Falesa,' and 'The Suicide Club.'" (N Y Times)

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:31 Ag 4 '47 310w

"Jim Hawkins, Ben Gunn, Long John Silver, Davy Balfour, Alan Breck Stewart and the others of the lively Stevenson family are mighty fine companions for these troubled times. Starting tomorrow I am going to give up saying 'these troubled times.'" Frank Sullivan

+ N Y Times p4 My 18 '47 1200w

"V. S. Pritchett merits praise on two accounts for this Stevenson collection. First, his selection is excellent; second, his introduction explaining that choice is a little gem of literary criticism, giving as it does a lucid, broad-canvassed appraisal of the writer and his work." E. J.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p13 My 4 '47 160w

STEVENSON, ROBERT LOUIS. Selected writings; ed. with an introd. by Saxe Commins. 1197p $5 Random house

828 47-2104

Contents: Treasure island; The Master of Ballantrae; Weir of Hermiston; Strange case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde; The Suicide club; The Bottle imp; The Body-snatcher; Providence and the guitar; The Sire de Malétoit's door; A Lodging for the night; Markheim; Thrawn Janet; The Beach of Falesa; Virginibus puerisque; Talk and talkers; Father Damien; An apology for idlers; Child's play; Aes triplex; Old mortality; On the enjoyment of unpleasant places; A Humble remonstrance; Travels with a donkey in the Cevennes; The Royal sport nautique; The Silverado squatters; A child's garden of verses; The Song of Rahéro; The Feast of famine; Ticonderoga; Heather ale; Christmas at sea; The Vagabond; To my father; The Sick child; To W. E. Henley; Henry James; Wandering Willie; The Spaewife; The Celestial surgeon; Requiem.

"The introduction by the editor is an extremely capable, physical and artistic biography, which evaluates the man and his work in honest terms, rather than in light of the Stevenson legend. Definitely an addition to modern libraries."

+ Kirkus 15:187 Mr 15 '47 90w

Reviewed by J. D. Lindquist

Library J 72:645 Ap 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:31 Ag 4 '47 310w

"I pause to remark that 'Treasure Island' seems to me a story clumsily told. But this is a notable collection to read and possess, of good writing full of grace and charm and vivid entertainment."

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p25 Ap 6 '47 900w

Reviewed by Frank Sullivan

N Y Times p4 My 18 '47 550w

"It makes an excellent one-volume family Stevenson, though perhaps a third of it, especially the poems and ballads, might just as well have been left out." Hamilton Basso

+ — New Yorker 23:101 Ap 5 '47 900w

"Excellent chosen selections [prefaced] with a fine, solid introduction in which Stevenson is approached critically as well as biographically." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 Ap 2 '47 900w

STEVENSON, ROBERT SCOTT. Morell Mackenzie; the story of a Victorian tragedy. 194p il $5 Schuman

B or 92 Mackenzie, Sir Morell, Frederick III, German emperor [46-7423]

"Morell Mackenzie was the English physician who treated the Crown Prince Frederick of Prussia unsuccessfully for a disease of the larynx. That is what most people remember of him to-day, if they remember him at all. But in 1887-8, when the political future of Germany was to be decided by the success or failure of Mackenzie's treatment, he enjoyed as much notoriety as any man in Europe. . . A great throat specialist acutated by respect for Mackenzie's pioneer work in laryngology as well as a desire to probe the Crown Prince's mysterious illness in the light of modern medical knowledge, has found time in the last twenty years to collate and study all the information available about this old controversy. . . Morell Mackenzie, which is the happy result, combines a short but informative account of Mackenzie's life with a most lucid, detailed and impartial chronicle of his treatment of the Crown Prince's disease, which was the dramatic turning-point in his career; it is a remarkable achievement in medical biography." New Statesman & Nation

"Stevenson has written an exhaustive and authoritative, yet notably readable account of the world-famous case, setting it against a richly detailed background of 19th century medical methods and ideas. Valuable as a contribution to medical history, the book offers also to the general reader a narrative well told and humanly significant." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 S 7 '47 180w

"Dr. R. Scott Stevenson, himself a laryngologist, has performed a labour of love with fitting thoroughness. He reviews the literature and the evidence critically and fairly, and without absolving Sir Morell from many irritating personal faults insists upon his great services as a pioneer in his speciality." G. F.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Je 14 '46 330w

Reviewed by Ralph Partridge

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:50 J1 20 '46 1200w

STEVENSON, R. S.—Continued

Reviewed by H. H. Bashford

Spec 176:560 My 31 '46 1100w

Time 49:104 Mr 17 '47 800w

"Mr. Scott Stevenson, without indulging in literary flights, has written a workmanlike biography of Mackenzie—scrupulous, detailed and without extravagant partialities."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p270 Je 8 '46 3200w

STEWART, ANNA BIRD. Young Miss Burney; with drawings by Helen Stone. 270p $2.50 Lippincott

Arblay, Frances (Burney) d—Juvenile literature 47-31369

Biography of the early years of the shy eighteenth-century authoress told in story form. It shows her growing up in the London home of her much-loved father, who was a popular music teacher. Fanny was the quiet one of the family and she spent much time in observing others and in scribbling in her diary, and in her work on Evelina. The book ends with the publication of Evelina and the secret of its authorship known. The remainder of her life is sketched in an epilog.

Booklist 44:92 N 1 '47

"With scholarship and distinction as a story teller, Miss Stewart writes of the girl who became the sensation of London when her novel Evelina was published."

Commonweal 47:155 N 21 '47 60w

"Warmly recommended to older girls and adults who would refresh their memories." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:44 Ja '48 140w

Kirkus 15:433 Ag 15 '47 110w

"It is doubtful that a reader unfamiliar with the period would be inspired to read more about it by this biography of young Fanny Burney. Trivial conversations, overuse of the 'little-did-she-know' technique, and miscellaneous information about eighteenth-century London make tedious reading of what could have been a fascinating book." J. H. Dohm

— Library J 73:50 Ja 1 '48 80w

"Though Fanny is not familiar to girls today, the doings of her large, lively, affectionate family and its relations with the great and near-great of London should interest some who enjoy a period setting. Well done." Eleanor Kidder

+ Library J 73:50 Ja 1 '48 80w

"The story not only draws on authentic sources but uses its material with a skill that makes of it a vivid story for high school age."

M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 16 '47 400w

+ N Y Times p46 N 16 '47 140w

"This biography of Fanny Burney is told as a story—and a very lively and interesting story it is. It is great fun to read of the people who came to the Burney home, first on Poland Street, then in Queen's Square, and then on St. Martin's Street. As you read many famous people come to life for you. . . No better illustrator could be found for this fresh and entertaining book."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:58 N 15 '47 250w

STEWART, CECIL. Byzantine legacy. 202p il $7 Macmillan

914.95 Balkan states—Description and travel. Art, Byzantine. Architecture, Byzantine [47-11317]

"An account, in diary form, of a journey made in 1936 by a young Scottish student of architecture, starting in Vienna and ending in Venice, with stopovers along the way at Athens, Salonika, Mount Athos, Constantinople, Palermo, and Ravenna. The author feels that Byzantine art has been snubbed by the West; his photographs, which are superb, do more than his text to redress the imbalance. The extraordinary churches and monasteries he shows seem in nearly every case to be unselfconscious flowerings of the rocky ground out of which they grow." (New Yorker) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

"Many fascinating pages devoted to Mount Athos and its monasteries. . . Treasure-trove for student of architecture and of social lore." R. S. Plaut

+ Library J 73:41 Ja 1 '48 80w

"Mr. Stewart is a serious student and had the ingenuity to visit some less familiar Byzantine sites. It is a pity that instead of printing the solid information which he must have acquired he has accompanied his beautiful photographs with a travel diary. The late Mr. Robert Byron set standards in both the subjects in which Mr. Stewart is interested—Byzantine scholarship and description of travel—and this book inevitably suffers from the comparison which it thus evokes."

+ — Manchester Guardian p3 O 3 '47 130w
New Yorker 23:114 N 1 '47 110w

"So imposing a title promises a work both comprehensive and interpretative, and Mr. Stewart would perhaps have been wise to choose something more modest. His book is really the random diary of an architectural student with a travelling scholarship, plenty of go, an enjoyment of the humours of travel, a lively mind, and a fluent pen. As such it is pleasant enough. . . But the inadequacies of the book as a treatment of Byzantine architecture emphasize the lack of any really authoritative work on the subject in English."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p522 O 11 '47 360w

STEWART, MRS ELIZABETH GREY. Surrender the heart. 284p $2.75 Bobbs 47-2102

A novel in which a beautiful and intelligent woman denies herself to her husband because of his infidelities, but loving him deeply continues to keep up his home. Her affection for his unacknowledged son finally brings husband and wife together again after many years.

"Characterization is good and the writing is far better than that in most love and romance fiction."

+ Booklist 43:360 Jl 15 '47

Kirkus 15:75 F 1 '47 160w

"Judith isn't a sympathetic character. Even her generous actions are prompted by cold self-interest. Her story is told with understanding of her limitations but not a trace of humor. The reader is likely to grow impatient with a woman who needs twenty-four years in cold storage to realize that a bit of warmth and flexibility can be fitted into a stern New England code." Beatrice Sherman
N Y Times p24 Ap 13 '47 160w

STEWART, JAMES STUART. Heralds of God. 222p $2.50 Scribner

251 Preaching 47-1238

"Its initial stress is upon the unchanging message, but the constantly changing human scene is what makes successive books about preaching necessary. The sermon must not float upon a 'pietistic backwater' but breast the open seas of contemporary thought and action. Dr. Stewart exalts the importance of preaching and gives wise counsel to preachers." Christian Century

"A really great book on preaching by a great Scottish preacher."

+ Christian Century 63:1536 D 18 '46 80w

"So many books of this type are dull and pedantic; not this. Even the clergy—notably hyper-critical of such things—will read it with pleasure and find much there that is grist to their mills." J. H. Titus

+ Churchman 161:18 F 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by R. E. Keighton

Crozer Q 24:189 Ap '47 200w

STEWART, JOHN INNES MACKINTOSH
(MICHAEL INNES, pseud). Night of errors.
211p $2.50 Dodd 47-31336

Detective story.

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16 O
5 '47 190w

"The situation is so confused, what with a couple of other murders and the destruction of Sherris Hall, the home of the Dromios, that a less skilled writer than Michael Innes would inevitably have made a hash of it. But Innes is in a class, by himself, as this book proves to the hilt." Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p28 S 23 '47 200w

"The book, like the others in the series, is well written, but Appleby's final punch isn't nearly as swift or tricky as it has been in the past, and Mr. Innes's characterizations are becoming more and more grotesque."

+ New Yorker 23:116 S 27 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle
San Francisco Chronicle p26 S 28 '47
150w

Sat R of Lit 30:26 O 4 '47 50w

STEWART, ROBERT WILLIAM. Introduction to Jesus for the twentieth century. 127p $1.75 Macmillan

232.9 Jesus Christ—Character 47-3289

"Dynamic interpretation of Jesus for generation which finds supreme reality in action and to whom theory and practice are one. Author believes that modern approach must be by categories of modern thought and that interest in historical Jesus wanes when there is no adequate philosophy to sustain it." Library J

"Few orthodox Christians, Catholic or Protestant, conservatives or liberal will subscribe to the author's thesis, but he is not writing for them but for those whom the traditional Christ of the Church has left cold."

Kirkus 15:538 S 15 '47 150w

"No final life of Jesus is conceivable for the same reason that no final life of any historical character is attainable. Finality rules out realism. Dr. Stewart writes for those who experience difficulty in finding Jesus along traditional paths. His interpretation is just as lofty as that arrived at through dogmas and formulas of church." O. G. Lawson

Library J 72:1268 S 15 '47 120w

"Dr. Stewart is not entirely convincing when he invokes dialectical materialism and attributes the death of Jesus to his potential interference with the temple revenue. Nor is it easy to see why he refuses to accept the testimony of New Testament scholars that no biography of the historical Jesus can be written. The very last page in the book is an exhortation to scholars to do the very thing they have declared is impossible." E. M. Tainton

San Francisco Chronicle p16 N 16 '47
320w

Reviewed by O. J. Aldrich
Springfd Republican p8B D 21 '47
120w

STIGLER, GEORGE JOSEPH. Theory of price. 340p $3.75 Macmillan

338.52 Prices. Economics 46-3109

"This volume fulfils Professor Stigler's promise to complement the treatment of the theory of perfect competition in his earlier Theory of Competitive Price [Book Review Digest 1943] with a later textbook including also sections on imperfect competition, multiple products, and capital theory. In the author's words, the new book 'thus covers the main topics of modern price theory—that is, the mechanism of a stationary enterprise economy.'" J Pol Econ

"The style of writing is something of an innovation in that topics of considerable complexity are presented in an exceedingly brief and understandable manner, and an occasional note of humor may be detected. . . Nevertheless, there is some reason to believe that inquiring students may fail to obtain full value from the work unless they possess some considerable knowledge of geometry and higher mathematics. However, students at the advanced undergraduate level who possess such a background plus a sound elementary course in the principles of economics may well improve their analytical abilities through the use of Dr. Stigler's contribution to the field of economic analysis." L. G. Mathy

+ Ann Am Acad 249:200 Ja '47 450w

"The concluding note on exhausting resources, in which the author refutes the popular charge that under competition exhausting resources are utilized too rapidly, fittingly re-emphasizes Professor Stigler's faith in the preferences of individuals, operating through a competitive market, to insure the economic summum bonum. It would be improper, however, to assess a textbook in advanced economic theory primarily with reference to the economic Weltanschauung of its author. A course in economic theory is ordinarily a means of teaching techniques of analysis rather than settled conclusions. For this purpose Professor Stigler's book, especially those sections dealing with the analytically tractable world of perfect competition, is excellent." J. S. Earley

+ J Pol Econ 55:167 Ap '47 1200w

STILES, WALTER. Trace elements in plants and animals. 189p il $2.75 Macmillan

581.13 Trace elements 47-555

"College text, a summary of information on chemical elements necessary for the lives of plants and animals. Gives the present knowledge of trace elements in living organisms. Bibliography." (Library J) Index.

"It is to be regretted that Professor Stiles fails to make clear that Raulin, under the tutelage of Pasteur, was the first to discover the essentiality of a trace-element, namely, zinc for the fungus, Aspergillus niger, in 1869. Inclusion of additional data on purification of organic dietary compounds would have been desirable. Presumably because of unintentional ambiguity by the reviewer, he is cited as suggesting the non-essentiality of silicon. The intention, rather, was to emphasize that an arrangement of the chemical elements on the basis of atomic structure indicated that biological essentiality was a property of atomic structure. . . No reference is made by Professor Stiles to the description by Bertrand of deficiency symptoms in rats on elimination of zinc from the diet, nor the very recent reports on crop deficiencies in molybdenum from Australia and Tasmania. These, however, are minor faults that detract little from the potential value of this digest to all those dealing with any phase of nutrition. The reviewer can recommend it as a thorough and well-balanced treatment of the subject. The book is quite attractive in appearance, very free of errors and adequately indexed." R. A. Steinberg

+ Am Chem Soc J 69:1236 My '47 430w

"The book is an excellent and well documented work. . . The cheap binding and paper used in the book can be excused on the basis of the need of early revision in the rapidly growing field." William Crocker

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2111 Jl 21 '47 250w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:391 Mr 1 '47 30w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:4 Ja '47

STILL, ALFRED. Communication through the ages, from sign language to television. 201p il $2.75 Rinehart

384 Communication and traffic. Signals and signalling 46-11930

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:249 Ap 15 '47

N Y New Tech Bks 31:59 O '46

School & Society 65:184 Mr 8 '47 20w

STILL, ALFRED—Continued

"A brief, well-documented and readable history of the means of communication 'from sign language to television' by an astute and well-read professor of electrical engineering."
+ Theatre Arts 31:80 Ap '47 30w

STILWELL, ALISON. Chin Ling, the Chinese cricket [pictures by the author]. [45p] $2.25 Macmillan

47-11980

Chin Ling was a cricket belonging to a mannerly Chinese boy named Little Mushroom. Story and pictures tell how Chin Ling became a cricket champion and brought good fortune to Little Mushroom and his mother. The author is the daughter of General Stilwell.

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p1A N 19 '47 190w

"Alison Stilwell has made lovely pictures in color and told an entertaining story." A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 24:35 Ja '48 70w

"General Stilwell's daughter has lived much of her life in China and this unusual story, with its drawings full of Chinese flavor, has come out of her understanding of the simple joys of the Chinese people."

+ Kirkus 15:547 O 1 '47 90w

"The cricket's lovely personality comes alive under the Chinese brush technique of the author-artist. Recommended for younger children and for reading aloud." Helen Kremer

Library J 73:48 Ja 1 '48 90w

"Although the delicate illustrations in Chinese brush style could be attraction enough for this charming book . . . it is the story that will endear it to children between the ages of 5 and 8. For Miss Stilwell has a sure sense of what children consider proper, and a sense of responsibility to her story and her audience." Bee Bowman

+ San Francisco Chronicle p4 N 16 '47 220w

STILWELL, HART. Uncovered wagon. 309p $3 Doubleday

47-30877

A novel, which reads like autobiography, dealing with life in Texas in the early 1900s. The chief character is the Old Man, the narrator's father, a cattleman, Ranger, Indian fighter, gardener, who kept his family almost constantly on the move.

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 28 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:372 J1 15 '47 140w

"The book is a sort of 'Life With Father' in a particularly lowdown setting. The things recounted in this saga are entirely believable, which means that they are either true or that Mr. Stilwell is a highly talented hand at the creation of a fictional character." Stanley Walker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 S 21 '47 500w

"Mr. Stilwell has done very much more than expand a Texan tall story into novel length. There is a certain amount of wild hyperbole, but no more than is justified. Essentially Mr. Stilwell's book—novel or biography or a combination of both—is a study of character, in a larger sense the character of Texas. His understanding of the Old Man's psychology is flawless, and by natural extension does much to explain the mores and popular thinking of America's great country within a country. For if there ever were a Texan, it is Old Man Endicott, in every wrinkle around his blue and beady eyes." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p6 S 7 '47 550w

STIRLING, PETER, pseud. See Stern, D.

STOCKING, GEORGE WARD, and others. Cartels in action; case studies in international business diplomacy. 533p $4 Twentieth century fund

338.883 Trusts, Industrial—International trusts 46-8321

"To the extensive material now available on cartels this adds something that so far as I know is not substantially duplicated elsewhere. . . . There have been analyses of the cartel problem to support a program. This volume contains a series of case studies of single representative cartels, showing the situation out of which each developed, its history, its methods, and the results achieved. Since the book attempts to offer no judgment or policy—that is to follow in a future publication of the Twentieth Century Fund—there is room for a reasonably full factual account of the cases chosen. The reader emerges with so much the better sense of the setting of cartel action, its place in economic evolution, the way its leaders think and act." (Nation) Index.

Reviewed by E. W. Carter

Am Pol Sci R 41:349 Ap '47 550w

Reviewed by E. M. Patterson

Ann Am Acad 251:191 My '47 220w

Booklist 43:284 My 15 '47

"The most comprehensive factual study of specific cartels ever published." Alex MacDonald

+ Canadian Forum 27:44 My '47 800w

Foreign Affairs 25:695 J1 '47 20w

Management R 36:234 Ap '47 20w

Reviewed by George Soule

Nation 164:160 F 8 '47 600w

"This is not an easy story to tell. Aside from the diversity of their origins and operations, the inner workings of cartels are often obscured by a complexity of interlocking arrangements and technological details. But the authors have done a skillful job of piercing through the maze, and the survey they offer will make interesting and stimulating reading for any student of world affairs." J. J. Friedman

+ N Y Times p36 Ap 13 '47 1100w

Reviewed by D. W. O'Connell

Pol Sci Q 62:445 S '47 600w

Reviewed by Louis Burgess

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 17 '47 800w

Reviewed by Wendell Berge

+ Survey G 36:406 J1 '47 450w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:52 Mr '47 240w

STODDARD, DWIGHT LINCOLN. Steel square pocket book; a practical, handy reference book illustrating and describing the best methods of using the carpenter's steel square. 7th ed rev & enl 191p $1.25 Scientific bk. corp.

694.2 Square (instrument) 46-8143

"The applications of the steel square are given in simple terms with many illustrations. The calculations include the laying out of different figures such as circles, octagons, ellipses and ovals, and of building elements such as stairs, siding, shingling, and roof rafters. Eight pages of useful tables have been inserted in the present edition. Otherwise, although the author claims that many changes have been made, it appears to be the same as the sixth edition (1941)." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

Booklist 43:190 F 15 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:81 Ja 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:68 O '46

STOKES, MANNING LEE. Dying room. 256p $2 Phoenix

47-11532

Detective story.

N Y Times p38 D 7 '47 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 N 2 '47 50w

"Melodrama—but good melo.—from start to finish. Lurid, sketchy, and occasionally unbelievable, but pace and action carry it through."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 22 '47 50w

STOKLEY, JAMES. Science remakes our world. rev ed 318p il $3.50 Washburn 600 Technology. Chemistry, Technical

47-1245

"The major additions to the revised edition of this informative, well-written book for lay readers deal with the achievements of science in World War II. There are two entirely new chapters. One deals with the now familiar story of the results of the exploitation of atomic energy; the other treats such topics as radar, loran, jet propulsion, the air-borne magnetic detector, penicillin and DDT. The rest of the book covers a variety of subjects, giving interesting facts about plastics, chemotherapy, electronic devices, moving pictures, glass research and other fields of modern science and technology. This part of the book is little changed from the first edition [Book Review Digest, 1942]." (N Y New Tech Bks) Index.

"This is a good book to start on if one wants to get a general view of what science has done in the past decade or so."

+ Chem & Eng N 25:633 Mr 3 '47 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:228 F 1 '47 40w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:67 O '46

STOLL, DENNIS GRAY. Doctor and the dragon; a tragic-comedy of British India [Eng title: Comedy in chains]. 253p $2.75 Doubleday

47-30474

Novel of India during the years 1939-1940. The central characters are a young Eurasian doctor, his adopted Hindu sister, and the family of the Indian congressional representative in their district.

"The British inhabitants of this shadowy world are stilted caricatures like those in a musical comedy, and the Indian patriots declaim to each other slogans and tirades which they are obviously familiar with already. As propaganda—which is apparently the book's main purpose—the story fails to move us, not only because it is generally inept, but because its author does not seem to have reckoned with the changes that have taken place in Indian politics since 1940." Robert Halsband

— Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 10 '47 270w

"A loosely knit plot [and] rather colorless characterization makes this of unlikely reader appeal for an American audience."

Kirkus 15:291 Je 1 '47 100w

"A nebulous plot with conventional characteristics and completely predictable results does not lift this long novel into the readable class. . . Not recommended." H. S. Taylor

— Library J 72:1109 Ag '47 70w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p15 S 21 '47 280w

"Where anger speaks so shrilly and often, it is difficult to hear the undertones which promise interest. Only when Mr. Stoll lowers his voice have we any understanding of what it might feel like to be an Indian. It is as if, with the thread of his argument broken for a few moments, he allowed his awareness of Indian consciousness to speak for him. Through these intervals we get a sense of the peace that lies beyond injustice and human intolerance. This is better reporting on a foreign state of mind than all the pages of moralizing, which only serve to keep our minds off the scenery." Isabelle Mallet

+ — N Y Times p30 S 14 '47 450w

STOLL, DENNIS GRAY. The dove found no rest. 307p $2.75 Doubleday

47-1636

Story of India depicting the adventures of a poor family forced by the British to leave their beloved village and live in the city.

Booklist 43:256 Ap 15 '47

"'The Dove Found No Rest' is actually a poor novel, if judged by isolated esthetic and literary standards. But as a vivid, sympathetic picture of appalling social conditions of a blighted country it is compelling and validly disturbing. . . Although his novel is slow in building up reader interest and has an occasional passage of dialogue that seems far out of character in the mouths of Indian peasantry, the cumulative power of the book is considerable." J. O. Supple

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p2 F 23 '47 180w

Kirkus 14:557 N 1 '46 110w

"Humor is good companion to verisimilitude in a novel which amuses, informs, and evokes admiration by even-handed justice." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 25 '46 240w

"In 'The Dove Found No Rest' Dennis Gray Stoll has undertaken to say with bitterness a number of things about modern India under British rule. He has, in fact, tried unwisely to say everything there was to say. And so as a novel, sincerely and copiously written as it is, it has innumerable faults. As propaganda, however—as an all-out expression of faith in the Gandhi principle of out-with-the-British and back to the old pre-industrialized life of the earth-nurtured villages—'The Dove Found No Rest' is effective and informing, if not always and everywhere convincing." F. H. Bullock

— N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Mr 2 '47 700w

"This novel attempts to do for India what John Steinbeck did for America in 'The Grapes of Wrath.' Remarkably enough, its author is an Englishman, and it is therefore something of a literary event. . . It is a pity that Stoll could not resist [the] temptation to tell all, for he has real gifts, a delightful sense of humor, a talent for pungent, Dickensian satire and a thorough knowledge of the Indian people and their minds. As a sociologist he is conscious of the tremendous forces at work in modern India. As a sensitive man he has a warm sympathy for the Indian people, even for those that have traded their national genius for a paltry imitation of Western ways. As an artist he has yet to learn to save some eggs for other baskets." John Bicknell

+ — N Y Times p14 Mr 9 '47 500w

"Mr. Stoll's original turn of phrase makes his exceptionally good story even better." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 My 4 '47 80w

"The story has some very readable passages, but its merits are drowned in a sea of editorializing. Most of the figures of the tale are lost sight of at the end." Robert Pick

— + Sat R of Lit 30:30 Ap 19 '47 270w

"Mr. Stoll is not quite as successful with his English as with his Indian characters—in particular, his Jesu-Messiah lady missionary is overdone—and he has one character, Mother in Rags, a Hindoo pilgrim and wise woman, who speaks too plainly with the author's voice. But these are small criticisms. The book as a whole is an admirable and original piece of work. The central theme is a serious treatment of a great and widespread tragedy. The persons concerned in it are observed with justice and humor. The setting is drawn in pictures delicately coloured. It is at once amusing and disturbing, a novel of importance not unworthy to be considered against the standard of A Passage to India." V. C. Clinton-Baddeley

+ Spec 176:124 F 1 '46 360w

Times [London] Lit Sup p53 F 2 '46 300w

STONE, ADRIENNE. Hawaii's queen, Liliuokalani; il. by Raymond Lufkin. 273p $2.50
Messner

B or 92 Liliuokalani, queen of Hawaii
47-2571

Writing for junior high school students the author tells the story, in semi-fictional form, of Hawaii's last native ruler, Queen Liliuokalani. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:266 Jl '47 160w
Kirkus 15:129 Mr 1 '47 210w

"The book is packed with information on family customs and attitudes, political and economic history." F. W. Butler

+ Library J 72:739 My 1 '47 70w

"Here is an unusual contribution to American history to be offered to high-school Americans: a story of royalty in happiness and heartache, in prosperity and prison; a story, if you like, of progress." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ap 20 '47 450w

"In many places the text is confusing and poorly written. It is a hard book to get into and so pathetic is the story that it will be read only by young people with special understanding and interest." V. H. Mathews

N Y Times p25 Ag 10 '47 190w

"The author knows Hawaii at first hand. She has written this full-length biography with sympathy and understanding."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:38 O 18 '47 140w

STONE, ELISABET M. Murder at the Mardi gras. 244p $2 Sheridan

47-11323

Mystery story.

"Maggie may be a good reporter, but she is far too fond of wise cracks and very unfunny ones at that." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p53 N 16 '47 180w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 26 '47
100w

"Fair."

Sat R of Lit 30:45 N 1 '47 40w

STONE, IRVING. Adversary in the house. 432p $3 Doubleday

Debs, Eugene Victor—Fiction 47-31015

Fictionized biography of Eugene V. Debs, pioneer labor leader and socialist. It begins when, at the age of twenty, he organized a Robert Ingersoll lecture, and ends when at sixty-six he was released from Atlanta.

Reviewed by Gardner Jackson

Atlantic 180:150 D '47 550w

Booklist 44:51 O 1 '47

"The plight of the nineteenth century laborer and the heroic contribution of Debs and others to its improvement is such a compelling subject that it imparts considerable interest even to this superficial and badly balanced study."

+ Cath World 166:286 D '47 200w

Christian Science Monitor p14 N 1 '47
380w

Cleveland Open Shelf p20 S '47

Reviewed by G. G. Higgins

Commonweal 47:101 N 7 '47 450w

"In the main it is a movingly sympathetic picture of Debs, the man, Debs the symbol. And it contains some of Irving Stone's best writing."

+ Kirkus 15:368 Jl 15 '47 340w

"Fictionizing limited to minor matters. Excellent, job certain of less audience than it deserves." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1195 S 1 '47 110w

"Stone is a master of the lazy phrase, the worn cliché. . . The man who said, 'While there is a lower class I am in it. While there is a working class I am of it. While there's a soul in prison I am not free,' deserves better treatment. Possibly he is destined to be a martyr in death as well as in life." George Mayberry

— New Repub 117:29 O 13 '47 220w

"A long, detailed, sometimes illuminating, but somewhat tedious, biographical novel. . . Mr. Stone saturates his treatment of Debs with sentiment, which is perhaps to be expected. For Gene Debs was reputed to have the faculty of making men love him tenderly, protectively. . . All, according to Mr. Stone, was pretty close to sweetness and light where Gene was. The only heart that Gene was forever unable to melt was the heart of his wife. She was the adversary in his house as he himself was in the greater house of his country."

F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
S 28 '47 1100w

"It is presumed that Stone has historical evidence for so drastic a picture of Debs' domestic predicament; his book should now call for an orthodox historical study of this husband and wife with quotations from the original sources. . . Accepting Stone's thesis as supportable, the novel is an interesting one, told with a sensitive humanism. It presents Debs as an utterly winning, highly emotional and selfless man." Lloyd Lewis

+ — N Y Times p4 S 28 '47 950w

"Banal and disappointing."

— New Yorker 23:125 O 18 '47 90w

"'Adversary in the House' is an exciting tale, more exciting because it is true. Irving Stone writes of a time when the need for reforms was great and the reformers grew to the stature of heroes. Mr. Stone's thorough technique in fact-gathering is demonstrated here, and his interpretation of Debs makes real an almost fictional nobility in the character of Debs and his brother. As a piece of writing, this might be judged 'uninspired' except that Debs was inspired enough to enable his biographer to take it easy." Dorothy Marvin

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 12 '47
950w

"An understanding, penetrating book about Eugene V. Debs might serve a real purpose, in today's confused world. It is with great disappointment, therefore, that we have to report that this is not that book. In fairness to Mr. Stone, however, it should be pointed out that probably he had no intention of making it that book. Presumably he wanted to write a readable, popular, and interesting book about a fascinating character, and in that he has succeeded." Fred Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:11 S 27 '47 1200w

"I am grateful to Mr. Stone for this book. I finished it with a great sense of regret that I had not been of a generation to know Debs personally. What I do know of him now, Mr. Stone is responsible for. I haven't told you much about the book—only what I feel about it. It's that sort of book. But I do recommend that you read it—not as a book by an author—but as a record of a good man." Kathleen Sproul

+ Survey G 36:704 D '47 700w

"Transforming the sharp drama and vigorous action of Debs's colorful life into a ponderous bore is a feat, but Stone has brought it off."

— Time 50:111 O 6 '47 460w

Wis Lib Bul 43:154 N '47

STONE, ISIDOR F. Underground to Palestine. 240p $2.50 Boni & Gaer

940.5315296 World war, 1939-1945—Refugees.
World war, 1939-1945—Jews 47-965

"I. F. Stone was the first newspaperman to join the clandestine exodus of suffering Jews from postwar Europe. PM readers will remember the series of columns recording his travels through the Jewish underground and his final arrival in Palestine on an 'illegal' ship crowded with over a thousand emigrants. These columns describing DP camps, the hardships of his companions in eluding border patrols, the work of the Haganah, the misery of the few surviving European Jews, adventure and suspense on an Italian beach and the final hell aboard ship gain a stirring continuity by being published in book form." New Repub

Bookmark 8:13 My '47

"The simple account of the author's journey with a group of Jewish displaced persons is a marvelous example of reporting at its very best. There is identification—a real experimental identification of author with subject—and still a fine objectivity in the statement of the case. Stone has done the miserable remnant of Israel a great service but he has even more ably served the truth." J. J. Weinstein

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p2 D 22 '46 650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p11 My '47

Foreign Affairs 25:707 J1 '47 30w

"I hope that every member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will read 'Underground to Palestine.' The publisher should see that Ernest Bevin and Clement Attlee have copies. They need particularly to read it. Britain is making a ghastly mistake in Palestine. So are we." B. C. Crum

+ Nation 164:104 Ja 25 '47 1050w

New Repub 115:929 D 30 '46 270w

"Carefully, tenderly, taking great pains not to be emotional in telling a story that is the very distillate of emotion, I. F. Stone, PM correspondent, here tells the story of the modern exodus of the Jews across Europe to Palestine. It is an extraordinary tale. For as long as it took a group of Jewish refugees to walk and ride from the Polish-Czech border through Bratislava, through Vienna, through Italy, and across the Mediterranean from Italy to Palestine in an overcrowded, rickety 'illegal' freighter, Mr. Stone was one of them, sharing their experiences." Gerold Frank

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 D 8 '46 1100w

"Mr. Stone does a quiet and simple reporting job in this story of the weird migration of the Jews from Europe to Palestine. It was a dangerous assignment. In it were all the elements that might tempt a reporter to flood his pages with hysteria in type. He has escaped that temptation. . . It is a notable journalistic achievement." Meyer Berger

+ N Y Times p20 Ja 19 '47 650w

Reviewed by Blair Bolles

Survey G 36:309 My '47 310w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:238 S '47 220w

STONE, ROBERT F. Profitable direct mail methods. 452p $5.75 Prentice-Hall

659.133 Advertising. Mail order business 47-3191

"Contains many specimens and illustrations of effective sales writing. Includes chapters on building retail sales by mail, securing wholesaler and jobber cooperation, inspiring company salesmen by mail, aiding salesmen by mail, securing and using testimonials, selling industrial goods by mail, price incentive plans, selling direct to the consumer." (Management R) Index.

"Best up-to-date book on the subject written by a practical advertising man." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:1276 S 15 '47 40w

Management R 36:615 N '47 70w

STONESTREET, NANCY. See Daniels, L. L.

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. Jessamy John. 271p $2.75 Doubleday

Law, John—Fiction 47-11845

"A historical novel built around a freehand interpretation of the personality of John Law, the imaginative eighteenth-century Scot whose optimistic management of the French Royal Bank during the regency that followed the death of Louis XIV culminated in the Mississippi Bubble scandal." New Yorker

"Lots of color and adventure, but endless details of his gambling and his mathematical genius which at times buries the story of his adventures and his romance."

+ — Kirkus 15:556 O 1 '47 210w

"One is convinced that the book is not actually projected as a novel for all its classic picaresque costume, but as a serious study of a man of genius and honor, done wrong by vulgar fame. It is the fictionized biography of an idea." E. B. Davis

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 23 '47 700w

Reviewed by Richard Match

N Y Times p30 N 23 '47 600w

"Entertaining despite the customary wadding that deals with the principal character's romantic interests."

+ — New Yorker 23:136 N 22 '47 120w

STONG, PHILIP DUFFIELD. Positive Pete! pictures by Kurt Wiese. 64p $2.75 Dodd 47-31057

Story of Pete, an opinionated brown and white cocker spaniel who lived with a small boy and his uncle and the old houseman from Baltimore who took care of all of them. Pete was awfully lazy and did not want his master's approaching marriage to break up his happy home. But when he discovered that he might lose his meal ticket Pete conformed with a vengeance. Pete was so positive!

Reviewed by B. J. Thompson

Cath World 166:236 D '47 30w

"Delightfully humorous. Fun to read aloud." E. F. Clift

Library J 72:1474 O 15 '47 80w

"Once more the sure-fire Stong-Wiese combination of story and pictures fills the bill for boys—or for that matter girls—in the active years just before the teens set in." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 19 '47 320w

"This new book by that popular team of Stong and Wiese hasn't as much action as is usual in their collaborations, but it is still very funny. The humor lies largely in characterization and in the absurd conversations, which include a good many seventy-five-cent words, mostly mispronounced, which is sure-fire entertainment for 7- to 12-year-olds—not to mention the pictures." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p42 O 19 '47 180w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:150 D 6 '47 70w

Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 30w

STORM, COLTON, and PECKHAM, HOWARD HENRY. Invitation to book collecting: its pleasures and practices. 281p $5 Bowker

010 Book collecting 47-30190

This book grew out of a series of lectures given at the University of Michigan. It is a book for the beginner in book collecting, and includes chapters on manuscripts, old maps, and historical prints as well. Partial contents: What are rare books?; Collecting literature; Collecting Americana; Buying and selling rare books; Auction buying; Book prices; Fakes, forgeries, facsimiles, and thefts; Planning and building a collection. Index.

Booklist 43:235 Ap 1 '47

"Two brilliant young bookmen of today have written what is unquestionably one of the most pleasing and informative books on this ever-popular subject. It is the more pleasing and the more informative in that, unlike so many works on book collecting, it is written from a purely objective standpoint, and not in the first person." E. M. Sowerby

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 My 31 '47 800w

"A book for standard and steady use."

+ Kirkus 15:136 Mr 15 '47 110w

"We have long needed a work on book collecting comparable to those on the various branches of antique collecting, and this is it. In no sense is it light reading, but rather it is calculated to satisfy those who are really interested in books. Even the professional bookman will learn a good deal from it, although there are statements on almost every page which he would like to revise." C. K. Shipton

STORM, COLTON—Continued

+ Library J 72:725 My 1 '47 280w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:9 Ja '47

"It is scholarly and informative. . . . The about-to-be collector will find more solid information about the pleasures and pitfalls of his hobby than is collected between covers elsewhere. . . . Though written without the literary skill and infectious enthusiasm which distinguished A. Edward Newton's delightful bibliographical excursions, the present volume is a much more trustworthy guide for the amateur." D. A. Randall

+ N Y Times p4 Ap 13 '47 230w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p18 My 4 '47 120w

Times [London] Lit Sup p260 My 24 '47 170w

STORM, JOHN. Malcolm Macbeth; il. by Charles Alston. 148p $2 Lothrop 46-11875

The adventures of a young Scottish shepherd, Malcolm Macbeth. No Scotchman is afraid of witches as long as he has his bagpipes, but poor Malcolm lost his. And then there was the affair of Gertrude, one of the three witches who made things lively for Macbeth. But it all ended happily, for Gertrude was tired of being a witch after nine hundred years of it. For grades four to six.

Booklist 43:139 Ja 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Mr 9 '47 290w

Cleveland Open Shelf p8 Mr '47

"An unusually good fantasy of a young Scotch boy who meets a witch on his travels, becomes a good friend of the poor dear, and helps her achieve her ambition."

+ Kirkus 14:593 D 1 '46 90w

"An engaging combination of realism and fantasy. Well-written story which imparts genuine Scottish atmosphere. Not for every child, but for the ten- to twelve-year-olds who enjoy stories of the supernatural. Realistic descriptions of the witches might be frightening to some children." M. A. Herr

+ Library J 72:85 Ja 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 22 '46 280w

"There are moments during Malcolm's adventures when 7 to 10 year old readers may have some of those delightful shivers which modern stories so seldom offer, and they will enjoy the humor and the kindly spirit which animate this unusual fantasy." E. L. Buell
+ N Y Times p30 Ja 12 '47 230w

STOUT, GERALD JOHN. Home freezer handbook; with drawings and sketches by Philip F. Hallock. 345p $3.95 Van Nostrand

664.8 Food, Frozen. Refrigeration and refrigerating machinery. Cold storage lockers 47-1282

"Book on how to figure a storage space and practical details on how to build a home freezing unit large or small. Chapters include care of the freezer, directions for preparation and freezing home foods and how to build a combination storage room and freezer. Author includes how to choose the size and type of commercial freezer." Library J

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1716 D 1 '46 70w

STOUT, REX. Too many women. 251p $2.50 Viking 47-11318

Detective story.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week N 28 '47 190w

"Bright befuddlement."

Kirkus 15:447 Ag 15 '47 80w

New Repub 117:28 N 3 '47 140w

"This new Nero Wolfe mystery confirms our impression that Rex Stout is as good as they come. It has everything, including real puzzlement and laughs, even five hundred beautiful girls to disprove any charge that Mr. Stout neglects love interest." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32 O 26 '47 190w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p40 O 19 '47 160w

"Disappointing stuff especially for readers who remember examples of more solid detection on the part of the Wolfe-Goodwin team."

New Yorker 23:136 O 25 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 26 '47 150w

"Slightly thin Stout."

Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 50w

STRAHL, PAUL, pseud. See Reising, Otto.

STRAIN, MRS FRANCES (BRUCE). Teen days; a book for boys and girls. 183p il $2.75 Appleton-Century

392 Adolescence

46-11876

"The first aim of Teen Days is to allay the frequent fears and uncertainties which fill boys and girls during their maturing years. With the release of fears and the building up of confidence will come greater accomplishment in every field of endeavor, in their education, in home adjustment, in social adaptation, in sexual development." (Introd) Treats simply and matter-of-factly such matters as sex, maturing emotions, play, work, dates, and etiquette. For ages thirteen to sixteen. Reading list. Index.

Booklist 43:137 Ja 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

"A real help for parents and teachers as well as the boys and girls themselves."

+ Kirkus 14:544 N 1 '46 90w

"A much needed book. Highly recommended." R. O. Bostwick

+ Library J 72:168 Ja 15 '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:42 F '47

STRAKHOVSKY, LEONID IVAN. Alexander I of Russia; the man who defeated Napoleon. 302p il $3.50 Norton

B or 92 Alexander I, emperor of Russia

47-2112

"Biography of Alexander, Czar of Russia 1801-1825. Author, a graduate of the University of Petrograd, is now Lecturer in Slavic at Harvard. Alexander, who defeated Napoleon in battle and in diplomacy and who as Emperor was called 'the crowned Hamlet,' turned to mysticism during his last years. Strakhovsky presents evidence to support his contention that Alexander arranged his official death in 1825 and lived as a hermit under an assumed name until 1864." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"While the average reader will be gratified by the numerous quotations from sources in the book, the scholar may feel frustrated by the absence of page references which might assist him in tracking down useful material. There is a serviceable bibliography." George Waskovich

Am Hist R 53:171 O '47 400w

Booklist 43:254 Ap 15 '47

Reviewed by R. B. Nye

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Mr 23 '47
330w

"An extremely interesting and provocative book, seriously marred by mixture of style and conflict of purpose." Philip Burnham
Commonweal 46:74 My 2 '47 550w

Current Hist 12:583 Je '47 40w

"Here's a mystery in history that rivals Mayerling."

Kirkus 15:24 Ja 1 '47 170w

"Not a political nor social history, this is an account of the personal drama of an important and enigmatic figure about whom little has been available in English." H. W. Hart

Library J 72:461 Mr 15 '47 70w

"Like most foreigners who have concerned themselves with Russian history, I have always tended to dismiss the rumors of the secret abdication of Alexander in 1825 and of his incognito existence for another thirty-nine years as a hermit as a mere romantic legend. But I must confess that Dr. Strakhovsky not only convinces me but has fitted together beautifully all the disjointed pieces, even all the contradictions in the evidence. Moreover, his story is constructed with a natural art, and, though English is not his native tongue, he has caught the sentimental and romantic overtones of the diaries and adulatory records of the period and expressed them in an English that is clear and simple, yet strikingly evocative." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Mr 23 '47 650w

"Though unquestionably basing his account on extensive research, Dr. Strakhovsky has written with the license of historical romance. In some passages, particularly the opening and closing chapters, he achieves a most effective style, but through much of the narrative both the solidity of history and the color of romance are lacking." E. W. Fox

N Y Times p4 My 4 '47 480w

New Yorker 23:110 Mr 29 '47 160w

"Unfortunately the promise of a fresh, vigorous and well-documented book on a fascinating historical figure remains unfulfilled. Alexander I of Russia belongs to that ill-defined borderland where historical study merges into historical fiction. Mr. Strakhovsky is primarily concerned with Alexander, not with the history of his time. It would be unfair, therefore, to blame him for failing to throw any new light on the stupendous events that are part and parcel of the tsar's life-story, even though the author inevitably discusses them at length. One may be warranted, however, in questioning his interpretation of Alexander's character and motives which provide the main theme of his book." M. T. Florinsky

Pol Sci Q 62:461 S '47 850w

"The introductory chapter is weak in its characterization of Paul's foreign policy and of the roots of the conflict which led to his assassination. . . . But the book is well worth reading, not merely as history, but as a fascinating mystery story as well." D. F. White

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 Ap 19 '47 450w

Springf'd Union p11 Jl 30 '47 170w

STRANG, RUTH MAY. Educational guidance: its principles and practice. 268p $2.90 Macmillan

371.422 Personnel service in education
47-3205

"A guide to the theory and application of the principles in high schools and colleges, giving actual plans and case histories. The author is Professor of Education at Teachers College, Columbia." (Current Hist) Index.

Current Hist 13:35 Jl '47 40w

School & Society 65:384 My 24 '47 20w

"The book is well organized and the significance and use of the materials which it presents are well explained and interpreted. All in all, it constitutes an important contribution to an important field and should be of value for several years." H. H. Punke + School R 56:58 Ja '48 850w

STRAUBEL, JAMES H., ed. See Air force (periodical). Air force diary

STRAVINSKII, IGOR' FEDOROVICH. Poetics of music in the form of six lessons; tr. by Arthur Knodel and Ingolf Dahl. 142p $2.50 Harvard univ. press

780.4 Music 47-11688

"Six essays concerned with the author's personal philosophy on the composing, performance, and criticism of music. Contains an especially interesting chapter on Russian music. Given as the Charles Eliot Norton lectures at Harvard, 1939-1940." Booklist

Booklist 44:130 D 1 '47

"Highly recommended for the larger and the specialized library." H. E. Bush

+ Library J 72:1613 N 15 '47 90w

"Mr. Stravinsky's [is a] thin volume. How fairly his English translators have presented his tract, which was originally delivered in French in a series of six Charles Eliot Norton lectures at Harvard, I have no idea. But if they have been reasonably accurate, the most respectful and charitable conclusion one can draw is that he should stick to composing. As an esthetic philosopher his main talent seems to be a capacity for abstracting thought to a point where it is no longer communicable." Winthrop Sargeant

N Y Times p54 D 7 '47 700w

"The musician's ear, skillfully operating on the cadential flow of prose, shows up little, of course, in the translation. But this is faithful enough to preserve the literary references and choice of phrases that give distinction to what is, in short, a plea for 'order and discipline,' melody, the limitations imposed by form, and a sense of tradition separable from habit and the artistic conservatism advocated by the Soviets." A. V. Berger

Sat R of Lit 31:28 Ja 24 '48 550w

STREATFEILD, NOEL. Party shoes; il. by Anna Zinkeisen. 333p $2.50 Random house 47-4698

When Selina's godmother in America sent her a party dress and party shoes, it was wartime in England and parties decidedly non-existent. So the family of cousins with whom Selina lived put their heads together and evolved a scheme that made it possible for Selina to wear her party clothes.

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 1 '47
40w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p13 O 9 '47
270w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:264 Jl '47 150w

Kirkus 15:69 F 1 '47 90w

"Details may become boring to many readers, although Streatfeild fans will undoubtedly enjoy it. The children are natural; with a more extended plot the story would have been an interesting one of postwar Britain." J. E. Lynch

Library J 72:818 My 15 '47 60w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
My 11 '47 400w

"More tightly knit than most of Miss Streatfeild's stories, this one has also the sense of theatre glamour and family activity which has made her 'Shoes' series so popular with readers of 10 to 14. And she presents here a whole new gallery of those amusing characters, young and old, which always lend such color and conviction to her books." E. L. Buell

+ N Y Times p23 Je 1 '47 230w

STREATFEILD, NOEL—Continued

Reviewed by R. C. Benét
New Yorker 23:155 D 6 '47 80w

"It is a gay, courageous story with many amusing scenes and interesting characters."
+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 My 17 '47 110w

STREET, CECIL JOHN CHARLES (JOHN RHODE, pseud). Experiment in crime. 233p $2.50 Dodd 47-1969

Detective story.

"Here is real detection in entertaining form, standard Grade A. goods." Will Cuppy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 Mr 2 '47 290w

"The pattern is the same as in the other Dr. Priestley stories, and it is becoming more than a bit shopworn." Isaac Anderson
— N Y Times p34 My 18 '47 100w

"The Doctor's solution is achieved by methods that some readers will consider unorthodox; in fact, Priestley fans may be a bit disappointed in this one."
New Yorker 23:104 Mr 8 '47 90w

"Possible infraction of Rules of Game and fairly questionable method of solution may annoy, but background and 'atmosphere' are pleasing. Middle-of-Rhode."
Sat R of Lit 30:30 Mr 15 '47 50w

STREET, LUCIE, ed. See: I married a RussianSTRODE, HUDSON. Now in Mexico. 368p il $5 Harcourt

917.2 Mexico—Description and travel
47-11420

An informal account of Mexico today, based on the author's ten years of travel thru that country. There are chapters on Yucatan, Cuernavaca, and Taxco, Mexico City, Michoacan, Uruapan, Puebla, Oaxaca, interspersed with chapters on eating, markets, artists, etc. No index.

Booklist 44:150 D 15 '47

+ Christian Century 64:1585 D 24 '47 140w

"For the tourist who has been in Mexico and for the armchair traveler who simply dreams of it, this book offers a charming guide and commentary and even manages painlessly to inject some history. But for a penetrating view of the country, its inner faith and life, one must not expect too much." J. A. Magner
+ Commonweal 47:236 D 12 '47 450w

"More definitely a travel guide than its predecessor, Timeless Mexico, this again bears evidence of the catholicity of taste and knowledge and interest and ability that make Strode outstanding as guide and counselor. . . Beautifully written, with color and drama and zest. Illustrated with fine photographs."
+ Kirkus 15:621 N 1 '47 170w

"Altogether his book will be exceedingly helpful to thousands of visitors to Mexico, just as it will be admirable armchair reading for those who stay at home. And for those who already know something of the country it will serve, as the author wants it to, in the way suggested in a story by José Romero, when he wrote of a man who looked out from a hilltop above a town, 'fishing for memories with the landscape as bait.'" J. H. Jackson
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 23 '47 900w

"For those who are contemplating their first visit to Mexico this book is provocative, amusing and filled with useful information, vividly conveyed. Mr. Strode had an extremely good time there, and he fills his pages with his own zest for life and color. . . He is erudite, seldom surprised, and never at a loss for an apposite quotation. . . Captious readers who test his observations against their own memories of Mexico may raise questions, not so much about his facts as about the particular quality of the purple patches to which those facts inspire him." Mildred Adams

+ — N Y Times p50 N 16 '47 500w

"All of this is done in the pleasant, chatty style that Mr. Strode understands how to use and control. One test of such a book is how much actual information it can furnish the reader without appearing to stuff knowledge down his throat. On this score 'Now in Mexico' rates high; Mr. Strode gets in an astonishing amount. To be sure, you haven't seen all of Mexico with Mr. Strode here, but he doesn't make any such claim." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 O 29 '47 700w
Wis Lib Bul 43:172 D '47

STRODE, JOSEPHINE, ed. Social insight through short stories; an anthology. 285p $3 Harper

Short stories—Collections 46-6884
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

"Were it not for its pretentious title and preface, this collection of short stories could be left for the literary critics to evaluate. But Miss Strode has seen fit to claim for it a social and educational significance that should certainly not go unchallenged. . . To imagine that 'social insight' can be secured through the reading of stories, short or long, is to ignore the artificiality of the storytelling process. The function of a story is to entertain. A story cannot in any significant measure inform or otherwise educate, Miss Strode and some others to the contrary." R. T. LaPiere
— Am Soc R 12:248 Ap '47 270w

"Every story could be used to deepen feeling for fellow human beings, to broaden understanding, to set in motion critical thinking about human and social problems and programs. But many could also be used to deepen existing prejudice and to spread misunderstanding—already all too prevalent." Ruth Smalley

Ann Am Acad 249:210 Ja '47 500w

Booklist 43:227 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Barbara Abel
Survey 83:61 F '47 410w

Wis Lib Bul 42:169 D '46

STROHM, JOHN LOUIS. Just tell the truth; the uncensored story of how the common people live behind the Russian iron curtain; il. with phot. taken by the author. 250p $3.50 Scribner

914.7 Russia—Social conditions. Russia—Social life and customs 47-30305

A midwestern American editor and writer on agricultural subjects went on a goodwill tour of Russia, with the purpose of visiting the collective farms as one of his main objects. He was allowed to visit and take pictures freely; his only warning was to "just tell the truth." The record of his experiences and the photographs emphasize the state of Russian agriculture, the wide range of racial types in the USSR, and the vitality of the people. Index.

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p16 My 26 '47 750w

Reviewed by Edward Skillin
Commonweal 46:122 My 16 '47 350w
Kirkus 15:256 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by W. A. Kalenich
Library J 72:732 My 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 116:29 My 26 '47 140w

"The book is an informal, anecdotal, breezy description of the life of the Russian people viewed through the eyes of a friendly and keenly interested observer. It is lavishly illustrated. The seventy-odd reproductions of the hundreds of pictures taken by the author are, indeed, one of his book's best features in corroborating and amplifying the text. Mr. Strohman liked the Russians; they apparently liked him. The human quality of the story he has to tell—its emphasis on the Russians as people rather than as political units of a Communist state—is very refreshing. . . . There is nothing startlingly new in his account, and never does he look very far beneath the surface. He is primarily attracted by 'the more smiling aspects' of Russian life and brushes aside rather casually the controls that demonstrate that the Soviet Union is still a police state with a wholly authoritarian government." F. R. Dulles

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7
My 11 '47 800w

"The book is good as far as it goes. Its chief weaknesses are Mr. Strohman's lack of Russian background and his apparent readiness to accept at face value virtually everything he was told. From his report the reader who does not know the Soviet Union's past may gain the impression that the low standard of living in the U.S.S.R.—indeed, all the Soviet's domestic difficulties—are direct consequences of the war. If Mr. Strohman had made a pre-war as well as a post-war visit to the U.S.S.R. some of the conclusions in this book might have been different." H. C. Wolfe

N Y Times p30 My 25 '47 850w

"This is a simple, friendly chronicle. . . . Many of Mr. Strohman's findings about the U.S.S.R. (such as the absence of any fear of foreigners among the Russians whose houses he visited) are, to put it mildly, at variance with those of other recent reports."

New Yorker 23:117 My 17 '47 130w

"Strohman's is a lively book, chiefly about peasants, written in a simple, rather jerky style, but with a deep feeling for the soil and for the men and women who till it." Maurice Hindus

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 My 24 '47 230w
Springf'd Union p3 Jl 5 '47 200w

STRONG, RALPH KEMPTON. Chemistry for the executive; a layman's guide to chemistry; original drawings executed by Paul E. Mead from sketches by the author. 445p $6 Reinhold

540 Chemistry 47-549

"As the title suggests, this volume is intended to provide the business man or executive with a knowledge of the basic principles of chemistry. In an effort to avoid the formality of the usual chemistry text, the author presents the information in the form of conversations between a professional chemist and an executive interested in obtaining a general knowledge of chemistry. . . . Considerable data on the economic aspects of chemistry are included. Each chapter concludes with a summary of the main points discussed, and most of them with a list of references for further reading." N Y New Tech Bks

"Whether chemist or not, anyone having the slightest interest in chemistry will enjoy this book and will benefit from its reading. . . . The book is highly recommended for the tyro and the expert. Both will gain much from it. In fact, 'when, as, and if' legal registration or certification of chemists comes about, this book would make an excellent basis for a refresher course for those taking the examinations." E. L. Luaces

+ Chem & Eng N 25:2461 Ag 25 '47 400w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:223 F 1 '47 50w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:5 Ja '47

STRUNSKY, SIMEON. Two came to town. 219p $3 Dutton

47-11426

A modern allegory on American history. Two delegates from mythical Hyperia, Mr Alexander and Mr Thomas, show up as observers at a great international conference in New York. They spend their time looking around Manhattan or flying off to other points of national interest in an atomically propelled taxi.

"Any thoughtful person, any person at all who is sensitive about American values and American ideals, will enjoy this work of Mr. Strunsky's." M. W.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 D 20 '47
330w

Kirkus 15:557 O 1 '47 170w

"This is a well-written tale, but there the charm ends and the cab driver's dream falls quite flat. Recommended only for those who are devoted to the whimsy of the Topics of the Times." K. T. Willis

Library J 72:1540 N 1 '47 80w

"A charming book about the city, a sly and amusing puncturer of various brands of bubble-gum, and a thoughtful bit of speculation on what Hamilton and Jefferson might think if they walked in upon the city while the United Nations Assembly was in session. It is a hopeful book, but too highly civilized to have any faith in panaceas; the mentally adolescent will see nothing in it, but it will stimulate mature minds." G. W. Johnson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
N 2 '47 950w

"A beautifully satirical book. When it is said of Mr. Strunsky that his humorous satire is gentle, the describer has me to fight. For I think that much of it is biting and angry—as one who uncompromisingly hates the bunk in the country he passionately loves. . . . This is Mr. Strunsky's best book." F. P. Adams

+ N Y Times p4 N 9 '47 1050w

"Mr. Strunsky's writing on matters that range from radio advertising to international peace is, as usual, steadily charming and, on occasion, eloquent."

+ New Yorker 23:131 N 8 '47 120w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p8 N 15 '47
600w

"As Mr. Strunsky, a modest man, would be the first to deprecate any talk that 'Two Came to Town' is a literary masterpiece, I shall imitate him and say it is not. It is perhaps a shade too amiable in its evocation of Messrs. Jefferson and Hamilton, and a touch too arch in regard to the family life of taxicab drivers and the pleasures of getting lost in subways. But when I contemplate the patience and persistence with which Mr. Strunsky in a series of books has courteously reminded his fellow countrymen that, after a couple of centuries, they have perhaps evolved a few comforts and acquired a few virtues, I feel that Mr. Strunsky has for years been saying something that needs to be said. . . . Mr. Strunsky is that rarity, a normal observer of American things. That is what makes him unique." H. M. Jones

+ Sat R of Lit 30:17 N 8 '47 1000w

STRYKER, LLOYD PAUL. For the defense; Thomas Erskine, the most enlightened liberal of his times, 1750-1823. 624p $5 Doubleday

B or 92 Erskine, Thomas Erskine, 1st baron
47-4134

A biography of Thomas Erskine, famous eighteenth-century English barrister, who defended Thomas Paine and fought the efforts of the government of the younger Pitt to stifle civil liberty in England. The author, an American trial lawyer, stresses the public side of Erskine's life, and even leaves out the more sensational cases in his career, to bring out Erskine as the champion of civil liberty. Bibliography. Index.

"The modern reader will take such forensic treatment of eighteenth-century events and personalities with a grain of salt, realizing that the author is himself a distinguished advocate and that he is pleading his client's cause. One can, however, heartily recommend the high lights of the book—the stories of individual trials and cases. Here the author is fully qualified to understand and present the drama of his scenes, and he does so most admirably—to the edification of lawyers and the excitement and enjoyment of all who read him." A. W.

STRYKER, L. P.—Continued

+ — Atlantic 180:126 Ag '47 600w

Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

"Not only lawyers will appreciate this book. It is so well written, in a rather florid style (something like a closing argument), that the general reader, too, will enjoy the drama of courtroom battles that remain pertinent today." Robert Lasch

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Je 22 '47 600w

Reviewed by W. M. Kunstler
Columbia Law R 47:1090 S '47 1000w
Kirkus 15:211 Ap 1 '47 170w

"Recommended." Katharine Shorey
+ Library J 72:959 Je 15 '47 120w

"This is no calm, detached book. Mr. Stryker writes with the gusto and admiration of an artist in the presence of supreme virtuosity. He also writes with the critical understanding of a craftsman explaining the mysteries of his craft." Newman Levy
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 Je 29 '47 1100w

"It might almost be said that it was inevitable that a book about Erskine would be written by Lloyd Paul Stryker, one of the most celebrated of our own trial lawyers. . . 'For the Defense' is not, strictly speaking, intended to be either a historical research work or purely a biography. . . Mr. Stryker does not have the scholar's passion for exactness and completeness, nor does he have the historian's judicial point of view. He is the special pleader, the ardent partisan. Erskine is his hero, and the reader must not expect exact fairness in the portraits of Pitt and his minions. . . Throughout the book evidence is selected to portray Erskine as the fearless lover of liberty, the champion of the oppressed. Other aspects of his life are played down. . . Written with vigor and animation, Mr. Stryker's book will probably appeal most to lawyers and to those who delight in dramatic trial scenes. But it is also for all those who have an interest in the perennial struggle for justice and free speech." J. L. Clifford
+ N Y Times p3 Je 15 '47 1050w

"Mr. Stryker is no retiring, impersonal historian; he writes as though he were addressing a jury in a loud and sometimes overwrought voice: 'Come down, then, Thomas Erskine, from those pedestals and canvases. . . Burst your marble fetters!' In spite of these marble fetters, the author brings his man to life in a rich and heady book."

+ — New Yorker 23:79 Je 21 '47 120w

"What makes Mr. Stryker's book the splendid job I hope you'll find it, is the way in which he relates Erskine and his achievements to the era in which he lived. . . What Mr. Stryker has done is to rescue from the dusty record the figure of a great and noble man, to bring him down off the Joshua Reynolds canvas and show him to the contemporary reader as a flesh-and-blood being, a man who, as trial lawyer, from the bench, even as England's Chancellor, never forgot his duty to his profession, to humanity and to himself. And over and above this, he has related his biographical study to the problems and pressures through which we are living today. I don't know what better thing the author of a book of this kind could do." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p14 Je 23 '47 850w

"This book is important for our own day. It gives a revealing picture of the age-long fight for human rights, civil liberties, and the establishment of the philosophy and reign of democracy. Erskine, a great lawyer, was first and always a great democrat." Melville Cane
+ Sat R of Lit 30:14 Jl 12 '47 680w

Time 49:103 Je 30 '47 440w

STURTEVANT, EDGAR HOWARD. Introduction to linguistic science. 173p $3 Yale univ. press

400 Language and languages 47-5586

"This volume is an introduction to the methods of linguistics. The work begins with a discussion of the descriptive foundations of historical linguistics, and culminates in the treatment of some of the main problems of historical and comparative grammar; the regularity of sound change, the mechanics of sound change, and the reconstruction of Indo-Hittite." (U S Quarterly Bkl) The author is professor of linguistics emeritus at Yale. Index.

"Sturtevant has done well by linguistics in taking time out to write this introduction, which the simple and the learned alike will read with pleasure." Myles Dillon

+ Mod Philol 45:134 N '47 950w

School & Society 65:286 Ap 19 '47 10W

"The style and treatment of the subject reflect Professor Sturtevant's long experience as a teacher, his interests and philosophy, especially his recognition of the essential unity of analysis and history. The book should be particularly useful to those who are themselves philologically oriented, and need to be initiated to those aspects of linguistics which link that science to anthropology, social studies, and mathematics."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:239 S '47 130w

SULKIN, EDITH. Continent in limbo. 304p $3 Reynal

914 Europe—Description and travel. Reconstruction (1939-)—Europe 47-11510

"A naturalized American who was born and educated in Europe returned there in 1946 and spent a year visiting England, the Scandinavian countries, Holland, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and Germany. Mostly in the form of conversations, she reports on the people, their living and working conditions, and particularly their opinions and morale, contrasted with those of prewar days." Booklist

Booklist 44:104 N 15 '47

"During the last ten months, there has been a brightening of the horizon in a number of sectors, a darkening in others—enough to give today's over-all picture a character different from that sketched by Mrs. Sulkin. Still, her book makes pleasant reading. It is written in an easy flowing style and with its accent on people. . . There is gratifyingly little editorializing, but a lot of competent reporting." Ernest Pisko

+ — Christian Science Monitor p18 D 10 '47 480w

Kirkus 15:491 S 1 '47 420w

"Mrs. Sulkin is as good a recorder as she was a listener and her opinions bear weight. Recommended." E. F. Walbridge

Library J 72:1468 O 15 '47 130w

"The not so careful reader will find the book an entertaining means of repairing past omissions at one go, and of furnishing a—slightly dated—background for his appreciation of the Marshall Plan." Bjarne Braatoy

Nation 165:534 N 15 '47 90w

"Mrs. Sulkin's over-all impressions of a country, into which her specific incidents must be fitted, are sketchy and a little flat, and there are not always enough facts and figures to corroborate or disprove the opinions that she heard. But the greatest difficulty is the author's own confusion. . . She has not thought enough to offer any interpretation of what she saw and heard, and this makes much of what she relates seem equivocal." A. L. Goodman

New Repub 117:27 N 24 '47 550w

"Mrs. Sulkin does not offer concrete remedies for the state of things she saw. But her book has importance for all Americans who are concerned about the future. First, because she saw the aftermath of modern war. This is what it is like. And, second, because Americans, who are now thoroughly committed to playing a part in Europe's future, must be wiser and more generous than they have been so far." Dorothy Van Doren

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
O 26 '47 750w

"The tidings from Europe brought back by Edith Sulkin, traveler and freelance writer, are uniformly dispiriting. Not a gleam of hope relieves the November gloom of her travelogue. . . . Having journeyed at considerable length through chaos, Mrs. Sulkin is apparently too much affected to try her hand at serious interpretation." E. B. Garside

N Y Times p44 N 23 '47 450w

Reviewed by Templeton Peck

San Francisco Chronicle p23 N 23 '47
550w

"'Continent in Limbo,' without adding anything much new to our knowledge of Europe, is nevertheless most readable and observant. It has freshness, even though it describes people and events of about two years ago." Saul Padover

+ Sat R of Lit 31:14 Ja 3 '48 700w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47
290w

SULLIVAN, ALAN. Fur masters. 244p $3 Coward-McCann

47-2864

Adventure story of the Canadian fur trade in the early years of the nineteenth century. The rivalry of the Hudson's Bay company and their competitors is viewed thru the eyes of young Alan Campbell, whose father, Angus, represented the Bay company. Alan's romance with a French-Indian girl forms part of the story.

"Alan Sullivan knows Canada's history, and it gives his novel a colorful background. If you wanted to carp, you could say the story he tells is not nearly colorful enough to complement that background. 'The Fur Masters' won't crowd its way into the handful of great stories about the North, but its fresh subject matter and passable story make it worthwhile reading." Clinton Textor

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 Jl 20 '47
330w

Kirkus 15:134 Mr 1 '47 170w

"An absorbing story."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
My 18 '47 200w

"This book gives scant feeling of the burgeoning pioneer era. Characterization is weak, and when the traders talk of selling liquor to the Indians or warn of the diminution of the beaver, their words carry little conviction or meaning. The author also has the annoying habit of introducing characters at random. This is especially confusing in view of the plethora of Indian and French-Canadian names." R. L. Neuberger

— N Y Times p36 Ap 20 '47 230w

SULLIVAN, ALOYSIUS MICHAEL. Stars and atoms have no size; poems of science and industry. 159p $2.75 Dutton

811

46-7130

A volume of poems which celebrate the wonder and beauty of machines, of precise and delicate tools, of the achievements of scientific thought.

"Mr. Sullivan has given us an outstanding volume and one likely to win new followers among readers and writers of contemporary verse. His admirable sense of values—new and old, present, past and eternal—make him a valid interpreter of our complicated modern life." Katherine Brégy

+ Cath World 165:184 My '47 420w

"One wishes his words had more of the precision and steel of the tools he describes. A little of T. S. Eliot would perhaps not hurt. When he does whip his words into images the poem takes life. There are lines, but it is uneven writing. The best is good poetry." Ann Hunter

+ Commonweal 45:308 Ja 3 '47 350w

"This poetry while not terribly good, is headed in the right direction. People will like it."

+ Kirkus 14:516 O 1 '46 160w

"These poems of science and industry, strengthened by a vocabulary of exactness and precision, have a surprising kinship with the work of the great metaphysical poets. We have read and forgotten the mannered verses of modern innovators who tried to make their poems sound and even look like machines. But these poems . . . are clear, clean poems of the scientific mind, without metaphor or symbolism, and librarians will enjoy giving them to readers who do not suspect what a real appeal they will have." Gerald McDonald

+ Library J 72:322 F 15 '47 90w

"Many of the poems show a unity of tone and content. . . . Mr. Sullivan writes easily and fluently. It is, I think, not unjust to say that his facility sometimes leads him into mere verbosity and triteness." Milton Crane

N Y Times p16 Jl 13 '47 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p172 Ap 12
'47 550w

SULLIVAN, WILLIAM H. Babies don't bounce; A B C's of baby safety. (Whittlesey house publication) 48p il $1.50 McGraw

649.1 Infants—Care and hygiene, Accidents—Prevention Med47-740

Brief warnings about how not to treat the baby in the house and out of it, with cartoons. For inexperienced parents.

"The public health nurse and pediatrician may find this little text a useful tool in safety education." E. M. Hendriksen

+ Am J Pub Health 37:1192 S '47 150w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p22
My 4 '47 110w

SUMMERILL, JOHN F. Tanker manual; drawings by Richard Naylor. 150p il $2.75 Cornell maritime press

623.824 Tank vessels 47-2471

"Although the responsibilities and work of both officers and crew on a tanker have many similarities to those on a vessel that carries dry cargo, there are also important differences. The purpose of this useful little volume is to explain those differences to experienced seamen. Most of the book is devoted to special operations such as taking on and discharging cargo, and tank cleaning and maintenance. There are also brief chapters on such topics as the principles of hull construction used in tankers, the classification of petroleum oils, fire protection and prevention, and the handling and stowage of dry cargo in the dry cargo hold found on most tankers. Review questions are furnished for the convenience of men studying by themselves." N Y New Tech Bks

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:643 Ap 15 '47 20w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:19 Ja '47

SUMNER, GEE LYNN. Meet Abraham Lincoln; profiles of the prairie president. 78p $1.50 Harper

B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham 47-2155

Essays on the life of Lincoln, bringing together some little known information as well as familiar material.

Booklist 43:308 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by Otto Eisenschiml

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 16 '47
200w

Kirkus 15:96 F 1 '47 90w

Library J 72:225 F 1 '47 20w

Reviewed by Lloyd Lewis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p32
My 11 '47 320w

SUMNER, G. L.—Continued

"For the casual reader rather than for the Lincoln scholar." A. K.
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Mr 23 '47
120w
Wis Lib Bul 43:54 Mr '47

SVIRSKY, LEON, ed. Your newspaper; blueprint for a better press, by nine Nieman fellows, 1945-1946. 202p $2.75 Macmillan

071 Newspapers 47-12144

"The considered conclusions, reached through a series of discussions by nine Nieman Fellows and a group of consultants, on the changes needed in editing newspapers to make them a more truly informative media. These experienced newspaper men and women weighed problems and possible solutions from their vantage point of actual but varied practice." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Wilbur Schramm
Chicago Sun Book Week D 1 '47 650w
Kirkus 15:528 S 15 '47 170w

"An informed, liberal and enlightening treatment. The chapter on science reporting is particularly effective. Not to be missed by those interested not only in 'the freedom of the press' but in its obligations. For all libraries." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 72:1539 N 1 '47 130w

"They have said a good deal that is worth saying. But the sum of their remarks is disappointing. It is likely to enhance rather than diminish the smugness of most American publishers." J. A. Wechsler
— + Nation 166:75 Ja 17 '48 2800w

Reviewed by Richard Watts
New Repub 117:27 D 15 '47 1150w

Reviewed by J. G. Herzberg
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p11
Ja 25 '48 800w

"The reception this volume will have in the workaday newspaper world will be less than ecstatic. Publishers and others in managerial tasks should read it and try to understand what has given rise to the kind of thinking offered by these nine newspaper workers chosen for the special honor of Nieman Fellowships. The book is critical of newspapers and the service they render in every respect, suspicious of motive and practice. . . . As an argument, it is entitled to a hearing; as findings, it is neither sound nor impartial." C. McD. Puckett

N Y Times p7 D 21 '47 900w

"An intelligent collective discussion."
+ New Yorker 23:141 N 29 '47 120w

Reviewed by Stephen Fischer
San Francisco Chronicle p20 D 17 '47
750w

"This book does a thorough job of documenting the frailties and foibles of newspapering. It exposes some good deeds which shine from the plushiest sanctums. But it does more. After demolishing the fretwork and decayed joists in the House of Journalism, the Nieman Fellows draw a blueprint for a new edifice. This is a performance not attempted before in the ancient pastime of pillorying the press. The authors admit it is a risky business. They understate." H. T. Saylor
+ Sat R of Lit 30:74 D 6 '47 800w

School & Society 66:400 N 22 '47 20w
Springfd Republican p7B D 28 '47
270w

SWALLOW, ALAN, ed. Anchor in the sea. (Swallow press bk) 255p $2.50 Morrow

Short stories—Collections 47-1874

An anthology of psychological fiction, composed of ten short stories and a novel: The Wife of Martin Guerre, by Janet Lewis. The short stories are: The imaginary Jew, by John Berryman; Wanderer, by Kay Boyle; Preparations for the night, by D. C. DeJong; The snowfall, by Jean Garrigue; Persephone, by Meridel Le Sueur; In dreams begin responsibilities, by Delmore Schwartz; A reunion, by Jean Stafford; A short space, by Kathleen Toole; The child's day, by Jessamyn West; The brink of darkness, by Yvor Winters.

"A contemporary collection of considerable interest, though the angle defined in the anthology is elusive."

Kirkus 15:9 Ja 1 '47 110w

"In 'The Wife of Martin Guerre' Janet Lewis brings to the story the wise and quiet ways she has with verse. . . . In understanding analysis of the responses of human beings to the necessities of their times, this novel alone would make a book worth possessing. Added to the stories and available here for comparison with them, it will be doubly valuable, whether for classroom use or for private and repeated reading." Virginia Sorensen

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
My 4 '47 950w

"I have no quarrel with the literary merits of most of Mr. Swallow's selections. . . . But the principle of selection seems altogether too vague. If the stories are intended to demonstrate the influence of technical psychology on modern fiction, then one can hardly justify the inclusion of a number of the titles. If it is a question, on the other hand, of choosing literature that is 'psychological' in a broader and more popular sense, then a more precise justification of the contents of the book than Mr. Swallow's preface would seem to be wanted." Milton Crane

N Y Times p31 Ap 13 '47 260w

Reviewed by Edith James
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Mr 16 '47
70w

SWANSON, NEIL HARMON. Unconquered; a novel of the Pontiac conspiracy. 440p $3 Doubleday

47-12222

Companion novel to The Judas Tree (Book Review Digest 1933) and one volume of the author's group of novels describing life during the making of America. In this story Chris Holden on his return from London, attempts to warn the frontier forts of the Indian uprising, known later as the Pontiac conspiracy. He runs into many difficulties, including the siege of Fort Pitt, but finally finds happiness in marriage to his indentured servant girl.

Kirkus 15:627 N 15 '47 320w

"In spite of Mr. Swanson's battery of foot-noted cross-references, his exhaustive research into Indian lore and eighteenth-century archives, his professed preoccupation with 'the tangled web of motives' that made the early West, the current novel boils down to a good old-fashioned settlers-versus-redskins, man-the-stockade-lads frontier melodrama." Richard Match

N Y Times p17 D 14 '47 650w

"The author has now reached a point at which the unfortunate by-products of his haste—rudimentary prose and characterization—have become sufficiently prominent to limit the number of readers who will stay with him to the finish."

— New Yorker 23:141 D 13 '47 120w

"It is undeniable that women were sold as slaves or indentured workers at the time of Mr. Swanson's novel and were often man-handled and brutally treated. . . . However, the suspicion remains that the author's luscious heroine was deliberately invented to be beaten and tortured as well as to be loved, thus to command a wider audience. True, we live in brutal times, and the public may want this particular manner of expressing a savagery that lies under the surface of their minds. But it is apparent to this reader that 'unconquered' is vital, virile, and exciting enough without it to have won and deserved the popular and financial success it will undoubtedly have." Harrison Smith

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:16 D 27 '47 1100w

SWEENEY, JAMES JOHNSON. Marc Chagall. 102p il $3 Museum of modern art
 B or 92 Chagall, Marc 47-1185
 "A biographical sketch evaluates the Russian-born artist's relation to various schools and movements and furnishes the spectator with a clue to understanding the seeming incoherence in some of Chagall's works. Many illustrations of his paintings and prints; only three in color." Booklist

Booklist 43:240 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Alfred Werner
 N Y Times p9 D 22 '46 450w

"As is true of any good artist's work, Chagall's paintings speak for themselves, and so those represented here make up the major and important portion of the book. Of particular interest are the latter line drawings which Chagall produced for 'Dead Souls.' Now despite its title, Gogol's novel is one of the happiest books in print and Chagall one of the happiest artists. Therefore, it can only be hoped that somewhere there is a young, bright and solvent publisher who will bring the two together." Alfred Kay
 + San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 3 '46 270w

Times [London] Lit Sup p10 Ja 4 '47 600w

"This study may be considered one of the most subtle among the numerous books and articles which have been devoted to the artist. Incidentally, the mere listing of these books and articles in the bibliography occupies almost ten pages of the book. Mr. Carl O. Schniewind has contributed to the volume an excellent article, The Prints of Marc Chagall."
 + U S Quarterly Bkl 3:7 Mr '47 240w

SWEET, WILLIAM WARREN, ed. The Methodists [1783-1840] a collection of source materials. (Religion on the American frontier) 800p $10 Univ. of Chicago press

287.673 Methodist church (U.S.)—History A47-717

"One in the excellent 'Religion on the American Frontier' series by Dr. Sweet, eminent historian of American religious life. This, like the preceding volumes, is composed mainly of extensive selections from hitherto unpublished contemporary documents. These documents consist of minutes of conferences and, to a great extent, personal journals and letters, with the purpose of illustrating the life of the early Methodist circuit rider and of conveying the great importance of his influence on frontier society." (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

"Such a book as this is a collection of small details which—together with the ten thousand others of which these are representative—add up to a tremendous total. An excellent 70-page introduction by Professor Sweet gives a concise account of the beginnings and early growth of Methodism in America, in the light of the latest research. I doubt whether anyone who looks at both sides of a ten-dollar bill before nerving himself to spend it for this volume will regret the investment if he is interested in this sort of thing. After all, it is only a little more than a cent a page, and that isn't very inflationary." W. E. Garrison

+ Christian Century 64:80 Ja 15 '47 1150w

Reviewed by R. E. E. Harkness
 + Crozer Q 24:352 O '47 1200w

Current Hist 12:240 Mr '47 70w

"Valuable contribution to American social history, of interest to both the secular and religious scholar. Not for the general reader. Recommended for large and scholarly libraries." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 71:1625 N 15 '46 140w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:33 Mr '47 240w

SWIETOSLAWSKI, WOJCIECH. Microcalorimetry. 199p $4.75 Reinhold

536.6 Calorimeters and calorimetry 46-8114

"Only book on the subject. A microcalorimeter is a calorimeter sensitive to very small amounts of heat. Chapters on microcalorimetric applications include determination of the heat evolved by radium and radio-active materials, by aging metallic alloys and by structural changes in metals, by hardening of cement, by plants and animals, and by various physical and physicochemical processes. Details on construction of apparatus and various types of measurements are given, one chapter alone covers calorimeter jackets, thermostats and thermometers." Library J

"To those who are starting measurements in microcalorimetry, this book is recommended as the only one in its field. To those who are in other fields of calorimetry, this book should prove of only moderate interest." D. C. Ginnings

Chem & Eng N 22:3104 N 25 '46 250w

Chem Eng 54:280 Ag '47 70w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:81 Ja 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 31:57 O '46

SWIFT, MRS HILDEGARDE HOYT. North star shining; a pictorial history of the American Negro; il. by Lynd Ward. 44p $2.50 Morrow

811 Negroes—Poetry 47-30086

Brief pictorial history of the Negro in the United States from early slave days to the present, written in free verse, and picking out a succession of great moments to carry the theme. The illustrations are lithographs by Lynd Ward.

Booklist 43:191 F 15 '47

"The woodcuts are more impressive than the reproductions in color. Perhaps the book is almost too popular in its make-up. It places too much stress on Joe Louis and the red cap, while it ignores some of the more solid achievements of the Negro group."

Cath World 165:478 Ag '47 120w

"Sketched briefly in blank verse which would swell and ring if spoken by a Paul Robeson or a Roland Hayes, the Negro's story is epic and grimly inspiring. Lynd Ward's 20 lithographs in color are tense episodes in themselves, personalizing a tragic story from the days when men came chained in ships to the days when men died on Okinawa."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 My 25 '47 70w

Reviewed by H. F. Griswold

Christian Science Monitor p12 Ap 10 '47 220w

"Profoundly moving history of the American Negro, with superb lithographs."

+ Horn Bk 23:115 Mr '47 120w

"This volume can scarcely be classed at all as serious poetry. Some very fine colored illustrations by Lynd Ward of various famous Negroes and outstanding moments in Negro history are accompanied by rhythmic textual explanations by Miss Swift. The feeling for the Negro is sincere."

Kirkus 15:124 F 15 '47 80w

"Because sincerity and truth appeal to all ages, this is a book for the family as well as for young folks of the family group, but because the teens can do more with it than their elders, I am glad it is here for them." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 23 '47 320w

Reviewed by Eleanor Breed

San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 16 '47 80w

"No record of the history of the American Negro could be other than disquieting. This one has, at least, beauty and dignity. It has put the whole problem into the cooler and less emotional world of art and literature." M. G. Davis

SWIFT, H. H.—Continued

+ Sat R of Lit 30:42 Mr 8 '47 400w

Survey G 36:212 Mr '47 250w

Wis Lib Bul 43:59 Mr '47

SYLVESTER, HARRY. Moon Gaffney. 289p $2.75 Holt

47-3527

"A new and highly provocative approach to the old anti-clerical row. Mr. Sylvester takes a Tammany politician's honest, moderately intelligent son, who has been reared in the strictest Catholic and political society, and exposes him to the influence of a group of thoughtful radicals within the Church. Through them, the young man gets mixed up with one of the more responsible labor unions, an association that brings on him the violent displeasure of both the Church and the political machine." New Yorker

"This non-Catholic reviewer found [the novel] engrossing, rewarding, and no little terrifying. . . . The book is terrifying because it indicates how hard it is to be a Catholic radical in the face of such complacency, hypocrisy, and jingoistic prejudice. It took courage to write this book. If the writing seems self-conscious now and then, it is because Mr. Sylvester's technique doesn't quite reach the heights of his ambitious project. But if he continues to have as much to say in other books as in this, he should always find readers." H. T. T.

+ — Canadian Forum 27:141 S '47 500w

Reviewed by J. O. Supple

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 15 '47 370w

"The book is not profound. It deals largely in surface matters, but within these limits it is penetrating. And it is a fast moving, expertly done story that you don't want to lay down." H. S. Tigner

Christian Century 64:948 Ag 6 '47 350w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell

Churchman 162:17 Ja 15 '48 120w

"In this novel Mr. Sylvester has not only put a wide gap between himself and all other American Catholic storytellers; he has emerged as a brilliant novelist by any standard. For to say that 'Moon Gaffney' is written with expert command of both language and technique is to be stingy with praise. . . . His is a novel beautifully and wonderfully done. His, now, is a sure and great talent. Many Catholics will abuse his book; but all Christians will be grateful for it." Francis Downing

+ Commonweal 46:239 Je 20 '47 1000w

"Mr. Sylvester writes with both assurance and competence. He is intensely concerned throughout with important aspects of the basic human conflict between good and evil. His dismay over the unfortunates he is portraying is beyond question. Sincerity, fire and style are there in good measure. . . . In a work of such intense social criticism as this the key question is whether the picture drawn is authentic. My answer in the main is in the negative. . . . For me 'Moon Gaffney' rings true only in an occasional scene and in the author's marked sincerity of intent." Edward Skillin

+ — + Commonweal 46:241 Je 20 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:176 Mr 15 '47 150w

Reviewed by J. E. Cross

Library J 72:310 My 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Richard Watts

New Repub 116:24 Je 30 '47 700w

"The value of such a novel is not in the author's own misgivings or conclusions; its merit is in its brilliant exposition of vast general problems of the modern world, driven home by application to individuals. Harry Sylvester's talent is of the same order as that of Arthur Koestler, and deserves equal attention. His portrait of a young politician turning to the left rises above its local setting; and it will be a fine job wasted if the true meaning is lost in a debate over personal resentments or local pride. Even those who may be most exasperated might profit by cool analysis of what hit them." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Je 8 '47 1600w

"'Moon Gaffney' is by no means a first-rate novel. It is written, in fact, as if by main force, the prose plodding on page after page and conscientiously advancing the plot at the expense of any save the main character. Still, it is a better written novel than 'Dearly Beloved' or 'Dayspring,' Sylvester's two previous novels, and has, like them, a dogged and invincible conviction that makes up in part for its lack of technical skill. Reading it, one knows and is grateful for the fact that it wasn't written in order to win a $300,000 movie prize contest, but to say something. It does say something." Brendan Gill

+ N Y Times p6 Je 22 '47 550w

"The novel is interesting less for its plot than for a remarkably well-drawn picture of a society that, according to the author, is disastrously dominated by the clergy."

New Yorker 23:78 My 31 '47 120w

"The late Cardinal Mundelein, I think, would have liked this book and there is no doubt that America's 'poor-man' and 'working-man priests' in the factory towns and coal communities would be sympathetic to its central theme. I consider this novel must reading for any American curious about Catholicism in contemporary America." Benjamin Appel

+ Sat R of Lit 30:16 My 31 '47 1000w

Time 49:96 Je 23 '47 440w

SYRKIN, MARIE. Blessed is the match; the story of Jewish resistance. 361p $3.50 Knopf 296 World war, 1939-1945—Jews. Jews in Europe. Jews in Palestine 47-4594

Traces the story of the Jews in Europe during World War II, and the resistance movement in Europe and in Palestine. "The title of the book comes from a moving poem written by Hanna Senesch, one of the heroes of the resistance. Hanna parachuted into Hungary to bring succor to the trapped Jewish communities there, and was later executed by the Nazis." (N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R)

"Miss Syrkina's story is more than another account of Nazi butchery. In her telling it is a glorious saga of what Palestine as a homeland for Jewry has already done to solidify the concept of common responsibility of the Jew for the lot of his fellow-Jews everywhere. It is also another record that may help attest to the enormity of German crimes." Benjamin Weintraub

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 31 '47 360w

"Marie Syrkina, in analyzing the present Jewish scene, has recognized full well that man's sensitiveness has been almost hopelessly blunted and that his capacity to react to outrage is one of the casualties of the war period. . . . She has told not how Jews died but how they managed to survive. . . . A remnant came through, because of miraculous tenacity or ingenuity or the infrequent friendship of Christian Christians. How they came through is the theme of this unforgettable volume, one of the most valuable published in our time." A. L. Sachar

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Ag 31 '47 850w

"An invaluable, historic document. . . . No tone of lamentation is heard. Nor does Miss Syrkina resort to the use of passion or special pleading. What is especially commendable is the restraint of the discourse in the face of the mourners who have no graves at which to weep." I. A. Hirschmann

+ N Y Times p6 S 21 '47 1050w

SZIGETI, JOSEPH. With strings attached; reminiscences and reflections. 341p il $4 Knopf

B or 92 Musicians—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30189

Informal autobiography of this Hungarian-born violinist, now well-known in America.

He has interspersed his material with many anecdotes of other musicians, among them Myra Hess, Melba, Busoni, Bartók, Stravinsky, Ysaÿe, and George Templeton Strong. List of recordings by Szigeti. Index.

"Mr. Szigeti writes easily within the American idiom, even in journalese when he chooses. This gives to his pages the flavor of intimate conversation, including a merry wit, for he can see himself on occasion as a comic character. And yet for the graver problems of life, creativity, and sociology, he commands an English style well at those levels. . . Mr. Szigeti writes, as he plays, like a good citizen of the world." Lucien Price

+ Atlantic 179:163 Ap '47 450w

Booklist 43:240 Ap 1 '47

Reviewed by Felix Borowski

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 9 '47 400w

"Should appeal to the general reading public as well as to the musician. Recommended."

H. E. Bush

+ Library J 72:466 Mr 15 '47 100w

"A delight for the reader who knows how to read such a book—that is, picking it up at will and putting it down without compunction, returning to it only when it fits the mood and for so long as the mood lasts; reading it more or less consecutively, but without a crisis of conscience if the printed order should happen to be upset or reversed. It is a book to be treated, in a word, like a friend, without undue ceremony or any gingerly sense of what is or is not permitted. . . Unfrank and unfree as it does sometimes strike us, inhibited by the author's kindness as much as by anything else, the book is a happy addition to its own small category of work, and will give much pleasure to those whose musical experience prepares them for it." Vincent Sheean

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Mr 2 '47 900w

"Musicians, by and large, are justly famous for their story-telling, but not many of them make good subjects for autobiographies. Mr. Szigeti is an engaging and intelligent man, and furnishes a pleasant exception to this rule. He is reasonably modest, he has a sense of humor, and what is most important, he is in the midst of a busy career of violin virtuosity which is not only musically rewarding but is distinctly worth talking about." Mark Schubart

+ N Y Times p6 Mr 9 '47 750w

Reviewed by Spencer Barefoot

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ap 20 '47 300w

"Despite a personal and unorthodox use of the English language—or perhaps because of it—the stages in his growth from a shallow child prodigy into one of the most penetrating and serious performing musicians of our time come to life with remarkable lucidity and persuasiveness. More than a mere autobiography, the book is frequently a source of genuine wisdom on all sorts of musical questions—the function of the interpreter, the relation of the player to the composer, the effect of commercialism and mass production on the musical art. . . Few books by practicing musicians give as much sound insight into the deeper problems of a musical career."

Theatre Arts 31:77 My '47 180w

SZMAGLEWSKA, SEWERYNA. Smoke over Birkenau; tr. from the Polish by Jadwiga Rynas. 386p $3.50 Holt

940.547243 World war, 1939-1945—Prisoners and prisons, German. World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, Polish 47-30407

The author was a university student in Warsaw in July, 1942, when the Gestapo caught and imprisoned her for her underground activities. For almost three years she lived thru the horrors of Birkenau. This is her record of the sufferings of her fellow prisoners and herself during those terrible years.

"Calm, lacking in bitterness, impersonal, this is an overall view from the dire grim days of German victories, to the relative comforts installed with the Allied advance."

+ Kirkus 15:330 Je 15 '47 120w

"Author testified at Nuremberg. Sounds like a trustworthy and indispensable item for small public libraries." F. A. Boyle

+ Library J 72:1106 Ag '47 100w

Reviewed by Henrietta Buckmaster

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 Ag 24 '47 380w

"'Smoke Over Birkenau' is, so far, the most comprehensive story ever told about any Nazi death camp. Some of the atrocious tales accumulated here we may have heard before, but, in a world too willing to forget no repetition can hurt." Alfred Werner

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 31 '47 600w

New Yorker 23:67 Ag 30 '47 100w

"In telling her story, Miss S. has made a fetish of keeping it objective. Too much so, perhaps. Her use of the second person weakens it, because 'you,' the reader, have had no such adventure and cannot properly identify yourself with the 'you' of this strange, nightmarish environment." Luther Nichols

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 19 '47 700w

"Each time I finish a book by a victim of a concentration camp or a survivor, of one of Germany's death factories, I feel that another, later account could not possibly surpass the horror of what I have just read. And each time it does. Though each one of these books corroborates the facts presented in all the others—which is one of their merits, for without such multiple testimony most of these facts would be disbelieved in a surprisingly near future—each one has its distinctive features. . . Mlle. Szmaglewska is a very competent writer, and the translation of her book of gruesome reminiscences is excellent. . . The report in this book on the unspeakable Herr Kramer is the best psychological study of that human abomination I have seen in print." Robert Pick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 30 '47 550w

T

TABER, GLADYS (BAGG) (MRS. F. A. TABER), and KISTNER, RUTH. Flower arranging for the American home. 221p il $2.75 Macrae Smith co.

635.9663 Floral decoration 47-2692

An informal book on flower arranging, for the beginner. The authors give not only the principles of arrangement, color, and containers to use, but also describe actual table-settings, arrangements for special occasions in the home and in the church.

Booklist 43:327 Je 15 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"Here's the answer to the Garden Club prayer—a practical book on flower arrangements for people like you and me. Flower arrangements made with the flowers in our own gardens, along our own roadsides, in our own meadows; flowers and leaves to be had on city pushcarts, in out of the way, down a step florists. . . This is tops in its field—and the only one for everyone."

+ Kirkus 15:94 F 1 '47 180w

"It was one of fate's most fortunate twists that brought Mmes. Taber and Kistner together and induced them to pool their respective talents in the planning and creation of this most excellent book. . . Together they have produced a volume that is unique in charm, in stimulation and in sincere down-to-earth advice. Only once in a blue moon does one come upon a book in any field that is so packed with enjoyment and chuckling human helpfulness. . . It is this reviewer's considered opinion that 'Flower Arranging for the American Home' not only is by all odds the best thing that has yet appeared in its field, but also that it is one of the outstanding garden-flavored books of this or any other year." R. S. Lemmon

TABER, G. B.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p29
My 4 '47 300w

Reviewed by O. S. Stull
San Francisco Chronicle p10 Je 1 '47
50w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

TABOR, PAUL. He never came back [Eng title: Leaf of a lime tree]. 224p $2.75 Dutton 47-24308

A novel of suspense in which a Nazi gauleiter after the end of the war, assumes a new identity, marries an UNRRA representative, and gets halfway across Europe before he is trapped, partly by his own guilty conscience.

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47
70w

"A fast-moving adventure story, psychologically angled, this is enjoyable, not always credible, reading."

+ — Kirkus 15:290 Je 1 '47 150w

"The ingenuity with which Tabori has contrived that the Nazi fugitive's crimes, personal and political, also become his punishment, makes this a better-than-average novel of suspense." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 70w

"It is immensely competent with a very ingenious plot." Charles Marriott

Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 8 '46 50w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10
Ag 17 '47 100w

"The familiar chase formula, handled with a great deal of psychological embroidery."

New Yorker 23:64 Ag 2 '47 70w

"Central character well-drawn. . . Story neither believable nor especially exciting."

Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p14 Ag 10 '47
90w

"Real thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 Ag 16 '47 50w

TABORI, GEORGE. Original sin, 195p $2.75 Houghton 47-3749

A husband's three different explanations of the events that led to his wife's death on the fifth day of a Cairo sand storm.

Reviewed by S. K. Workman
Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 22 '47
250w

"Tight, effective, this underscores Tabori's ability to tell a story, to portray character. A novel for the discriminating taste—for top-drawer crime addicts."

+ Kirkus 15:223 Ap 15 '47 120w

"Mood and imagery are frequently reminiscent of the early Eliot; but this is also a vivid and original study, ingeniously constructed, of the motives to murder." H. W. Hart

+ Library J 72:888 Je 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by Charles Marriott
Manchester Guardian p3 Je 13 '47 50w

"'Original Sin' cannot be dismissed too lightly because it has not been well enough thought out, for, despite the muddled analysis, it contains writing which puts Mr. Tabori's talent beyond question." Virgilia Peterson

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Jl 13 '47 650w

"Mr. Tabori has been somewhat parsimonious with events. There are enough solid incidents for an active short story; no more than that. The bulk of the book is filled out with little particles of atmosphere. . . To explore the problem of evil is difficult. . . No one will blame a working novelist for not solving it.

But it is too bad that Mr. Tabori chose the documentary method. Telling his story from within a diseased soul, so to speak, may have enabled him to put the question to his readers more terribly than any other way, but it surely made it impossible for him to contribute very much toward an answer." Donald Barr

N Y Times p5 Je 15 '47 550w

"The story is very skillfully presented but is a bit too mechanically prearranged to be entirely convincing. The middle-class atmosphere, on the other hand—so different from the Sheppard's Hotel background that usually gets into novels about Cairo—is absolutely first-rate."

New Yorker 23:94 Je 14 '47 160w

"The abridged version of the novel which appeared in Cosmopolitan reads more easily, it must be admitted, than the book, which is repetitious at times. 'Original Sin,' however, gives further proof of Tabori's versatility and technical skill." J. V.

San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47
200w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage
Spec 178:730 Je 20 '47 130w
Springf'd Republican p12B O 19 '47 90w
Time 50:98 Jl 14 '47 110w

TABORI, PAUL. See Tabor, P.

TAFT, ADA BARTLETT (MRS LORADO TAFT). Lorado Taft: sculptor and citizen. 88p il $2.50 M. T. Smith, route 2, box 480, Greensboro, N.C.

B or 92 Taft, Lorado 47-30058

A brief account of the life and work of this American sculptor, illustrated with photographs of his work. The book was written by his wife. No index.

Booklist 43:169 F 1 '47

"Intimate but not oversentimental biography. . . Mrs. Taft, doubtless with the collaboration of her talented daughters, has created a brief but, within its limits, a perfect picture of the man and his work." W. E. G.
+ Christian Century 64:1366 N 12 '47
200w

TAFT, CHARLES PHELPS. Why I am for the church; talks on religion and politics. 103p $2.25 Farrar, Straus

261 Christianity and politics 47-5337

A group of talks on religion and politics by the younger brother of Senator Robert Taft. The author is president of the Federal council of churches of Christ in America.

"Though neither a brilliant scholar nor a great orator, Mr. Taft's sincere, whole-hearted, and intelligent espousal of religion is encouraging."

+ Kirkus 15:305 Je 15 '47 210w

"Except for libraries specializing in the Taft family or in the Federal Council of Churches these addresses and articles seem too dated to be of value. . . Two, however, are still timely 'Monday to Saturday Religion' and 'People in the Pews'; but for such a small proportion of current value purchase of the book is not generally recommended." L. R. Miller

Library J 72:1032 Jl '47 120w

"I put down the book with the feeling that its author is a genuinely enlightened and lovable man, sincerely striving to apply his faith to the problems of society. One only hopes that he will explore his religion more deeply for the lessons that it can teach him about human nature and human society. As Mr. Taft pointed out in one of his talks, the 'social gospel' by itself is not enough." Chad Walsh

+ N Y Times p14 Ag 10 '47 700w

Reviewed by Eugene MacHamus
San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ag 14
'47 60w

TAGGARD, GENEVIEVE. Slow music. 62p
$2 Harper
811 46-7134
For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Booklist 43:182 F 15 '47

"Miss Taggard's specialty is a peculiar kind of lyric, very frail, clear, disembodied; lark-song descending from way up high in the pure sky, or coming down from above the cloud. This is a difficult genre to sustain, or repeat; aiming at effects of innocence, of being 'natural,' Miss Taggard overdoes it a little." Rolfe Humphries

Nation 164:281 Mr 8 '47 370w

Reviewed by Babette Deutsch

N Y Times p4 F 16 '47 210w

"Miss Genevieve Taggard is a little too prone to think of verse as a kind of poetic comment on the news. In much of her verse, she seems the sort of writer who would write poetry, war or no war, because all she has to do is comment on what is happening, and if what is happening is horrible and shattering, she simply writes about it. . . There are half a dozen good poems in the book, particularly Delight, Hymn to Yellow, and The Word." Henry Rago

+ Poetry 69:289 F '47 480w

"'Slow Music' is written with such economy as often to give the impression of a carving. When she is successful the effect is undeniably musical and arresting. But when either by reason of thinness of idea or for some technical reason the method fails, it is particularly flat. So much economy and so little done with it! This collection though has a considerable range of poetry of a high order, original in idea and treatment." Eugene Davidson

+ Yale R n s 36:539 spring '47 280w

TALBOT, HENRY PAUL. Quantitative chemical analysis; rev. and rewritten by Leicester F. Hamilton and Stephen G. Simpson. 9th ed 439p $4 Macmillan

545 Chemistry, Analytic—Quantitative

47-157

"One of the better texts on the subject, revised and rewritten in many parts with new material added to furnish material for an extended or supplementary course and to bring text up to date." (Booklist) Bibliography.

Booklist 43:190 F 15 '47

Chem Eng 54:270 Jl '47 70w

TALLANT, ROBERT. Mrs Candy and Saturday night. 269p $2.50 Doubleday

47-5137

The events of one warm Saturday in Mrs Candy's rooming house in a poor quarter of New Orleans. Mrs Candy was a widow who followed the line of least resistance, so when the ghost of her husband appeared and suggested a party, Mrs Candy complied. The results of the party were varied, but several inmates of the rooming house were happier.

Reviewed by H. T. Kane

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 3 '47 290w

Kirkus 15:225 Ap 15 '47 210w

"A little too long and not of sufficiently universal appeal to be a must. Recommended for larger libraries with adequate book funds." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 72:1034 Jl '47 110w

"Robert Tallant's story is convivial, rowdy and irreverent. It will do you no harm, but you have to be in the mood for it." Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p31 O 26 '47 220w

"A happy-go-lucky novel of present-day New Orleans, written with engaging freshness and gusto, Robert Tallant's 'Mrs. Candy' is a pleasant hammock-special from cover to cover. . . His people ring true, even when he is content to present them in free-hand silhouette; ette; their talk is as tangy as Mr. Petit's shrimp jambalaya. This reader believed everything they did and said." C. V. Terry

+ N Y Times p10 Je 22 '47 420w

"Old women who are also 'characters' are apt to be great bores in fiction, but Mrs. Candy is a fairly diverting exception."

+ New Yorker 23:70 Jl 19 '47 70w

"Before one has turned many pages, one feels the languorous warmth and easy tempo of New Orleans. . . The rough and hilarious Saturday night party (aided by the novelists' and dramatists' pleasant but fantastic myth that drunks are delightful, amusing, and witty) ends on an extravagantly 'happy' note—a wholesale reconciliation and mating which almost insures a celluloid destination for the book." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 30:30 Jl 19 '47 430w

TALLMAN, ROBERT. Doomsday's cue [poems]. 103p $2 Doubleday

811

46-7456

"The title Robert Tallman has chosen for his volume functions as a 'cue' in several directions. Chosen from a passage in the work of Thomas Beddoes, it signalizes a devotion like Beddoes's to the lyric qualities of poets in the Elizabethan age. As further 'cue' it signalizes imminent Judgment Day for artists, politicians, and everybody else. . . Beyond the theme of poets' fashions, Tallman's book is a history of conflict between sympathies and disdains. This conflict, stated, analyzed, illustrated throughout the seven parts of the book, receives its major demonstrations in part six, the thumbnail biography of Thomas Beddoes." Sat R of Lit

Reviewed by H. C. Webster

Chicago Sun Book Week p11 O 27 '46 90w

— Kirkus 14:415 Ag 15 '46 110w

"This is one of the most distinguished first books of poems to appear in many a year. In fact, it is dazzling. It will appeal to readers who are not afraid of the subjective, the exotic, the strange as the artistic edifice most expressive of the modern world." Marguerite Young

+ N Y Times p18 Ja 12 '47 500w

"Tallman has deliberately impaled himself on the dilemma of the anarchist in literature and in politics. He expresses his dilemma, however, in verses law-abiding and sprucely well-dressed. He is shrewd, observant, and—to revive the proper complimentary use of a word in its best sense long neglected—lyrical. He manages to say, at one and the same time, that the world is all right and all wrong, and to consider debatable survival in very mellow rhymes." Jeremy Ingalls

+ Sat R of Lit 29:16 N 16 '46 500w

TANNEHILL, IVAN RAY. Drought; its causes and effects. 264p il $3 Princeton univ. press 551.57 Droughts

47-2193

"The author's chief purpose has been to assist in establishing a method whereby droughts may be predicted. He has advanced the thesis that solar variations are translated into rainfall variations, and that rainfall in the United States is dependent on relatively low temperatures over the northern continent and relatively high temperatures over the northern Pacific Ocean. These theories are developed through a study of the various processes which account for rainfall or lack of rainfall; circulation of air across the continent, relation of sunspots to weather, trends in weather variations and climate changes. A brief history of droughts in the United States and a review of weather conditions preceding these periods are included." (N Y New Tech Bks) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 43:305 Je 1 '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:816 My 15 '47 80w

TANNEHILL, I. R.—Continued

"Meteorologists and amateur weather observers alike will be interested in this readable and well-written discussion of droughts and why they occur."

+ N Y New Tech Bks 32:8 Ja '47

Reviewed by Robert Simpson

N Y Times p28 Mr 16 '47 500w

"This interesting study in synoptic climatology is presented in clear and nontechnical style."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:311 S '47 260w

TANNENBAUM, FRANK. Slave and citizen; the Negro in the Americas. 128p $2 Knopf 326 Negroes in America. Slavery in America
47-61

"[An] examination of attitudes toward the Negro in the Americas. By the evidence of history the author contrasts the position of those parts of America settled largely from Great Britain, France, and Holland with those parts settled largely from Spain and Portugal. He demonstrates that the national history and religious backgrounds of the European home communities strongly affected attitudes toward slaves and slavery in the New World." (Publisher's note) Index.

"The execution of this work is inferior to its concept." Herbert Aptheker

Am Hist R 52:755 Jl '47 800w

"Mr. Tannenbaum's comparison of the Negro and Indian situation in Latin America is misleading in its implications concerning the Indian. . . The book contains a number of truisms, tautologies, and clumsy statements. . . The author's sympathetic attitude toward the Negro makes up for many of the book's inadequacies. Slave and Citizen makes quite interesting and stimulating reading." Oracy Nogueira

Am J Soc 53:70 Jl '47 850w

"Tannenbaum has written interestingly and well." C. W. Shull

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1051 O '47 180w

Reviewed by F. B. Washington

Ann Am Acad 253:240 S '47 250w

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by Michael McLaughlin

Cath World 165:90 Ap '47 350w

Reviewed by E. R. Embree

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ja 19 '47
360w

"One-sided and far from profound description of slavery and the slave trade in the Western Hemisphere. The lack of chapter divisions and of topic headings gives the impression that the book was made without sufficient consideration for the reader; and the contents leave the impression that insufficient attention was given by the author to the subject-matter. Copious footnotes and frequent quotations indicate that Mr. Tannenbaum did much reading." R. H. M.

— Christian Science Monitor p18 Ja 9 '47
650w

Kirkus 14:613 D 1 '46 160w

"The value of this book is that it presents the history of the Negro in the whole western hemisphere rather than, as usual, in one or two sections of it. However, both title and subtitle are misleading in that this thin volume is so largely devoted to the slave period with little space reserved for the larger story of the developments after freedom. But what is here is the work of a sound scholar and deserves a wider reading than it is likely to get outside of academic circles." L. D. Reddick

+ Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 80w

"Mr. Tannenbaum's little book deals with the story of the Negro of the Western World, covers all four hundred years of it, and for good measure looks back to the Justinian Code and St. Paul. The author admits that his book 'raises more questions than it answers.' But, with thanks to Frank Tannenbaum, it is to be said that he has made his analysis highly provocative and useful. . . Mr. Tannenbaum has written an immensely useful little book; so good that this reviewer would express the hope that the author will now write the larger book of which this 128-page manuscript with some 23,000 words would serve as an excellent syllabus." Herbert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6
F 16 '47 1150w

"This book is of interest in that it considers two important topics: the basis of our color prejudice and the reason for the different status of the Negro in the two Americas. The author, with wonder and incredulity, draws freely from the fine work of the Brazilian sociologist Gilberto Freyre and his small but stimulating volume adds yet another to the comparative studies of social institutions in the Northern and Southern continents. One hopes there will be more." Mildred Adams

+ N Y Times p9 Ja 12 '47 900w

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 4 '47
170w

Reviewed by G. V. Price

Social Educ 11:334 N '47 400w

"The book should be read by all those who are working for better race relations in the South, because they could learn much from the Latin-Americans' ideologies of the Negro problem." T. L. Spraggins

+ Social Forces 26:117 O '47 800w

"The book has definite value—but for the general reader rather than the expert. Its chief merit is that it gives the layman a fairly accurate and enlightening picture of the differing social atmosphere with regard to race in the Americas, and the extent to which the Negro has been integrated into the various societies." Ruediger Bilden

Survey 83:294 O '47 1000w

Times [London] Lit Sup p474 S 20 '47
300w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:185 Je '47 310w

TANSILL, CHARLES CALLAN. Congressional career of Thomas Francis Bayard, 1869-1885. 362p $2.50 Georgetown univ. press

B or 92 Bayard, Thomas Francis

"Mr. Tansill has written what amounts to a political biography of Bayard down to the time of his appointment to the state portfolio in Cleveland's first administration. He carried on in the Senate the distinguished tradition of his father, James A. Bayard, who had the unusual experience of presenting his son's credentials to the presiding officer. The younger Bayard's political background was colored by his conservative constituency and by his father's intense opposition to Lincoln's policy of 'coercing' the seceded states." Am Hist R

— "Mr. Tansill's research in the large collection of Bayard papers in the family's custody and other important manuscripts inspired admiration for the subject of his book. His pages contain liberal extracts from correspondence and speeches, and the text is well fortified with footnote citations. The workmanship reflects credit on author and publisher." G. M. Stephenson

+ Am Hist R 52:528 Ap '47 750w

Reviewed by C. O. Johnson

Am Pol Sci R 41:159 F '47 350w

"The Bayard set forth in these 342 pages is unconvincing. He is simply too good to be true. Apparently he functioned in a social vacuum, the product of self-induced personal integrity and infallible reasoning on his part. Not a trace of human weakness mars the miraculous record. Rich as this book is in pertinent information, it left this reviewer wishing he could learn the circumstances and forces that account for this remarkable statesman." W. E. Binkley

+ Ann Am Acad 249:197 Ja '47 360w

"Thomas Francis Bayard of Delaware, one of the few northern senators who aided the southerners during the period of reconstruction, has been very fortunate in his biographer. The book is especially rich in direct quotations from important primary source material. Extensive documentation and a detailed index further emphasize the excellence of the volume." Paul Kiniery

+ Commonweal 45:170 N 29 '46 130w

TAPPAN, PAUL WILBUR. Delinquent girls in court; a study of the Wayward minor court of New York. 265p $3 Columbia univ. press 364.52 New York (city). Girl's term. Juvenile delinquency 47-3254

"An important aspect of the control of juvenile delinquency—punishment of crime versus elimination of the causes—is here examined against a background of case studies drawn from the Wayward Minor Court of New York city which handles, primarily, the adolescent girl sex offender. The part of this old controversy developed by Mr. Tappan is the comparative merit of these two controls from an administrative point of view. He favors a middle path in contemporary criminological theory in advocating the use of compulsory corrective measures with juveniles and parents only when misbehavior is clearly defined and carefully established, and with reference to all the necessary guarantees of the individual's rights." (U S Quarterly Bkl) Bibliography. Index.

"Dr. Tappan's book is of interest to the student of institutional growth. . . We should be grateful to Dr. Tappan for breaking new ground here. In spite of the author's sociological training there were times when it seemed to this reviewer that the law was his father, and sociology, but his stepfather. His book would have been still more satisfying to sociologists had he made more explicit some of the sociological as well as the legal implications of his material. But it is a captious critic who complains that an author has not written the book he himself might have wished to have been written." E. K. Nottingham
+ — Am Soc R 12:379 Je '47 800w

"Here are the fruits of a most intense scholarship and penetrating analysis. Utilizing and combining the best features of the socio-psychological and legal approaches, Dr. Tappan is always objective, continually aware of methodological limitations. In setting forth his evaluation of the Court, he has purposely, though incidentally, afforded the reader an insight into some of the fundamental characteristics of the judicial process. For this reason alone, the book is well worth the reading."

+ Harvard Law R 60:683 Ap '47 550w

School & Society 65:198 Mr 15 '47 10w

"While social workers on the whole would regard the writer's views as too legalistic, they would do well to read this stimulating treatise, for perhaps social workers have frequently gone too far in the opposite direction." W. B. Sanders

+ Social Forces 26:116 O '47 300w

"In spite of a heavy style and a none too clear organization, the alert and penetrating analysis of the issues involved places this book in the forefront of writings on the subject."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:186 Je '47 160w

TARG, WILLIAM, ed. Carrousel for bibliophiles; a treasury of tales, narratives, songs, epigrams and sundry curious studies relating to a noble theme [contributors: Christopher Morley and others]. 400p $7.50 Dushnes

010.8 Book collecting 47-3040

"A solid and varied collection of narratives, essays, poems and epigrams that have to do, in one way or another, with the pleasures men take in hunting, finding, owning and mooning over books. He goes back as far in time as to Richard de Bury, author of the precious 'Philobiblon' . . . and comes down to 1946 when Francis Farquhar published his merry catalogue of books offered for sale by the Caveat Book Shop of San Francisco, all the titles phony and some of them funny." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ap 20 '47 180w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 Ap 20 '47 360w

"The idea of an anthology of bibliographical writing was a brilliant one, and though the present reviewer would have preferred less emphasis on modern authors, many of whose pieces are available in print elsewhere, in favor of a heavier weighing of hard-to-find masterpieces, as Augustine Birrell's little classics in 'Obiter Dicta,' this is purely a personal prejudice. There is a sufficiency of good reading in this volume to please any book lover. . . A serious defect, though, particularly in a work dealing with bibliography, is the general failure to identify the original source of other than copyrighted material." D. A. Randall

+ — N Y Times p4 Ap 13 '47 380w

"A fine omnibus volume into which the publisher has packed a remarkably rich feast of writing about books for book lovers." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p18 Ap 16 '47 650w

Time 49:113 Ap 21 '47 600w

Times [London] Lit Sup p260 My 24 '47 50w

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. Show piece; introd. by Susanah Tarkington. 212p $2 Doubleday 47-1180

This novel was left unfinished at the author's death, but he left a synopsis of its end. It is the character study of one Irving Pease, a self-centered young man, pampered by his parents and friends alike.

Booklist 43:206 Mr 1 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Flanagan

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 F 2 '47 360w

"The Show Piece as it stands will probably not serve much to enhance Mr. Tarkington's reputation. It is too sketchy in form, too obviously the tentative draft of a proposed narrative; yet it is authentic, and of interest to any admirer of Mr. Tarkington's." M. W. Stoer

Christian Science Monitor p16 F 6 '47 550w

"A very thin, palpably moralistic character study. . . Tarkington has never penetrated today's youth. This book is no exception. The story—what there is of it—is superficial, and the conclusion obvious."

— Kirkus 14:580 N 15 '46 170w

"Well recommended." L. R. Etzkorn

+ Library J 72:161 Ja 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by Mary Ross

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 F 16 '47 950w

Reviewed by Thomas Sugrue

N Y Times p5 F 2 '47 1250w

"The importance of 'The Show Piece' as a work of fiction is relatively negligible. It is only a moderately good book, nowhere near 'Alice Adams' or 'Seventeen,' but it manages to illuminate in a rather remarkable way the whole Tarkingtonian world." Hamilton Basso
New Yorker 22:83 Ja 25 '47 1000w

"You won't dislike Irvie—not all the time, anyway. You'll admire him for his good qualities, and he has many; you'll want to strangle him when the limelight reveals the chink in his armor. But, don't get the idea that it's an unpleasant story, for it isn't. . . 'The Show Piece' certainly has the light touch, and Irvie deserves a place among those other Tarkington immortals: Penrod, Willie Baxter Jr. and Little Orvie." Edith James

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 26 '47 500w

"It is not possible to accept 'The Show Piece' as a culmination of a career. We must turn backward for the best. If only the gods could bestow on all creators the omniscient sense of when to stop. The fifth 'farewell performance' cloy; the drone of 'and in conclusion' tires the spirit. Respect is due Mr. Tarkington for the effort this work must have cost him, but lasting gratitude and affectionate admiration go to an earlier era." C. M. Brown

Sat R of Lit 29:19 D 28 '46 600w

Time 49:104 Ja 27 '47 1100w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:241 S '47 220w

TARKINGTON, BOOTH. Three selected short novels. 341p $3 Doubleday

47-5078

Three novels, all of which have appeared in abbreviated form in magazines. Contents: Walterson; Uncertain Molly Collicut; Rennie Peggidge.

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 18 '47 400w

"The publication in book form of the three selections comprising this new volume, a year after the death of the author, will not add to Tarkington's literary stature," E. S.

Commonweal 46:437 Ag 15 '47 180w

Kirkus 15:263 My 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by Lisle Bell

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6

Ag 31 '47 290w

"There is no denying the thinness of the material here, but it makes no difference. Tarkington could describe the inside of a vacuum cleaner and make it fascinating; reading him is like gulping ice cream on a hot night—cool and easy. He was a historian of the manners and morals of his time; he was also an entertainer. In the present volume he demonstrates a literary version of the Indian rope trick—stories which stand up without apparent foundation. No writer in his time could do half so well." Thomas Sugrue

+ N Y Times p12 Ag 10 '47 1000w

TASKER, RANDOLPH VINCENT GREENWOOD. Old Testament in the New Testament. 176p $2 Presbyterian bd.

225 Bible. New Testament. Bible. Old Testament 47-18414

Study of the spiritual unity of the whole Bible. The first five chapters, comprising about two-thirds of the book, are based upon lectures given to teachers at the Easter school of the Institute of Christian Education at Birmingham, England. The author is professor of New Testament exegesis in the University of London.

"Although it was originally prepared as a series of popular lectures, the book makes dull reading. The author plods through all the New Testament books and discusses the Old Testament quotations and references, more or less in order of their appearance. The only exception to this procedure is an opening chapter in which an attempt is made, not too successfully, to distinguish Jesus' use of the Old Testament from that credited to him in the gospel tradition. There is an index of Old Testament references, but not one of New Testament passages discussed." G. M. Gilmore

Crozer Q 24:270 Jl '47 500w

Times [London] Lit Sup p394 Ag 17 '46 750w

TATE, ALLEN, ed. Southern vanguard; the John Peale Bishop memorial volume. 331p $4.50 Prentice-Hall

810.8 American literature—Collections

47-5284

"'A Southern Vanguard' is an anthology of stories, poems, and critical essays which were submitted in the John Peale Bishop Memorial Literary Prize Contest conducted in 1945 by the Sewanee Review and Prentice-Hall. In addition are a poem and essay by Bishop, to whose memory the book is dedicated." New Repub

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47 70w

Reviewed by Broadus Mitchell

Commonweal 46:579 S 26 '47 390w

Kirkus 15:421 Ag 1 '47 130w

Reviewed by Andrew Lyndon

Nation 166:23 Ja 3 '48 550w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:29 S 1 '47 1100w

"Essentially this volume is the work of Allen Tate—who is not only a novelist and poet, but a creative critic and creative editor as well. His secret seems to be the giving full rein to his prejudices and enthusiasms. Enthusiasm and intense conviction generate reciprocal enthusiasm, and create a circle of white heat in which the members of the Southern vanguard look admiringly at one another. When one finds three essays, by Bishop, Stallman and McLuhan, depending largely on what Allen Tate has thought and written, the volume becomes perhaps too intimate. The fact that Mr. Tate has the knack of encouraging others, including the young and unassuming, to do their best; and if, as he predicts, 'the best Southern writers in the next few years will be writers of fiction,' in large part he himself will be responsible." D. A. Stauffer

N Y Times p5 S 14 '47 900w

"An uneven but often stimulating anthology." + — New Yorker 23:105 S 20 '47 100w

"The fiction in 'A Southern Vanguard' is almost entirely by writers having some connection with the Agrarian movement. . . The stories are of strikingly unequal merit. . . The essays about Southern writers embody a number of disagreements arising from the fact that at least three different sets of literary standards are employed by the critics. . . The remarkable group of Southerners who have devoted themselves recently to the theory and practice of literary criticism is represented in Mr. Tate's collection only at second hand, in Robert Wooster Stallman's summary of 'The New Criticism.' But this useful exposition is enough to suggest that the original Agrarian impulse is developing along two divergent paths." H. N. Smith

Sat R of Lit 30:19 O 11 '47 1700w

TATE, GEORGE HENRY HAMILTON. Mammals of eastern Asia. (Pacific world ser) 366p $4 Macmillan

599 Mammals. Zoology—Asia, Eastern

47-1666

Descriptions of the characteristics and habits of the mammals of eastern Asia. The area covered is from the Arctic to Malaysia; from Lake Baikal and the Gobi desert to the Pacific ocean. Glossary. Indexes of common and scientific names.

Booklist 43:235 My 15 '47

Current Hist 12:501 My '47 20w

Kirkus 15:26 Ja 1 '47 80w

"The advantages of the book are that it is easily portable, forms a convenient reference work, and presents a survey of the mammalian fauna of the area based on authority. Although addressed to the general reader, the free use of the terminology of the taxonomist may present some difficulties to the layman."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:206 Je '47 150w

TATE, LOU. Weaving is fun. 64p il $2 Little Loomhouse, Kenwood hill, Louisville 8

745.52 Weaving

"This book is based on nine years of experimental work in ascertaining what most interests the new weaver and what best aids his learning. Its purpose is to encourage people to learn to weave by following simple directions either by themselves or in school classes. Thorough warping instructions and other techniques are given for a foundation. A distinctive feature is the large number of explanatory photographs showing step-by-step procedures of various phases of weaving." J Home Econ

Booklist 43:152 Ja 15 '47

"The text is written in a popular but clear and concise manner. It is brief but selective in its content and aims to give the amateur a good foundation upon which to experiment with ideas of his own. It encourages originality. One section is devoted to the importance of knowing what to expect from various types of yarns and threads in relation to weaving. It should be a worth-while book for all who are interested in weaving." Ruth Austin

+ J Home Econ 39:172 Mr '47 150w

TATE, SYLVIA. Never by chance. 282p $2.50
Harper

47-5150

"Girl's accidental death drives her musician-lover to seek her true character in the tangled mystery of her past—a search that culminates in witchcraft and murder." San Francisco Chronicle

"Readers who are not stunned by the finale may be sharply annoyed by it. But although they may at the same time think that all that has gone before has been unwisely pointed for a finale that does not compel, they are not likely to deny its remarkable vitality nor its prodigal richness." James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 3 '47
160w

"Can double in the whodunit section, as well as hold its own as a psychological-suspense tale."

Kirkus 15:266 My 15 '47 160w

"An egregious 282-page waste of time."
E. H.

— New Repub 117:31 Ag 18 '47 10w

"Miss Tate fills in with swing background and other matters not too advanced for average fans." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
Ag 3 '47 150w

"Miss Tate writes clearly, observantly and interminably; this could have been an outstanding first novel at one-third its present exhausting length." Anthony Boucher

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 3 '47
90w

"By all odds best first suspense-tale of year to date and equal to any other—with certain minor reservations."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:31 Ag 9 '47 50w

TATE, WILLIAM EDWARD. The parish chest; a study of the records of parochial administration in England. 346p il $4.75 Macmillan 342 Archives—Great Britain, Great Britain—History—Sources. Great Britain—Church history—Sources [47-401]

"The English parish was an important civil and ecclesiastical unit from about the time of the Conquest, and the 'parish chest'—an actual box used to contain the records—began to be an article of church furniture as early as the twelfth century. The main purpose of this book is to serve as a guide for research students of local history in the use of parish records, and to present some illustrations of their use." Christian Century

"Mr. Tate's book is doubtless a success for a scholar well grounded in the sequence of English history. The happy chaos in the time element may well leave the uninitiated in a chronological fog. For purposes of reference the work is excellent, giving a clear picture of the parish, its chests and the purposes of the several types of records. The many illuminating and interesting extracts enliven the account and provide amusing exempla for the student of English social history." J. C. Russell

Am Hist R 52:777 Jl '47 230w

Christian Century 64:18 Ja 1 '47 140w

"It would be difficult to find a better guide to the parish chest than Mr. Tate. For, while he is a historian who is fully able to appraise the general historical implications of the particular documents he unearthed, he also has an infectious love of the local, the personal, the anecdotal, for its own sake."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p560 N 16 '46
800w

TAVARES DE SA, HERNANE. Brazilians, people of tomorrow. 248p $3 Day 918.1 Brazil—Social life and customs

47-30684

A book about Brazil and its people which includes something of its past history, a great deal about present-day social and political conditions, and something also about its probable future.

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by J. F. Thorning
Cath World 166:185 N '47 300w

Reviewed by J. F. Rippey
Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ag 31 '47
650w

Christian Science Monitor p18 O 22
'47 300w

Reviewed by George Streater
Commonweal 46:576 S 26 '47 1850w

"Senhor Tavares De Sa offers a warm and convincing image of his country, and the abundant detail he sets down concerning custom and convention adds up to something more than a brilliant travelogue. Having read it, one feels that one has learned how Brazilians make their private and public decisions." Ralph Bates

+ Nation 165:479 N 1 '47 650w

"Mr. Tavares is an ideal interpreter of his people to ours. . . His book has a disarming informality: great and small things thrown together, gossip, anecdotes, bits of sociology, politics, history, ironical and satirical jests about Brazil and the United States, little incidents with large overtones, and thumbnail sketches of representative men. . . However, it should be said that Mr. Tavares's book has some of the deficiencies which are the reverse side of its virtues. The conversational ease and brevity prevent deepening at certain significant places. And the author has been so much the urban intellectual and world citizen that the masses, though seen with compassion, are seen from a distance." B. D. Wolfe

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 S
14 '47 1050w

"In the end 'The Brazilians' will be found to be not only an entertaining and astonishingly honest book but one that holds out great hope for the future of a land whose part in world history has hardly begun as yet." Samuel Putnam

+ N Y Times p5 S 7 '47 750w

New Yorker 23:66 Ag 30 '47 170w

Reviewed by Stephen Naft
Sat R of Lit 30:13 S 13 '47 700w

TAYLOR, ALFRED EDWARD. Christian hope of immortality. 112p $2 Macmillan

237 Immortality [38-12986]

"Author was Professor of Moral Philosophy at Edinburgh University. Here he considers the universal interest in life beyond death, the distortions and confusions brought into the popular ideas of immortality by hymns and the imagery of Revelations, the 'state of the lost,' and the idea of Hell." (Library J) Index.

"It is excellently written, avoiding the pitfalls into which writers on immortality so often fall, and is neither sentimental, harsh, nor vacuous. . . The book is well worth reading, and shows a wide knowledge." J. K. Shryock

+ Crozer Q 25:91 Ja '48 300w

Library J 72:1035 Jl '47 50w

"A brief, compact, realistic discussion of the immortality of our souls by one of the outstanding and most respected theologians of our time. . . Though scholarly, it is not written in technical terms."

+ Springfield Republican p10B N 30 '47
480w

TAYLOR, ALFRED EDWARD. Does God exist? 172p $2 Macmillan

231 God

47-1689

"The late Dr. Taylor was professor in Edinburgh University. . . In this book he does not try to demonstrate the existence of God, but aims to show that 'scientific' objections to theistic belief are unsound and that it is unbelief which is the unreasonable attitude." (Christian Century) Bibliography.

Christian Century 64:528 Ap 23 '47 70w

Reviewed by W. L. Caswell
Churchman 161:18 Jl '47 190w

TAYLOR, A. E.—Continued

"The late A. E. Taylor was one of Britain's most scholarly and most critical philosophers. An authority on Plato, a metaphysician, a moralist, and a philosopher of religion, he belonged in the great tradition. All of his utterances were well-considered, and Does God Exist? is no exception. . . . In fact, the chief defect of this well-written and logical book is the introduction of arguments for the virgin birth and the deity of Christ into a philosophical context. Nevertheless the book is well worth reading." E. S. Brightman

+ — Crozer Q 24:279 J1 '47 400w

"It is probable that no one, at least in this country, is better qualified to present the case for Christian theism than Professor Taylor. This little book may be accepted by our theological colleges as the standard handbook of apologetics for students who are preparing for the ministry. . . . The inquiring rationalist will not find the reasoning in the last chapters of Professor Taylor's book so cogent as in the earlier part. But he may justly think that in a treatise devoted to the arguments for and against theism a discussion of historical dogmas is strictly irrelevant, and if he still remains unconvinced of the factual occurrence of certain miracles, he may none the less have been taught by this book to take a sounder view of the crude philosophies which were built upon the natural sciences in the nineteenth century." W. R. Inge

+ Hibbert J 44:177 Ja '46 1650w

Manchester Guardian p3 N 30 '45 240w

Reviewed by Sidney Dark

New Statesman & Nation 31:31 Ja 12 '46 500w

"Only a few days separated the publication of the book I have reviewed and the death of its author. There could hardly be a better memorial or one more characteristic in brief compass of this learned and acute philosopher." J. K. Mozley

+ Spec 175:574 D 14 '45 750w

"Dr. Taylor's last book recalls, both in its lucidity and its relevance, memories of many former contributions to the philosophy of religion. . . . Professor Taylor's last volume, slender by comparison with his major works, exhibits a first-class mind, enriched by the experience of a lifetime of reflection on august and moving themes, deploying its arguments with dialectical force and literary charm."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p46 Ja 26 '46 900w

TAYLOR, EDMOND. Richer by Asia. 432p $3.75 Houghton

915.4 India—Civilization 47-4891

The author of The Strategy of Terror (Book Review Digest 1940) later served as director of all OSS activities in the Southwest Asia command. This book "is the story of how he achieved for the first time an awareness of Indians, Chinese, Siamese and Japanese as men; and how, once having got beyond the arbitrary categorical classification of Asiatics as impassive and inscrutable 'Orientals,' he was able to find in their values elements which the Western world, seeking one world, must assimilate, first into its consciousness, and finally into the new order now so earnestly sought by men of good will everywhere." (San Francisco Chronicle)

Booklist 44:14 S 1 '47

Reviewed by D. G. Bennett

Cath World 166:373 Ja '48 450w

"Edmond Taylor has written a book of enormous originality and suggestiveness. Nowhere, from the beginning to the end of the book, is there a stale idea or a trite emotion. Although the style is clear and lucid, you will read it slowly, because you will often want to pause to let another new idea sink in. And as soon as you finish the book you will want to turn to the beginning and start again. It's that kind of a book." S. I. Hayakawa

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p1 J1 27 '47 1350w

"The book is full of sharp illuminations, constructive exercises in humility for a Western world that has produced an atomic bomb without knowing what to do with it. Yet Mr. Taylor doesn't romanticize; he doesn't throw away his Western heritage because it looks different in the East. . . . It is too bad that many of the people who would profit most from this book will be discouraged by its curious, wittily ornate and involved style. More is lost than gained by the use of psychiatric terms to express commonsense concepts. The author's religious naïveté betrays him into some slips, as when he refers to Christian Science as similar in mood to the pantheist attitude of Hinduism." Robert Peel

+ — Christian Science Monitor p16 Ag 2 '47 550w

"The book has been considered evidence of a tolerant and understanding mind. A well-known anthropologist describes it as 'a heartening and important book.'" Edward Littlejohn

+ Commonweal 46:603 O 3 '47 950w

"There is a fund of information in the book, much psychological analysis and some philosophical conclusions on man and his troubles."

+ Current Hist 13:165 S '47 70w

"A book that may well grow in significance as the message the author attempts to convey permeates a world now steeped in the delusions he deplures."

+ Kirkus 15:250 My 1 '47 170w

"Mr. Taylor has remarkable skill in investigating individual and public sentiment through conversation and interview, and he has obviously supplemented this by considerable reading and reflection. His book may therefore help other thoughtful men who cannot duplicate his experiences to obtain some measure of the rich education which he has so conscientiously recorded." W. N. Brown

+ Nation 165:452 O 25 '47 430w

"In this volume, Taylor has woven together what are essentially two different books. One is a rambling compound of philosophy, introspection and fantasy. The other, and vastly superior book, is the narrative that reports his movement, his work and his visual observation. The narrative portion of the book is written with graceful, fluent ease." T. H. White

+ — New Repub 117:28 S 8 '47 1100w

"The Pulitzer Prize committee should read 'Richer by Asia' carefully." Owen Lattimore

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 J1 13 '47 1350w

"This is a fine book, particularly shaped to the modern mind—that is, to the mind that is weary of generalization and yet seeks for general answers, the mind that is almost despairing and yet just too honest to accept any cheap nostrums for despair. . . . His book is no pontifical preaching, no treatise on great systems of contrasting values. It is, instead, an intimate, exciting, sensitive work-a-day tale of an adventurous mind." Margaret Mead

+ N Y Times p3 J1 13 '47 900w

"Here the author tells how his experiences among the Orientals have helped him in his efforts to understand just what it means to be a member of the human race. Unfortunately, the book is often marked by this kind of pretentiousness. Mr. Taylor is dazzled by the jargon of psychiatry—he really lets go in a section called 'The Pathology of Imperialism' and in his exposition of his theory of 'institutional delusion'—but his open-mindedness, his honesty, and his perceptive writing about Eastern religion and philosophy command respect."

+ — New Yorker 23:70 J1 19 '47 160w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p16 J1 20 '47 1450w

"This is a heartening and important book. . . . 'Richer by Asia' is a rewarding record of how one intelligent American learned to respect the values of another people, and, equipped with this new insight, to turn and reexamine his Western heritage. There is much in the book about the Eastern view of life, and fine vignettes of India. At another level it is a book for every thoughtful person who is interested in what is necessary if we are to achieve One World." Ruth Benedict

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 J1 26 '47 1050w
Social Studies 38:379 D '47 30w

"Taylor's incidental anecdotes, sketches of military and political leaders, descriptions of Indian scenes and atmospheres give a concrete context to his meditations—which tend to run on at times. His book is loosely stitched together, but it has a generous, large and lucid air, living up to its title."
+ — Time 50:104 Ag 11 '47 440w
Wis Lib Bul 43:140 O '47

TAYLOR, MRS ELIZABETH. Palladian. 240p
$2.50 Knopf

47-1073

Cassandra, a bookish young English woman, goes as governess to a motherless little girl living with her father and a trying group of relatives in a fast decaying country house. The novel, with its slightly Gothic trend, describes the reactions of the various members of the family to each other, and to young Cassandra.

"With the utmost elegance Elizabeth Taylor carries [her] people into a plot of sly horror, a plot that would be sensational if told straight, but Mrs. Taylor tells it with hints and allusions. All her people, except the child, are done with subtle understanding, but the child has no reality at all. She is so vague that she is merely a part of the plot rather than a person. To some extent this is because the author is so determined to write in the modern manner—which is fine as a means but not so good when it's a rigid end in itself. . . Mrs. Taylor, though talented, is no Virginia Woolf. Her story, fine as it is, gives an impression of being slightly muffled and her people seem always peering out at you through a veil." Helen Woodward
Chicago Sun Book Week p10 F 23 '47 360w

Christian Science Monitor p14 Ap 28 '47 150w

"Elizabeth Taylor's second novel, 'Palladian,' is written in what might be called the English manor-house convention. . . But the admission of a convention is no automatic dispensation for a whole family of clichés hiding under its skirts. A good number of Miss Taylor's characterizations (The Drinker, the buxom hostess at the village pub, the somewhat drugged sweetness of the governess herself) are unworthy of the freshness which we find in her language." Henry Rago

Commonweal 45:569 Mr 21 '47 230w

"A story that might have been a sort of modern Jane Eyre but which Miss Taylor has kept in clean-cut, sensitive perspective. For an appreciative, though possibly not a wide audience."

+ Kirkus 15:7 Ja 1 '47 240w

"The writing is sensitive, exquisite—in fact, startlingly good. The book is subtle rather than thrilling, but those who enjoy the skillful use of words will like it very much. Recommended." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:224 F 1 '47 70w

Reviewed by H. I.A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 S 27 '46 80w

"In the end, Miss Taylor does not reassure. Unpleasant consequences are likely to ensue upon this marriage. A rain-washed countryside, a handful of local bad types, Arthur Marshall sketches of schoolmistresses, mock, gibber and grimace when the book is closed. I did not read Miss Taylor's previous novel, At Mrs. Lippincote's. Palladian is a book which, despite traces of eclecticism, has a disquieting flavour of its own. There is a pure and exact gift here." Rayner Heppenstall

+ — New Statesman & Nation 32:343 N 9 '46 120w

"Here, as in 'At Mrs. Lippincote's' we enjoy a fresh talent, a keen ear, a sensitive spirit. There are brief passages of rare beauty. . . But Mrs. Taylor's studied lack of emotion leads neither to hope nor despair. The almost deceitful simplicity of composition cannot compensate for the weakness of motivation. The reader, always conscious of the author's literary gift, will hopefully await its more mature unfolding." J. W. Chase

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 F 16 '47 600w

"Mrs. Taylor pursues her story so quietly and deftly that the reader is scarcely aware of the hard craftsmanship which has gone into it. The characters, drawn generally with unobtrusive care, move upon the scene so casually that they seem to have been introduced already when we first meet them. . . 'Palladian' is not a story to stab the emotions cumulatively, or to pull the reader relentlessly into the tides of its experience. It is without pretension, it is quiet and effective within the conscious limits of its scope. It is a good book, written with care and distinction, a Victorian period-piece which at times steps tantalizingly beyond the aura of the period." John Woodburn

+ N Y Times p18 Mr 30 '47 460w

"Everybody in the book, except a rather terrifying old nurse, is elaborately unreal, but the author has so exactly written the novel she obviously set out to write that you cannot possibly dismiss it as a failure. Why Mrs. Taylor did it, considering her extraordinary aptitude for characterization, and whether—witty and skillful as it is—it was worth doing are a couple of other questions."

+ — New Yorker 22:94 F 8 '47 270w

"A curious, witty, melancholy book which I have seen sharply dismissed elsewhere as 'about a lot of idle, useless people.' . . But on the whole, this reader thought that life went forward at the Vanbrugh's more or less as it does. But the atmosphere Miss Taylor conveys, of the dragging pace of nature for instance, or of the long-drawn sadness of any one unimportant day, this combined with the intelligent, pause-making idiom of her thought and her dialogue may well set up in the brisk the feeling that they are being fooled. The non-back-slapping kind of reader, however, should like Palladian and keep his eye on its author—forgiving her in this one instance the disappointing concession, disappointingly executed, of her happy ending." Kate O'Brien

Spec 177:374 O 11 '46 270w

"Miss Taylor's second novel confirms the evidence of her first, 'At Mrs. Lippincote's,' that she is a writer of many gifts and much promise. Her theme is not a new one, but it is very well handled. . . Clearly there is here the material for a long and tortuous novel of the 'Gothic' kind, but the author's inclination is happily towards something less formidable. Indeed, it is a question whether with such a setting and such characters the novel is not a little too deliberately un-Gothic. The griefs and horrors seem to be deliberately played down, and the mood is often one of cool and neatly satiric humour."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p477 O 5 '46 480w

TAYLOR, MRS ELIZABETH. A view of the harbour. 340p $3 Knopf

47-11276

Portrays the everyday life of an English seaside resort by chronicling the lives of several of its inhabitants, as seen by a visitor.

Booklist 44:110 N 15 '47

"A story of considerable charm and subtlety, proceeding with insight rather than interplay of incident, with delicacy and discernment."

+ Kirkus 15:512 S 15 '47 160w

"Miss Elizabeth Taylor is also a clever and original writer. . . Like the retired commander, who plays the central rôle in the story, she insinuates herself into people's lives and troubles. She lays them bare but with the artist's eye, not the analyst's scalpel, and with the poet's evocative touch. She is at once within the stream of life and viewing it with sharp awareness from without." H. I.A. Fausset

+ Manchester Guardian p3 S 5 '47 120w

Reviewed by Diana Trilling

Nation 165:533 N 15 '47 180w

TAYLOR, ELIZABETH—Continued

"It is a gentle and continuous dance in very slow motion, very agreeable to observe, without being the least dramatic. Only the nimble fingers of the author manipulate the little figures with skill, a kind of remote tenderness, which makes of the whole something elusively meaningful and wistfully bright." Iris Barry
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
Ja 4 '48 550w

"'A View of the Harbour' has the same virtues as its predecessors, and in undiminished measure; but, though it is more closely plotted, it still has the same defects. In fact, although the interest of this story is fully as well sustained, it is a little harder to define what holds it up." Donald Barr

+ N Y Times p23 N 23 '47 700w

"Not only a subtly observant study but a highly original narrative. If you needed any further proof of Mrs. Taylor's genuinely fresh and enchanting talent, this book should furnish it."

+ New Yorker 23:132 O 25 '47 120w

"'A View of the Harbour' ought to establish Elizabeth Taylor. This novel shows results of good hard work; it has been chipped away and polished until it glitters with notable brilliance." E. L. McKittrick

+ Sat R of Lit 30:13 N 8 '47 850w

Reviewed by D. S. Savage

Spec 179:380 S 19 '47 30w

"Perceptive, ironic, accomplished, Miss Taylor has now established herself as one of the most interesting of contemporary novelists."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p461 S 13 '47 850w

TAYLOR, FRANK JOHN, and WRIGHT, LAWTON. Democracy's air arsenal. 208p il $7.50 Duell

629.134 U.S. Aircraft war production council. Airplane industry and trade. World war, 1939-1945—U.S. 47-5018

"Record of the miracle of U. S. warplane production by the seven companies forming the Aircraft War Production Council—Boeing, Consolidated-Vultee, Douglas, Lockheed, North American, Northrop and Ryan, Pictures, and briefly describes the various types of planes, then illuminates the whole process of production and its problems—design, tooling, ironing out bugs, 'manpower, womanpower, boypower' and financing. Special photographs with competent text held together by Duell, Sloan and Pearce's particular facility in spinning a picture story. Recommended as an important contribution to the history of the war, of aviation, of the development of American 'know-how.'" (Library J) Index.

Kirkus 15:324 Je 15 '47 130w

"Anyone who spent time in an airplane factory during the war will find again the sounds, smells and excitements of that place in this book." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:1032 Jl '47 140w

"It is an interesting historical record of production and industrial cooperation. It is a pity so many pages are devoted to patting ourselves on the back."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 16 '47 140w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 190w

TAYLOR, GEORGE COFFIN, ed. See Shakespeare, W. EssaysTAYLOR, MARGARET. Jasper, the drummin' boy [il. by the author]. 63p $1.50 Viking

47-30242

Jasper was a born drummer; he could drum on anything from a fence to a church pew, but he was always in trouble with the neighbors. His mother tried to curb his drumming, but it did not work. Then a great band leader approved of Jasper and that solved the problem.

Booklist 43:276 My 1 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 My 11 '47 60w

"A sparkling little story about sure enough people—with loads of line drawings throughout, drawings which show colored people and white impartially."

+ Kirkus 15:67 F 1 '47 90w

"A book about Negroes which will please everyone, especially fourth and fifth graders. Board binding will not wear well." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:644 Ap 15 '47 60w

"It is a funny, touching, tender-hearted little story, and the pictures have the same endearing qualities." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8
Ap 13 '47 320w

"This is the friendly and appealing story, for 7 to 11 year olds, of a South Side youngster in Chicago. It is the work of a brand new writer, but one who definitely has the touch." Arna Bontemps

+ N Y Times p41 My 4 '47 250w

TAYLOR, MARY CATHERINE, ed. Rounds and rounds; [with decorations by Richard Erdoes; music designed by Joseph Zizza]. 144p $3 Sloane

784.1 Choral music

Collection of words and music of over a hundred rounds, dating back to the days of "Sumer Is Icumen In." They are arranged in order of difficulty, with simple ones coming first. There is a brief historical introduction. Illustrated with amusing drawings.

Booklist 43:251 Ap 15 '47

"This is fun—and a beguiling looking book. . . Miss Taylor has an infectious enthusiasm that makes one want to get a group together right away and try out the hundred and more rounds included in this collection."

+ Kirkus 14:533 O 15 '46 120w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 F
2 '47 400w

"Mrs. Taylor has done something about making singing easier, livelier, and more pleasant for the amateur singer. In selecting the rounds for this collection, Mrs. Taylor has very wisely adhered to the sub-title of the book jacket, 'rounds that are fun to sing.' She has chosen those that are not too difficult for amateurs. She has transposed and transcribed the music of most of the rounds to make it easier to sing, and yet has not destroyed its original charm or character. She has carefully marked the points in the songs at which the different voices enter. And she has arranged the rounds in an order that progresses from the most simple to the more difficult." Spencer Barefoot

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 Ja 1 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:94 Je '47

TAYLOR, PHOEBE ATWOOD (ALICE TILTON, pseud). The iron clew. 238p $2.50 Farrar, Straus 47-23767

Detective story.

+ Kirkus 15:228 Ap 15 '47 70w

"This is fun, properly so called, with a slick puzzle and everything else you need for what ails you." Will Cuppy

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p14
Je 22 '47 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p25 Je 22 '47 150w

"You couldn't ask for a finer merry-go-round to get dizzy on." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Je 22 '47 100w

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 5 '47 40w

TAYLOR, ROBERT LEWIS. Adrift in a boneyard. 255p $2.50 Doubleday 47-30281

The amusing adventures of six people who survived the catastrophe of 1950, which wiped out the human race except for the six.

Booklist 43:291 My 15 '47

"Some feeling parodies on current thinking, literature, and moments of contemporary madness have an astringent freshness. Escape while you may theme—slight, with bite, (Lacks the integration of Mr. Adam, but cuts below the surface. For that market)."

Kirkus 15:110 F 15 '47 180w

"Really a take-off on modern social life and customs which does not always come off, though sometimes the satire and the parodies of modern literature hit the spot. Will amuse some readers and bore others. Not essential." G. W. Hill

Library J 72:639 Ap 15 '47 130w

"'Adrift in a Boneyard' has an ingenious plot, and the story moves along briskly, but it is a pretty tedious business just the same. Fortunately, we know Mr. Taylor can do a lot better." Spencer Klaw

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p27 My 11 '47 430w

"It is all written in a crisp, clean prose exactly suited to the occasion."

+ New Yorker 23:94 Ap 26 '47 180w

TAYLOR, ROBERT OSWALD PATRICK. Groundwork of the Gospels; with some collected papers. 151p $2.25 Salloch

226 Bible. New Testament—Gospels A47-27

"[An] attempt to establish the trustworthiness of the gospel records by consideration of the methods of instruction used in the early church before the Gospel was committed to writing. The claim is that the written Gospels are reliable because so far from being shaped in the course of time by missionary needs, by controversy and the growth of legend, they are exact records of teaching given by or under the direction of the apostles. The problem of the differences between the Synoptic Gospels is met by reducing the number of them, and by their reference to the slightly different traditions of the main Christian centers. Mr. Taylor holds the view that not only the apostles but our Lord himself spoke in Greek, and that it is therefore highly probable that in the Gospels we have some of his sayings exactly as spoken." Churchman

"Mr. Taylor proves, to this reader's satisfaction, that tradition in an oral-minded day, when written accounts were looked upon with suspicion, was not the hit-or-miss thing we now think of, but reliable and accurate, where not a word could be changed. The facts of Jesus' life, the words of his teaching, were, therefore, both handed down and finally recorded with exactness." M. J. T.

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 O 4 '47 360w

"Interesting book." F. J. Moore

+ Churchman 161:17 D 1 '47 180w

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ja 9 '47 240w

TAYLOR, MRS ROSEMARY (DRACHMAN). Bar Nothing ranch; il. by Bernard Thompson. (Whittlesey house publication) 239p $2.75 McGraw

47-11686

Noelke who had been in musical comedy had hard sledding when she married a rancher. But it did not stump her. The paying guests who came to their Arizona ranch were supposed to help with the work, and some of the results were disastrous but funny.

Booklist 44:131 D 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p22 N '47

Kirkus 15:457 Ag 15 '47 170w

"Here is a warm, human story, and the author of 'Chicken Every Sunday' has given it just the right touch."

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 N 30 '47 140w

"Perhaps it is a little indecorous to violate the legendary code of the snake, and to strike without warning, but the '76 Cattle and Dude Ranch' is not another Mother's boarding house." Lewis Robbins

N Y Times p51 N 16 '47 400w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 30 '47 120w

TAZEWEEL, CHARLES. Small one; a story for those who like Christmas and small donkeys; il. by Franklin Whitman. 32p $1 Winston Story within a story in which a priest tells a little Mexican boy the story of the donkey which carried Mary to Bethlehem on the first Christmas.

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

Kirkus 15:648 D 1 '47 50w

"A very pleasing story. . . Good for storytelling." E. J. Anttonen

+ Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 60w

TEAGUE, WALTER DORWIN. Land of plenty; a summary of possibilities. 319p $3 Harcourt 309.173 U.S.—Social conditions. U.S.—Economic policy 47-30205

"One of America's leading industrial designers charts 'the brave new world' that lies within our reach if we make full use of our technological resources within the framework of free enterprise and political freedom. Describes the sources of power available to us, the alloys and synthetics, our enlarged freedom and increased speed of motion and our improved living-standard potential in terms of housing, health, community planning. Final chapters consider ways in which we can achieve the proper mental attitudes and the political and economic climate in which to tap human spirit and energy to use these resources to a common end." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by Joseph Mayer

Ann Am Acad 252:149 J1 '47 800w

Booklist 43:236 Ap 1 '47

"The author of this book is an eminent designer. And, after the manner of designers, he has sketched out a brilliant pattern without closing the loops or filling in the details. We go along with him on What We Want, but cannot quite follow him on How We Are Going to Get It." H. J. Owens

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 30 '47 300w

Reviewed by W. E. Garrison

Christian Century 64:367 Mr 19 '47 1250w

"He is against totalitarianism, is for free enterprise, and believes in a limited, though just, state, strong in certain realms. He does not advocate unrestrained freedom of the strong in relation to the weak. He recommends a definite plan—Keuls-Kenyon—for co-operation between labor and capital. It consists largely of profit sharing. This part of the book is inadequate, because morality and religion are too meagerly treated, but the book is a splendid picture of the good world we could make now." R. H. M.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 24 '47 600w

Reviewed by Philip Burnham

Commonweal 46:42 Ap 25 '47 1050w

Kirkus 15:156 Mr 1 '47 120w

"Provocative in content and style, optimistic in tone; a needed book—a book to promote." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:386 Mr 1 '47 140w

Management R 36:301 My '47 140w

"Mr. Teague's own medium is three-dimensional reality itself. Much that remains memorable of the New York World's Fair, from great buildings to tiny models, was his creation. Short of that, he is an artist in quick ideas sketched with crayon or in color. The best parts of his book are visions of new things to come, but they suffer from the restrictions of the printed word. One longs for the artistic Teague touch, the exciting 'rendition' in place of these too-pedestrian words and time-worn phrases. He is stimulating in his proposals." Gerald Wendt

TEAGUE, W. D.—Continued

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p16
Ap 6 '47 500w

Reviewed by R. L. Duffus
N Y Times p7 Ap 13 '47 1200w

"This is a strongly optimistic book. And we need a solid dose or two of optimism. Mr. Teague is an affirmative thinker and believer, and he believes the country is too, once it is aroused. As a blueprint of what tomorrow can be if only we'll make it so, 'Land of Plenty' is the kind of summary of possibilities that every American would do well to read." J. H. Jackson

San Francisco Chronicle p14 Mr 12 '47
800w

U S Quarterly Bk1 3:186 Je '47 260w
Wis Lib Bul 43:78 My '47

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. American dynasty [the story of the McCormicks, Medills and Pattersons]. 363p $3 Doubleday

071 Newspapers. Medill, Joseph. Patterson, Joseph Medill. McCormick, Robert Rutherford 47-30087

"With the press a major agency of communication and medium for the development of public opinion, any account of the growth of a strong newspaper combination is of interest. This study of the McCormicks, Medills and Pattersons and the steady expansion of their press domain is a fascinating history of strong individuals, conditioned by the power of wealth and inherited tradition. At all times a subject of controversy, this combination is a factor to be reckoned with in any serious consideration of the American scene." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 43:180 F 15 '47

"In choosing as his theme the history and influence of the provocative McCormick-Patterson press, John Tebbel carved out for himself a difficult task, but one which he has accomplished with commendable skill and objectivity. . . . Not to be overlooked is the concluding section in which the problem of freedom of the press is freshly examined and a challenge sounded to American journalism to end its own abuses before it is too late." B. L. Pierce

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p12 F 9 '47
500w

Kirkus 14:584 N 15 '46 210w

"The author has presented a comprehensive picture in a vigorous and not necessarily unbiased style. For all libraries." M. C. Manley
+ Library J 72:76 Ja 1 '47 110w

Reviewed by McAlister Coleman
Nation 164:634 My 24 '47 450w

"This is a first-rate book on the McCormicks and Pattersons. Tebbel writes temperately, factually and responsibly, yet has the courage to draw the damning conclusion justified by the facts—namely, that McCormick is just about everything his enemies say he is." Robert Lasch

+ New Repub 116:39 F 10 '47 650w

"Mr. Tebbel writes a straightforward prose; he sneers a bit, but he obviously tries to be fair, and at times he is almost gallant in placing a merciful screen against various skeletons in the closet. Like it or not, the McCormicks and the Pattersons and all their multifarious relations, in-laws, must admit that they have not got off badly. Mr. Tebbel, who is clearly something of a prosecutor, nevertheless presents a vast amount of evidence which can be interpreted—depending upon how one looks at such things—as definitely friendly. . . . Serious problems, these, and perhaps insoluble. Mr.

Tebbel threshes around in the quagmire and gets nowhere in particular." Stanley Walker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12
F 9 '47 1050w

"'An American Dynasty' is a highly readable story and a revealing appraisal of the development, progress, public contributions and personal eccentricities of a fascinating and controversial family. . . . Mr. Tebbel's book is jam-packed with interesting detail of family history. It is threaded through with analysis in an attempt to give the story meaning. . . . But it is also rational, if one accepts evidence which Mr. Tebbel marshaled largely from the record the family made in its own publications, and if you accept too, the thesis of heredity which runs through the tale." Turner Catledge
+ N Y Times p7 F 23 '47 950w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ja 12 '47
370w

"A good many Americans, most of them indignantly critical of the McCormick-Patterson newspapers of Chicago, New York, and Washington, have been eager for such a source book on the McCormick-Patterson record as this one. They now have a book which seems at the same time strongly critical and determinedly honest. But they have more than that. Mr. Tebbel not only documents the defects and the virtues of Joseph Medill's journalistic descendants. Also, in them, I think, he has traced the development in America of the peculiar and powerful press lords who keep the irascible and irresponsible, selfrighteous individualism of the old-time editor in a time of multiplied and monopolized power." Jonathan Daniels

+ Sat R of Lit 30:15 F 22 '47 1050w

Wis Lib Bul 43:93 Je '47

TEBBEL, JOHN WILLIAM. The Marshall Fields; a study in wealth. 320p $3.75 Dutton

923.373 Field family 47-11012

"Marshall Field I rose from farm boy to multi-millionaire in the era of the great American fortunes. His grandson, Marshall III, inherited the bulk of the money at a time when 'the uses of wealth itself were the basis of a worldwide ideological struggle.' In this joint biography of the two men, Tebbel tries to relate each to the age in which he lived and to show, through the Fields and their actions, a changing America." (New Repub) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:67 O 15 '47

Christian Science Monitor p16 N 14
'47 480w

Kirkus 15:420 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Good reading." R. W. Henderson
Library J 72:1373 O 1 '47 100w

"As a study in wealth, the book cannot stand comparison with Dreiser's fictionalization of Yerkes in 'The Financier' and 'The Titan,' or with the story of the founder of another Chicago department store in Lester Cohen's 'Sweepings.' It is, however, a good straightforward account of the careers of two wealthy men." C. E. Noyes

Nation 165:536 N 15 '47 650w

"The book is an interesting study of a remarkable American family and of the growth of such enterprises as the Marshall Field store, F&M and the Chicago Sun."

+ New Repub 117:28 N 10 '47 140w

"This book falls short of being a complete and balanced appraisal of the Field family. The author's sympathies are clear to the reader. Too much essential material is missing for a really penetrating study of the Field dynasty. Nevertheless, it is an interesting picture and throws much light on the motivations of that twentieth-century wonder, Marshall Field III." Bruce Rae

+ N Y Times p10 N 9 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Ruth Teiser

San Francisco Chronicle p2 N 30 '47
420w

"Interesting and well-written book." Roger Butterfield

Sat R of Lit 30:14 N 29 '47 1050w

TEETERS, NEGLEY KING. Penology from Panama to Cape Horn. 269p il $3.50 Univ. of Pa. press

365 Prisons—South America 47-1293

Study of the problem of Latin American penology. The work is based on a trip the author took to Panama and seven South American nations in 1944. "With only four months available to survey the penal systems of eight scattered countries, the mere physical task of traveling over such a vast area proved a formidable problem in itself. . . . Undeterred by these and other very real difficulties, the writer undertakes in a preliminary chapter some general observations on Latin American penal practices, followed in successive chapters by a more detailed exposition of the penal systems of Panama, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, and Brazil. . . . A list of journals of penology published in South America is included, and an index of subjects and persons is appended." Am Pol Sci R

Reviewed by F. R. Aumann
Am Pol Sci R 41:382 Ap '47 550w

Reviewed by Garrett Heyns
Am Soc R 12:364 Je '47 650w

"This is the only firsthand survey of the penal systems of South America which has been made. It is on somewhat the same plane as the author's World Penal Systems. It will be useful to students of penology and interesting to general readers." E. H. Sutherland
Ann Am Acad 251:207 My '47 240w

"This little book does much to fill a big gap. It is one of those contributions that will advance more study and mutuality between North and South America." L. M. Brooks
+ Social Forces 25:463 My '47 800w

"Any student of South American life will find the book profitable reading, since crime control is, after all, one of the important elements in the culture of any people."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:187 Je '47 280w

TEILHET, DARWIN (CYRUS FISHER, pseud). Something wonderful to happen; a charivari. 275p $2.75 Appleton-Century

47-11031

A gay story of a California newspaperman who gets mixed up with a real estate dealer. His life is complicated by many things, from a handy man who believed in single tax to twin sons who were too devoted to horses. Chief among his worries is the fact that he never had had time to marry his Sally, who had lived with him as his wife since college days. In the end even that straightened itself out.

Kirkus 15:443 Ag 15 '47 170w

"The situations are amusing, the pace is brisk and the writing is excellent." Lisle Bell
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 N 23 '47 110w

"It is clear that Mr. Teilhet is a practiced novelist. . . . There is a competence in the handling of scenes, a familiarity with fictional patterns, that come only with application and considerable repetition. It is really something to ponder, though, whether anyone—and especially an overpracticed writer—might not have too much of California, family life, and novel writing." B. V. Winebaum
N Y Times p26 O 19 '47 450w

"A gay, often very sharp and incisive portrait of a young American." J. H. Jackson
+ San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 17 '47 750w

"The Higgs family is a very real find in fiction." S. M. N.
+ Springfield Republican p12B O 19 '47 180w

TEILHET, MRS. HILDEGARDE (TOLMAN). Terrified society. 374p $3 Doubleday

47-5254

A novel of adventure, of chase and escape, laid in the American South and in the Central American countries of Guatemala and Salvador. The chief character is an American war veteran who, as front man in a Fascist organization, gets himself into serious trouble with the government as well as with private enemies.

Booklist 44:51 O 1 '47

Reviewed by James Sandoe
Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 17 '47 140w

Cleveland Open Shelf p16 Jl '47

"A novel of the breathe-down-your-neck school, which uncovers the practices of professional deception, the irritants of anti-social life, the dangers of persecution and flight, which is exceptional in its complete Central American background, its pick of characters."

Kirkus 15:264 My 15 '47 210w

"Worth reading." J. E. Cross
+ Library J 72:1034 Jl '47 100w

"Exciting enough, with a viable plot and personae more or less representing points of view, this is for readers who like a criminous mood, with secrets, and can take social significance in their stride. Billed as 'a novel of pursuit,' also as a 'psychological thriller.' Mrs. Teilhet's most ambitious work." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p13 Jl 27 '47 180w

"Throughout the first third of the novel our pulse steadily quickens. . . . Up to this point the story has proceeded with swift pace, vivid incident, sharp characterization. . . . The setting in Guatemala and Salvador holds promise, but soon we become enmeshed in a veritable Cook's tour of the countries involved. The chief characters . . . lose their sharp focus. A plot of secondary import . . . is crudely superimposed on the original. And toward the conclusion we are further bewildered by the introduction of a sophomoric discussion of anti-semitism." J. W. C.

— + N Y Times p25 Jl 27 '47 450w

"The job is uneven, and the story would be far more alarming if it weren't quite so long."

— + New Yorker 23:67 Jl 26 '47 100w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher
San Francisco Chronicle p19 Ag 17 '47 100w

TEMPLEWOOD, SAMUEL JOHN GURNEY HOARE, 1st viscount. Complacent dictator [Eng title: Ambassador on special mission]. 318p $3.50 Knopf

327.42 Great Britain—Foreign relations—Spain, Spain—Foreign relations—Great Britain. World war, 1939-1945—Spain 47-405

The dictator is Francisco Franco, and this study of his complacency in the face of his country's ruin is written by the British ambassador to Spain during the war years, from 1940 to 1944. The author's account of his own struggle to keep the Franco régime from openly joining the Axis, runs side by side with his account of Franco. Index.

"Sir Samuel Hoare's account of his wartime mission in Spain provides an intensely interesting and even fascinating piece of reading, and a rather rich, if partial, education concerning the Spanish nation, while not adding greatly to our knowledge of international questions during the period covered (1940-1944). Incidentally there is provided a surprising amount of thought on general human cultural and intellectual problems. The tone or flavor of the book is not always the most pleasing. There is a certain amount of spiritual pretentiousness or sententiousness which arouses mistrust. Coupled with deep sincerity and strong devotion to certain principles—in the main the moral qualities of the genuine Englishman—is found a certain amount of personal posing which even affects the style of the narrative. The reader yearns for more genuine simplicity and relaxed candor." P. B. Potter

— + Am Hist R 52:737 Jl '47 400w

"There is much that is quotable and many anecdotes of lively interest in this book. Throughout, the author understood the situation, summed it up justly, and acted wisely to promote his country's cause. It is, however, in his opinions of Franco and Franco's policies that Sir Samuel's judgment seems to have been affected by his natural antipathies. . . . The proofreading of this volume is not up to Knopf's usual standard. Sir Samuel is made to deliver a speech in 1936 which he obviously delivered in 1940. . . . But these are tiny faults in a volume of great interest and vigor." A. W.

TEMPLEWOOD, S. J. G. H.—Continued

+ Atlantic 179:132 Mr '47 1100w

Booklist 43:181 F 15 '47

Reviewed by W. H. Chamberlin
Cath World 165:85 Ap '47 700w

Reviewed by J. W. Rogers
Chicago Sun Book Week p1 Ja 26 '47 1450w

"Sir Samuel Hoare's account is a documented and devastating excoriation of the Spanish dictator and his regime. It is a factual narrative, given to understatement, liberally documented with letters of state, and often candid. In the aggregate, it constitutes a measured but scathing denunciation of Falangism and its leaders." DeWitt John

Christian Science Monitor p14 F 3 '47 1650w

Cleveland Open Shelf p6 Mr '47

"The British ambassador is an extremely cultivated person. And in the course of his arduous mission he has many delightful travels, encounters and friendships to report. 'Complacent Dictator' combines pertinent information on political warfare with a wealth of charming personal reminiscence. It is not necessary to be interested in Franco to enjoy it." Edward Skillin

+ Commonweal 45:448 F 14 '47 900w

Current Hist 12:238 Mr '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 25:526 Ap '47 120w

"A first volume of memoirs, that tells with patience, charm, understanding and amazing clarity of the strategic special mission to Spain as British Ambassador. . . . We look forward to its sequel with joy."

+ Kirkus 14:816 D 1 '46 250w

"Interesting and important documented record of the British policy in Spain. Recommended for all libraries." Anne Whitmore

+ Library J 72:158 Ja 15 '47 100w

Reviewed by T. J. Hamilton
Nation 164:250 Mr 1 '47 1350w

"Judged purely as a literary work, Complacent Dictator is a striking achievement. Its portraits of Franco, Serrano Suñer, Jordana, Belgbeder and other hierarchs of Spanish fascism are vivid and memorable, and the writing is lucid, dramatic and frequently biting. Then, too, there is something engaging about an ambassador who, in writing to his chief, can compare Serrano Suñer to a Stendhal character. The book's chief importance, though, is that, even through the eyes of such a witness, it proves how right were those who insisted that the cause of the Spanish Republic was the cause of world democracy." Richard Watts

+ New Repub 116:39 F 3 '47 1200w

Reviewed by B. D. Wolfe
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ja 26 '47 1550w

"In conclusion one must say of this book: first it is essential reading for anyone pretending to real interest in current Spanish problems; second, it is an able, if occasionally awkward, summation of a first-rate job of war-time diplomacy. One must sincerely hope that Lord Templewood will persevere with his fixed task of writing a series of volumes of his memoirs. Now that he has crossed the hump and set his initial thoughts down in book form, perhaps those important aspects of history wherein he is concerned will be described more easily by his occasionally hesitant pen." C. L. Sulzberger

+ N Y Times p1 F 2 '47 1900w

New Yorker 22:85 Ja 25 '47 140w

"When you finish the book, I believe you'll not only have gained a liberal education in expert diplomacy as that instrument can be played upon by a man trained and experienced in its use, but you will have discovered that Sir Samuel, a man capable of the long view was never by a wide margin the 'appeaser' so many thought him. You will also have a fine chance to note the difference between the diplomat who knows his job and the dilettante, such as Ribbentrop. . . . And, better, you will have gained a useful understanding of today's Spain and some of that country's own interior problems. For the complacent dictator is still at the helm there and there is no reason to think that his complacency is in any degree diminished." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 F 2 '47 1350w

"To anyone interested in contemporary Spanish history 'Complacent Dictator' is more than fascinating reading, it is indispensable. With its sister books 'Wartime Mission in Spain' and 'The Spanish Government and the Axis—Official German Documents' (published by the U.S. State Department) it fills out the Franco record. And while Hoare's somewhat disjointed memoirs of this period are not popular reading it would be well for more than students to remember, now that the victory is won, the main point of that record." Robert Okin

+ Sat R of Lit 30:11 Ja 25 '47 850w

"I think the excellence of this book must be put down to three things. First, it is well written. Then its author went to Spain to carry out a definite and by no means easy task. This gives him a story to tell—a story which is all the more enthralling because its ramifications extend far outside Spain into European haute politique. Thirdly, he has a sense for history. He found time to read a considerable number of books on the history of Spain and of the Napoleonic wars, and the comparisons he makes to the past are often illuminating." Gerald Brennan

+ Spec 177:120 Ag 2 '46 1550w

Time 49:100 Ja 27 '47 600w

Reviewed by H. R. Rudin

Yale R n s 37:172 autumn '47 550w

TENENBAUM, SAMUEL. Why men hate.
368p $3.50 Beechhurst press

301.15173 Hate. Race problems 47-1166

Presents the scientific theories which underlie the study of bigotry, in forty-five short essays on the elements of prejudice: color, race, scapegoating, bigotry, cultural regimentation, the standard canards, etc. The closing section is devoted to solutions: education, legislation, health, housing, and "action-research." Bibliography. Index.

"It would appear from this badly organized volume that everybody hates everybody else, always has, and always will. Innumerable volumes have been examined and pertinent excerpts have been abstracted from historical and contemporary sources, leaving this reviewer with the feeling that if hating different human beings is anathema, the sooner this existence is done with the sooner mankind can go on hating on a higher and more permanent plane." J. P. Shaloo

Ann Am Acad 254:215 N '47 440w

Booklist 43:304 Je 1 '47

Foreign Affairs 26:222 O '47 20w

"Throughout the book there is a conscious effort to be reasonable, objective, judicious—to let science give the answer rather than emotional whim. Notwithstanding the manifest sincerity of objective . . . [the book] suffers from a lack of organization." Leo Shapiro

+ N Y Times p28 F 16 '47 300w

School & Society 65:112 F 8 '47 20w

"In his attempts to point out the bases of group animosity Dr. Tenenbaum depends largely upon such familiar concepts as stereotypes, paranoid tendencies, scape-goats, and the bitternesses of economic competition. The treatment of these concepts follows conventional patterns and will contribute little or nothing to the social scientist's understanding of group antagonisms. . . . Another fault of Dr. Tenenbaum is his tendency to overstate his point. . . . In spite of the criticisms Why Men Hate is quite an interesting and readable book and may serve a very useful purpose in arousing the general public to a greater awareness of the handicaps and misfortunes of minority groups, provided the readers are not themselves antagonized by the author's own rather obvious anti-majority prejudice." H. C. Brearley

+ — Social Forces 26:228 D '47 550w
Springf'd Union p9 Mr 15 '47 240w
Wis Lib Bul 43:113 J1 '47

TEODORESCU, EUGENE C. Merry midwife. 395p $2.75 Houghton

47-1272

Moshica, stout, hearty, and at times gruff, had been midwife to two generations of the best families in a certain central European city. Now retired she spent her time visiting her "children," lapping up all the meals they offered her, and over-seeing her own small household and her tiny dog, Bijou. And then there is the lovely Nora, married to a no-good, who refused to release her so she could marry Captain Bogdan. The time is probably the early 1900's; the city, perhaps, Bucharest.

"A warm, sincere, sometimes delightful picture of another world and another era. What the author needed most—apparently did not find—was a restraining editorial hand to make his story more understandable to the average reader." Ben Kartman

Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Ag 3 '47 450w

"An omnium-gatherum of character and incident that makes little attempt at plot per se, that chronicles the behavior and response of the specialized civilization of a middle European group."

Kirkus 14:578 N 15 '46 160w

"'Merry Midwife' is an extravagantly rough and ready job, its ebullience tempered on occasion by some quietly serious ideas. The writing style is variable too: sometimes sparkling, sometimes pompously turgid, tossing about by the dozen words most of us have never seen in action outside the pages of the Unabridged. The humor also, though well sustained, varies greatly in pace and weight. Sometimes feather light, it is just as often about as ponderous as a beached whale. Yet 'Merry Midwife,' sporting gayly about in a world that is no more, definitely adds up to something that is fun." F. H. Bullock

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 24 '46 750w

"Sandwiched in between lunches, dinners and the plot are several chapters dedicated to the fine points of catching fish. None of them is boring; all are composed with a fine touch of old-fashioned irony. It makes for pleasant reading, even for those who, like this reviewer, are passionately averse to fishing. Toward the end of his story the author rushes into a climax in the best American tradition. . . I found myself wishing he had skipped the suspense and left his pastiche as it was—leisurely, Rumanian and relaxing." Richard Plant

+ — N Y Times p18 Mr 9 '47 900w

TEPLITZ, IRVING. Principles of textile converting. 180p $4; outside U S and Canada $5 Textile bk. pubs, inc, 303 5th av, N.Y. 16 677 Textile industry 47-3924

"Written in nontechnical language for practical converters and those who want to learn the trade. Covers organization of the textile industry, characteristics of the various fibers and yarns, construction of fabrics, converting procedures and problems, textile merchandizing, and the future of the textile industry." (Chem Eng) Index.

Chem Eng 54:268 J1 '47 50w

"Lack of detail in the treatment of some subjects may leave the impression that the author has written too little about too much. Some subject material may seem elementary to experienced converters, particularly that on fabric construction. Nevertheless, the author has succeeded in bringing together pertinent facts on a difficult subject and presenting them in such a manner as to give the layman a bird's-eye view of a textile field about which little heretofore has been written." G. S. Wham

+ — J Home Econ 39:594 N '47 200w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1040 J1 '47 70w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:39 Ap '47

TERHUNE, ALFRED MCKINLEY. Life of Edward FitzGerald. 373p $5 Yale univ. press

B or 92 FitzGerald, Edward 47-2922

A biography of the translator of the Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám. FitzGerald who was a lifelong friend of Thackeray and Tennyson, and knew many others of the Victorians, was an eccentric, witty man, an amateur translator of Spanish, Greek, and Persian classics. Index.

"Mr. Terhune's biography, if it is not continually exciting in presentation, is clearly a labor of love and carries from first to last a warmth and an understanding which prevent a wealth of detail from obscuring the central subject." David McCord

+ Atlantic 179:164 My '47 600w

"In this meaty, well-considered, and richly documented work we have a complete answer to the question, 'What kind of man was the translator of the Rubáiyát?' " J. J. Reilly

+ Cath World 166:182 N '47 550w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Ap 20 '47 450w

Christian Century 64:657 My 21 '47 230w

Reviewed by Robert Berkelman

Christian Science Monitor p18 My 24 '47 550w

+ Kirkus 15:88 F 1 '47 220w

"A readable, dignified, joyous biography. . . There is a good deal about the well-known translation, but this is essentially a book for the general reader. Emphasizes his personal life and delightful relations with friends, rather than his literary contributions." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:387 Mr 1 '47 140w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 19 '47 180w

"The book abounds in intimate, and sometimes startling, glimpses of the great. . . Mr. Terhune's work will cause no major revisions of judgment on FitzGerald or his contemporaries, but it was worth writing, and is worth reading, because it brings them alive." De Lancy Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 Ap 13 '47 1250w

"Pleasantly authoritative biography." Carlos Baker

+ N Y Times p3 Ap 6 '47 750w

"A sober and conscientious job, thoroughly academic. This is an example of a kind of biography which seems to be becoming standard in both England and the United States: a record of the writer's life which simply follows him year by year, presenting all the relative data but offering neither any interpretation of the career and personality of the subject nor any critical discussion of his work." Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 23:122 Je 7 '47 440w

Reviewed by R. E. Roberts

Sat R of Lit 30:21 My 10 '47 900w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 179:498 O 17 '47 800w

"This biography by Syracuse University Professor Terhune is the best documented life to date of Victorian England's least-documented poet."

+ Time 49:106 Mr 31 '47 1100w

"Mr. Terhune's decision [was] to write 'objective and impersonal' narrative. As such, his book has a decided, if limited, value."

+ — Times [London] Lit Sup p676 D 27 '47 1000w

"On the basis of his research, the author has been able to give a more detailed and accurate history of FitzGerald's life than has hitherto been possible, and one which is filled with amusing glimpses of the society in which FitzGerald moved."

TERHUNE, A. M.—Continued

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:151 Je '47 400w

TERRAL, RUFUS. Missouri valley; land of drouth, flood, and promise. 274p $3.75 Yale univ. press

330.978 Missouri valley 47-31366

"Can a Missouri Valley Authority be created—above drouths, floods, politics, graft, water-law wrangles and wars of words—a workable Federal agency without special interest? This résumé of geographical, economic and historical factors should awaken nationwide interest in the MVA and stimulate enlightened thinking. Problems involved range from the riparian and agricultural to machinations of lobbying and government—a good microcosm for scrutiny of the 'American way of life.'" (Library J) Bibliography. Index.

Booklist 44:101 N 15 '47

"Terral is fighting for a cause and with a sincere devotion to the public interest. But, being a good newspaperman, he has a sense of humor rare in crusaders and a keen awareness of what the public is interested in as well as of the 'public interest'—which is sometimes quite different. So he writes a book which, even apart from its specific thesis, is easy to read, hard to put down, and entertainingly informative about the character and geography of this vast inland empire and its temperamental artery."

+ Christian Century 64:1272 O 22 '47 350w

"It is one of the ablest regional studies that has yet appeared, and being well and popularly written, it is likely to do an effective job of public education." James Rorty

Commonweal 47:97 N 7 '47 1100w

Kirkus 15:419 Ag 1 '47 90w

"Especially recommended as remedial reading for ladies' clubs." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 72:1268 S 15 '47 100w

"Mr. Terral, whose qualification for this work was heightened by service on the TVA staff in Knoxville before joining that of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, outstanding crusader for MVA, has not oversimplified his book. Instead, he has written a series of chapters on the various sub-problems which flow together like the Big Muddy's tributaries to create the Missouri Valley problem. . . One hopes that Mr. Terral's book will be widely read—especially in the valley of the Missouri, where 'the need to know' must be met to arouse the will to act." Ernest Kirschten

+ Nation 165:419 O 18 '47 1250w

"It is very good reading indeed—background, color and fact—first-rate Americans, a geographical and political-economic adventure story. One need not be a citizen of the Missouri Valley states to be interested. Every American—in fact, as things are now, every one in the world—has a stake in the outcome of the battle over the Missouri River's water." E. B. Davis

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 N 2 '47 600w

"Mr. Terral's book is good reading and it will be a valuable handbook when the Missouri River controversy gets hot. If a new edition is required, his publishers might be wise to put a good map in it—there isn't a good one now. Let us hope the new edition will be required. It should be." R. L. Duffus

+ N Y Times p6 O 26 '47 900w

"This very readable book is of considerably more than local significance. The findings here presented are obviously important to the man whose land blows away in dust and whose cattle die for lack of pasturage and water in times of drouth, and to the man whose barns collapse in roaring flood waters, to all whose fortunes are linked directly to the valley. But they are also, though perhaps less obviously, important to every citizen of the U.S.A. in these uneasy days of admonition against waste, and of feeding the starving." W. M. Reddig

+ Sat R of Lit 30:12 D 20 '47 700w

TERRALL, ROBERT. Madam is dead. 243p $2.50 Duell

47-31136

Mystery story.

"This provides perpetual motion, but no great interest."

Kirkus 15:482 S 1 '47 60w

New Repub 117:33 O 20 '47 70w

"Mr. Terral succeeds in his efforts to amuse, letting the clews fall where they may, and it doesn't matter too much who did it. If cornered he could say it's a satire on all concerned, including the reader. To be taken as a pick-up after a run of studiously plotted puzzles." Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20

S 28 '47 150w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 28 '47 190w

"Diverting, if a little sloppy."

+ New Yorker 23:116 S 27 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 5 '47

90w

"No dull moments in this unabashed, kaleidoscopic, fantastically peopled, incredibly believable yarn of shameless ladies, whimsical cut-throats, and energetic sleuths."

Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 50w

THACKERAY, WILLIAM MAKEPEACE. Letters and private papers; collected and ed. by Gordon N. Ray. 4v v3-4 695;586p il maps $12.50 Harvard univ. press

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. (A45-5303)

For descriptive note see Annual for 1946.

Reviewed by J. B. Brebner

Am Hist R 52:508 Ap '47 750w

"I feel that I have come to know Thackeray, and not only Thackeray but his inner circle here, in London, and in Paris. And I feel that we owe Mr. Ray immeasurable gratitude for the fair-mindedness, the enormous patience and sympathy, and the self-effacing scholarship which have made these four volumes as impeccable as they are alive." Edward Weeks

+ Atlantic 179:126 F '47 1250w

"Even this accumulation is unfortunately incomplete. . . Nevertheless, the value of what we have is very great, and the editor's huge undertaking has been admirably performed." G. L. Marsh

+ Mod Philol 44:281 My '47 2750w (Review of v 1-4)

Reviewed by Raymond Mortimer

New Statesman & Nation 34:94 Ag 2 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Edmund Wilson

New Yorker 22:86 F 8 '47 3200w

"With scrupulous accuracy Mr. Ray combines a distinguished style and a delightful sense of humor that often make the notes as interesting as the letters themselves. These four magnificently printed volumes have already assumed their place as a landmark of Victorian scholarship. They augur well for the biography of Thackeray that Mr. Ray plans." G. S. Haight

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 F 8 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Bonamy Dobrée

Spec 179:276 Ag 29 '47 1550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p297 Je 14 '47 800w

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:46 Mr '47 270w

"Correspondence ordinarily becomes less interesting after an author has attained celebrity, when he either has too many letters to answer or writes them with one eye cocked on posterity. This is not true of Thackeray's. His letters rattle along to the end in the confiding tone of private conversation. . . The letters to his daughters describing the American lecture tours are especially entertaining." G. S. Haight

+ Yale R n s 36:557 spring '47 1250w

THANE, ELSWYTH, pseud. See Beebe, E. T. R.

THAYER, BERT CLARK. Whirlaway; the life and times of a great racer. 103p il $3.50 Duell 798.4 Horse racing. Horses—Pictures, illustrations, etc. Agr47-124

Account in prose and many photographs of the Kentucky-bred race horse, Whirlaway, who was one of America's star track performers.

Cleveland Open Shelf p3 Ja '47

"A gift book for track enthusiasts and horse-lovers. Recommended." H. M. Brogan
+ Library J 72:87 Ja 1 '47 80w

"A nice sentimental text with a somewhat juvenile flavor accompanies the excellent photographs." H. I. Brock

N Y Times p29 My 25 '47 70w

New Yorker 22:98 D 21 '46 60w

THAYER, GORDON B. Plastics molds, design, construction, use. enl & rev 3d ed 272p il $5 Huebner publications, 2460 Fairmount blvd, Cleveland 6

668.4 Plastics. Molds (for plastics) 46-7948

"In order to cover the developments in the field, which have occurred since the preparation of the second edition (1944) [Book Review Digest 1945], the author has found it necessary to double the size of the earlier volume. As formerly, the purpose is to acquaint product and tool designers with the fundamentals of the design and construction of compression and injection molds. This aspect of the subject and the related topics of ejection methods, jigs and fixtures, temperature control, and finishing tools, have been supplemented by new sections dealing with the properties of materials suitable for plastics molds; Rockwell hardness tests; hard chromium plating; production of plastic tools; estimating time required to produce molds. Numerous diagrams and photographs are used to illustrate the design, construction and operation of the various types of molds." N Y New Tech Bks

Booklist 43:362 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by D. M. Buchanan

+ Chem & Eng N 25:1296 My 5 '47 300w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:15 Ja '47

THAYER, LEE (MRS EMMA REDINGTON [LEE] THAYER). Murder stalks the circle. 232p $2.50 Dodd

47-3706

Detective story.

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

+ N Y Times p26 Je 8 '47 160w

"Elaborately plotted and full of bibliophilic lore; the most satisfactory Clancy-Wigger story I can remember." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p26 Je 8 '47 80w

"Pleasant."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 Je 21 '47 40w

THAYER, VIVIAN TROW. Religion in public education. 212p $2.75 Viking

377.1 Religious education. Church and education 47-1127

The educational director of the Ethical culture schools, New York city, discusses religious education in the schools of the United States. It is his thesis that religious education is being returned to the public and parochial schools, and he studies the dangers of the situation. He considers that character building is not dependent on religious faith, and feels that religious instruction in school would necessarily be sectarian. Index.

Booklist 43:217 Mr 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 16 '47 100w

Current Hist 12:372 Ap '47 70w

"Many educators and most church people will disagree with Dr. Thayer's presuppositions, arguments and conclusions, but all would profit by reading this thought-provoking book and considering his well marshalled arguments."

Kirkus 15:65 F 1 '47 170w

"In this little book Dr. Thayer raises many problems. He does so quietly, modestly, perhaps a little reticently. He still seems to feel that it is 'un-American' to indulge in religious controversy. The secularists, whom he defends, are officially in possession. But they shall not hold their advantage very long, or deserve to hold it, unless they are ready to offer positive reasons for their historical privilege." Albert Guerard

+ Nation 164:309 Mr 15 '47 600w

"Although openly favoring one position more than the other, Dr. Thayer, former superintendent of city schools, presently director of ethical culture schools in New York and author of 'American Education Under Fire,' presents both sides in a calm and admirably reasonable fashion." Leo Shapiro

+ N Y Times p22 Je 22 '47 1250w

Reviewed by G. E. Shipler

Sat R of Lit 30:12 Mr 1 '47 360w

Reviewed by H. H. Wagner

Springf'd Union p2 Je 21 '47 200w

Wis Lib Bul 43:65 Ap '47

THELEN, MARY FRANCES. Man as sinner in contemporary American realistic theology. 223p pa $2.75 King's crown press

233.2 Sin. Theology A47-1009

"This book gives a detailed account of the doctrine of sin in American neoorthodoxy or what is euphemistically called 'realistic theology.' In Part One the author discusses 'the background' of this type of theology, and under this head expounds the relevant teaching of 'religious liberalism' as represented by F. R. Tennant, W. E. Hocking, and H. S. Elliott, and 'the secular theories of the fall of man' as represented by Karl Marx and Sigmund Freud. The reaction takes the form of a revival of the doctrine of original sin. And to this revival the second and main part of the book is devoted. The author here begins with the theology of Reinhold Niebuhr, 'the leading voice' in American 'realism.' . . . With him she associates four more or less kindred spirits. In one chapter she deals with Walter M. Horton and Robert L. Calhoun, and in another with John C. Bennett and H. Richard Niebuhr. The book concludes with a general exposition of the 'realistic' doctrine of man as sinner and with two or three criticisms of the doctrine, which, however, are not serious enough to imperil the author's standing as an orthodox 'realist.'" (Crozer Q) Bibliography. Index.

"Comparative studies of this kind are often useful and sometimes illuminating. Professor Thelen's book is both. By grouping together five contemporary American theologians whose works are ordinarily considered piecemeal, she succeeds in establishing the existence of a definable and well defined theological trend in the interpretation of human nature." A. C. McGiffert

+ Christian Century 64:1176 O 1 '47 1000w

"There is much interesting psychological and sociological material in the book, and if a person wishes to become acquainted with American 'religious realism' without extensive reading, he could do no better than invest in this volume. As an historical introduction it is an excellent piece of work. But if he expects to find in it and in the movement which it describes a rational justification of the doctrine of original sin, he will be doomed to disappointment; not, however, because of any fault of exposition on the part of the author or her theological colleagues but because of the inherent irrationality of the doctrine."

THELEN, M. F.—Continued
A. C. Knudson
+ Crozer Q 24:171 Ap '47 800w
Reviewed by W. N. Pittenger
J Religion 27:129 Ap '47 750w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:34 Mr '47 320w

THERESE, SISTER, ed. I sing of a Maiden; the Mary book of verse. 459p $4.50 Macmillan
232.931 Mary, Virgin—Poetry 47-6923
An anthology of poems about the Virgin Mary, dating from the time of the Old Testament to the present. They are arranged chronologically, and have been put in eight parts:
The Virgin in prophecy; The early ages of faith; Medieval Mary-songs; From Chaucer to Donne; The age of transition: seventeenth and eighteenth centuries; The Romantics; Nineteenth century and modern (European); Early and contemporary American. Indexes.

"Mature Protestants, who know what to take and what to reject, will find much of beauty and of pure religious feeling in this copious anthology of poetry in praise of the Virgin Mary."

+ Christian Century 64:1398 N 19 '47 120w
"A monumental work of piety, scholarship and of 'gathered praise.'"

+ Kirkus 15:538 S 15 '47 170w
"Some of the world's most beautiful poetry has been written in the Virgin Mary's praise and this selection has been made with care and flawless taste." Gerald McDonald
+ Library J 72:1196 S 1 '47 130w

"A charming anthology of Mary-poems." C.
K. Bausman
+ Spring'd Republican p10B N 23 '47
210w

THIBON, GUSTAVE. What ails mankind? an essay on social physiology; tr. by Willard Hill. 136p $1.75 Sheed
301.15 Social problems. France—Social conditions 47-5938

Seventeen essays exploring the diseases which the author feels are wasting our present social structure. Partial contents: The biology of revolutions; Equality and the class problem; Equalitarianism and officialdom; Oppression and corruption; Marxism and Freudianism; Centralization and anarchy; Egoism and the social sense; Morality and life; Work and leisure; City life and the over-working of the sensibilities; Per-sonalism; Morality and moral habit.

Cath World 166:380 Ja '48 200w

"The reviewer's guess is this, that the very people who could profit most from Thibon's medicine—the secularist reformers—will be only stiffened in their prejudices by his altogether unnecessary aspersions on social insurance and related reforms and by his infuriating tendency to play into the hands of timid Christians who fear the masses for reasons ever so much less valid and ever so much less honorable than his own... The reader is reminded, in fairness to the author, that there is more to the book than has been indicated in this review... My only objection is that the good is so unnecessarily mixed up with so much that is—shall we say, only half true." G. G. Higgins + Commonwealth 46:506 S 5 '47 700w
+ Spring'd Union p5 S 22 '47 90w

THIELEN, BENEDICT. Friday at noon. 307p
$3 Holt
47-6333

Five members of a family attend the auction of their household goods, after the death of their mother. As each object comes up for sale the associations of the various members with that particular piece are given. By weaving together all their reactions the author portrays the lives of the various members and their mother.

Kirkus 15:479 S 1 '47 170w

"This is a clever device on the part of the author to show the inner thoughts of the characters, but it is somewhat difficult to follow the transitions as each character becomes the narrator, 'I.' Recommended for the discriminating." M. A. Johnson
+ Library J 72:1271 S 15 '47 80w

"'Friday at Noon' is one of those delicately worked, completely beautiful arabesques in which the writer himself, constantly intent as he must be on maintaining exquisite neatness of line and precision of craftsmanship, is likely to take rather more joy than any but the most sensitively appreciative of his readers.
To them, and probably to some of the rest of us, the story—or stories—told in fragmentary fashion in 'Friday at Noon' should prove a pure if not too heady delight." F. H. Bullock
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20
N 9 '47 700w

"With one great exception, the psychology of the novel is entirely lucid. In other respects, it cannot be said that Mr. Thielen has been quite so successful. His style, for example, is not as poetic as he intends it to be.
Words are used like leitmotifs; mood-phrases are very artfully repeated; but the reader often gets tired of them before the author does.
Again, it is nowhere clearer than in stories like this how completely the art of comedy has been lost to the psychological novelist."

Donald Barr
N Y Times p26 O 26 '47 800w

"The device that Mr. Thielen has employed can't be said to be unique, nor is his unprepossessing family's story any more interesting for being so elaborately woven around a batch of candlesticks and Dresden shepherdesses."
New Yorker 23:134 O 25 '47 110w

"As an exercise in association, 'Friday at Noon' is engrossing and successful. As a novel, it approaches the excellent. Though presented in flashes, each character is fully developed."
W. R. W.

San Francisco Chronicle p16 O 26 '47
200w

THIESMEYER, LINCOLN REUBER, and BURCHARD, JOHN ELY. Combat scientists;
v. ed. Alan T. Waterman; foreword by Karl T. Compton. (Atlantic monthly press bk)
412p il $5 Little

940.53185 U.S. Scientific research and development, Office of. Field service, Office of. World war, 1939-1945—Science 47-31246

"One of the broad problems encountered by the Office of Scientific Research and Development was that of providing the Army and Navy with expert scientific advice in field operations on the employment of new weapons, devices, and techniques. The purpose of this volume is to give an account of the many forms this assistance took and something of its scope, together with a glimpse of the manner in which this phase of OSRD activity was organized and operated. Part One of this volume deals with the activities of the Office of Field Service, in which after 1943 were concentrated the field activities of OSRD... Part Two contains chapters devoted to studies conducted by two special committees under the National Defense Research Committee, dealing with landing operations in their navigational and demolition aspects, respectively." (Pref)
Index.

Booklist 44:87 N 1 '47

"The authors were combat scientists and write not only authoritatively, but with a degree of fascination that will hold the reader's interest from cover to cover. Those who participated in scientific and technical missions in Germany or Japan during or after the war will recognize and enjoy (in retrospect) many situations described vividly but with complete regard for the truth." W. J. Murphy
+ Chem & Eng N 25:3320 N 10 '47 450w

Kirkus 15:385 J1 15 '47 170w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1617 N 15 '47 70w

"A good story, told here with somewhat too much administrative detail. The value of the combat scientist lay not so much in his knowledge as in his point of view, his independence, his civilian status. . . In 'Combat Scientists' we get an overexcited account of the admittedly important problem of 'operational research,' the semi-science of tactics, but no clear idea of how the problem is solved." Philip Morrison

+ — N Y Times p38 O 19 '47 650w

THIRKELL, MRS ANGELA (MACKAIL). Peace breaks out. 370p $2.50 Knopf

47-3528

The descendants of Trollope's Barsetshire characters are still holding up the standards of English society in this latter day novel by another English writer. Here the Hallidays of Hatch House and their friends the Fieldings, Grahams, and others, muddle thru the early days of the peace in a tale of teas and farming, engagements, and social gatherings among the gentry of an English county society.

Booklist 43:331 Je 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Je 8 '47 90w

Christian Science Monitor p16 My 21 '47 420w

Cleveland Open Shelf p12 My '47

Kirkus 15:199 Ap 1 '47 170w

"For general purchase even if the devotee has to adjust himself to a slackened pace." K. T. Willis

+ — Library J 72:810 My 15 '47 80w

"Those who can happily fiddle while Rome is burning will doubtless enjoy the congested sprightliness of her dialogue and the playful confidence of her characters that the gentry must always come first. For others, the comedy and the love-making, though 'of a very warm and comfortable nature,' will ring somewhat hollow." H. I. A. Fausset

Manchester Guardian p3 F 14 '47 100w

"Altogether, Mrs. Thirkell is in form, and equal even to the dire contingencies of Peace." Isabel Paterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 My 18 '47 900w

"Delightfully gay, charming, humorous—at once troubled and serene." Beatrice Sherman

+ N Y Times p5 My 18 '47 380w

"This is standard Thirkell, which is to say it will be a great joy to Mrs. Thirkell's admirers while it may cause the minority of non-admirers to fall into a gentle doze."

New Yorker 23:105 My 24 '47 110w

Reviewed by Jane Volles

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 13 '47 300w

"When problems and grim realities confront us on every side, it is perhaps ungrateful to complain of such undemanding entertainment. Yet at the risk of seeming captious, a plea is entered for a new field for Mrs. Thirkell's delicious and penetrating talents. She has now evolved such a well-recorded circle that there are no surprises left." Pamela Taylor

Sat R of Lit 30:14 My 24 '47 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p77 F 8 '47 390w

THOMAS, BENJAMIN PLATT. Portrait for posterity, Lincoln and his biographers; il. by Romaine Proctor. 329p $3 Rutgers univ. press
B or 92 Lincoln, Abraham. Lincoln, Abraham—Bibliography 47-30758

Biographical essays on some of the biographers of Lincoln. It was the author's idea to weigh the conflicting interpretations of such writers as Lamon, Nicolay and Hay, Ida Tarbell, Beveridge, and Sandburg, and some of the lesser biographers. Bibliography. Index.

"Here is a new kind of Lincoln book, entirely different from the mine run—a book written with rare appreciation of human values and in a literary style both refreshing and authentic." Jay Monaghan

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 21 '47 700w

"This is a volume of permanent value." F. L. Bullard

+ Christian Science Monitor p18 O 2 '47 700w

Current Hist 13:228 O '47 60w

"Primarily for the specialists in Lincolniana, this is nevertheless interestingly written and a capable commentary on the writing of biography."

+ Kirkus 15:388 Jl 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by H. S. Commager

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p44 D 7 '47 1500w

"Mr. Thomas does more than discuss the various books. He reports what the biographers felt as they were writing, indicates their interconnections and their conflicts, and shows something of the proportions of the Lincoln cult today. One regrets that he has omitted any consideration of the deliberately denigratory lives. But he has made a valuable and readable contribution to the Lincoln literature, and another assist must be scored up for the Rutgers University Press in its current campaign on behalf of Lincoln scholarship." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ N Y Times p3 S 21 '47 800w

"He has not quite succeeded in reconciling the basic differences of opinion, but his story of the war that has been going on for three-quarters of a century among Lincoln historians is illuminating, and significant in that it shows how biographers tend to tailor great men to suit the prejudices of the times."

New Yorker 23:109 O 4 '47 130w

"This book is not only important for the indirect picture it gives of the sixteenth President, but for the insight it gives into the whole system of biographical writing. You will never read another book about another great man again without looking hard between the lines."

Alfred Kay

+ San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 21 '47 900w

"This well-composed book tells in very human terms the story of the battle of different groups to establish their own conception of Lincoln. . . For a highly specialized subject, Mr. Thomas's book is both entertaining and rewarding. He does not give as firm and incisive an appraisal of the major works as he might have done. But he has traced an interesting process of change in the methods and ideals of American biographical writing 1865-1947; and his study of the able, honest, wayward, undisciplined Herndon in particular, is unforgettable." Allan Nevins

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:14 O 25 '47 650w

Time 50:110 S 29 '47 800w

THOMAS, CURTIS (THOMAS KINNEY, pseud). Devil take the foremost. 250p $2 Doubleday

47-31146

"Miss Jennie Mayfield, a New York model, marries into one of those conventionally psychotic families, becomes pregnant, and almost at once finds it prudent to feed her vitamin pills to the cat, since several of her in-laws seem resolved to prevent her from producing an heir. Jennie discovers that life around the old mansion in the Hudson River valley is pretty perilous until the various family aberrations result in a general administration of cyanide, thus smoothing things out." New Yorker

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p43 O 10 '47 110w

"An intelligent, incisive first."

+ Kirkus 15:409 Ag 1 '47 80w

New Repub 117:33 O 20 '47 20w

"Does not make pleasant reading even though virtue does triumph in the end." Isaac Anderson

— N Y Times p30 S 21 '47 230w

"Reasonably alarming."

New Yorker 23:107 S 20 '47 100w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47 60w

THOMAS, CURTIS—Continued

"Adult material; fearlessly handled; possibly overdone. Suspense quotient high; characters, mostly psychotic, ably drawn. Prime contender for 'psychological crime-story' laurels. Arresting."

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:30 S 27 '47 50w

THOMAS, MRS DOROTHY SWAINE (THOMAS), and NISHIMOTO, RICHARD S. The spoilage [Japanese and American evacuation and resettlement] with contributions by Rosalie A. Hankey [and others]. 388p $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

940.5472 Japanese in the U.S. World war, 1939-1945—Evacuation of civilians A47-1448
Deals, in the main, with one aspect of the evacuation of persons of Japanese ancestry during the war—namely with those evacuees branded as "disloyal" and sent to the Tula Lake center. Index.

Reviewed by S. T. Kimball
Am J Soc 53:228 N '47 800w

Reviewed by Kimball Young
Am Soc R 12:362 Je '47 550w

"The research itself and the report contained in this volume constitute one of the most—if not the most—competent pieces of work thus far done in the field of crisis-phenomena sociology involving minorities. It is important to bear in mind, however, that the phenomena here recorded are relatively nonrecurrent and of such an extraordinary character as to make the record of little predictive or control value. The present volume will probably be read by a few of those who themselves went through the experience; by the kind of 'scholars' and students who spend life in reproducing, quoting, and requoting data; and by those who will want to point the finger of scorn at the society which permitted such events to occur. In addition, it is essential to note that the ultimately basic facts, i.e., the economic foundations of the whole evacuation, are not recorded at all; those facts could have been secured, and their omission is very serious. Moreover, satisfying though such a report as this is (in the scholar's sense), the facts are not brought out into sufficiently bold relief to awaken the attention of those who have an influence in the affairs of men; its very scholarship impeccability will keep it from reaching those who might possibly do something in terms of control." Constantine Panunzio

Ann Am Acad 251:203 My '47 400w

"The Spoilage' is written with scientific objectiveness, but reading it is a searching emotional experience. It is so concrete in detail, so amply documented, that the reader cannot but share the shock, the frustration and fear of the evacuees." J. T. Frederick
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Ja 26 '47 500w

Foreign Affairs 25:700 J1 '47 30w

"For those who have a special interest in the mass evacuation program, 'The Spoilage' is an indispensable chronicle and record. Considered as a contribution to the social sciences, which is what it purports to be, the book poses a large question. As the initial publication of a lavishly financed research project—financed by grants from the Rockefeller, Giannini, and Columbia foundations—'The Spoilage' is published at so late a date as to be completely without influence (except perhaps as a post-mortem commentary) upon the tragic pattern of events with which it deals." Carey McWilliams

N Y Times p22 F 2 '47 1150w

Reviewed by Bradford Smith
Sat R of Lit 30:20 Je 7 '47 650w

Reviewed by O. D. Duncan
Social Forces 25:457 My '47 440w
U S Quarterly Bkl 3:187 Je '47 400w

THOMAS, GWYN. Dark philosophers. 178p $2 Little 47-2976

A novel which follows the conversations and ruminations on life of four unemployed Welsh miners as they visit together in a small tea-shop. Chief among their interests is the Reverend Emmanuel, who, though born one of themselves, has sold out to the mine owner and so preaches submission and humility to the people.

Booklist 43:348 J1 1 '47

Kirkus 15:195 Ap 1 '47 170w

"The story is a quiet one and will not command a large audience, but to a few it will be a reading pleasure." E. P. Nichols

+ Library J 72:734 My 1 '47 70w

"The 'Dark Philosophers,' to my mind, is the freshest new writing that has crossed the Atlantic for some years and it reveals qualities of high comedy and fantastic humor that set Mr. Thomas in a field of his own. He tells a bitter story, but he tells it uproariously, and if the underlying philosophy is Marxian, it is not only Marx without tears, but that even more remarkable phenomenon, Marx with laughs." James Hilton

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 11 '47 900w

"The most striking feature of this remarkable book is the prose itself, the unfamiliar cadences and ironic conceits brought over into English from the Welsh. In this regard it is interesting to remember that the Welsh are a musically gifted people... And yet—which is the point of these observations—Mr. Thomas' prose does not compare with that of the great Irish novelists. The key is unrelievedly minor, the metaphors are encumbered with many curious after thoughts and small qualifications. And indefinable unrest mars the flow of thought. The genius of the Welsh, it appears, is not so readily transmuted." E. B. Garside

+ N Y Times p5 Je 1 '47 900w

"One of the most pleasing books of its kind (though you might be hard pressed to say just what the kind is) that have appeared in some time. It is, as much as anything, that literary oddity, a mellow proletarian novel, and is genuinely and unaggressively humorous."

+ New Yorker 23:116 My 17 '47 120w

"This tale, which entertains with bitter humor, is one that seems a little less important in retrospect than during the reading of it. Mr. Thomas has a persuasive, skilful way with him, and he speaks with a fresh voice, not the tired or mimetic voice of the crowd; but what remains of 'The Dark Philosophers,' after it has been put aside for a week or so (or what remains for me, at least), is the memory of a humorous narrative technique rather than the recollection of a substantial literary experience." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:19 Je 21 '47 1000w

THOMAS, ISLYN. Injection molding of plastics. 534p il $10 Reinhold

668.4 Molds (for plastics) 47-3269

"Handbook, a detailed complete coverage of the history, development, materials with characteristics of each type of plastic, and mechanical problems involved in injection molding techniques from the viewpoint of shop practice. Author includes product design, mold design and construction and materials of finishing, including information on machining, metal plating, inlaying and assembling. Chapter on estimating and costs. 500 illustrations with 5 color charts." Library J

"The author writes with competence and draws on his wide experience to give full practical discussion of important developments in designing, machining and utilizing molds with all types of plastics."

+ Chem Eng 54:280 Ag '47 110w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:893 Je 1 '47 70w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:56 J1 '47

"Engineers and designers of plastic articles will find here sufficient detail on the subject of plastic molding to make the book valuable to them in their daily work. Although the author has drawn chiefly on his own experience, it is evident that he is familiar with the literature in the field. The book would have been improved by the addition of a bibliography of patent and literature references."

+ — U S Quarterly Bkl 3:322 S '47 160w

THOMAS, NORMAN MATTOON. Appeal to the nations. 175p $2.75 Holt

341 World war, 1939-1945—Peace. Peace. International cooperation 47-1798

"Analyzes total victory, the United Nations, fear, communism, world government, preventive war and appeasement (of Russia) as roads to a workable peace. Against the growing signs of WW III, rejects these as unworkable and argues that disarmament coupled with the liquidation of all imperialism is the only hope. Urges the United States actively to express its world leadership in an appeal through UN to these means." (Library J) No index.

Reviewed by Carlyle King

Canadian Forum 27:91 J1 '47 140w

"Those who have found his other books stimulating will probably enjoy this one. But the details of peacemaking are so much with us today that many of the author's proposals seem rather general by comparison. The means to an end, which he enumerates, seem more like ends in themselves, to which we yet must find adequate means—searching as if for needles in the haystack of international and sectional cross purposes which are reflected in every-day headlines." Carlyle Morgan

Christian Science Monitor p14 Mr 31 '47 500w

"A 'while there is time' recommendation that carries the sincerity of a veteran fighter, a sober consideration of major propositions, and—as might be anticipated—a bias that is controversial."

Kirkus 15:28 Ja 1 '47 90w

"Forthright and generally convincing though sometimes irritating in its 'I told you so.' Recommended." R. E. Kingery

+ Library J 72:461 Mr 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by Frances Witherspoon

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p18 Mr 30 '47 850w

Reviewed by R. M. MacIver

N Y Times p7 Mr 30 '47 900w

"In his book Mr. Thomas has set forth, with a minimum of cold common sense, the result of some hard-headed thinking about world peace. His conclusion: Men everywhere want peace, even though events seem to be rushing us toward another war. Therefore peace is attainable. His book is devoted to showing how men may reach this goal that all mankind wants." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 Mr 28 '47 950w

Reviewed by F. R. Dulles

Sat R of Lit 30:10 Ap 26 '47 650w

"Intended for the general reader, the book is far less ephemeral than many books of its type."

U S Quarterly Bkl 3:179 Je '47 80w

THOMAS, WENDELL MARSHALL. On the resolution of science and faith. 300p $3.50 Island press

215 Religion and science 47-17199

"Professor Thomas of Connecticut Junior College is a doughty opponent of all dualisms. . . He believes that Western philosophy went wrong when Anaximander's 'boundless' was broken up into dissenting elements; and he finds religion's highest expression in the advaita or non-dualistic school of Vedanta. Failure 'to achieve non-dualism' shows a failure of philosophic verve; ruled out a priori is any possible discovery of something irreducible. Exploratory chapters with rather pert titles . . . ('Thomas Aquinas Did His Brilliant Best,' 'Spinoza Should Have Lived Longer') sharpen this thesis from a historical point of view." N Y Times

Reviewed by J. Line

Canadian Forum 27:69 Je '47 230w

"By far the best part of the book is the middle section analyzing developments in physical science since Newton. With great learning and admirable power of synthesis the author arrives at a de-dualized metaphysic, a materialism in which space with both physical and mathematical properties is identified as the ultimate reality." Paul Ramsey

N Y Times p43 Ap 13 '47 360w

THOMAS, WILL. God is for white folks. 305p $3 Creative age

47-30938

Novel of the experiences of a man of mixed races—black and white—in trying to find a place for himself in one world or the other. He is the natural son of a wealthy planter, and a beautiful octoroon from New Orleans. Tragedy upon tragedy occurs before Beau Beauchamp comes home to be master of his father's house.

"The dramatic episodes, which include a lynching, are convincing and dialogue and character portrayal far above average. Recommended for story interest and well-stated sociological problems." H. P. Bolman

+ Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 90w

"Concerned as it is with social implications, the book, nevertheless, emerges as an old-fashioned romantic tale highlighted with moments of racial conflict and melodrama. One wishes that Mr. Thomas had forsworn an ending which though conventionally happy, lacks credibility." Rose Feld

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p24 O 19 '47 300w

"Melodrama of the old 'Unhand me, villain!' school." Hal Borland

— N Y Times p32 O 5 '47 170w

"An earnest first novel whose subject . . . the author might better have left alone until he had developed a little more as a writer. Right now, unfortunately, Mr. Thomas sounds too much like a man who fears that his readers may at any moment get bored and wander away, an anxiety that may account for the murders, assaults, lynchings, and other forms of violent action with which he has festooned this story of race prejudice in the Deep South." — New Yorker 23:112 S 27 '47 100w

"This is a wrathful book—turbulent, passionate, bitter. There is no humor, no lightness. . . As a matter of fact, there is so much purple passion spread around the landscape that Mr. Thomas felt impelled to call a halt and end the story on a note of hope, which, after all that has gone before, is a little on the dim side." P. S.

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ja 11 '48 220w

"The character of Beau's aunt, and the whole episode of her vengeful madness, are, I think, extravagant, something out of the popular romantic mode to give this book a turgescence it does not need. Let it rest upon its true talk. There is enough of vitality and challenge here to stand without embellishment." N. L. Rothman

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:20 O 4 '47 700w

THOMPSON, ALAN REYNOLDS. Anatomy of drama. 2d ed 47p $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

808.2 Drama A47-1447

"The second edition of an analysis of dramatic writing originally published early in the war, with certain facts corrected, statements qualified and a small amount of new material, particularly on irony, added." (Theatre Arts) For earlier edition see Book Review Digest 1943, Index.

"Occasionally a book comes along which in itself may not be of the first importance but which stimulates so much thought that it takes on a considerably greater value than is warranted. . . This is likely to be the case in Alan Reynolds Thompson's 'The Anatomy of Drama.' . . Mr. Thompson all too often fails to quote chapter and verse when condemning or praising various playwrighting practices. . . Alan Thompson writes well and his style is clear, reasonably condensed in content, and exact in its approach. It is likely to provoke more agreement than the reverse though there must be a certain amount of controversial matter in any work of any importance whatsoever. This is true of 'The Anatomy of Drama,' which is well worth the reprinting accorded it." George Freedley

THOMPSON, A. R.—Continued
+ — Sat R of Lit 29:40 D 7 '46 400w

"The latter half, where Mr. Thompson is discussing more recent examples of tragedy and high comedy, is stimulating, but the whole is encumbered with academic terms and words used out of their ordinary idiomatic sense." Theatre Arts 31:11 J1 '47 100w

THOMPSON, DANIEL GARRISON BRINTON. Ruggles of New York; a life of Samuel B. Ruggles. 222p il $2.75 Columbia univ. press
B or 92 Ruggles, Samuel Bulkley A47-345
A biography of Samuel B. Ruggles, born in New Milford, Connecticut in 1800, who graduated from Yale in 1814, and came to New York where he practiced law and dealt in real estate for over fifty years. For forty-five years he was a trustee of Columbia university, and took an active part in the affairs of the university. Map of New York city 1850. Bibliography. Index.

Reviewed by J. P. Nichols
Ann Am Acad 251:197 My '47 650w

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 23 '47 270w

"Ruggles' life spanned events of the utmost importance in American history. From the time when, as a boy, he had watched Fulton's steamboat ascend the Hudson to the era of the transatlantic cable, much had occurred to change the character of the nation. Dr. Thompson, drawing on numerous printed and manuscript sources, especially the valuable diary of Ruggles' son-in-law and associate, George Templeton Strong, takes note of it all. It is an impressive story, told with dignity, accuracy and understanding." S. I. Pomerantz
+ N Y Times p29 Ap 6 '47 600w

"Although the subtitle promises a 'life,' the emphasis in this book is on social history rather than biography, with meticulous care for details from diaries, legal documents, and the proceedings of the various organizations to which Ruggles belonged. Yet so varied are the interests that the personality does emerge." + U S Quarterly Bk1 3:46 Mr '47 200w

THOMPSON, DUNSTAN. Lament for the sleepwalker. 50p $2.50 Dodd 811 47-2383

A second book of poems by a young American author, whose first volume of verse appeared in 1943. From 1942 to 1946 he was in the United States army, and is now in Egypt, working on a book about the Near East. The poems in his first book were in lighter vein than these, which are often on the subject of death.

"These poems are leagues apart from those in Dunstan Thompson's first book, for death and terror have come between and love has played him false. The younger book was full of virtuosity and high excitement. . . And now, in 'Lament for the Sleepwalker,' . . . skulls and burning accompany the ruins of love. . . Yet there is a new kind of strength in 'Lament for the Sleepwalker.' I have not read a book of contemporary poetry which has such an Elizabethan feeling of darkness. I have seen few war poems which show so intense and individual a reaction to cataclysm. The brilliance and the artificial imagery are still there, but added to them is courage, after defeat. Implicit in his formality is a refusal to give in." John Hay
+ — Commonweal 46:75 My 2 '47 480w

"The promise of Dunstan Thompson's first book is to no computable extent fortified by 'Lament for the Sleepwalker.' He is so far only a thick shadow of Barker—and of Whitman. Thompson's poems do not, even in terms of sound, free themselves from the burden of their author's experience. They are sodden with sound; they never rise from the sensual floor." H. P. Lazarus

— Nation 165:290 S 20 '47 290w

Reviewed by Abbott Martin
N Y Times p30 O 12 '47 650w

"The war, having environed and cruelly spurred the poet's ill-starred affairs, may seem to lend them in retrospect a somber laurel. But if the self-lamented sleepwalker cannot waken now, will he dare, a civilian and no longer a youth, repeat the same notes but without that mitigating pathos which frame the desolate soldier? . . . His further technical progress also may be involved. Occasionally this verse becomes excessively oblique and fragmented, and the fault may spring not only from a peculiar incommunicability of subject matter but from a lingering reticence which more accepted themes would not impose." Warren Beck Poetry 70:217 J1 '47 1200w

THOMPSON, ELEANOR WOLF. Education for ladies, 1830-1860. 170p $2.75 King's crown press

376 Education of women 47-4038

"Ideas on education in magazines for women" (subtitle) during the years 1830-1860. The author states that these years constituted a period of reform in the education and status of women. She bases her research mainly on periodical literature, especially those catering to the tastes and interests of women. Bibliographical essay. Index.

"It is obvious that this author has prepared her material with care, and the book should receive the attention of those interested in social and educational history. Students of this period will find her bibliography helpful." C. C. Bowman
+ Ann Am Acad 254:225 N '47 400w

School & Society 65:319 Ap 26 '47 20w

THOMPSON, JAMES EDGAR. Engineering organization and methods. 337p il $4 McGraw 658 Engineering—Management. Efficiency, Industrial 47-4864

"Fundamentals of organizing, operating, and controlling a product design engineering department proven by successful application in a wide variety of industrial concerns. Some chapters are Drawing and Report Numbering; Drawing Forms and Title Blocks; Drawing Release and Drawing and Print Control." (Library J) Index.

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:816 My 15 '47 70w
Management R 36:558 O '47 60w
N Y New Tech Bks 32:51 J1 '47

THOMPSON, LAURA MAUD. Guam and its people; with a village journal by Jesus C. Barcinas [sponsored by] the American inst. of Pacific relations. rev 3d ed 367p il maps $5 Princeton univ. press

919.67 Guam. Chamorros 47-30365

"In the first edition [Book Review Digest 1942] the focus was chiefly on the educational problems of Guam. Now the book is extended to cover the major issues which face administrators on the island, after several years of Japanese occupation and the succeeding years as a U.S. naval base." Booklist

"The book is well organized and is written in an interesting and appealing style. It is profusely illustrated, and contains a number of usable maps." R. A. Norem
+ Am Pol Sci R 41:1037 O '47 230w

Reviewed by W. C. Smith
Ann Am Acad 254:190 N '47 400w
Booklist 43:362 J1 15 '47

Reviewed by J. T. Frederick
Chicago Sun Book Week p9 J1 20 '47
450w

Reviewed by J. N. Moody
Commonweal 46:315 J1 11 '47 330w
Current Hist 13:34 J1 '47 50w
Nation 165:109 J1 26 '47 130w

"Guam and Its People is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of other peoples. The book is readable, and there are maps, illustrations, and 'a village journal' which add to the reader's pleasure and understanding." I. C. Brown

+ Social Forces 26:225 D '47 600w

THOMPSON, ROBERT L. Leathercraft. 140p il $2.40 Van Nostrand

745.53 Leather work 47-5017

"Written for the amateur craftsman, giving clear directions for making various leather projects at home. Lists materials, tools, and processes. Information is given on origin and development of leather work. Illustrated." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:47 O 1 '47

Cleveland Open Shelf p23 N '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1276 S 15 '47 30w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:50 J1 '47

THOMPSON, STITH. Folktale. 510p $6 Dryden
398.21 Folklore 47-30175

"The book is divided into four parts and opens with a discussion of the universality and forms of the folk tale. The second section traces the spread of folk tales, particularly throughout the Western world, and analyzes the various types of tales. In part three, Professor Thompson studies the folk tale in the primitive culture of the American Indian, and concludes the book with valuable chapters on folk-tale studies. Appendices list important works on the folk tale, and the principal collections. Additionally, there are two indexes of tale types and motifs plus a thorough general index to the volume as a whole." U S Quarterly Bkl

Reviewed by M. P. Redfield

Am J Soc 53:155 S '47 1250w

"In the theoretical section one misses the most recent psychological approach. Nevertheless, no other volume provides greater breadth of understanding of the ramifications of the folklore field for those unacquainted with it. Superb documentation and appendices of reference works provide the clues to satisfaction of any further appetite for the field which the book may create." Horace Miner

+ — Am Soc R 12:489 Ag '47 300w

"The lay reader who has recently been introduced to American folklore as represented in such volumes as B. A. Botkin's 'A Treasury of Folklore,' may be disappointed to find few of its more robust manifestations, such as the 'tall tale.' 'The Folktale' has a liveliness of its own. It is for the most part ingratiatingly presented, and its scholarly achievement is in many respects unprecedented—at least within similar word limits and in the English language." Jack Conroy

+ — Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Mr 9 '47
240w

"Besides unique command of his subject, Dr. Thompson has marvelous gifts of lucidity and vocabulary, putting the most entangled ideas clearly and in their place. In short, this is the last word as well as the first—a must for every library and every reading man." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 72:224 F 1 '47 130w

School & Society 65:319 Ap 26 '47 10w

"Dr. Thompson, Professor of English and of Folklore at Indiana University, is one of our foremost scholars in this area. He is an authority on the folklore of the entire world, and long years of research, of teaching, and of writing form the background for his present volume." R. A. Brown

+ Social Educ 11:280 O '47 600w

"The author of the monumental Motif-Index of Folk Literature has culminated his work in the field of the folk tale with this valuable and readable summation of his studies in this genre of folklore. . . . The Folk Tale is an important and long needed addition to the growing field of folklore studies."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:13 Mr '47 160w

THOMPSON, TORGER G., and PETERSON, ROSS A. Illustrated jig-tooling dictionary. 349p $7.50 Macmillan

621.903 Jigs and fixtures. Machine tools
47-11386

"Book has over 1000 terms with explanations and drawings and many of special types of tooling and tooling procedures such as 16 functional drawings with accompanying legends that explain principal steps in drill construction, thirteen of which illustrate the typical construction of Kirksite blank and pierce dies. Includes also terminology used in individual industries and allied fields as aviation, metal-lurgy and plastic forming. Appendix has tables of standards. Mathematical and conversion tables." Library J

Booklist 44:168 Ja 1 '48

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 72:1379 O 1 '47 70w

"A wealth of illustrated factual data for tool-makers, tool engineers and designers and all others engaged in tool and jig construction."

Special Libraries 38:332 D '47

THOMSON, DAVID. Democracy in France; the Third republic; pub. for the Royal Institute of international affairs. 283p $4 Oxford

944.08 France—Politics and government

A47-1889

"The author examines the function of democratic processes under the Third Republic and evaluates the lessons which this experience has to offer." Foreign Affairs

"Much that Mr. Thomson has to say in the way of more purely political narrative and analysis is interesting, well informed, and judicious. This is particularly true of his balanced treatment of the Vichy regime, of his thoughtful analysis of the four 'new' factors which raised problems peculiar to the Third Republic—a new papal policy, a united Germany and Italy, overseas expansion, and a new era of industrialization in Europe. But there are other directions in which his book is less satisfactory." D. C. McKay

+ — Am Hist R 52:505 Ap '47 700w

"Mr. Thomson's Democracy in France will be welcomed by students and teachers of comparative government. It is an excellent short study of the working of democratic institutions under the impact of complex psychological and social forces. The author shows a thorough knowledge and sympathetic understanding of France's history. He has a flair for the nuances of political thought and knows how to get at the fundamentals, in ideas as well as in economic and social factors. His choice of sources is discriminating; his analysis both stimulating and sound." C. A. Micaud

+ Am Pol Sci R 41:364 Ap '47 700w

Reviewed by Gordon Wright

+ Ann Am Acad 252:122 J1 '47 600w

Reviewed by John Broderick

Chicago Sun Book Week p8 Je 29 '47
600w

Foreign Affairs 25:525 Ap '47 20w

"This is one of the most valuable of the studies planned by the Royal Institute of International Affairs." J. L. Hammond

+ Manchester Guardian p3 O 1 '46 430w

"Dr. Thomson's book is competent and well-informed. The chapter in which he analyses the class bases of French politics, and also the chapter in which he describes 'the democratic instrument' show wide reading and a fine grasp of essentials. Yet the first chapter of the volume which attempts to indicate the ideological background of the Third Republic suffers somewhat from overcondensation. The pages which deal with the history of France from 1870 to the birth of the Fourth Republic cannot supersede Professor Brogan's well-known book on The Development of Modern France, nor Mrs. Pickles' more sympathetic study." J. P. Mayer

THOMSON, DAVID—Continued

+ New Statesman & Nation 32:324 N 2 '46 390w

"This little book by David Thomson will be helpful to an understanding of the forces at work in the Third Republic and thereby to a more just evaluation of the Fourth. . . It is brimful of facts, generally interpreted with discriminating intelligence." Hans Kohn

+ N Y Times p10 F 23 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Geoffrey Bruun

Pol Sci Q 62:311 Je '47 600w

"A well-conceived and well-documented, but hastily-written study." Katharine Munro

+ Spec 177:428 O 25 '46 850w

"In his anxiety to provide the English public as soon as possible with a guide to French politics Mr. Thomson has packed too much into too small a space and in too great a hurry. Good passages of analysis, a good account of the Republic's foundation, a useful discussion of such subjects as the relation of trade unionism and socialism, and much else of value emerge from pages overcrowded and rendered more obscure partly because Mr. Thomson is combating what he considers an excessive simplification of French political issues and partly because he is admittedly adopting a logical rather than a chronological approach to his material. Such an arrangement requires more careful writing than Mr. Thomson seems to have realized."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p30 Ja 18 '47 360w

THORBECKE, MRS ELLEN (KOLBAN).

Promised land; described and photographed; with an introd. by W. J. R. Thorbecke; cover, diagrams and sketches designed by I. David. 171p $3.50 Harper

915.69 Palestine, Jews in Palestine 47-3298

In text, pictures, maps and diagrams the author sets forth the conditions and life of Palestine today against a background of Palestine of the past.

"A very skillful and beautiful presentation. . . There is almost no reference to anything that could be called the 'Palestine problem' or to any conflict of interests between Jews and Arabs. This is a picture of the Zionist ideal and of the actual accomplishments up to date."

+ Christian Century 64:626 My 14 '47 70w

Kirkus 15:255 My 1 '47 220w

"'Promised Land' can be read as a primer for adults, done in technicolor, or simply as a unique travel book written by an observer of taste and discernment. Today, when the Palestine problem is high on the international agenda, Mrs. Thorbecke's book is particularly timely." Gerold Frank

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 My 11 '47 750w

Reviewed by Alfred Werner

N Y Times p7 Ag 10 '47 550w

Reviewed by G. G. Stevens

San Francisco Chronicle p10 Jl 27 '47 80w

Springf'd Union p11 My 16 '47 180w

THOREAU, HENRY DAVID.

Portable Thoreau; ed. and with an introd. by Carl Bode. (Viking portable lib) 696p $2 Viking

818 47-1945

Selections from Thoreau's writings which include all of Walden; some of his poems and letters; a portion of his Journal; and essays, including Civil disobedience. Includes a short introduction by the editor. Bibliography.

Booklist 43:292 My 15 '47

Kirkus 15:91 F 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by John Farrelly

New Repub 117:30 Ag 18 '47 550w

"A very satisfactory distillation of Thoreau's writings."

+ New Yorker 23:116 Mr 22 '47 40w

THORN, C. JORDAN. Handbook of old pottery and porcelain marks; foreword by John Meredith Graham II. 176p il $3 Tudor

738.88 Hall marks 47-31110

"A concise reference work on the marks, signatures and monograms of all the important manufactories of Pottery, Porcelain, Majolica, Fayence, Delft and other earthenware in America, England, France, Germany and other countries of Europe and in China." (Publisher's note) Index.

Booklist 44:147 D 15 '47

"Of interest primarily to collectors and dealers. . . An alphabetical index of all the manufacturers in the field from 1400 to 1900 is a valuable addition to this reference book."

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 S 21 '47 90w

"The work should prove a gold mine of reference for those devoted to the line."

+ Christian Science Monitor p17 N 22 '47 240w

THORNBURY, ETHEL MARGARET. We've been waiting for you. 253p $2.50 Bobbs

47-31214

A spy story in which an ex-army flier is the hero. After his return to the United States he notices four men following him, and thinks he recognizes the voice of a Nazi among them. When an old friend is killed and the hero himself is pushed off a train he calls in the FBI to help him get to the bottom of the happenings.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week p43 O 10 '47 50w

"It's ably plotted and suspenseful." Jack Glick

+ N Y Times p42 O 12 '47 160w

"Alarming no end." E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p22 O 12 '47 60w

"Adequate thriller."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:32 O 18 '47 50w

Springf'd Republican p7B D 28 '47 90w

THORNE, ANTHONY. So long at the fair. 212p $2.50 Random house

47-2787

In 1889 a young English brother and sister arrived in Paris for the Exposition. They registered at a hotel, and were given rooms 38 and 39. In the morning when Vicky went to call her brother he and his room had disappeared. The story is of the mystery and how it was solved.

Booklist 43:310 Je 1 '47

"A dilemma deliciously sustained and enchantingly adorned, managed with lightness and given only a hint of seriousness." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 My 11 '47 170w

"Rather charming reading for lighter moments."

+ Kirkus 15:139 Mr 1 '47 160w

"Recommended." E. S. Brown

+ Library J 72:734 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 My 18 '47 380w

"It's done so deftly and with such nice detail that you probably won't mind its familiarity."

+ New Yorker 23:119 My 17 '47 100w

"The economy and precision of Mr. Thorne's writing, the pure warmth of his people, the singing sense of youth and joy—all make this as enchanting a piece of light fiction as has crossed this desk in years." Anthony Boucher
+ San Francisco Chronicle p22 My 18 '47
120w

Time 49:109 My 26 '47 250w

Times [London] Lit Sup p401 Ag 9 '47
480w

THORP, WILLARD, ed. Lives of eighteen from Princeton. 356p il $3.75 Princeton univ. press

920 U.S.—Biography. Princeton university
—Biography A47-348

Portrays eighteen Americans, from William Paterson, a forerunner of John Marshall, to F. Scott Fitzgerald. All were Princeton graduates or members of the faculty. Contents: William Paterson; Samuel Kirkland; Benjamin Rush; John Witherspoon; Samuel Stanhope Smith; Henry Lee; James Madison; Philip Lindsley; George Mifflin Dallas; Charles Hodge; Parke Godwin; John Sharpsteen Hager; Francis Preston Blair, Jr; Joseph Henry; Woodrow Wilson; Paul Elmer More; David Graham Phillips; F. Scott Fitzgerald.

"Balance and a style that is engaging characterize this collection of life stories as a happy union of literature and scholarship with history and biography." A. A. Rogers
+ Am Hist R 53:182 O '47 320w

"This is American history of a vivid, varied and personal kind. . . Benjamin Rush, John Witherspoon, Parke Godwin and Frank Blair make very high spots of interest in a narrative in which all the spots are high."
+ Christian Century 64:207 F 12 '47 140w

Current Hist 12:584 Je '47 10w

"Apparently, Editor Thorp balanced well-known names against their more neglected fellow alumni, but his tongue-in-cheek omission of Aaron Burr from the volume is glaringly noticeable." Richard Hemp
+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 F 2 '47
120w

School & Society 64:424 D 14 '46 20w

Times [London] Lit Sup p11 Ja 3 '48
170w

"The book remains a fine commentary upon Woodrow Wilson's ideal, 'Princeton in the Nation's service,' and opens many fascinating windows upon America's extraordinarily various past."
+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:47 Mr '47 280w

THURSTON, HENRY WINFRED. Education of youth as citizens; progressive changes in our aims and methods. 255p $3.50 Smith, Richard R.

372.83236 Citizenship. Education—Aims and objectives 47-1589

"A book for students in normal schools and colleges during their courses in the social studies and for teachers of social studies in primary, secondary and normal schools, and normal colleges." School & Society

"This book is noteworthy for its wealth of concrete and suggestive examples of projects and activities of proved value, and for its sane and constructive attitude. The book as a whole is a worthy memorial of a man who himself accomplished much good work in this field." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 F 16 '47
40w

"The volume provides interesting reading for both teachers and parents and will be a valuable reference book for the orientation of prospective teachers of the social studies in either elementary schools or high schools. It will also be found useful as a guide for the planning of workshop or in-service training programs designed for experienced teachers." N. B. Henry

+ El School J 47:414 Mr '47 380w

School & Society 65:127 F 15 '47 40w

TIETZE, HANS. European master drawings in the United States. 1td ed 326p 160il $20 Augustin

741.94 Drawings

47-30829

"A hundred and sixty handsome full-page plates, ranging from works of the fifteenth-century masters through those of the French Impressionists, and reflecting the widening of American collectors' interests, which have until lately run to paintings, as 'prestige' items. This volume shows the wealth of material we have in this country now." New Yorker

Booklist 44:9 S 1 '47

"There are minor errors on plates 103, 108 and 129; but, in the main, this book should achieve its purpose by generosity of space and amplitude of treatment. It will stimulate interest in the study and collecting of master drawings in this country." W. G. Dooley

+ N Y Times p30 O 19 '47 600w

"The information, both critical and historical, accompanying the plates is succinct and illuminating."

+ New Yorker 23:64 Ag 2 '47 80w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p11 Jl 27 '47
500w

TILMAN, HAROLD WILLIAM. When men and mountains meet. 232p il maps $3.50 Macmillan

940.548142 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, English. Mountaineering [A47-2420]

"Mr. Tilman's previous book, 'The Ascent of Nanda Devi' [Book Review Digest 1937] dealt with a single mountaineering expedition; his present one is bounded only by the decade it covers and the great globe itself. The earlier chapters describe three pre-war exploratory trips in the eastern Himalaya: two to the glaciers of Kanchenjunga and one to the almost unknown ranges of northern Assam. . . The war, with which the last two-thirds of the book is concerned, whisked Mr. Tilman away from his beloved Himalaya, but not, happily for him, from either high places or high adventure." N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R

"The book's charm is increased by many admirable photographs, but it is a pity that the scales of the maps are not given—a curious omission for a gunner." E. A. M.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 N 12 '46 210w

"When Men and Mountains Meet" is not primarily concerned with politics; nor, for that matter, with the larger aspects of either war or mountaineering. It is a record of strictly personal adventure, written with zest, modesty and a dry, indestructible British humor. Mr. Tilman and his breed have done more than their share in the past of fighting the world's wars and climbing the world's mountains. It is a breed, so the prophets tell us, which is already obsolescent; their successors will have a rather high mark to shoot at, both as mountaineers and as men." J. R. Ullman

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5
Ap 6 '47 700w

Times [London] Lit Sup p565 N 16 '46
1100w

TILTON, ALICE, pseud. See Taylor, P. A.

TILTON, ELEANOR M. Amiable autocrat; a biography of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes. 470p $5 Schuman

B or 92 Holmes, Oliver Wendell, 1809-1894
47-11672

Scholarly biography of Oliver Wendell Holmes portraying in detail the poet, doctor, lecturer, teacher, and wit. In the course of her work the author "manages to throw a lot of cold water on the more extravagant interpretations of Holmes, and to bring the Doctor himself down (or up?) to human size." (Sat R of Lit) Index.

TILTON, E. M.—Continued

Booklist 44:171 Ja 1 '48

"A staid and scholarly biography of Oliver Wendell Holmes portraying him in accurate, inconclusive and lifeless detail."

+ — Kirkus 15:519 S 15 '47 120w

"The biographer does not idolize her subject . . . but what emerges from her pages is a diligently documented study of an American celebrity who supplied the Victorian public with liberal doses of the sentiment it craved, yet somehow kept himself immune from the drug." G. F. Whicher

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p56 D 7 '47 650w

"Eleanor Tilton, of the English Department at Temple University, has reported the data and presented it with skill, intelligence and admirable restraint. Her book is a joy to the reader and an invitation to reflection." Perry Miller

+ N Y Times p5 D 7 '47 800w

"'Amiable Autocrat' corrects some of the obvious exaggerations of Mrs. Bowen's study. In Dr. Holmes's language, it is a 'specific' for the sentimentality, the romance à la Michelet, of the previous biography, and it is strong just where 'Yankee from Olympus' was weakest. . . Miss Tilton handles this outrageous and perplexing career with a commendable sobriety and a rather neat, dry style, not without humor." Maxwell Geismar

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 N 8 '47 750w

"The years of preparation for the book were well spent, for it hardly seems possible that there can be more to be known about Dr. Holmes than Dr. Tilton presents in her estimable biography. It is one of the most completely finished studies of personality to enrich American literary history, and brings to a sharp focus the engaging figure of the most vivacious of the Boston Brahmins, known to a later generation only through a few poems and some not very good novels." R. F. H.

+ Springfield Republican p9B N 9 '47 550w

TINA, DOROTHY LES. See Les Tina, D.

TINBERGEN, NIKOLAAS. Klæw. 42p $1.50 Oxford

Birds—Legends and stories 47-30878

The story of the life cycle of a sea gull from egg to full maturity. The author is professor of experimental zoology at Leiden university in Holland. The book was written as letters to his children while the author was held as a hostage in Germany.

Kirkus 15:502 S 15 '47 80w

"Style is delightful and will appeal to children from eight to ten. Many fascinating black-and-white drawings on each page supplement the text. Recommended." M. F. Cox

+ Library J 72:1381 O 1 '47 70w

"A scientific story with touches of humor and accurate and amusing drawings."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:54 N 15 '47 50w

TINDALL, WILLIAM YORK. Forces in modern British literature, 1885-1946. 385p $4 Knopf

820.9 English literature—History and criticism 47-4298

"This book, an exploration of contemporary British literature, is intended for the reader who knows something about it and wants to know more. Selection was necessary, but many minor writers [are included] who are interesting for one reason or another. The arrangement is planned to show the character of contemporary literature as a whole and to emphasize books rather than authors. The year 1885 seemed a good beginning." (Pref) Index.

Booklist 44:30 S 15 '47

"The volume has humor and insight, combined with critical evaluations."

Current Hist 13:34 Jl '47 50w

"Not a book for the student seeking an overview of 20th century literature, but for readers who have read widely, this should serve to correlate and clarify. The relatively casual reader will find confusion in the array of names, in the assumption of familiarity with writers many of whom are virtually forgotten today. An important book for college libraries."

+ Kirkus 15:182 Mr 15 '47 150w

"This is a difficult book to place: it is scarcely a book for general reading, though it is indeed, informative and pleasant to read. With its great range and good index it may have appeal for the scholar. However it is recommended for large libraries and school libraries—and for small libraries if the community is very alert to modern literary trends." K. T. Willis

+ Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 130w

"The book may stir curiosity, or wrath; it will not leave readers indifferent. It may, however, leave them wondering a little at the almost grim intensity of study which Mr. Tindall has bestowed upon authors whom he seems, as a whole, to dislike intensely." DeLancey Ferguson

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p5 My 25 '47 900w

"A book of such scope offers a large target to critics who would not have the energy to undertake it themselves. But on the whole, it is immeasurably helpful. The presentation of so much material with zest and clarity and conciseness is an awe-inspiring accomplishment." Robert Hillyer

+ — N Y Times p3 My 18 '47 800w

"Professor Tindall's book is intelligent, informed, and extremely useful." S. E. Hyman

+ Poetry 71:165 D '47 950w

Reviewed by A. Foff

San Francisco Chronicle p15 N 9 '47 100w

"The style is epigrammatic and often witty. No new theories or emphases are developed, but the survey is excellent, and the book should prove richly suggestive and informative even to those well read in modern English and Irish literature."

+ U S Quarterly Bkl 3:234 S '47 230w

TODD, BARBARA EUPHAN. See Bower, B. E. T.

TODD, HELEN. High places. 284p $2.75 Lip-pincott

47-1741

Novel based on the lives of the staff members of a hospital in an eastern mill town. The central characters are Dr Drew Fraser, who eventually becomes head of the hospital, and Kay Elliot, the warm-hearted assistant pathologist.

Booklist 43:348 Jl 1 '47

Kirkus 14:624 D 15 '46 150w

"Of limited appeal. Recommended to libraries buying a large percentage of recent fiction." E. S. Brown

Library J 72:810 My 15 '47 100w

"Here at last is a novel about doctors written without pretension, without a too easy accent on the mortal duel of operating rooms, but with a quietly profound understanding of what the medical profession can mean to men who have dedicated their lives to it. . . Throughout the book, though Miss Todd takes care not to step aside from her story to make editorial generalizations, nor to turn her characters into pegs on which to hang ideas, she manages to convey a philosophy which is compounded of fairness and common sense." Virginia Peterson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p7 Je 1 '47 800w

Wis Lib Bul 43:120 Jl '47

TODD, RUTHVEN. Tracks in the snow; studies in English science and art. 133p il $3.75 Scribner

824 Literature and science. Art and science. Blake, William. Fuseli, Henry [47-25160]

"A series of four related essays that explore, in ambulatory fashion, the effect the dawn of modern science had on the mystic painters and poets of the eighteenth century. In the course of his discussions, the author appraises the sources of William Blake's mythology and provides an engrossing biographical sketch of Blake's contemporary, Henry Fuseli, an eccentric painter of nightmares, horror, and pornography who once was as well known as Blake but is now generally forgotten. Illustrated." (New Yorker) Index.

"Not for general library use." A. S. Plaut
Library J 72:889 Je 1 '47 90w

Reviewed by Wylie Sypher
Nation 164:720 Je 14 '47 900w

"Mr. Todd is a brilliant poet and a distinguished novelist, and his new book reveals him to be, besides, a gifted exemplar of the long British tradition of amateur scholarship. His book is composed of four essays, and these are not related by a logical progress of argument but by their common immersion in an historical atmosphere, by Mr. Todd's perception of the relatedness of their subjects in the quality of an age. Nor is any of these essays exhaustive, definitive, or thetical; rather, each is deliberately tentative and exploratory, and each is rich in tangential suggestion, as sinuously tentacular as a poem." Mark Schorer
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 J1 6 '47 850w

New Yorker 23:125 Je 7 '47 100w

"Ruthven Todd shows himself to be a meticulous scholar, insistently verifying his facts, in these four very readable essays."

+ San Francisco Chronicle p21 Ag 24 '47 170w

"The subject is so fascinating that any exploration is bound to be exciting and rewarding. The desperate attempts to relate Scriptural truths to developing knowledge when men still used the Bible 'as a sort of combined Pears' Encyclopaedia and Mrs. Emily Post on etiquette' and 'the world was still an object small enough to cuddle in their hands like a bubble-glass of brandy' seem remote enough to us. In fact, however, it was largely from such material that Blake drew his visions, and I think the present volume does shed some new light on Blake's mythology." M. H. Middleton
+ Spec 178:86 Ja 17 '47 550w

"Mr. Todd is a true antiquary, exact in his references, assiduous in the pursuit of obscure volumes, and so prone to digression that at times he is not easy to read."

Times [London] Lit Sup p93 F 15 '47 550w

TOLSTOI, ALEKSEI NIKOLAEVICH. Russian tales for children; il. by K. Kouznetsov [tr. by Evgenia Schimanskaya]. 195p $2.50 Dutton

398.21 Folklore, Russian 47-3902

Selection of fifty-one Russian folk tales, retold for children. In his introduction the compiler says: "My object was to preserve all the crispness and spontaneity of the folk tales. This is how I set about it. From the numerous versions of each tale, I have selected the most interesting and characteristic. At the same time I have enriched it by adding picturesque turns of phrases and fresh details from other versions. Of course, in thus collecting a tale from various versions, or 'restoring' it, I have had to add something of my own, here and there, to alter and fill gaps."

Booklist 44:39 S 15 '47

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan
Horn Bk 23:358 S '47 80w

Kirkus 15:365 J1 15 '47 90w

"For rereading aloud to little folks these jingling tales are fine... For fireside entertainment of small people, the charm of variations on a popular theme is heightened by these Russian—not U. S. S. R.—characters, costumes and scenery." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 O 19 '47 170w

"A group of stories related in the folk style and retaining the freshness and originality of the spoken word. The universality of folk literature is well demonstrated in these tales, many of which are familiar stories in other countries set against a Russian peasant background... The extreme simplicity of some of the stories, their humor, and their employment of endless repetition make them suitable for young children, while the longer, more fanciful ones will be read with enjoyment by older boys and girls." Elizabeth Hodges

+ N Y Times p9 Ag 31 '47 190w

Reviewed by M. R. Kirschman
San Francisco Chronicle p11 N 16 '47 150w

"It is a book that will gravitate naturally to the hands of storytellers."

Sat R of Lit 30:35 S 6 '47 110w

TOMLINSON, EDWARD. Battle for the hemisphere. 250p $3.50 Scribner

980 Latin America—Politics 47-11069

"Sub-title of this rather disturbing book is 'Democracy Versus Totalitarianism in the Other America.' The other American republics were a mighty help to the United States and its allies in the recent war, but author's opinion is that chances of such aid being extended again are dangerously threatened by the infiltration of a small but powerful group of Communist Party members into a few vital industries as well as into the citadels of the governments themselves. Tomlinson also believes that Peron of Argentina has ambitions to become Fuehrer of all Latin America. He advocates a new Dollar Diplomacy which would help diversification of industry in Latin America, and which would deal with peoples, not their governments." (Library J) Index.

Booklist 44:88 N 1 '47

Reviewed by Henry Sowerby
Christian Science Monitor p19 D 5 '47 650w

Kirkus 15:489 S 1 '47 170w

"Recommended." E. F. Walbridge
+ Library J 72:1468 O 15 '47 130w

"Tomlinson has written honestly and with conviction and out of long experience. He is still inclined to dodge frank treatment of our diplomats. He purposely omits reference to the Braden-Messersmith feud on Argentina, a mistake it seems to this reviewer." Hubert Herring
+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly R p6 D 14 '47 550w

Reviewed by J. H. Jackson
San Francisco Chronicle p20 O 24 '47 900w

"'Battle for the Hemisphere' is a journalistic bird's-eye view with all the advantages and disadvantages inherent in this kind of book. It is neatly organized, colloquially written, and sharply to the point. On the other hand, there is an inclination to oversimplify, to exaggerate in the interests of emphasis, to cry warning overdramatically." Robert Okin
Sat R of Lit 30:12 N 22 '47 850w

Reviewed by Alfred Hasbrouck
Social Studies 39:38 Ja '48 500w

TOMLINSON, HENRY MAJOR. Morning light; the islanders in the days of oak and hemp. 304p $3 Macmillan

47-4559

The novel begins with the rescue of the girl Lucy, daughter of a wealthy shipowner, by young David, in a Cornish cave. Escaping to save trouble for his aunt, David goes on an emigrant ship around to California in the gold rush days. The story pictures England in the 1840's and 1850's, when the age of sailing ships was being replaced by the age of steam ships.

Booklist 44:18 S 1 '47

TOMLINSON, H. M.—Continued

Reviewed by W. H. Fetridge

Chicago Sun Book Week p7 Ag 24 '47
400w

"The book, taken either as a novel or as a parable of its times, is reading that quickens the imagination and holds the attention." W. K. R.

+ Christian Science Monitor p14 Ag 27 '47 550w

"Personal character-drawing is light, likeable, and adequate; it is, rather than individual, the character of a period that this novel draws in episodes and by phrases to illuminate the dawn of the Victorian era." Harold Brighouse

+ Manchester Guardian p3 D 13 '46 250w

"A new book by Tomlinson is always an interesting event. There is bound to be something in it. There is a trace of Moby Dick, a hint of transcendentalism, in almost everything Tomlinson has to say. A strange writer, this man; one loves his work, follows it closely, finds splendid passages in it, is exasperated by it at times, but always feels through and around it the shape of the main idea and the deep thoughtfulness with which this idea is pursued. The present book is no exception to the general run." Lincoln Colcord

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2 Ag 24 '47 1000w

"A magnificent sea adventure and a deep-throated protest against Old World feudalism. Much of his book is pure prose poem, a song of humming ropes, glinting waves, lifts, braces, halyards, sheets, down-haulers and the like. In Mr. Tomlinson's hands such things are symbols of his hard, brisk fellowship with the men who loved and understood their ships before engines came to mechanize emotion. Since the purity of this author's style is a matter of expert craftsmanship, the story hardly seems to be told at all, it grows quietly on the imagination like personal everyday experience. Characterizations make themselves at home in your mind like old acquaintances." Isabelle Maillet

+ N Y Times p3 Ag 24 '47 600w

"If you want to get the feel of a sailing vessel and don't mind frequent shifts in a narrative too slightly constructed to stand the strain, or if you care about establishing contact with a cultivated mind, Mr. Tomlinson may be your man."

New Yorker 23:77 Ag 23 '47 160w

"Mr. Tomlinson has never been too comfortable in the novel form. But his intensely pictorial imagination is by no means dormant in 'Morning Light.' There are passages about ships going out with the tide and about how the time element affects men on shipboard that are as fine as anything he has written." J. V.

+ San Francisco Chronicle p25 O 5 '47 400w

Reviewed by Fletcher Pratt

Sat R of Lit 30:16 S 6 '47 420w

Springf'd Republican p5B S 14 '47 150w

"Mr. Tomlinson's new novel is characterized by a discursiveness which reveals a certain frailty of plot. Nevertheless, as Mr. Tomlinson's readers know, the attractiveness of his writing is in no sense dependent on the merits of the story, and Morning Light will be enjoyed by many who appreciate his style and his knowledge of the sea."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p641 D 28 '46 420w

TOMLINSON, HENRY MAJOR. Turn of the tide. 182p $2.50 Macmillan

824 Voyages and travels. World war, 1939-1945—Great Britain 47-1797

A volume of essays by a distinguished English stylist. The first and longest essay is a journal of a sea voyage the author made with his son as companion in 1935. The other essays, written between 1940 and 1944 deal for the most part with the war, and civilization.

"Of the ten essays in Turn of the Tide, the first is by far the most successful, perhaps because its form as the journal of a Mediteranean cruise lends it more coherence than Mr. Tomlinson is able to give his other pieces. Here his skill in appreciating and contrasting the values of tradition and progress find adequate framework and symbol. . . The other chapters, written during the war in England, are almost lay sermons." Moira Walsh

+ Cath World 165:567 S '47 450w

Reviewed by S. K. Workman

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Jl 13 '47 460w

Kirkus 15:53 Ja 15 '47 160w

"Story of the sea voyage is colorfully and charmingly told and holds the reader's interest, but the abstract, vague and slightly confused thinking of the remaining chapters has little significance. For Tomlinson cultists and all admirers of style regardless of content. Recommended for limited purchase." G. W. Wakefield

+ Library J 72:461 Mr 15 '47 70w

"During ten years of war, and the preparations of war, Mr. Tomlinson meditated on the spirit of man as it reveals itself under stress. The essays which make up 'The Turn of the Tide' are the fruit of that meditation, and they are as heartening as the great war utterances of Winston Churchill—of whom, incidentally, Mr. Tomlinson offers a penetrating analysis. He is a hopeful man, in the heroic sense of the word, which makes hope a Christian virtue. He despairs of our leaders and our science; he never despairs of mankind." DeLancey Ferguson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4 Mr 30 '47 900w

"If Mr. Tomlinson's style is not simple, it is because he is always trying to look through nature to primary causes. He is never content with surface impressions. In the sea pages of 'The Turn of the Tide' his style is at its best. . . Mr. Tomlinson's reflections during the war years have very little that is concrete in them. Although one naturally admires Mr. Tomlinson's courage in facing tragedy candidly, the war essays might be sturdier if they had more human beings in them. There is comfort in people. He writes compassionately of humanity in the war essays, but he rarely admits people to these pages." Brooks Atkinson

+ N Y Times p3 Mr 30 '47 800w

Reviewed by Jane Voiles

San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 1 '47 800w

"Few observers have had so clear a vision of our troubled world, or made so keen a diagnosis of the ills afflicting it in the last forty years as H. M. Tomlinson; and none writes with a more restrained and effective passion, a more lucid and subtle prose. . . His great asset is a sense of the past, of the pressure of human history, whether recognized or not, on the men and affairs of today. He is, that is, firmly within the pattern of Christian culture, though he has the intellectual diffidence of the traditional English liberal in claiming his place in it. His last essay 'Christmas Eve' is, in its moving picture of East London under the blitz, a lovely essay in hope, the only hope, he would say, that can give the world the faith needed to confront and conquer our besetting terrors." R. E. Roberts

+ Sat R of Lit 30:10 Je 14 '47 450w

TOOR, FRANCES. Treasury of Mexican folkways. 566p il $5 Crown

398 Folklore—Mexico. Mexico—Social life and customs 47-30306

"The customs, myths, folklore, traditions, beliefs, fiestas, dances, and songs of the Mexican people." (Subtitle) The book is based on the author's knowledge of Mexican ways and customs acquired during a residence of twenty-five years in Mexico. She is at present a professor of folklore at the University of Mexico. Bibliography. Glossary. Index.

"To illustrate more than 500 densely packed pages of fascinating and factual text, there are 170 photographs showing nearly every phase of native Mexican life, 100 ink drawings by Carlos Merida, and ten handsome color plates of regional costumes." MacKinley Helm

+ Atlantic 180:126 Jl '47 600w

Booklist 43:307 Je 1 '47

"The volume is not a guide but it is certainly the most comprehensive background to Mexico for the traveler and the casual student which has ever been made popularly available. It will at once take its place among the 'musts' on the shelf of books about Mexico. And it is likely to stay there for a good many years."

J. W. Rogers

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p5 Je 1 '47 290w

"Undoubtedly, a better understanding of the Catholic faith and a keener sense of what, for lack of a better expression, may be called the Catholic instinct, would have enabled the author to bring into greater relief the significance of Catholic culture and to assign to popular cults and expressions a truer appraisal relative to this faith. For her, although in a thoroughly kindly spirit, there seems to be no substantial difference between the pagan legends and what she refers to as 'the Christian myths.' With this important observation, however, the book may be recommended as a most valuable compilation of Mexican folklore. It should be in the library of everyone who is genuinely interested in Mexico and its people."

J. A. Magner

+ Commonweal 47:46 O 24 '47 550w

Kirkus 15:249 My 1 '47 240w

"Songs and dance-music section has fullest selection available in print in the United States. Less readable than Botkin, but absolutely essential both as one volume encyclopedia and travel guide. Editor is the English-speaking authority on Mexico, and a lifetime of collection, personal experiences and research is here classified, nicely illustrated with photography and drawings and boom!—comprehensively indexed." E. L. Lewis

+ Library J 72:807 My 15 '47 120w

"The 'Treasury' is the first and only reference book covering all aspects of current Mexican folkways. This is its chief virtue and claim to distinction. . . This rather superficial study of the life, ways, and culture patterns of the Mexican folk has been almost universally hailed as the outstanding work of an expert by other experts in newspapers and magazines throughout the country. Whether these reviewers have praised the 'Treasury' through ignorance or simply in the spirit of auld lang syne does not matter. In so doing they have performed no service to the intelligent reading public or to Mexican folklore." Virginia Mishnun

— Nation 165:345 O 4 '47 1600w

"Frances Toor is one of the few people who could write [this book]. It is a book which demanded obstinacy. She had it, and spent twenty-five years gathering material. . . The book is well named. It is a 'treasury' into which Miss Toor has packed the truest things in the life of the Mexican Indian." Hubert Herring

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p1 Je 8 '47 1300w

"Though there are notes and a bibliography, the book is not written primarily for folklorists. It makes little attempt to disentangle heritages or note exact sources. Yet no folklorist can afford to be without it, since it is the first over-all survey of the field of Mexican folklore." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Times p24 Je 22 '47 800w

"You can almost call a book of this kind an encyclopedia, but to label this one in that way would be to give an incomplete impression. Arranged as it is, the book is fascinating reading, entirely aside from its reference value." J. H. Jackson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p16 My 22 '47 550w

Reviewed by Betty Kirk

Sat R of Lit 30:26 J1 5 '47 500w

Discussion by Betty Kirk, and others

Sat R of Lit 30:19 O 18 '47 1400w

Springf'd Union p6 J1 12 '47 360w

"Mexico has never been so sympathetically, interestingly, and completely introduced to the English-speaking public as in Frances Toor's 'A Treasury of Mexican Folkways.' In future, no one who wants to know about Mexico or plans to go there can do without the book, or, using it, can fail to have an understanding of Mexican ways and an insight into Mexican life that will enrich contact with the country and its peoples." G. L. M. Morley

+ Survey 83:324 N '47 650w

Theatre Arts 31:74 Ag '47 190w

TOOTLE, HARRY KING. Employees are people; what management owes them and what it does for them. 350p $3.50 McGraw

658.3 Employment management 47-18764

"Human relationship as seen through the eyes of the personnel director. Author's thesis is that man is not a physio-chemical machine but a human being who should be treated as an individual whether he is owner, manager or worker and that consideration of human beings is the first point in relationships." (Library J) Index.

"Excellent book full of pep and written in a style to appeal." L. A. Eales

+ Library J 72:817 My 15 '47 70w

Reviewed by R. M. Kellogg

Management R 36:231 Ap '47 340w

Reviewed by Thomas Lask

N Y Times p36 My 25 '47 360w

"Possibly because 'Employees Are People' is in the form of a textbook it is doubly refreshing to find that a work on personnel can be not only instructive and constructive but highly entertaining as well." Rudolf Neuburger

+ School & Society 65:350 My 10 '47 450w

TORGERSON, THEODORE L. Studying children; diagnostic and remedial procedures in teaching. 230p $2.75 Dryden

371 Teaching. Child study 48-347

"It is Professor Torgerson's contention that the 'traditional' or 'conventional' school of today aims only at mastery of subject matter as a goal, disregarding completely what happens to the child in the process. The main fault of our primary school system is that it fails to recognize the importance of actually 'studying' the child before any teaching can begin. The author, who is Professor of Education and Director of the Psycho-Educational Clinic at the University of Wisconsin, explains in great detail just how the teacher may study the child. His suggested methods are observation, the interview, seeing the child in the home, use of standard tests and the case history." (N Y Times) Selected references at ends of chapters. Index.

"It is doubtful that this book will find any reader audience outside the educator group at which it is directed. That group, of course, will find much of value in it, and yet there arises the possibility that even they might question a certain aspect of his proposed plan. It does seem that if recognition of the individuality of the child is to be of first importance in education, a rather undue amount of stress is placed by Professor Torgerson upon the cold facts presented by cumulative record charts and other technical data." H. G. Marsden

+ N Y Times p10 S 7 '47 220w

Reviewed by W. W. Brickman

School & Society 66:333 O 25 '47 90w

TORREY, MARJORIE, pseud. See Chanslor, T.

TOULMIN, HARRY AUBREY. Trade-mark act of 1946; analyzed, annotated and explained. 224p $5 W. H. Anderson co, 524 Main st, Cincinnati

347.7 Trade marks 47-480

"A section-by-section analysis of the Lanham Trade-Mark Act, passed by the 79th Congress, which places in one statute all federal law relating to trademarks and repeals all prior laws which are inconsistent with the Act. Clearly details the provisions of the Act and their implications for every trade-mark owner.

TOULMIN, H. A.—Continued

The author also makes concrete recommendations for obtaining maximum protection under the new legislation." Management R

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:817 My 15 '47 60w
Management R 36:238 Ap '47 30w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Bill and the circus; il. by the author. 32p $1.25 Whitman, A.

47-4515

Tells in story and pictures how Bill and his uncle, who lived on a ranch, did such a fine riding trick that they got into the circus for a time.

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '47 30w

Reviewed by M. L. Becker
N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p6 J1 6 '47 200w

"The story is meant to teach qualities necessary for attainment of success such as co-operation and friendliness. It is illustrated with drawings by the author." P. R.
+ Springfield Republican p14B N 2 '47 110w

TOUSEY, SANFORD. Tinker Tim. 41p $1.50 Doubleday

46-22595

Tim travels as helper to a tinker, learning the trade of mending pots and pans, and living in the old man's wagon. The horse, Lady Bess has racing blood in her veins, so part of the story tells of racing in the sulkey races at the county fairs. For ages six to ten.

"It's just the right kind of excitement for younger boys."
+ Chicago Sun Book Week p25 N 10 '46 80w

Reviewed by F. C. Darling
Christian Science Monitor p12 O 28 '47 30w

"A lot of story for this age level, and interesting details of the county fair."
+ Kirkus 14:541 N 1 '46 90w

"This author-artist's books fill a need for boys who want easy-to-read, exciting stories as well as for older slow readers." Margaret Miller

+ Library J 71:1810 D 15 '46 70w

TOWLE, LAWRENCE WILLIAM. International trade and commercial policy. 780p $4.50 Harper

337 Commercial policy. Commerce 47-3989

"Documented college textbook on international trade and payments, foreign exchange, tariffs and international relations, dumping, Merchant Marine policies and other aspects and future of international trade." (Library J) Index.

"In an era when growing interest is being evidenced on the subjects of international economics and the commerce of nations, this book should be welcomed by teachers and students who are looking for a timely and straightforward analysis of the economic basis of foreign relations and the mechanisms of international trade." H. E. Hall

+ Ann Am Acad 254:207 N '47 300w

Reviewed by L. A. Eales
Library J 72:1040 J1 '47 30w

TOYNBEE, ARNOLD JOSEPH. A study of history; abridgement of v. 1-6, by D. C. Somervell; issued under the auspices of the Royal Inst. of int. affairs. 617p $5 Oxford

901 Civilization. History—Philosophy

47-2302

An abridgement of volumes one to six of Professor Toynbee's Study of History, of which the first three appeared in 1933, the second three in 1939 (Book Review Digest 1934, 1940). It is an analysis of the rise and fall of civilizations. Index.

Reviewed by W. H. Coates
Am Hist R 53:75 O '47 750w

"As a professional historian and publicist, Professor Toynbee is primarily a specialist on the modern history of the Near East, particularly contemporary Greece. This is a source both of strength and weakness for his larger study. . . . One sound, basic procedure of Toynbee is the fact that he takes as his unit for historical theory, societies, not states; civilizations, not nations. . . . Not only is Toynbee's aim and motivation divergent from those of the historian of civilization, but he has little technical preparation to execute a vast comparative history of civilization. . . . It would have been difficult for Toynbee to compose a great history of civilization because of his lack of adequate acquaintance with cultural anthropology, historical sociology and social history. . . . As sociology, Toynbee's work has been hailed by some as a masterly contribution to what is called the 'culture case study' method. Unfortunately, Toynbee had his 'case' all made out before he studied it comparatively." H. E. Barnes

Am Soc R 12:480 Ag '47 5000w

"It is difficult to see how the abridgement could have been done more loyally or more adroitly." W. R. Crawford

Ann Am Acad 252:157 J1 '47 650w

Booklist 43:258 Ap 15 '47

"A Study of History presents an enormous mass of historical material strung along a thin line of argument often represented only by a single word, generally Greek. In the original, one can snuggle down to read endlessly about hundreds of fascinating subjects, with a comfortable feeling that all the time all this is proving something, though we may have to look back at the table of contents to see just what it is. The abridgement, by exposing the lines of communication more clearly, indicates that Toynbee is not writing a philosophy of history so much as unrolling a vast historical panorama. His material does not really 'prove' anything; it provides the detail of his vision, and he leads us toward an imaginative total apprehension which can skip over the logical, and sometimes even the factual, stage." Northrop Frye

Canadian Forum 27:111 Ag '47 2750w

Reviewed by M. St. A. Woodside

Canadian Hist R 28:312 S '47 1000w

Reviewed by R. J. Hooker

Chicago Sun Book Week p3a D 3 '47 550w

"Admittedly, this single volume will be useful to the student, chiefly for 'business purposes.' But, to the general reader who has faltered at the prospect of six volumes, it should prove of the utmost value. It includes all the essentials, yet is well calculated to lure him to the fountainhead." Mr. Somervell deserves much gratitude for providing this easy access to a most important historian." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p16 Ap 9 '47 500w

"Mr. Somervell's one-volume digest and interpretation of Toynbee, undertaken for his own amusement, has resulted in a work which has won the plaudits not only of the great historical master himself but of the widest range of current observers. Remarkable juggling of centuries, continents and civilizations occurs in nearly every chapter."

+ Commonweal 46:69 My 2 '47 70w

Foreign Affairs 25:694 J1 '47 40w

"The condensation of Arnold Toynbee's monumental work to approximately a sixth of its original length inevitably involves great loss, and the editor himself is keenly aware of the values he was forced to sacrifice. . . . There is, however, enough gain in this loss fully to justify the labors of the editor as well as the approval of Mr. Toynbee, who gave the abridged edition the benefit of a final revision. It is sufficiently meritorious to have provided a short-cut for the large number of readers who can not afford taking the long journey through six volumes. In addition Toynbee's thought, forced into the narrow compass of a single volume, shows its outline and structure with a new impressive clarity. Reading Mr. Somervell's edition one may feel, as Toynbee himself did, that this is not the old book mutilated, but a new book telling the same story at an accelerated tempo. The omissions are considerable but they are made in accordance with a consistent plan. The proportions of the original are not distorted but replaced with new ones. Mr. Somervell has successfully performed a tour de force." Helmut Kuhn

+ J Philos 44:489 Ag 28 '47 4550w

"Mr. Somervell has done a service in producing this admirable abridgment of Mr. Toynbee's masterpiece—and not only to the lazy. For his summary enables the student to concentrate more easily on the argument which is too often lost in the rich labyrinth of the original six volumes." J. M. D. P.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Mr 5 '47 600w

"Toynbee's conception and analysis and exposition of the ideas of growth, of challenge and response, of break-down and disintegration, of withdrawal and return are, each of them, of sufficient importance and excellence to merit serious study; his presentation is as 'entrancing' as Mr. Somervell suggests it is. If readers of this review have time for only one book during this year—and the next and the next—Somervell's abridgment of Toynbee's 'Study of History' should be that book." E. D. Myers

+ Nation 164:455 Ap 19 '47 1500w

"Mr. Somervell justly claims that his abridgement is not dull. Indeed it retains all the allusive flavor of the original, its unique mixture of exquisitely precise writing... and of most imprecise thought." R. H. S. Crossman

New Repub 117:24 Jl 14 '47 2400w

Reviewed by R. H. S. Crossman

New Statesman & Nation 33:157 Mr 8 '47 1250w

Reviewed by Crane Brinton

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Mr 30 '47 1300w

"Toynbee is a very learned man. . . So his knowledge is overwhelming. When it comes to less recondite fields, my faith in Toynbee's omniscience is no longer so blind. There are many interpretations I feel free to challenge, and even a few minor facts. . . But on the whole, we may take it for granted that Toynbee's information is accurate as well as overwhelming." Albert Guerard

+ — N Y Times p1 Ap 13 '47 1550w

Reviewed by George Snell

San Francisco Chronicle p17 Mr 30 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Hajo Holborn

Sat R of Lit 30:11 My 31 '47 2850w

"The abridgement is published with Professor Toynbee's blessing and detailed vetting, so that it can be treated as authoritative. Shortening has been achieved mainly by reducing the number of illustrations of each stage of the argument, and by omitting detail of exposition. The main argument remains all the more starkly exposed for study because of the excisions. Of Mr. Somervell's achievement little can be said other than that it has been done skilfully, fairly, sympathetically, and in such a way as to leave an immensely readable and at times charming book." David Thomson

+ Spec 178:81 Ja 17 '47 950w

Times [London] Lit Sup p116 Mr 15 '47 900w

"It should be obvious that whether or not one finally assents to Toynbee's basic interpretations, this book is essential reading for anyone striving to achieve intellectual coherence in our age of confusion. On the most modest reckoning, such a rigorous effort at comprehensive analysis will result in the repudiation of many idols, whether of the market place, the cloisters, or the study. But it is only proper that the prospective reader should be forewarned on two matters. The first is that, however receptive his initial intentions, he is likely to find himself exasperated time and again as the argument unfolds. . . The second warning is more elementary, but none the less necessary. This is no popularization; nor is it a recondite rewriting of 'The Outline of History.' The demand it makes upon the reader's capacities is exacting." C. H. Driver

Yale R n s 36:727 summer '47 1250w

TOYNBEE, PHILIP. Prothalamium; a cycle of the Holy Graal. 127p $2.50 Doubleday 47-30486

A brief novel in experimental form. The scene is a tea party consisting of seven guests and the hostess. The progress of the party is interpreted by each guest in turn, thus making an interweaving of seven different views of the same thing. According to the title it is intended as "a celebration before marriage."

Reviewed by Jex Martin

Chicago Sun Book Week p2 Ag 24 '47 360w

"Some readers will find it precocious, some will consider it perverse and scatological, and most will think it merely dull. Possibly it is too British for our taste. . . There's a faint flavor of Joyce, in miniature."

Kirkus 15:317 Je 15 '47 170w

"It is successful more than half the way. On the credit side, it is brilliant; on the debit side, bewildering. 'Prothalamium' is as full of pace and clue, though on quite another level, as a detective story (the reader is captivated). Its ingenious narrative structure demands the whole concentration (the reader is constrained). Its levels of meaning are many (the reader is confounded). Through all this complexity, Mr. Toynbee leads the reader with precision and dexterity; no element of time, no marginal reflection or reference is without its clue. His language has the vigor, refinement and bawdiness of the Elizabethan poets as well as a small indebtedness to the early Joyce and to T. S. Eliot. It is a language that Mr. Toynbee has assimilated, is at home in and expert at." A. S. Morris

+ — N Y Times p3 Ag 10 '47 600w

"The wraithlike tale flowing underneath the contemporary story is suggested with subtlety and considerable delicacy of invention, but for this sort of thing to be really effective the main narrative must be of more expertly fashioned and solid stuff than Mr. Toynbee's fanciful work. An interesting effort, whose obscurities seem to arise from an honestly overexuberant imagination rather than from eccentric willfulness."

+ — New Yorker 23:62 Ag 9 '47 200w

"No tea party, probably, was ever quite as carefully documented as this one. . . Why the author chose to cast his curious little novel in just this form is another matter. Others have said the same sort of thing Toynbee is saying here, and have managed to do it in more familiar ways; indeed, any novel which is seriously intended is, like this one, at once a reflection and an interpretation of living. And 'Prothalamium,' effective as it is and admirably done as it is, loses some of its effect because of its unusual form. On the other hand, it gains in some degree simply because the reader is startled into the concentration which the book demands. However you take his book, Toynbee has at least done a fine job of the thing he set out to do." J. H. Jackson

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p12 S 1 '47 600w

"With all due respect to the stimulative effect of that delicate beverage, it is doubtful whether tea has ever before induced among a group of ordinary mortals such an exciting interplay of conscious and unconscious thoughts, such provocative ideas, teetering on the brink of hope and despair, life and death. Three-quarters of the credit must go to Mr. Toynbee's exquisite writing, erudition, and ambition to write a parable for our times. The other quarter rests with the reader and what he may bring from his heart and conscience to this challenging allegory." Richard McLaughlin

Sat R of Lit 30:13 Ag 9 '47 700w

TOYNBEE, PHILIP—Continued

"Prothalamium is a novel for readers who have time to read a book twice. It is a razzle-dazzle literary experiment whose pedigree, all too obviously, reads: by James Joyce out of Virginia Woolf. . . Philip Toynbee is a very clever young man. Prothalamium is too clever by half."

Time 50:98 Ag 11 '47 500w

TRACY, JOHN CLAYTON. Surveying: theory and practice [rev. and rearranged]. 1279p il $7.50 Wiley

526.9 Surveying 47-1362

"This is a revision of the author's Plane surveying to which has been added about 500 pages of new material to provide, in one volume, the fundamentals and theory of surveying. Almost a new book. For textbook or reference use." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:294 My 15 '47

Eng N 138:127 Je 12 '47 120w

N Y New Tech Bks 32:19 Ja '47

TRADER VIC, pseud. See Bergeron, V.

TRAVEL (periodical). Week-end book of travel: exploration, adventure, romance over far horizons, in company with Travel's contributors; ed. by Coburn Gilman. 352p il $3.50 McBride

910.8 Voyages and travels 47-321

A collection of articles, sketches, stories, culled from the pages of Travel magazine. Partial contents: What animals talk about, by Julian Huxley; Citadels of renunciation, by René Fülöp-Miller; How it feels to jump a parachute, by Wolfgang Langewiesche; A tragedy of the Guatemalan uplands, by Carleton Beals; Tattooing as a fine art in Japan, by Albert Parry; An American doctor in Korea, by Willard Price; The strangest animal in Africa, by Attilio Gatti; Growing up in a Dutch fishing town, by D. C. de Jong; Capturing the royal bird of the Aztecs, by V. W. von Hagen; The city of the dead at Cerveteri, by D. H. Lawrence; Farewell to Athens, by Norman Douglas; A stone age hostess entertains, by Reginald Orcutt.

"If you enjoy reading about people, places and animals, here is a roundup of articles published between two world wars that gives you—as radio commercials keep iterating—all three. . . There is something for almost every taste and temperament, with information about falcons, reptiles, hermits, gypsies, Aztecs, Koreans and how it feels to jump a parachute."

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p20 Ja 12 '47 140w

"This collection is a handy and entertaining book for a week-end in the country or for stay-at-homes to keep conveniently on their bed-table," A. H. King

+ N Y Times p22 D 15 '46 420w

Springf'd Union p4 Je 11 '47 120w

TREASE, GEOFFREY. Trumpets in the west; il. by Joe Krush. 239p $2.50 Harcourt

47-31021

England at the time of the 1688 revolution is the background for this story of four teen-aged children who go up to London each of them seeking a career. For ages eleven to fourteen.

Booklist 44:118 N 15 '47

"Convincing historical novel."

+ Churchman 161:17 N 15 '47 20w

"This story has significance for young people today, as it presents vividly certain dramatic scenes in the history of the Englishman's fight against dictatorship." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 24:42 Ja '48 100w

Kirkus 15:504 S 15 '47 80w

"This well-written story of Jack's struggle is clothed in picturesque language but has enough suspense to interest the modern child. Recommended for ages 11-14." Sonja Wennerblad

+ Library J 72:1476 O 15 '47 50w

Manchester Guardian p3 D 16 '47 90w

"The simple life of English town and village is charmingly pictured, along with historical events and the individual adventures of the characters." N. K. Burger

+ N Y Times p5 N 16 '47 140w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:155 D 6 '47 40w

"This is a good, fast-moving tale—well characterized. There is the tense political setting and there is the interesting artistic background of London, with its growing interest in the theatre, with Purcell at the height of his fame and productivity, and with Christopher Wren's genius becoming evident all over England. The illustrations interpret well the period and the settings."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:56 N 15 '47 180w

Times [London] Lit Sup p636 D 6 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:158 N '47

TREAT, LAWRENCE (LAWRENCE ARTHUR GOLDSTONE). Q as in quicksand. 218p $2.50 Duell 47-4528

Detective story.

"[Treat's] new tec is lively and well salted although there are times when he appears to have dreamed up a little more plot than he can dispose of comfortably." James Sandoe

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Je 1 '47 130w

Kirkus 15:246 My 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p12 Jl 13 '47 100w

N Y Times p24 Je 29 '47 140w

"Well and solidly constructed."

+ New Yorker 23:99 Je 14 '47 80w

"Mr. Treat remains incomparable in his understanding blend of the realism of police procedure and the reality of human beings." Anthony Boucher

+ San Francisco Chronicle p19 Je 15 '47 100w

"Admirable."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:34 Jl 5 '47 50w

TREAT, LAWRENCE (LAWRENCE ARTHUR GOLDSTONE). T as in trapped. 250p $2.50 Morrow

47-6505

Detective story.

Reviewed by James Sandoe

Chicago Sun Book Week O 31 '47 40w

Kirkus 15:484 S 1 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p55 D 7 '47 140w

Reviewed by Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p14 D 14 '47 150w

"Less satisfactory than previous mysteries in this series."

New Yorker 23:136 N 8 '47 80w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 N 9 '47 80w

"G as in good."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:44 N 8 '47 40w

Springf'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 50w

TRECKER, HARLEIGH B. Group process in administration. 127p $2.75 Womans press

361.8 Charity organization 46-6213

"An expert's guide for amateurs and less experienced professionals in various types of administrative work—primarily in social service, but also in education, religion, and wherever there is responsibility for organizing and directing a body of personnel for the accomplishment of specific results. The keynote is cooperation and leadership, not dictatorship. The 'group process' excludes the 'big boss' idea of administration." Christian Century

"While not a systematic treatise this little book of seven short chapters is exceedingly stimulating and suggestive, particularly in its treatment of committee techniques." E. B. Harper

+ Am Soc R 12:489 Ag '47 200w

Reviewed by Marietta Stevenson

+ Ann Am Acad 251:208 My '47 440w

Christian Century 64:48 Ja 8 '47 90w

"The general point of view of the book, which the author identifies as a 'preliminary formulation... partial in scope' should have a healthy influence on the thinking of administrators in all types of group associations. As a handbook of principles for guiding teachers and administrators in effective co-operative endeavor, this publication is a valuable initial contribution which should stimulate further discussions and understandings." R. H. Anderson

+ El School J 47:413 Mr '47 600w

"The book is characterized by precision of thinking, economy of language, effectiveness of exposition, relevance to reality, and systematic development. It provides at once a philosophy and a psychology of democratic administration." C. E. Hendry

+ Survey 83:189 Je '47 200w

TREFFINGER, CAROLYN. Li Lun, lad of courage; il. by Kurt Wiese. 96p $2.50 Abingdon-Cokesbury

47-30406

A Chinese boy who was afraid of the sea was sent by his fisherman father to the top of a high barren mountain to grow a crop of rice. There the boy fought drought, rats, gulls, and rain, and raised his little crop to the harvest. Then the villagers changed their tactics and called him lad of courage, instead of coward.

Booklist 44:39 S 15 '47

Reviewed by Martha King

Chicago Sun Book Week p6 S 21 '47 70w

Reviewed by A. T. Eaton

Christian Science Monitor p6 D 11 '47 170w

"A beautifully written and dramatic story. Kurt Wiese, with his skill and his knowledge of China, has made lovely pictures for it." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:358 S '47 90w

"Courage, and the rewards of courage, have here a quality of feeling that should give this book a long life."

+ Kirkus 15:337 Jl 1 '47 90w

"In theme, simplicity of treatment, and excellence of illustrations, this book in its way is as distinguished as Call It Courage." M. B. Snow

+ Library J 72:1199 S 1 '47 80w

+ N Y Times p44 N 16 '47 150w

"Carolyn Treffinger's style and Kurt Wiese's illustrations combine to reflect, in their beauty and simplicity, the universal quality and appeal of this story for boys everywhere." M. Z. Brown

+ San Francisco Chronicle p10 N 16 '47 250w

"This is a story of courage and faith in the face of loneliness and fear and uncertainty. The drawings are completely satisfying."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:46 N 15 '47 40w

Spring'd Republican p10B N 16 '47 110w

Wis Lib Bul 43:136 O '47

TRESSELT, ALVIN R. White snow, bright snow; il. by Roger Duvoisin. 33p $2 Lothrop 47-11601

Picture storybook describing the effects and the beauty of the first snowfall of winter. For ages three to six.

Booklist 44:157 D 15 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p3a N 19 '47 100w

Reviewed by A. M. Jordan

Horn Bk 23:440 N '47 50w

Reviewed by A. C. Moore

Horn Bk 24:25 Ja '48 200w

Kirkus 15:598 N 1 '47 80w

"Even grown-ups, to whom snow means discomfort and inconvenience, will see this picture book's beauty with delight." Gertrude Andrus

+ Library J 72:1692 D 1 '47 80w

"These colored pictures are merry in themselves yet full of memories for any one who has in his own childhood or that of his children run out to greet the annual marvel of the snow." M. L. Becker

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p8 N 16 '47 280w

"As in 'Raindrop Splash,' Alvin Tresselt here celebrates the weather in evocative prose. This time it is a snowstorm, and if, by the very nature of its subject, this book lacks something of the forward drive which animated the other, it captures the excitement and ever-recurring wonder which all children feel as the first flakes fall and the world takes on a softer shape and new colors." E. L. B.

+ N Y Times p4 N 16 '47 110w

Reviewed by R. C. Benét

New Yorker 23:142 D 6 '47 60w

"For the child from 4 to 8 who has seen snow there is on every page all the familiar delight and magic of a snowfall, and for the child who has never known it, these snowy scenes will have the great fascination of the strange and beautiful." Sara Dickson

+ San Francisco Chronicle p6 N 30 '47 150w

TRESSLER, DONALD KITELEY, and others. Into the freezer, and out. 223p il $2.50 Avi pub.

641.48 Food, Frozen

46-5588

"Detailed processing instructions are given in this timely book on food preservation and packaging of food for freezer storage. For the home and useful for users of commercially frozen foods. Chapter on freezing precooked foods." Library J

"This is an excellent practical guide to the proper freezing of foods. Much of the material presented is a digest of facts taken from the technical publication by Tressler and Evers, The Freezing Preservation of Foods, but now presented in a form that can be easily followed by the owner of a home freezer, a renter of space in a frozen food locker, or by the operator of a locker plant." H. S. Adams

+ Am J Pub Health 36:1329 N '46 350w

Cleveland Open Shelf p7 Mr '47

Reviewed by L. A. Eales

Library J 71:1130 S 1 '46 40w

TREVOR, ELLESTON. Deep wood; il. by Stephen J. Voorhies. 282p $2.50 Longmans

47-31268

Story for young people about the home life of a group of small animals living in the woods and along the river: the badger, the otter, the owl, etc.

Booklist 44:138 D 1 '47

Chicago Sun Book Week p5a N 19 '47 130w

"A story both humorous and entertaining." A. M. Jordan

+ Horn Bk 23:358 S '47 120w

TREVOR, ELLESTON—Continued

"Although it seems overlong and slow, it is a pleasant book for younger children in this age level, and Stephen Voorhies' illustrations in black and white are friendly and fun."

+ — Kirkus 45:394 Ag 1 '47 120w

"Beautifully told by one who obviously loves the woods and his pipe. People who love leisurely things will enjoy it, but it is as monotonous as the sound of a brook past one's window and lacks the subtlety of 'The Wind in the Willows.' How one misses Mr. Toad!" Phyllis Fenner

+ — N Y Times p61 N 9 '47 130w

"This is a long chronicle of the deep forests in England and of the little animals who dwell there. It is a warm, friendly story rich with a knowledge of the wild things and their ways, giving them character and humor and the temperament that goes with the life that they lead."

+ Sat R of Lit 30:53 N 15 '47 230w

"A delightful story."

+ School & Society 66:254 S 27 '47 30w

Wis Lib Bul 43:179 D '47

TREVOR-ROPER, HUGH REDWALD. Last days of Hitler. 254p $3 Macmillan

B or 92 Hitler, Adolf 47-1942

"In September, 1945, Mr. Trevor-Roper, then an Intelligence Officer in the British Army, was instructed to carry out an official enquiry into the events leading up to Hitler's death. For an historian this was a unique opportunity, and Mr. Trevor-Roper has made the most of it. No more than five months had elapsed since the events which he was investigating, and he had therefore at his disposal the first-hand evidence of eye-witnesses, together with a mass of documentary material. It is from the material which he collected during this investigation that Mr. Trevor-Roper has now constructed his book." (Spec) Index.

"Many strange books have emerged from the recent European war. None is stranger or more horribly fascinating than this footnote to history." J. H. Powers

+ Atlantic 180:134 O '47 430w

Booklist 44:15 S 1 '47

Reviewed by G. M. A. Grube

Canadian Forum 27:92 J1 '47 350w

"The author has an inquisitive mind and a flair for the well-rounded phrase. He can marshal the facts as well as any lawyer to prove a point, but he can also sustain interest by skillful writing." David Karno

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p3 Ag 17 '47 650w

Reviewed by Paul Hutchinson

Christian Century 64:996 Ag 20 '47 1200w

Reviewed by M. A. Fitzsimons

Commonweal 46:550 S 26 '47 200w

Current Hist 13:293 N '47 50w

Foreign Affairs 26:227 O '47 100w

Kirkus 15:354 J1 1 '47 260w

"While presentation sometimes is not too clear, good style and unique subject matter will make for wide appeal. Recommended for all public and educational libraries." H. H. A. Bernt

Library J 72:1032 J1 '47 110w

"It may be a poor compliment to say of an historical work that it is more readable than a novel, but in this case it is true. With whatever detachment one may come to it, however determined to deliver cool judgment, the story carries one away, and that not merely because it seems to bring certainty on certain historic events but for the sheer drama of it. Few novelists have been able to pen so completely thrilling a chapter as Mr. Trevor-Roper has done on the last events in the Berlin bunker, culminating in the carefully staged suicide of Hitler and Goebbels, or left a character sketch such as the account of the mental and moral break-up of the Führer. Later on the author may be inclined to amend some of his judgments and to reassess the men whose end he describes. . . Meantime, with the events still fresh in our mind, here is a work whose great technical excellence is obscured simply by the sheer fascination of the story." R. T. C.

+ Manchester Guardian p3 Ap 1 '47 390w

"Like most other forms of writing, history is today pretty much a neglected art. A brilliant professional performance like H. R. Trevor-Roper's 'The Last Days of Hitler' is for that reason the more welcome and reassuring. And Trevor-Roper's triumph is all the more astonishing because it is achieved, not at the comparatively easy game of writing about the past, but at the tougher and more complex discipline of contemporary history." A. M. Schlesinger, Jr.

+ Nation 165:287 S 20 '47 800w

Reviewed by A. L. Goodman

New Repub 117:29 S 22 '47 1000w

Reviewed by Noel Annan

New Statesman & Nation 33:218 Mr 29 '47 1100w

"A discriminating narrative of the last gasps of an incredible regime. This narrative is an invaluable contribution to history." W. E. Jackson

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p3 Ag 17 '47 1050w

Reviewed by Shepard Stone

N Y Times p3 Ag 17 '47 1700w

New Yorker 23:87 Ag 16 '47 160w

Reviewed by Edith James

San Francisco Chronicle p16 Ag 17 '47 550w

School & Society 66:80 J1 26 '47 30w

"Here is a best seller, if ever there was one. Mr. Trevor-Roper's ability in combining the many scraps of evidence into a continuous account is matched by the skill and lucidity with which he tells his story. And of all the stories ever told this must surely rank as one of the strangest and most fascinating." Allan Bullock

+ Spec 178:306 Mr 21 '47 1000w

Spring'd Republican p10B O 5 '47 240w

Time 50:98 Ag 18 '47 650w

Times [London] Lit Sup p179 Ap 19 '47 2800w

TRIEM, EVE. Parade of doves. 56p $2.50 Dutton

311

47-1453

A first book of poetry by an American author. "Mrs. Triem is a poet of classical background whose expression is singularly personal, in an idiom which is individual rather than modern, informed richly by the past rather than traditional." (Publisher's note)

"Her poems are reflective, mystical, charming and not too distinctive. The emotions and sentiments they express are those of good magazine verse. Eve Triem loves dead Greek boys and the whole Attic mythological business. 'To Sing Again the Verses of Hesiod' is a most graceful poem." Leo Kennedy

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p20 D 8 '46 60w

Kirkus 14:589 N 15 '46 60w

"Mrs. Triem shows an appreciation of music which enriches the fabric of her lines. The poignant emotion of the title poem, 'Parade of Doves,' and the graceful classic background of 'I Bring Pythagoras' make Mrs. Triem's book a particularly promising first volume." Claire McGlinckee

+ N Y Times p12 My 11 '47 230w

"Miss Triem is at her best in such lyrics as 'Remember Now' and 'The Witness'; the one, contemplative and urgent, the other bright and terrible. In an admirable lyric, 'Declaration at Ellis Island,' she makes her identification with all being, cosmic man in a cosmic world; this lyric has a modernity of insight the poetry reader will treasure. It is unfortunate that she comes a cropper when she writes of music. . . A slight tendency to preciousness, calling the trunk of an elm, 'the huge stem' and 'black stems,' might well be avoided." I. L. Salomon

+ — Sat R of Lit 30:20 Mr 8 '47 350w

TRILLING, LIONEL. Middle of the journey.
310p $3 Viking

47-31472

A novel of ideas, the scene of which is a Connecticut farming district in the late 1930's. The chief protagonist is John Laskell who goes there to recover from an almost fatal illness, and to be near his friends, the Crooms who are summer residents. Altho he is not a devout Communist, Laskell is instrumental in saving an ex-Communist friend from possible violence. That fact and the pitiful death of the young daughter of one of the natives provides the little action of the novel.

"Because the level on which perception takes place in this novel is immeasurably higher than what is seen in most popular fiction, the writing will make corresponding demands upon the reader. . . Mr. Trilling's writing is well up to the high intelligence and peculiar tact which direct it, and in some places . . . it is literally perfect." Henry Rago

+ Commonweal 47:121 N 14 '47 700w

"A first novel of some acumen and almost no physical motion, of considerable conscious intellectualization but an equal emotional sterility."

+ Kirkus 15:407 Ag 1 '47 170w

"Important first novel (exceptional in offering a solution to, as well as analysis of modern man's problem), by literary critic and exquisite craftsman, associate professor of English at Columbia. For the politically and philosophically aware." M. L. Barrett

+ Library J 72:1271 S 15 '47 120w

"A brilliant example of a new mode of fiction, one whose function in the moral dilemmas of our age his acute critical sense has seen, and whose claims on the imaginative resources of his generation the finely controlled, humanly faithful art of this novel demonstrates. It is a book that brings the best critical intelligence now discernible in America into play with an absolutely honest creative talent. And it shares with only a few recent books of my acquaintance the honor of establishing that cooperation of talents on a sound, perhaps even on a classic, footing." M. D. Zabel

+ Nation 165:413 O 18 '47 2500w

"Lionel Trilling's few short stories aroused the legitimate hope that his long awaited first novel would be better than The Middle of the Journey turns out to be. Not that it lacks distinction in the writing, although the evidence of his reading of James and Forster is at times too plain, or the 'high seriousness' in its intent which he shares with Matthew Arnold, the subject of his excellent and informed critical study. It is all done with an intelligence and a Forsterian feel for the strange mixture which is the tragi-comedy of our times—a synthesis that is rarely to be found in American contemporary fiction." George Mayberry

+ New Repub 117:29 O 13 '47 370w

"The Middle of the Journey' is both moving and intellectually provocative, but readers, like this reviewer, may find that its strongest effects lie in what is implied and suggested rather than in what is directly represented. It is a book so sensitively written, so deliberately loaded with implications of a larger significance than that actually expressed that its excellences may in part be revealed only by means of what readers bring to it." Lloyd Morris

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p4
O 12 '47 700w

"What one admires first about 'The Middle of the Journey,' a first novel by the teacher and critic, Lionel Trilling, is its assurance—its confidence in its own best qualities, literacy and intelligence, and the lucidity which is the consequence of these, and the rare grace with which it does precisely what it wishes to do. And next, one admires the result of all these qualities—the ease with which Mr. Trilling dramatizes the largest modern subject in what he persuades us are its inevitable human embodiments. . . In one way Mr. Trilling's style does not serve him quite as faithfully as Mr. Forster's serves him. When Mr. Trilling writes of the Crooms, an odd lack of equivalence appears between the quality of style and the reported emotions of the narrator, and the feeling which the book itself generates." Mark Schorer

+ N Y Times p4 O 12 '47 900w

"The Middle of the Journey' will, I suspect, receive a wide and favorable reading." J. M. Lalley

New Yorker 23:126 O 25 '47 1050w

Reviewed by W. R. White

San Francisco Chronicle p12 D 1 '47
500w

"This mature and intelligent novel will be welcomed by those readers of the best contemporary American fiction who are growing weary of historical tales, group narratives in the 'Grand Hotel' pattern, and the wistful, nostalgic family sagas of a past generation. 'The Middle of the Journey' is a novel of ideas, objective, subtle, teasing in a sort of incompleteness as though the fastidious novelist would avoid the banality of telling too much. There are paragraphs that require rereading before they yield full meaning, not because they are vague or ambiguous, for the writing is of such a consistent excellence that one is tempted to fall back on some such cliché as 'classic style' to describe it, but because the thought is subtle." R. A. Cordell

+ Sat R of Lit 30:25 O 11 '47 700w

"This is far from being a lively novel, if, indeed, it can be classified as a novel at all. It is definitely for thoughtful readers, and especially for those who every day find some small but important belief at variance with the world as 1947 finds it." R. F. H.

Springfd Republican p14B N 2 '47
320w

"Critic Trilling, author of neat books about Forster and Matthew Arnold, is not yet a finished novelist. He mishandles the Dostoevskian character of Maxim. A good deal of the book frays out in thin, earnest psychologizing, a weakness which Trilling's clear grey style has not enough impetus to overcome."

Time 50:106 O 20 '47 440w

TRIMBLE, LOUIS. Give up the body. 223p
$2 Superior pub.

47-178

Detective story.

"Has its exciting moments but is too loosely strung together and contains too much extraneous matter to qualify as a good mystery story." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p33 Ja 19 '47 110w

"Harmless quickie." Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p14 D 8 '46
40w

TRIOLET, ELSA (MME LOUIS ARAGON).
Fine of 200 francs. 313p $2.75 Reynal

47-30883

Three narratives of the French underground, describing how three very different people reacted to the German invasion.

Booklist 44:135 D 1 '47

Kirkus 15:262 My 15 '47 160w

Reviewed by Rene Blanc-Roos

Nation 165:478 N 1 '47 550w

"These stories are the best I've read among what has come to be called 'Resistance Literature.' . . To describe the atmosphere of this time—the suspense, the daring, the exasperation—her prose style is admirably suited: quick, sharp and edgy." John Farrelly

+ New Repub 117:30 O 6 '47 240w

"It is this author's uncanny ability to present her heroic or selfish, her cowardly or impatient characters as highly complicated and very real human beings that gives her total picture its veracity and its force." Iris Barry

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p2
S 14 '47 750w

"With all her long-windedness and rhetorical style, Miss Triolet presents an extraordinarily convincing panorama of occupied France with its fears and corruptions, its anxieties and humiliations. Her characters are not idealized and come to life within their given frame of reference. None of them would be caught faltering or harboring the shadow of a doubt. Thus, as examples of the product of a special period in history they are perfect—even though as figures in fiction they remain as incredible to us as the philosophy they exemplify." Nona Balakian

TRIOLET, ELSA—Continued

+ — N Y Times p26 O 12 '47 800w

"Mlle. Triolet, whose sympathies are obviously with the Communists, writes extremely well, but she seems almost intentionally to avoid making the perils she recounts particularly moving or vivid. She has skillfully crystallized the concerns of certain Frenchmen during the Occupation . . . but it is doubtful that readers will be either enlightened by, or even greatly interested in, her narrative as the recent tragedy of France grows more remote."

+ — New Yorker 23:98 S 20 '47 180w

San Francisco Chronicle p26 O 19 '47 220w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:43 N 8 '47 270w

TRIOLET, ELSA (MME LOUIS ARAGON). White charger; tr. from the French by Gerrie Thielen. 345p $3 Rinehart

47-256

Story of the life and adventures, amatory and otherwise, of a young Frenchman in the years between two wars. The author, wife of the poet, Louis Aragon, wrote the novel in 1942.

Reviewed by Dorothy Sparks

Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Ja 19 '47 450w

"This has a great deal to recommend it. It is a good story, well told, though slightly depressing."

+ Kirkus 14:436 S 1 '46 100w

"A convincing picture of French people and life in Paris between the wars, but a depressing and unsatisfying story. . . Well written, but aimless. Recommended for easily satisfied fiction fans." Anne Whitmore

+ — Library J 71:1806 D 15 '46 90w

"Miss Triolet is not wholly successful in investing the novel with meaning—chiefly, one suspects, because she is herself taken in by the miraculous, if empty, charm of her hero. The book needs a generous dose of irony, both in the narrative and in descriptive detail, if it is to make any sort of point about men's dreams and the rocky reality on which, balloon-like, they explode. However, one must add, in justice, that the book is spirited and entertaining." Stephen Stepanchey

+ — N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p17 Ja 12 '47 550w

"If Michel is really supposed to be representative of France on a jamboree (or France with a psychic hangover of despair), the comparison seems as unfair as it is absurd. If we are to accept him as a mere human, he seems an inflated bore." James MacBride

— N Y Times p12 Ja 5 '47 600w

"I think I can understand why the French wartime public liked 'The White Charger' so well. It is a picture of freer, wicked days, and it has the quality of having been written in prison, as if by a woman dreaming of Paris and a phantom lover, which makes it an intensely feminine book." Malcolm Cowley

New Yorker 22:81 Ja 11 '47 950w

"In a sad and wandering effort to present a picture of the social and cultural breakdown that took place in France after the first World war, and to apologize for a petty, pleasure-seeking and utterly worthless social group, Miss Triolet has constructed a loose and tiresome novel full of inconsequential people and incidents. . . It is unfortunate that an author who displayed so much promise when she won the Prix Goncourt 1944 for her short stories should make such a bad showing as a novelist. The readable and adequate translation was made by Gerrie Thielen." Fred Zavattaro

+ — San Francisco Chronicle p17 Ja 26 '47 300w

"The mawkishly told saga of a male Amber, who becomes a hero in the last three pages." Leo Lerman

— Sat R of Lit 30:17 Ja 25 '47 800w

"Mme. Aragon tries earnestly to explain that Michel's goliardic results from his being at heart a frustrated knight-errant in today's ignoble world. She redeems his calloused soul by making him die nobly in World War II. But three-fourths of The White Charger is simply a listing of Michel's tedious romantic conquests. Only the most dogged reader will remember, by the end, just what made Elisa, beth different from Mary, or from Marjorie, and Riri, and Gisèle, and Irène, and Francine, and Nicole, and Mariana, and Lucette, and Lily—to mention only a few."

— Time 49:92 Ja 6 '47 260w

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. Autobiography; with an introd. by Bradford Allen Booth. 312p $3.75 Univ. of Calif.

B or 92 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 47-30560

A re-issue of Trollope's autobiography, which first came out shortly after his death in 1882. Much of the book is centered upon Trollope's literary work and his dealings with book and magazine publishers. Index.

Booklist 44:36 S 15 '47

"The most candid record of a writer's own life I have ever read. It is a book of positive and lasting value, not only to admirers of Trollope's novels, but to all who are interested either in literary history or in the practical problems of writing fiction." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4 Je 29 '47 420w

"The latter part of the book, with its sturdily business attitude to the art of writing, which did so much harm to his reputation, is always endearing in its revelation of a character that was the epitome of genial, honest, kindly common sense. There is not an unreadable page in it, and not a word that strikes one as insincere." Eric Forbes-Boyd

+ Christian Science Monitor p10 Ag 10 '46 850w

"This outspoken volume is a little gold mine for anyone with an interest in the period."

+ Commonweal 46:269 Je 27 '47 150w

San Francisco Chronicle p18 Jl 20 '47 170w

Reviewed by B. R. Redman

Sat R of Lit 30:30 Jl 26 '47 550w

Times [London] Lit Sup p237 My 18 '46 240w

TROLLOPE, ANTHONY. Trollope reader; selected and ed. by Esther Cloudman Dunn and Marion E. Dodd. 433p $4.50 Oxford

47-11337

Brief passages from the works of Trollope classified under four headings: Trollope looks at life; He considers its patterns; He distills its ideas and theories; He visits the United States. Together they form a picture of all phases of life in Victorian England. Books on Trollope. Index.

"No one can deny that the anthologists have presented a fair cross-section. But they have inevitably distorted Trollope's artistic intent: 'to 'hew out some lump of the earth' and to make men and women walk upon it just as they do walk here among us.' This reader will serve as an appetizer for Trollope, but the size of its servings will not satisfy for long a whetted appetite." M. M.

+ — Christian Science Monitor p22 Ja 2 '48

"Miss Dunn and Miss Dodd have presented the essence of Trollope with a discerning and definitive eye. By no means should the reader skip their lucid and inviting introduction in which Trollope, his period and his relation to our present day are beautifully described and precisely correlated." Elizabeth Johnson

+ Commonweal 47:282 D 26 '47 260w

"An ideal bedside book this [is an] intriguing introduction to Trollope."

+ Kirkus 15:622 N 1 '47 160w

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p36 N 16 '47 70w

"Since I possess a perhaps unreasonable but genuine antipathy toward 'Readers' and anthologies of every sort, I began to examine 'The Trollope Reader' with some misgivings. These were dispelled within an hour. Although not a convert now to Readers in general, I am most certainly an admirer of this one. It is, in my opinion, not so much a Reader as it is a fascinating introduction to Trollope for those who do not know him, and for those who do, a fresh and charming reminder of all his gifts and graces. The editors, whose zeal for Trollope is as ardent as their knowledge of him is complete, have not chosen and edited their selections that not one seems a mangled fragment but rather a unit in itself." M. E. Chase

+ N Y Times p5 D 14 '47 650w

"A pleasant browsing ground for old Trollopian, and an introduction to new literary pastures for readers who are still strangers to such matters as the chronicles of Barsetshire, the strange case of the Eustace diamonds, and the domestic and political careers of Plantagenet Palliser and Phineas Finn... Yet I think that these editors, steeped as they were in their author, have not recognized clearly the problems posed by their chosen task. Too many of their extracts are self-sufficient only to readers already familiar with the context from which they have been drawn." B. R. Redman

+ — Sat R of Lit 31:23 Ja 10 '48 380w

TROTTER, GRACE (NANCY PASCHAL, pseud). Magnolia Heights; il. by Ruth King. 272p $2.50 Nelson

47-30412

Mary Jo and her grandmother faced the prospect of losing their home and being separated the summer Mary Jo was fifteen. So she got a job with the local veterinarian and Dr Grant and his brother helped Mary Jo when she most needed help. For ages twelve to sixteen.

Booklist 44:54 O 1 '47

"A simple, attractive success story."

+ Kirkus 15:432 Ag 15 '47 120w

"Unrealistic and sentimental, but with an appealing, wholesome quality that older girls will love. Filled with genuine love of animals." Gertrude Andrus

+ — Library J 72:1279 S 15 '47 70w

"An interesting study of one girl's approach to mature thinking and self-reliance." V. H. M.

+ N Y Times p46 N 16 '47 80w

TROUGHTON, ELLIS LE GEYT. Furred animals of Australia; with 25 pl. in colour, by Neville W. Cayley. 374p $5 Scribner

599 Fur-bearing animals, Zoology—Australia 47-30398

"Guide to the mammals of Australia. Description of over 400 species includes appearance, distribution, habits and historical information." Wis Lib Bul

Booklist 44:8 S 1 '47

"Well-written field book, interesting and valuable. . . Index is thorough. Format is poor: cheap paper, small print. Yet book should be in every library which can afford it because of the peculiar interest to the world of Australia where there are survivals from the dawn of mammalian life. . . One of the very few books of its kind." J. M. Smith

+ Library J 72:1116 Ag '47 70w

Wis Lib Bul 43:149 N '47

TRUESDELL, JOHN. Low tide. 240p $2.75 Dodd

47-11208

A first novel. It is about some men who are at low tide financially, living on the beach of a rundown Southern California resort. Kelly, a good natured alcoholic is the central figure. He is not much help to his wife and children, even after Alcoholics Anonymous takes him in hand.

"Fresh, entertaining and moving story. . . Characters all treated generously, including social worker and backsliding Alcoholics Anonymous man. Recommended. Extremely prudish may object." M. L. Barrett

+ Library J 72:1375 O 1 '47 100w

"The story is accurate, depressing and hardly worth the author's considerable talent." Lisle Bell

— + N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p26 N 30 '47 110w

TRUESDELL, JUNE. Be still, my love. 220p $2.50 Dodd

47-5297

A murder story in which the central character is a young woman professor of criminal psychology. The novel follows the course of her life up to the moment of her trial for murder. The scene is California.

"Cleverly written murder story. . . Suspense is well sustained while the setting of a university on the California coast is skillfully created. Recommended for its unusual psychological approach and successful build-up." R. P. Tubby

+ Library J 72:1110 Ag '47 60w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p10 Ag 24 '47 70w

Reviewed by Anthony Boucher

San Francisco Chronicle p22 Ag 24 '47 60w

TRUETA RASPALL, JOSE. Spirit of Catalonia. 198p maps $3 Oxford

946.7 Catalonia

47-3218

Chapters on the history and literary lore of Catalonia, written by a famous surgeon who spent his years of exile from Spain at Oxford. He stresses the achievements of Catalonia's golden age: the twelfth to fifteenth centuries, and gives character sketches of some of Catalonia's outstanding figures: Ramon Lull; Ramon de Penyafort; Bernat Metge; and Joan Lluís Vives. Index.

"Why is it, I wonder, that when physicians and surgeons write well at all, they write so very admirably? Trueta is a famous Catalan surgeon who worked in England during the recent war. He was a fine companion in what was for me, certainly, as I think it may be for many other readers, largely a voyage of discovery." J. T. Frederick

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p6 Mr 9 '47 120w

Foreign Affairs 26:228 O '47 20w

"Like all champions of an idea, Sefior Trueta seeks to prove too much, but he has certainly put on the map a vigorous democratic people worthy of a future more consonant with its great past." H. C.

Manchester Guardian p3 D 27 '46 390w

Reviewed by Gerald Brenan

New Statesman & Nation 34:75 Jl 26 '47 390w

"There is a charm, erudition, and affectionate partiality for his subject in this little book by an exiled Catalan surgeon turned historian such as are rarely found in the work of professional historiographers." B. D. Wolfe

+ N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p28 Ap 20 '47 800w

"Dr. Trueta's . . . book will be read here with sympathy and understanding. An English reader, having regard to the whole of the Peninsula, will probably look on the Catalan achievement as a contribution to the whole, a contribution which, though less than those of Castile and Portugal—for reasons which are explained in this book—has always had that positive, energetic but curiously attractive, poetical and musical quality which is characteristic of all things Catalan." J. B. Trend

+ Spec 178:114 Ja 24 '47 750w

TRUETA RASPALL, JOSE—Continued

"This is a useful and scholarly book, and if at times we detect a note of special pleading, Dr. Trueta has chosen a more acceptable way of pleading his people's cause than his great compatriot Pau Casals (to whom his book is dedicated)."

+ Times [London] Lit Sup p624 D 21 '46
1350w

TSANOFF, RADOSLAV ANDREA. Ethics. 385p $3.50 Harper

170 Ethics 47-3895

"Presents practical applications of ethics in many fields and also discusses the problems of ethics and religion." (School & Society) Index.

"The first three chapters are probably the least interesting, although they are well written and essential to the thought of the book. After duly considering other standpoints, the author decides in favor of a modified form of perfectionism or self-realizationism which includes the best results of twentieth-century investigations into the nature of values. The chapters on 'conscience' and 'egoism and altruism' are particularly good. The conclusions regarding the problems of the family, including marriage and divorce, are sensible." W. K. Wright

+ Crozer Q 24:374 O '47 350w

"This is a clear and simple exposition and evaluation of a moral philosophy of life." A. F. + San Francisco Chronicle p13 Ag 10 '47 50w

School & Society 65:464 Je 21 '47 20w

TSUCHIDA, WILLIAM SHINJI. Wear it proudly; letters. 147p $2.75 Univ. of Calif.

940.548173 World war, 1939-1945—Personal narratives, American 47-31215

The author was a young Nisei soldier who was a medical aid man in World War II. His story is told in this series of letters, written to his brother, his sister-in-law, and his father and mother, during the period from September 1944 to July 1945.

Booklist 44:88 N 1 '47

Reviewed by J. K. Yamagiwa

+ Chicago Sun Book Week p4A D 3 '47 230w

Reviewed by Jack Foisie

San Francisco Chronicle p18 N 2 '47 600w

TUCKER, B. FAIN. Guide to National labor relations act. 320p pa $3 Commerce clearing house

331.154 Labor laws and legislation—U.S. 47-2369

"Traces the development of collective bargaining as it functioned under the Wagner Act and discusses the salient principles that emerged from the decisions of the Board and the Courts during the 11 years since its passage." (Management R) Indexes.

Booklist 43:268 My 1 '47

Management R 36:614 N '47 50w

TUCKER, JAMES IRWIN. Contracts in engineering; the interpretation and writing of engineering-commercial agreements; a text-book of legal principles. 4th ed 341p $5 McGraw

620.03 Engineering—Contracts and specifications 47-2024

"Useful to engineers, contractors, businessmen, and as a student's textbook, not as a substitute for legal counsel, but to clarify the need for such service. New material in this edition covers such recent developments as renegotiation of war contracts." (Booklist) Index.

Booklist 43:258 Ap 15 '47

Eng N 139:96 Ag 7 '47 60w

TUCKER, WILSON. To keep or kill. 186p $2 Rinehart

47-30845

Detective story.

Kirkus 15:447 Ag 15 '47 80w

Reviewed by Will Cuppy

N Y Herald Tribune Wkly Bk R p9 D 28 '47 80w

"The plot is fiendishly fantastic and utterly incredible, and so are the men and women concerned in it." Isaac Anderson

N Y Times p28 S 28 '47 90w

Reviewed by E. D. Doyle

San Francisco Chronicle p19 O 26 '47 70w

"Begins well, dashes lustily through sequence of exciting and piquant scenes—including one in sewer—but runs amok at end. Disappointing."

Sat R of Lit 30:41 O 25 '47 50w

TUGWELL, REXFORD GUY. The stricken land; the story of Puerto Rico. 704p $4.50 Doubleday

972.95 Puerto Rico—Politics and government 47-30063

Study of the struggles of present-day Puerto Rico, written after the author had spent five years as governor of the island. He gives an account of his experiences as administrator, and a record of his relations with Franklin D. Roosevelt who appointed him. Maps on end papers. Index.

Booklist 43:167 F 1 '47

